Trial Examiner Batten: Any objections? There being no objection, it will be received.

(The document heretofore marked, "Board's Exhibit No. 32, Witness Reed," for identification, was received in evidence.)

[—] May I see it?

A. Yes. I would like to see it myself, again, please. What did you say?

Trial Examiner Batten: I said, Mrs. Reed, if there was no objection, it would be received.

[fol. 3530] Trial Examiner Batten: I don't hear an objection.

Miss Weyand: I would like the reporter to mark the pages thereof, on the front of the first page, 32-A, 32-B on the back of the first page, and 32-C on the front page of the inner sheet, and 32-D on the back of the form sheet, and 32-E on the attached information.

A. May I see that, please.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is there any objection to marking these sheets like that? Miss Reporter, will you mark this, please? That will be A, B, C, D and E.

(Thereupon the documents above referred to were marked "Board's Exhibits 32-A to E inclusive, Witness Reed," for identification, and received in evidence.)

Miss Weyand: I am going to ask leave that this exhibit be withdrawn and photostatic copies substituted, and in that connection I would like to have counsel, after looking at the documents and ascertaining the facts stipulate that the documents, I mean on the face thereof they bear the stamp of the Wage and Hour Division, showing the document was received at 9:30 o'clock in the morning, October 31st, 1940, since such stamps usually do not photograph well—

Trial Examiner Batten: I suggest that you have the photostats made, and when the photostat is available, then you may ask to withdraw it, and substitute the photostat, and I will determine if the photostats are such that you [fol. 3531] should be permitted to withdraw it. I wouldn't want to now.

Miss Weyand: Usually photostatic copies cover all written material, and do not cover the stamp.

A. I would like to have permission to read this, inasmuch as I haven't read it before. I would like to take the time now to read it, inasmuch as I have been asked the question about it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you going to ask any further questions?

Miss Weyand: No.

A. My answer may not have been correct, in the light of reading this.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What answer, Mrs. Reed?

A. That I made there. I would like to have that read.

Trial Examiner Batten: Go ahead and read it.

A. Could I make this remark? My remembrance is there was — at first there was a blank to be filled out, and we filled that out, asking for an exemption from the Wage and Hour Division, on certain executives and salesmen and designers, and this is a later one. I don't know whether that question was that this was the only one.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Reporter, will you read the question and answer?

(Question and answer were read by the reporter.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. My question was: Does Board's Exhibit 32-A [fol. 3532] through E, purporting to show the executives and administrative capacity of the persons thereon listed, represent a situation which existed in your plant at any time prior to October 30th, 1940?

A. I am going to have to say that I think this paper will speak for itself.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. The question is this —

A. (Interrupting) I don't know of my own knowledge just what day certain things happened in the budget system. I don't remember the identical day.

Q. Permit me to finish, please, —

A. (Interrupting) I just say — I will have to say that I don't know of my own knowledge.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Who could tell us whether that administrative and executive set-up, as shown on Exhibit 32, was in effect at the plant at any time prior to October 30th, 1940?

A. Probably Mr. Bachofer. These things are all discussed with me, but the details of making out the Wage and Hour — filling out a blank, I have nothing to do with it, and the general policy of who I consider exempt or who I know was considered exempt from that Law, while it would be discussed with me, these sort of papers are so complicated I don't like to pass on them.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. The only question was: Who, in your organization, [fol. 3533] could testify and answer that question?

A. I would say Mr. Bachofer.

Miss Weyand: I believe the witness' last answer has indicated she was thinking somewhat in the terms of who knew about getting up this document. She has testified the entire day on whether or not various individuals were listed here or held certain supervisory positions. I would like to have her indicate, without regard to who got up this document, whether or not the names of the individuals here listed, and the supervisory title and the status here stated as belonging to those individuals in the plant, existed in the plant prior to October 30th, 1940. It may be that she would like to take them one by one, and say as to this one, it did exist before October 30th, 1940, and take that one, and say it did not. It is a list of the people we have been discussing.

A. I couldn't possibly put my finger on the exact date. In a business the size of mine, I don't pretend — I don't make any attempt to keep track of the exact time a certain thing happened. Mr. Bachofer brings up with me specific things.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Can you take the list, the first name on it was what?

A. Myself.

Q. You had a supervisory authority prior to October [fol. 3534] 30th, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the second name?

A. Lee Baty.

Q. Mr. Baty also did?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the third name?

A. John Bachofer.

Q. And he did?

A. Yes.

Q. And the next name?

A. Mr. Howard.

Q. And the next one?

A. Mrs. Reeves, she did, and Miss Spilsbury did.

Q. And the next one?

A. And Mrs. Hyde did.

Q. And the next one?

A. Now, Ted Scoles, Marvin Price, Lyle Jeter, Ella Brown, Florence Strickland, Martha Gray, Rose O'Leary, Pauline Hartman, Harlan Justus, Helen Hauser, Betty Belter, Dewey Atkinson, Mildred Francis, Hilda Fitzgerald, Fred Brown, Cecile Ealy, Lena Tyhurst, Katie Schleicher, Lula Nichols, it would not be at all possible for me to say on just what date or what day they were given supervisory powers.

Q. Could you say what month?

A. I know that it was around the time, as I said yester- [fol. 3535] day, in early November or December, I know that.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. That is of 1940?

A. Of 1940, I know the year, I know it was toward the end of the year, and I know it was later than October 1st, but I couldn't, if my life depended on it, I couldn't tell you.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. And prior to that time—

A. I couldn't tell you that if my life depended on it.

Q. Just a minute, please, until I finish my question and maybe you can answer it. Prior to that time, whenever it was, November or December or the last day of October, prior to the period you made these changes, what was the status of those people you just read off, the last group?

A. I would say prior to October 1st, to my knowledge, they would not have supervisory powers. I think Mrs. Hyde probably has been acknowledged as an assistant to Mr. Baty and Nellie Kraft and Yolanda Prosperi and Gertrude Cain are designers.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Who would be able to say whether or not those persons had supervisory authority prior to November 1st, 1940?

A. I think I have already told you, Mr. Bachofer probably would.

Q. How many sewing sections do you have in your plant to date?

[fol. 3536] A. I don't know exactly.

Q. Approximately?

A. Well, I hardly know. Approximately, Miss Weyand, we put in some sections making shorts for the government, and I couldn't say.

Q. Does your plant, in recent years, usually have 10, 20, 30 or 40?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know the names of the instructors of the various sections?

A. Some of them.

Q. Would you name those that you can think of at the moment?

A. Well, it is Marie Patton.

Q. Could you indicate the section?

A. No, it has a queer number connected with the company's accounting; I don't remember the name of the section.

Q. All right. Proceed with the naming of the others.

A. Grace Gnotta; I have a little brain fag. If I saw the list I would know their names, but it is hard to recall them now.

Q. Those are the only instructors whose names you can recall at the present time?

A. Well, it is queer; I would know all of their names if I could see it written down, or practically all of them.

[fol. 3537] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Are they the only two that you recall now?

Mr. Ingraham: Do you want to know the names for some purpose?

Miss Weyand: Yes, I would like to know the names.

Mr. Ingraham: I will get the list for you.

Miss Weyand: I would like the record to show that Mrs. Reed only remembered two, however.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you want that list now?

Miss Weyand: If it would be convenient for me to have it.

Mr. Ingraham: This isn't a complete list, but those are most of them.

Miss Weyand: I would prefer to wait until you can furnish me with the complete list.

Mr. Ingraham: All right.

Miss Weyand: Will you have that at the opening of the hearing tomorrow morning?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When did you first meet Rose Todd?

A. A great many years ago.

Q. Do you remember the date?

A. I do not.

Q. Could you give the approximate date?

A. It seems it was a number of years ago, I couldn't give you the approximate date.

[fol. 3538] Q. Was it before 1920?

A. No.

Q. Was it before 1925?

A. I don't think it was. It might have been.

Q. Was it in 1926?

A. It was as early as that, I would say.

Q. Do you remember the occasion upon which you met her?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you please state it?

A. I met her in her capacity as a trained nurse.

Q. How extensive was your acquaintance with her as a trained nurse?

A. She waited on me, possibly twice, in a doctor's office.

Q. Was your acquaintance more extensive than that?

A. It was not.

Q. After those two occasions, on which she waited upon you, when was the next occasion that you saw Rose Todd?

A. On one of those occasions she told me she was tired of nursing, and asked if I wouldn't give her a job? She knew who I was, and knew I had a business. I had never seen her before or had no personal acquaintance with her, until I met her in the doctor's office, and I am sure it was probably twice that she waited on me, maybe five minutes at a time, or ten minutes at a time.

Q. I don't believe you have answered the question, when [fol. 3539] you next saw her, after those two occasions.

A. I don't remember. She asked me if I wouldn't give her a job, and I told her to come down to the plant and see if we had anything she wanted to do, and I would consider it.

Q. You still haven't answered the question, when was the next occasion you saw her?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did she come to the plant after that?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you seen her between the time she came to the plant and the two occasions you saw her in the doctor's office?

A. I don't remember.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you remember, Mrs. Reed, approximately how long a time it was before?

A. I really don't, Mr. Batten. I placed no — I made no effort to charge my mind with it.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did she come to you when she decided to apply to the Donnelly Garment Company for a job?

A. I don't even remember that, Miss Weyand. She might have. I did quite a little of the employing back at that time. I am not sure, though; I don't remember that I personally employed her.

Q. Do you know the date upon which, or the approximate date she was employed by the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I do not.

[fol. 3540] Q. You could give no approximation at all?

A. No. I probably employed several hundred people within a few years, and I wouldn't know.

Q. Was it prior to 1927?

A. I would say that it was.

Q. Do you know what work she was employed to do, at the time that you first employed her?

A. My remembrance is she went on a sewing machine.

Q. Do you know how long she stayed on a sewing machine?

A. Not exactly.

Q. What did she do after she got off the sewing machine?

A. My remembrance is she worked on the floor for a while, and then later sometime she became an instructor, I believe.

Q. Would you know the approximate date she became an instructor?

A. I would not.

Q. When was the first time that you opened up a branch department in St. Joseph?

A. I don't remember.

[fol. 3541] A. I don't remember the exact date.

Q. Could you give us an approximation?

A. Oh, it was perhaps sometime from 1925 to 1927, but I wouldn't be able to say in what year.

Q. Did you continuously have a department in St. Joseph from the time you opened it until the present time?

A. No.

Q. Could you give us some indication of what period you did have a department in St. Joseph?

A. I really don't remember. I know that we did have.

Q. Were those periods just during rush season, or would you have a department there that would continue over a continuous period of several years?

A. It was put in there in rush seasons. I don't even remember how long it continued.

Q. Do you know whether it ever continued a whole year at a time?

A. I don't remember right now.

Q. Do you know whether Rose Todd was an instructor in St. Joseph around the year 1927?

A. She may have been.

Q. Do you know?

A. I know we sent two or three different instructors to St. Joseph and none of them liked it.

Q. Was she one of the girls sent there?

[fol. 3542] A. She could have been, but I don't remember definitely that she was.

Q. Could you describe at all the situation of your St. Joseph department? When you got busy at a certain time of the year, did you hire a building up there and ship some machines up there, or would you rent them, or how did you handle your St. Joseph department?

A. We rented a building from one of the companies up there, and my remembrance is they had some machines in it that we rented along with the building.

Q. Would you rerent it each year for the busy season, or did you have a practice with regard to the St. Joseph department?

A. It's so long ago that I don't remember—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you remember, Mrs. Reed, if you had a lease on it for a period of a year, or was it a matter of months, or—

A. I think we rented it from month to month.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What was the last date on which you had a department in St. Joseph?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Have you had a department up there since 1937?

A. I am very sure we have not. I know that.

Q. Between the years 1925 and 1927, did you have a department up there for a short period each year?

[fol. 3543] A. That is 15 to 17 years ago, and it would be very difficult for me to remember all of the things that happened to my business back in 1925 and 1927. I don't remember the details of that plant at all. I remember we rented the building, and I have a slight remembrance that there were some machines in it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you operate it for more than one season, Mrs. Reed?

A. I think we did, perhaps several seasons.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. You couldn't say whether it was three or eight seasons?

A. I really couldn't, Miss Weyand, it was so long ago.

Q. Who was in charge of that department, could you say, at the particular times it was there?

Mr. Hogsett: With what epoch are we now dealing, back in the '20's?

Miss Weyand: I wanted to know if she knew who was in charge of it at any time she had the department up there.

A. I know that the St. Joseph plant was run from Kansas City, and we did all of the cutting here and —

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Did you have a person in charge of St. Joseph, Mrs. Reed?

A. We sent an instructor up there to instruct the operators, but we didn't pretend to have a manager of a plant in St. Joseph.

Q. But whoever the person was, or whatever you called [fol. 3544] them, the person who was at St. Joseph was responsible, were they not, for the work that was done in St. Joseph?

A. Just the same as simply a section in Kansas City. The work was all cut and the same instructions went up there. There was no merchandise sold from that plant. There was no merchandise designed up there. There was nothing done in that plant except to sew on the machines, and the very simplest, least expensive garments in our line were made in that plant.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know what was the largest number of girls you ever employed in St. Joseph at one time?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you have any idea?

A. Not any very definite idea.

Q. Could you give us an approximation?

A. I really couldn't.

Mr. Hogsett: If it please the Examiner, I object as wholly pointless. We have again run into a line of questions that haven't any bearing on this case at all. It might be of interest if someone were writing a history of the Donnelly Garment Company, but it hasn't anything to do with whether his company dominated, sponsored, or coerced the formation of the employees' union, which is the issue here to try. It is far afield.

Miss Weyand: I do not intend to pursue this line of questioning further.

[fol. 3545] Mr. Hogsett: She always says that, and then—

Trial Examiner Batten: In view of Miss Weyand's statement that she does not intend to pursue it any further—

Mr. Hogsett: —there is nothing you can do about it.

Trial Examiner Batten: —that will dispose of the matter.

Miss Weyand: I do not intend to preclude myself from asking a couple of questions or so about the St. Joseph plant at the time Rose Todd went up there, in the spring of 1937, to establish a branch or allow the employees at St. Joseph to become members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

The Witness: Rose Todd did not go to St. Joseph—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment.

The Witness: —to establish a branch of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mrs. Reed. You were not asked a question.

The Witness: But she made the statement.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, let's not get into these controversies in the record, Mrs. Reed. Any statement the attorneys make in the record is not evidence. Unless the attorneys are under oath, their statements are not a matter of evidence, and I do not want to get into any controversy about their statements. They will each have to assume their own responsibility for them.

[fol. 3546] I didn't assume, Miss Weyand, that when you said you didn't intend to pursue that further, you were precluded from asking any further questions if, in your opinion, it was necessary.

Miss Weyand: I meant that I would not pursue that line of questioning any further in this connection, but I may revert to a question about the St. Joseph plant at a later time in connection with the sequence of events pertaining to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3550] Miss Weyand: Mr. Trial Examiner, I have a statement I would like to make.

Last night, in withdrawing Board's exhibit 32-A, B, C, D, and E, to have it photostated in accordance with our agreement, I discovered that Board's exhibit 32-E, the attachment thereto, had been inadvertently inserted by myself in Board's exhibit 32-A, B, C, and D. Board's exhibit 32-E should have been inserted in a document which I would now like to have the court reporter identify as Board's exhibit No. 33.

(Therefore the document above referred to was marked for identification "Board's Exhibit No. 33.").

Mr. Tyler: If the Court please, that statement went so rapidly I am afraid I didn't get it all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read it, please.

(Thereupon the statement by Miss Weyand was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed: Before that is done, I would like to clarify this a little.

[fol. 3550a] You say you inserted 32-E yourself?

Miss Weyand: 32-E was furnished me by the Wages and Hours Division and inserted physically between the pages 32-B and 32-C. I caused it to be stapled to exhibit 32. It wasn't stapled at the time I received it, but was physically [fol. 3551] lying between the two documents.

Mr. Reed: They furnished you the Wages and Hours department furnished you 32-E unattached?

Miss Weyand: Unattached, but physically lying between the sheets 32-E and C.

Mr. Reed: At the same time they furnished you another report which you are now referring to?

Miss Weyand: They did not furnish that report to me until this morning.

Mr. Reed: When did you discover this mistake?

Miss Weyand: I discovered this mistake after the close of the hearing yesterday.

Mr. Reed: And you sought all of the time to make Mrs. Reed say that this long list of names on 32-E was delivered to the Wages and Hours Division on the date of the 10th month and 30th day, 1940.

Miss Weyand: I think the record will speak for itself as to what I tried to make Mrs. Reed state.

Mr. Reed: Very well. And you were very particular about that, because you wanted to have the "Received" stamp on here—the right to add it after—added to the photostats after they were made. That was your last request, wasn't it?

Miss Weyand: The record will show what I stated.

Mr. Reed: Wasn't that your last request?

Miss Weyand: I have no statement to make, except that [fol. 3552] the record will show what occurred.

Mr. Reed: Are you afraid to make any statement about it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, if counsel doesn't care to make a statement about it, she doesn't have to. She says the record will show what was done. I assume any counsel can ask other counsel questions which, if they care to answer, they may do.

Mr. Reed: I ask to put her on the witness stand right now.

Miss Weyand: I refuse to take the witness stand.

Mr. Reed: We ask that Miss Weyand be sworn as a witness in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: I have no authority to require her to take the witness stand, Senator.

Mr. Reed: You haven't any authority to require anybody to take the witness stand?

Trial Examiner Batten: I have not. I think you are familiar with that, Senator. I have no authority, as a trial examiner, to make that requirement. I think you are familiar with that. I have authority, upon proper request, to issue subpoenaes.

Now, even to enforce that, the Board has to go to the Federal District Court, Senator.

Mr. Reed: Very well. Now, I would like to see the last paper that counsel says now she wants to use.

[fol. 3553] Miss Weyand: I wish the other exhibit to remain in the record and to be used for purposes—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you have the one that was marked Board's exhibit No. 33?

Miss Weyand: I gave it to Senator Reed.

Mr. Reed: Is this it (indicating exhibit)?

Now, to clarify this in the record, Exhibit No. 32— These marks on here are so small I can't find them. 32-C—32-E is the document which was shown to Mrs. Reed yesterday and about which she was examined at length.

Trial Examiner Batten: May I see it just a second, Senator?

Mr. Reed: Let me finish my sentence and I will hand it to you.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand said something about it being stapled. It is not now stapled, is it?

Mr. Reed: No. I am coming to that.

32-E is a typewritten paper which was nailed on to 32-C and appeared between 32-C and— Where are these numbers?

Trial Examiner Batten: Between D and C, I believe, Senator.

Mr. Reed: Between 32-C and— (Looking at sheets in exhibit.)

Trial Examiner Batten: B and C, Senator.

Mr. Reed: It isn't marked B.

[fol. 3554] Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Reporter, will you assist the Senator, please, and indicate what those pages are?

(Thereupon a colloquy between Mr. Reed, Miss Weyand, and the reporter ensued.)

Mr. Reed: Give me the last thing I said.

(Thereupon the statement by Mr. Reed was read as follows: "No, I am coming to that.

"32-E is a typewritten paper which was nailed on to 32-C and appeared between 32-C and—. Where are these numbers?")

Trial Examiner Batten: In view of this difficulty, in which the marks do not appear here, let me warn all counsel here now, when you take out any exhibits for photostating, do not take them unless the reporter's stamp appears thereon and they are marked so that you can tell just what you have when you take out an exhibit. And, Miss Reporter, I don't want you to give out any exhibits until the stamp has been placed on them.

Mr. Reed: Will you give me the last thing I said in my statement?

(Thereupon the statement by Senator Reed, as read above, was reread by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed: Now, let me make that statement over again.

As this document appeared yesterday, and as it was used and introduced, 32 purports to be a report made by the Donnelly Company to the Wages and Hours Division, [fol. 3555] dated 10th month, 30th day, 1940, and bears the stamp "Received October 31, 1940. W. and H. Division, Kansas City."

The first sheet is marked 32-A and is followed by sheet 32-B, and also 32-C. Between 32-A and 32-C, attached with fasteners, is a typewritten sheet, the heading of which reads "Pursuant to your request of December 29, persons coming within the provision of the second part of paragraph 6 of the questionnaire as of December 20, 1940, are as follows:" —and there follows a long list of names, giving the executive, administrative, and professional employees.

So it is perfectly manifest, on careful examination, that this sheet, exhibit 32-E, was inserted in a document bearing an earlier date and that it is not a part of that document. Nevertheless, it was attached to that document and brought in here and introduced in evidence, and the witness was examined at length in regard to it.

Now, I understand it is admitted that this report, this sheet, exhibit 32-E, does not belong in the document, No. 32, at all, but it is asserted that it belongs in a document now marked exhibit No. 33, which bears the date of the 12th month and 20th day, 1940, which is the document which probably had attached to it 32-E.

Trial Examiner Batten: Does it indicate, Senator, that—33, does it indicate that there was an attachment to it? Does it show staple marks?

[fol. 3556] Mr. Reed: No. Wait a minute.

Yes, there are staple marks on 32-E.

Trial Examiner Batten: No. 33. Does it indicate any staple marks?

Mr. Reed: Pardon me. Your question was—

Trial Examiner Batten: Does exhibit 33 indicate any staple marks, indicating that at one time it did have an attachment to it?

Mr. Reed: Yes, there are staple marks on that.

Trial Examiner Batten: On 33?

Mr. Reed: Yes. And evidently a sheet was torn off—the staples were not withdrawn.

I show the paper to the Examiner. (Handing exhibit to Trial Examiner Batten.)

Trial Examiner Batten: It was stapled along the side? This (indicating) is exhibit 33?

Mr. Reed: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Does 32-E show any staple marks along the side?

Mr. Reed: Yes. Right here (indicating). You can see where they went through this document into it.

And 32-E bears, in the upper left-hand corner, the staple marks that would fit exactly into the staple marks appearing on 33-C, so that it is perfectly evident that it was attached to 33-C and was taken off of 33-C, and then appears [fol. 3557] the staple marks by which it was attached to the other document.

Trial Examiner Batten: 33?

Mr. Reed: Yes.

Miss Weyand: I think I can furnish a third and fourth document that will complete the explanation of the staple marks.

Mr. Reed: Will you read my statement?

(Thereupon the statement by Mr. Reed, appearing on lines 20 to 25 of page 3556, and lines 1 and 2 of page 3557, was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed: I haven't been able to follow that, so I will make my statement again, if you will indulge me.

32-C, which is the instrument dated December 20, and which is the sheet that is now in controversy, was evidently attached—appeared here as attached to exhibit 32 at the place I have heretofore indicated.

Mr. Hogsett: That is E—

(Thereupon Mr. Hogsett spoke to Mr. Reed in an aside.)

Mr. Langsdale: I suggest that Mr. Hogsett's remarks be made audibly.

Mr. Reed: He said I was mistaken when I read C for E. It is very badly written. That is the confidential communication that you are entitled to.

Mr. Langsdale: I am entitled to have all communica- [fol. 3558] tions made by you and Mr. Hogsett, or anybody else.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. Senator, let's proceed with your statement.

Mr. Reed: Exhibit 32-E, which I have heretofore referred to as C, because the letter is not clear, is the document that was attached to 32 when that document was introduced in evidence. It bears in its upper left-hand corner distinctly the marks of a paper fastener, the kind that is driven through sheets of paper. Those identical marks appear on exhibit 32, in the upper left-hand corner of the third page—

Trial Examiner Batten: 33, that is, Senator.

Mr. Reed: Exhibit 33, in the upper left-hand corner; and also appear in exhibit 32-C, in the upper left-hand corner. So that this document, exhibit 32-E, was manifestly at one time attached to what is now handed here and marked exhibit 33, and which it is now said it belonged to. So that it must have been torn loose from that sheet and transferred over into a report, 32.

I want to make that statement, and I want those facts to be in the record.

Mr. Langsdale: Is it made under oath, Senator?

Mr. Reed: I am showing it.

Mr. Langsdale: You said "facts."

Mr. Reed: I am showing it to the Examiner, showing him the physical document, which is the facts, so that he [fol. 3559] may know it.

Mr. Hogsett: I move to strike from the record all cross-examination by counsel for the Labor Board pertaining to Board's exhibit 32-A, B, C, D, and E, because the same and every part thereof was based upon an exhibit which is garbled, and, therefore, the entire purport of the cross-examination could not be otherwise than misleading.

Miss Weyand: Mr. Trial Examiner, before you rule on this motion, I would like to put the other two documents to which I have referred in the record, and explain further how the inadvertence occurred.

Mr. Reed: You might explain how you got the document.

Miss Weyand: I will.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Senator, please, until I make my statement; then, you may have your say again, if you care to.

Miss Weyand, what bearing would the other two documents have upon Mr. Hogsett's motion? In other words, his motion is to strike all of the cross-examination of Mrs. Reed which pertains to Board's exhibit No. 32. Now, what possible bearing can any other exhibits have upon that, or even Board's exhibit No. 33? In other words, if she was shown Board's exhibit No. 32 and cross-examined upon the basis of it, what difference would it make how many more exhibits may be introduced? That is the point.

[fol. 3560] Now, I have no objection, after this, for you to put in any number of exhibits you care to put in and make any statement you care to make, or any other attorney cares to make, but what does it have to do with the motion? That is my point.

[fol. 3561] Miss Weyand: I would like to state what it has to do with the motion. Before you rule on the motion, without regard to whether these documents are first put in,

I would like to state why the motion should be denied.

Trial Examiner Batten: First, let's dispose of the matter, whether or not it is necessary to have any further documents; after determining that, then, if you want to make a statement on the motion, and a statement with respect to Senator Reed's statement, I will permit you to do so.

Let's first dispose of this, before we decide, any further documents are necessary.

Miss Weyand: The further documents will show, taken together with my statement, that my examination of Mrs. Reed was conducted in entirely good faith upon my part.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Miss Weyand. I am not questioning your good faith.

Miss Weyand: My good faith is one thing, and another thing, the second thing, is to show that the documents from which Mrs. Reed was cross-examined, constituted two separate documents, each of which is entirely legible, and not garbled, and could probably be the basis of examination of Mrs. Reed.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean as two different documents?

[fol. 3562] Miss Weyand: I mean when I asked Mrs. Reed, whether certain matters appearing on Board's Exhibit 32 represented the status of supervisors for 19—in December of 1940, that she could fairly answer, from looking at Exhibit 32, whether or not that did represent the supervisors, and, further, it will show when examined, in connection with the record of what transpired yesterday, that during my repeated questioning of Mrs. Reed, as to whether or not the supervisory status existed before November or December of 1940, I had in my hand a copy which had been furnished to me several weeks ago by the Wages and Hours Division, with the understanding that I might obtain the original thereof.

During the course of the present hearing, with this copy in my possession, which is a copy of Board's Exhibit 33, I determined that it would be desirable to present the original of that document; so, in the courtroom, I communicated with somebody, one of the attorneys from the Labor Board, and asked him to take this copy which I had in my hand of Board's Exhibit 33, and obtain for me the original thereof, from the Wages and Hours Division.

He returned some few hours later, with a document which he handed to me, and said it had been furnished to him by the Wages and Hours Division, as the original of the copy [fol. 3563] which I had been working with for some time, being the copy of Board's Exhibit 33. I then, without examining the original other than to determine that it bore the signature of Alex Green, presented to Mrs. Reed the document which this Labor Board's attorney had obtained for me from the Wages and Hours Division.

Now, it is true, when I presented that to Mrs. Reed, in identifying the document, I did read from the face of that, certain dates that were inconsistent with the dates on the copy I had been using to prepare the case, copy of Board's Exhibit 33, and I did not, at the time, recognize the difference in the dates. As my questioning will show, I continuously asked Mrs. Reed whether or not the supervisory status there reflected that of November or December of 1940, and whether the supervisory status there represented had existed prior to December of 1940.

You may recall that the Trial Examiner, after some difficulty on my part, suggested that I ask the question whether the supervisory status existed before October 30th of 1940. At that point, for the first time, I put that question in that fashion, having not prepared that case with that in mind, and thinking purely of the question whether the supervisory status existed in November, 1940, I was interested in having Mrs. Reed testify solely as to whether or not the supervisory status existed in December of 1940, and I was making no attempt and never [fol. 3564] had in mind any implication might be drawn that the status represented in the exhibit did not exist at the time the exhibit was furnished to the Wages and Hours Division, and I agree that the evidence which was placed in the record shall not be considered for the purpose of showing that exhibit failed to present a correct statement of the supervisory status at the time the exhibit in question was furnished to the Wages and Hours Division.

I would like, therefore, to identify these two documents, and I will also show what was stapled, which documents, and will further state that I had never known that Board's Exhibit 32-E had ever been stapled in Board's Exhibit 33, and had never seen Exhibit 33, that is, the original of it, until it was furnished to me in the courtroom, and I had worked purely from the copy of Board's Exhibit 33, and had not recognized that Board's Exhibits 32-A, B, C, D and E were not an original of the copy, which I had been working from.

Trial Examiner Batten: My question to you, now, Miss Weyand, is, assuming what you say is true, is there any reason why all of the testimony this witness has given, in respect to Board's Exhibit 32, should not be stricken?

Miss Weyand: Yes, there is, because her testimony as to Board's Exhibit 32-E stands alone, without regard to when that document was furnished the Wages and Hours [fol. 3565] Division. She said—there are certain names, and I said, referring to those names, did they represent the supervisors in November or December of 1940, and she said they did.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will say that I believe all of the witness' testimony in regard to Exhibit 32 should be very definitely stricken.

Now, when I make that statement, I don't want any of you to think that is my ruling. I am simply telling you what I think.

Mr. Reed: I don't want to get away from this question I am interested in. I am reading from the transcript.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you permit Mr. Langsdale to talk? He has been standing there and hasn't had an opportunity to, and with respect to this, I would like to take you in turn.

Mr. Reed: I was taking this up with Miss Weyand, and on this matter I have my own controversy, and I would like to finish that. It would only take me just a minute.

Trial Examiner Batten: I know. Mr. Hogsett made his motion, and I think Mr. Langsdale is entitled to make a statement, and I also think Mr. Tyler should.

Mr. Reed: But you are getting away from the subject matter. I have to submit, of course, to the rule.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I have a motion I have to dispose of. I have to hear you all; if you will permit [fol. 3566] Mr. Langsdale, now.

Mr. Reed: Miss Weyand made a statement in regard to the matter.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I would just as soon wait.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I don't want you to. I want to proceed.

Mr. Reed: Well, I want to be permitted to make a statement.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Langsdale said he is willing to let you proceed.

I am trying to say that I didn't want to change the method I usually follow, to give everybody an opportunity.

Mr. Reed: Now, Miss Weyand, when you heard her statement in regard to her examination being confined to December, now, I read from the record of yesterday, page 3531, there are a lot of things, but I have run into this one question:

"Question (By Miss Weyand): My question was: Does Board's Exhibit 32-A through E, purporting to show the executives and administrative capacity of the persons thereon listed, represent a situation which existed in your plant at any time prior to October 30th, 1940?" Now, that was her question.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is the answer?

Mr. Reed: The answer is, "I am going to have to say that I think this paper will speak for itself." Then that [fol. 3567] was followed by a list of questions, the purport of which—they appear in the record, so I need not read them at this time.

There was an effort being made here, after showing the witness a paper dated in October, to get the witness to admit two alleged facts: that these changes were made prior to October, or during the month of October, instead of being made, as shown, on the 20th of December, and even that, I understand,—this is outside of the record—they were not actually put into effect for some 10 days. Now, the whole point of this matter is that Miss Weyand was trying to show that they remained in the union, a number of people who had authority conferred on them in October, and to prove that by this document, which was being used for a false purpose—to prove it by that document, when, as a matter of fact, she or somebody else misplaced this sheet containing the names of the people who were listed with the Wage and Hour Division.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, might I ask this question—

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) Now, I want to ask Miss Weyand if she did not detach this Exhibit 32 herself?

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, I would like to ask you a question.

Mr. Reed: Ask me a question? All right.

[fol. 3568] Miss Weyand: Well, in answer to the Senator's question, I would be glad to answer that I did not.

Mr. Reed: Who did?

Miss Weyand: I do not know.

Trial Examiner Batten: I was going to ask you if counsel for the Respondent did not look at this document. I admit that I did, and I admit that I did not notice that 32 had a different date on [redacted] than the document—I was wondering if any of us had been carefully looking at it yesterday.

Now, I still feel, and I will permit you to make your statement, but I still feel all of this witness' testimony with respect to 32 should be stricken.

Now, let me state why; then, Mr. Langsdale, you can talk. I say this without any regard to whose mistake it was, whether it was intentional, or unintentional. It seems to me the witness' testimony with respect to the exhibit, which the Board's counsel admits is incorrect and on which a serious mistake has been made, the testimony can be of no value.

Now, as far as I am personally concerned, I don't think that I would want to rely on this witness' testimony with respect to it, even though I had not heard her testify.

Now, Mr. Langsdale.

Mr. Langsdale: If it please the Examiner, it is per- [fol. 3569] fectly apparent Miss Weyand didn't intentionally transpose any part of the document. She is the one that comes in here and calls the Examiner's attention to it, this morning.

Now, I noticed yesterday, when I read it over, and I consulted with Miss Weyand after the hearing, and I called her attention to the fact it referred to some communications of December 29th and was dated December 20th, and it seemed to be amazing to her it was true.

I read it very carefully, and I assume Mrs. Reed did, but the fact is, Mrs. Reed was so indefinite and so evasive, that there couldn't have possibly been any harm done by this document.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, assuming what you say is true—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) If you will let me finish, I won't be long.

Now, what I want to call to the Examiner's attention is: the desire of counsel is to hop on an occasion and claim that the attorney for the Board has done something crooked and underhanded, and something she evidently had no intention whatsoever of doing.

That is the thing that I want to reply to. It is perfectly apparent Miss Weyand had no such intention whatsoever, and didn't know how these documents got misplaced. I want to call your attention to the fact, in Exhibits 32-A, [fol. 3570] B and C, under the sixth paragraph, entitled "Employees", "The statement of the total number of employees whom your firm considers exempt from provisions of the Act, (refer to Employers' Digest) includes salesmen, 49," without giving any list of them at all; and the other document, on which they are making such a mountain out of a molehill, "Pursuant to your request of December 29th," evidently the Wage and Hour Division was wanting them to say who these 49 people were, "Pursuant to your request of December 29th, the persons coming within the provision of the second part of paragraph 6, of the questionnaire as at December 20, 1940 are as follows: which refers to "The total number of employees whom your firm considered exempt from the provisions of the A t," that is the second paragraph of 6; so it says, "Pursuant to your request of December 29th, the persons coming within the provision of the second part of paragraph 6, of the questionnaire as at December, 1940, are as follows:" and evidently giving the information which they failed to give when they filed A, B and C.

Trial Examiner Batten: 32-A, B and C?

Mrs. Reed: It doesn't ask for that in the blank.

Mr. Langsdale: You spent three days testifying; now, if you will, please, let me talk.

Mr. Reed: Now, listen. Suppose you talk to the Examiner.

Mr. Langsdale: Yes, and suppose you talk to the Examiner too.

[fol. 3571] Trial Examiner Batten: All right. Let's get along with the matter under consideration, and, Mrs. Reed, unless you are asked a question, please permit the lawyers to handle this matter.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, the point I am trying to make is that they are trying to make a mountain out of a molehill. It means nothing whatsoever, how this article got in the wrong place, ina much as Mrs. Reed said she read it, and testified to it. It means nothing, and it is perfectly evident they are trying to give the information that they failed to give in 32-A, B and C. Now, it doesn't make the slightest bit of difference in this lawsuit whether they began October 31st or December 20th, 1940.

Our contention is, they are, and have been from the very inception of this Donnelly Workers' Union, executives, and we hope to prove that before we are through, but it doesn't make the slightest bit of difference whether it was October 31st or December 20th.

My point is, Mrs. Reed didn't answer anything definitely. My thought is, if there is any complaint about the testimony of yesterday, with reference to this inserted document, she should be permitted to go through her testimony, and make any changes that she says she would have made, had she noticed that the document was dated December 29th. But in the abundance of caution, I would say the Examiner is [fol. 3572] right; it ought to be stricken out, and let the examination be gone over again, if they think they are going to gain anything by that.

But I do resent, as a member of the Bar, the insinuations these counsel are attempting to place on Miss Weyand, who comes out here from Washington to represent the government. There isn't any possible ground for any suspicion or hint that she has done anything in this case that wasn't purely a mistake, and the mistake hasn't amounted to anything, because she got nothing out of Mrs. Reed, definitely, with reference to the dates, and if she wants to change her testimony, let her look over her answers and change them.

As I said, in an abundance of caution, I would like to see you sustain the motion, so these gentlemen will not take it up in the Court of Appeals, and yip.

Mr. Reed: Well, now—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Pardon me, Senator. Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Tyler: I want to add a word. It is obvious from the discussion at the time Mrs. Reed was cross-examined on Exhibit 32, and the inserts there, she had before her what she must have supposed was a government exhibit, in the same condition it was actually filed with the government.

Now, being faced with what is apparently a fact, her conclusion as to her memory will necessarily be affected [fol. 3573] by what she had thought that document to be, a fact of record, which was no fault of hers; but basing her answers in cross-examination on that, necessarily believing that was a government record, which now proves to have been a mistake, naturally her answers are not to be considered as proper cross-examination, because based on an error of fact beyond her power.

I move all her cross-examination, as to Exhibit 32-A through E be stricken from the record. The purpose of—the listing for the purpose of the Wage and Hour Division, of supervisory employees, has no bearing whether these employees are supervisors in sense, rather than the employees under the Labor Law.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, would you mind not opening up a second motion yet? Don't complicate the matter. We now have, under consideration, an entirely different subject matter.

Mr. Tyler: I ask leave to renew—

Trial Examiner Batten: If you will do that, until we get one matter at a time disposed of, I will appreciate it. Senator?

Mr. Reed: To the polite implication of Mr. Langsdale, that we go into the Court of Appeals and howl, I make no reply. It is the usual courtesy he shows in cases.

This document, Exhibit 32-E, was attached to 32-A, and [fol. 3574] 32-A, as I have stated, bears the date of the 10th month and 30th day, 1940. 32-E has the heading, "Pursuant to your request of December 29th, the persons coming within the provision of the second part of paragraph 6 of the questionnaire of December 20th," and then follows a long list of names. Now, that document was attached to something, and disattached by somebody, as is shown by the mark in the upper, left-hand corner.

Somebody took that document from another paper, and when we come to the other paper, and it is handed up here as 33, Exhibit 33, the exact marks are found in 33 that appeared in 32-E, in the upper, left-hand corner.

Now, it is either Miss Weyand, or somebody down in that office, who tore this paper out of 33, where it belonged, and put it over into 32, where it did not belong.

Trial Examiner Batten: When you say "that office", what do you mean?

Mr. Reed: I mean the office of the—what do you call these things—Wage and Hour, either somebody there, or Miss Weyand, detached this sheet, 32-E, or it was afterwards detached and then somebody had to nail it down and make it part of 32, and then, when I came here this morning, seeing Miss Weyand in the hall, I asked her for the exhibit, and her reply was that it was in the hands of the reporter.

[fol. 3575] When I get it from the reporter, 32 has been detached by somebody.

Now, I want to know who detached it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I think Miss Weyand made a statement.

Miss Weyand: I did not detach it.

Mr. Reed: Did you have somebody attach it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. I will try to assist you to get it straightened out. I thought I understood you to say that 32-E you detached.

Miss Weyand: I stated I attached it.

Mr. Reed: Since it stands admitted Miss Weyand herself inserted in 32, Exhibit 32, this sheet, 32-E, and nailed it down and made it a part of it—

Miss Weyand: I did not insert the original. It came to me physically between the two sheets, not physically attached.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand stated twice she did attach it to 32.

Mr. Reed: Well, she says she attached it. She says now it lay between the two sheets and she nailed it down.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is what she said, Senator, in the first place, as I recall it.

Mr. Reed: I simply want the facts to be perfectly plain, so nobody can ever mistake it, that Miss Weyand nailed [fol. 3576] or tacked or fastened, whatever term it should be described, this sheet in 32, and up to that time it had been a loose sheet. She says when it came to her, it was a loose sheet.

Now, that brings us to this: either Miss Weyand did this, or over in the department, somebody over there tore this sheet out of 33 and handed it to Miss Weyand, and if they did that, I want to know that fact.

Trial Examiner Batten: May I see 33? Well, I can tell you now I am not going to conduct an investigation of the Wage and Hour Department.

Mr. Reed: I know that, I know that you are not, and it probably needs one.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not going to do it.

Have you anything further, Senator?

Mr. Reed: I think not.

[fol. 3577] Mr. Hogsett: Would the Examiner rule on my motion?

Trial Examiner Batten: I intend to, yes, after everyone has had their say, and I assume you have now.

I will strike the testimony with regard to exhibit 32-E.

Mr. Hogsett: I believe I made it broader than that. I think I said all cross-examination pertaining to 32-A, B, C, D, and E.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you did. And when I say I will strike all testimony with regard to 32-E, that covers any questions, Mr. Hogsett, which relate to the exhibit in its entirety. If there are any questions which relate to 32-A and do not incorporate within the meaning of the question the entire exhibit, they will stand.

Now, I think there can be very little doubt in anybody's mind as to what my ruling is. When you review that cross-examination of all counsel, if there is a question which you are doubtful about, whether it is in or out, you may bring it to my attention. And I will say now that between now and Monday Morning I shall read that testimony, and if I consider that there is any part of it that is doubtful, I will attempt Monday to clarify it.

Mr. Hogsett: That is satisfactory.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, are we ready to proceed?

Mrs. Reed: Could we have a little recess?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. We will take a 10-minute recess.

[fol. 3578] (Thereupon a 10-minute recess was taken.)

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I should have the record indicate that I have not passed upon Mr. Tyler's motion.

I had intended, Mr. Tyler, that my ruling which I directed principally to Mr. Hogsett would be applicable to your motion also.

Mr. Tyler: You are referring to my motion to strike all cross-examination as to 32?

Trial Examiner Batten: I am referring to the motion that you did not withdraw. In other words, I am not passing upon the motion which you withdrew at my request.

Now, I want to further state that I am going to reserve the right—and I want that clear—that when I read over this record between now and Monday morning, to include within my allowance of the motion to strike, any further parts which I think are not included in my ruling.

Now, I also want to further state this with respect to my ruling, that I did not intend by my ruling—and I think all counsel understand that clearly—to pass upon the issue which Mr. Langsdale referred to, whether or not Board's counsel intentionally attached this document or whether there is any implication of any kind with respect to Miss Weyand. I want to say that my ruling does not imply any determination of that question or any implication that you, Miss Weyand, were amiss in your duty as an attorney in this matter.

[fol. 3579] Now, I am not saying that I will not pass upon such matter if, in my opinion, I think it is necessary at any stage in this proceeding, or in an intermediate report, if I write one. The way the record now stands, I am inclined to feel that there is no such issue for me, as the Examiner, to determine. Now, I am not saying there isn't; I am saying that is my feeling at the present time. I wanted to make that clear to everybody.

Now, on that basis, Miss Weyand, I believe I stopped you awhile ago from offering two additional exhibits. I believe we are now at a point in the proceeding where you, as Board's counsel, may proceed.

Miss Weyand: I don't believe I care, at this time, to offer the two exhibits, unless somebody would like to have them put in.

The problem is, one of them is a copy which I stated I used, and I am glad to have that put in the record. I am at a loss however, to identify, other than by my own statement, that that is the copy I used, or to have someone from the Wages and Hours Division state that that is the copy they supplied me. I am considerably at a loss as to whether there is any point to putting it in after—

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, I would say the same thing to you I said to Mr. Ingraham day before yesterday: You, as an attorney, will have to proceed in the [fol. 3580] way you think you should proceed. The matter is now in your hands, as far as the hearing proceeding is concerned.

Miss Weyand: I will ask the reporter to mark this document as Board's exhibit 34-A, B, C, D, and E.

(Thereupon the document above referred to was marked for identification "Board's Exhibit No. 34-A, B, C, D, and E.")

The Witness: May I see that?

Miss Weyand: I did not intend to ask you any questions about it at the present time. You are welcome to look at it, if you want to see it. (Handing Board's Exhibit 34-A to E, inclusive, to the witness.)

I would like to state for the record that this is the copy of Board's exhibit 33 which was furnished to me by the Wages and Hours Division several weeks ago. I do not intend to ask further questions—or any questions, I should say, pertaining thereto, until I have presented Board's Exhibit No. 33 as an exhibit in the case.

Mr. Hogsett: You have heretofore indicated, Miss Weyand, that exhibit 34-A was your copy of—what exhibit?

Miss Weyand: Board's exhibit 34-A, B, C, D, and E, is a copy which was furnished to me by the Wages and Hours Division.

Mr. Hogsett: As a copy of what?

Miss Weyand: They did not state what it was a copy of [fol. 3581] when they furnished it to me. It was the copy which I handed to a Board attorney when I asked that the original thereof be produced.

Mr. Hogsett: They each bear the same date, but of course you know, do you not, that they are not copies—34-A, B, C, and so forth, are not copies of Board's exhibit No. 33?

Miss Weyand: I do not care to pursue the matter further until I have had Board's exhibit No. 35 identified and presented in the record.

Trial Examiner Batten: They are just marked for identification.

We will proceed.

Miss Weyand: I would also like to have marked Board's exhibit No. 35-A, B, C, D, and E.

(Thereupon the document above referred to was marked for identification "Board's Exhibit No. 35-A, B, C, D, and E.")

Mr. Hogsett: Now, may I compare that with exhibit No. 33?

Miss Weyand: Yes. (Handing Board's Exhibit No. 35-A to E, inclusive, to Mr. Hogsett.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Are those (indicating documents on counsel table) the photostats of those newspaper articles?

Mr. Tyler: Yes, Your Honor.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I hand you Board's exhibit No. 33 for identification, and ask if the signature thereon is the signature of Alex Green?

[fol. 3582] A. The signature appears to me to be that of Alex Green.

Miss Weyand: I would like to ask counsel for the respondent to examine these exhibits, which purport to be originals, Board's exhibit No. 32-A, B, C, and D, and Board's exhibit No. 33. Before offering them in evidence, I would like to have counsel for the respondent check those exhibits with their records and inform me as to whether their records do show that such information was furnished the Wages and Hours Division, and whether this is the information which was furnished.

Trial Examiner Batten: That pertains to what exhibit, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: Board's exhibit No. 32-A, B, C, and D, Board's exhibit No. 33, and Board's exhibit No. 32-E, and it will pertain also to Board's exhibit No. 35-A, B, C, D, and E.

Trial Examiner Batten: How about 34-A to E?

Miss Weyand: That is not an original. I will leave that in the record just for what it is worth. It is what I had originally and—

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, what you want counsel to check is Board's exhibits Nos. 32, 33, and 35, and determine whether or not those are the original documents which they forwarded to the Wages and Hours Division; is that right?

[fol. 3583] Miss Weyand: That is right. And I would also like to have them determine if Board's exhibit No. 32-E was furnished to the Wages and Hours Division at the time and in connection with the presentation of Board's exhibit No. 33.

Mr. Hogsett: Miss Weyand, that last couldn't be true, could it, because 33 is dated December 20, and 32-E is dated sometime after December 20.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think she said, submitted in connection with it.

Mr. Hogsett: She also said, "at the same time."

Trial Examiner Batten: Oh, "at the same time"?

Mr. Hogsett: She had that in there.

Miss Weyand: Then, could you furnish me the information of when it was submitted and the document with which it was submitted?

Mr. Hogsett: Very well.

Miss Weyand: I would also like to have you furnish me any other documents that would make these complete, if there is anything lacking in these documents, so we will know what you did furnish to the Wages and Hours Division on the occasion on which you apparently furnished them these documents, or whatever it turns out you did furnish them, if you didn't furnish them these documents.

Trial Examiner Batten: What you mean, Miss Weyand, is this, if when this document (indicating) was sent to the [fol. 3584] Wages and Hours Division there were other documents sent in addition to those which have been marked 32, 33, 34, and 35—that they produce any other documents which were sent at that time?

Miss Weyand: Yes. And if it should happen that they do not find that the attached information is the correct sheet, will they furnish me the sheet which was furnished, so that we can have an agreement here as to what the company did furnish. It has never been my intent or desire to have anything in the record that they did not furnish, and I regret that yesterday I did not give counsel an opportunity to check with their records before examining at all. I will not examine Mrs. Reed on it until we have that agreement as to what the documents were that were furnished.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you check, then, on 32, 33, and 35?

Mr. Hogsett: Yes. I think you had better leave the original exhibits there in one place.

Miss Weyand: I have photostats of the documents, and I also have the originals.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest that you furnish Mr. Hogsett the originals, as long as you have the photostats, because I think the originals are better than the photostats.

Miss Weyand: I should be very glad to do that.

Mr. Hogsett: The intelligent way to go about this is [fol. 3585] to show all of this material to the man who signed it, and he will tell us the facts, and we will then come back here and report to you.

Mr. Langsdale: I would like to ask at this time if the stenographic record shows recesses?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, it does.

Mr. Langsdale: I would like for the record also to show that yesterday, immediately after exhibits 32-A, B, C, and D were identified, the Examiner declared a recess, and that document was given over to counsel for the respondent to examine during that recess, which they did.

Mr. Ingraham: I would like the record to show, as soon as, or practically immediately after it was given over to us, Mr. Langsdale asked me for the document, and I gave it to him, and he kept it the rest of the afternoon.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, Mr. Ingraham, your memory is very faulty. You asked me to see it, and I handed it back to you.

Mr. Ingraham: But how long did you keep it, Mr. Langsdale?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment.

Mr. Langsdale: If there is going to be any controversy about it between counsel, I will not insist. My recollection is, I did ask to see it, and then I gave it back to you.

Mr. Ingraham: How long did you keep it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I do not intend to try [fol. 3586] out that issue. You have both made your statement and—

Mr. Langsdale: I thought that would be an uncontroverted statement. If Mr. Ingraham objects, I will withdraw my statement. I have a right to have it in the record, but—

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, that it is settled, Mr. Langsdale, let's proceed.

Miss Weyand: I would like to ask counsel for respondent if they have at this time the list of instructors which they agreed to furnish.

Mr. Ingraham: As of what time?

Miss Weyand: The present day.

(Thereupon a document was handed to Miss Weyand by Mr. Ingraham.)

Miss Weyand: I would like to have this marked as Board's exhibit No. 36 for identification.

(Thereupon the document above referred to was marked for identification "Board's Exhibit No. 36.")

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you please read over Board's exhibit No. 36 for identification?

(Witness complies.)

A. I have read it.

Q. Do you know whether those are the persons who are now instructors in your plant?

A. To the best of my knowledge, they are.

Q. Who would be able to tell me whether, in fact, they [fol. 3587] are, or how could I ascertain that?

A. I will say that they are.

Q. Does that include only the sewing sections, or are there instructors there of other sections of the plant?

A. No. There are instructors of other sections.

Q. Will you point out which are instructors of other than the sewing sections?

A. Mary Bogart—

Q. Would you indicate in which section she is?

A. The dividing section. And Lena Miller would be an instructor in pressing.

Q. Are those the only two that are not instructors in the sewing sections?

A. Mollie Smith would be an instructor in the notions section, and Lulu Waddell, in folding, and Stella Willis is in the button and buttonhole.

I believe that covers it.

Q. Do you know the floors on which the instructors in the sewing sections are located?

A. We have had so many changes that it would be very difficult, Miss Weyand, for me to say now which instructor is on which floor. I know that some of them have not been changed. On that particular floor, on that particular floor Marie Patton and Grace Gnotta, but we have changed different instructors to different floors.

[fol. 3588] In the last year and a half we have made so many changes with respect to the setup of the plant and the method of manufacture and the situation of the sections, that I wouldn't be able to say just on which floors each of them is. I could find out easily, if you want to know it.

Q. Do you know how long each of those girls has been an instructor?

A. Not for sure.

Q. Could you give some approximation?

A. Some of them have been there a long time; a few of them a shorter time. I happen to remember Margie Stacy has been recently made an instructor, because I suggested that she be made an instructor.

Q. Do you know when she was made an instructor?

A. I don't remember the date, but it was in the last several months.

Q. Could you indicate which of them were instructors in 1935?

A. That would be something we could find out. I wouldn't know exactly which ones, no. I know that Lena Miller is another person who has been made an instructor in,—well, within the last two years, because I also suggested that she be made an instructor.

Q. Would you know which ones were instructors prior to 1937?

A. Most of them have been. I couldn't just exactly say each name.

[fol. 3589] Miss Weyand: I offer Board's exhibit No. 36 for identification.

Mr. Ingraham: No objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received.

Mr. Langsdale: Pardon me, Miss Weyand. Would you say, for identification, or for the proof of what it purports to show?

Miss Weyand: For what it shows, taken together with Mrs. Reed's testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: As I understand it, that is a list of instructors furnished by the respondent?

Mr. Hogsett: That is right; and identified as such by the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: It is received.

(Thereupon the list of instructors above referred to, previously marked for identification "Board's Exhibit No. 36," was received in evidence.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. If an employee is late to work, or absent, and desires to call in, to whom does she call?

A. To Mrs. Hyde.

Q. If a girl desires to use a telephone during working hours, does she have to have permission from someone?

A. She doesn't, as far as my knowledge is concerned.

[fol. 3590] By Miss Weyand:

Q. I understand you have a hospital with your plant, is that correct?

A. I have,—I have two trained nurses and some beds, and what we call a hospital, but I don't think a doctor would call it a hospital.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Is it a First Aid department?

A. Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Does that exist to serve your employees, where they are injured or ill during working hours?

A. It does.

Q. Does it also serve the employees who are ill and away from working several days?

A. It is the duty of one of the nurses to call on an employee who is away, to see if she is taken care of, or just as a matter of interest.

Q. When a girl is absent from work for illness, do you have a procedure of making a record on a leave slip?

A. We have sick insurance, so naturally there would have to be some definite record made, when a girl is away on account of illness.

Q. Could you describe who makes the record?

A. I assume that one of the trained nurses does.

Q. Is the record okayed by the instructor?

A. I don't know what you mean.

[fol. 3591-92] Q. In many plants they have leave slips. Do you have some such thing as a leave slip?

A. I don't know what the details are, how that is handled in our place.

Q. Do your employees have credits for the purpose of purchasing dresses in your retail store, is that a cash transaction?

Mr. Hogsett: I can't see the remotest connection between that. I really have no objection, but I can't see it is at all relevant. I object to it, to save time.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us.

A. I don't know how it is handled.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You don't know whether the store does a cash business or credit business?

A. I know the store, with any outsiders, does a cash business, but whether they charge a garment for the girls, I don't know. At one time we did, I know.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Who delivers the pay checks to the girls in the sewing section?

A. I really don't know. I suppose the person who makes them out. I don't know that exact detail.

Q. Do you know the manner in which time cards for the girls are kept?

A. I know we have made some changes in the way the time cards are kept in the last — within the last year.

[fol. 3593] Q. Isn't it true there are quite elaborate card systems on each girl and her work?

[fol. 3594] A. There has been, I don't know whether at the present time. Well, I am sure there is a record of the girls' work kept. Now, I don't know how elaborate a one that is, though.

Q. Does the instrucfor participate in making entries on that record?

A. The instructor would keep track with the girl, and perhaps the girl would keep track of it herself, if she does any time work, so that she will be paid for that in addition to what she earns from piece rates at the end of the week.

Q. Does the instructor make any record of the amount of piece work a girl has done daily or weekly?

A. I don't know, Miss Weyand, the detail of how that— how those records are kept. We change them at different times. I really don't know how they are kept.

Q. Are the girls paid for time during which a machine has broken down, and they thereby lost piece work?

A. That has always been my policy.

Q. Do you have a rule of how much is paid per hour, or half an hour, during the period the machine is down?

A. My understanding is that, at the present time, the instructors have an agreement with the operator, because sometimes the operators are making more money than their guarantee, and I believe they try to arrange to pay them [fol. 3595] according to the amount of time. If it is the amount of money that they actually lost, of course, if they are making less than the guarantee, they are paid by the guarantee.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean if she loses an hour's time, she would be paid approximately what she would have been paid if her machine had continued to operate?

A. That's the idea, Mr. Batten.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Who keeps track of the amount of time of a given girl if her machine is broken down?

A. I don't know whether the instructor or the girl keep track of that, but they have an agreement on how much time it is.

Q. Who brings repair work to the girls?

A. The examiner.

Mr. Reed: Will you read that last question? I couldn't hear it.

(Last question read by the reporter.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you have a credit union at your plant?

A. We do.

Q. Do you know whether someone is required to place an authorization of the company on each loan which is granted to a girl?

A. I don't know anything about how they run the credit union; I only participated in it, in the very early stages [fol. 3596] of getting it in there. I think there are regular rules and regulations, that these credit unions work under, and they are used all through the country.

It is my understanding, I know I did make a statement to the first committee, that I wanted them to realize that when they were loaning money, they were really loaning workers' money, so they should be very careful.

My remembrance is I was informed there were rules governing those associations, that protected the people who invested in them, and of course the investors are the workers themselves; and they said I need not fear about that.

That is the only remembrance I have of any connection I had with this union.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean the credit union?

A. Yes, the credit union.

Miss Weyand: Then you do not know whether or not, each time a loan is made by the credit union, someone in the company must make a statement that the girl is employed by the company?

A. I do not know that. That may be a rule of the organization, but I don't know it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, what is the relevancy of this credit union? My understanding is, it all goes under state and federal laws, the regulations.

[fol. 3597] Miss Weyand: It is my understanding that is normally checked with the employer.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is, to insert it on the pay roll?

Miss Weyand: Have some further certification, it is usually done by a form.

Trial Examiner Batten: Oh, I see. My point is, there isn't any charge here that there has been any discrimination, as far as the operation of the credit union is concerned.

Miss Weyand: No, that is not the purpose. I was directing it to the line of testimony, what the instructors' duties were, if the instructors were in a position of authority to certify for the company the girl was employed.

A. I know nothing about the working of the credit union of our place.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What factors are taken into consideration in promoting an operator to become a thread or floor girl?

A. Mr. Baty usually does that. I have had a few contacts with girls; Margie Stacy was an operator, and one day I wanted a model, and we didn't have a model available, a regular model available, and somebody said, "There is a nice looking little girl on a machine downstairs," and that she could wear a size 14, so we sent her up, and she was a very nice looking girl, and seemed to be alert and bright. [fol. 3598] I asked her a little about her former experience, and about her work, and so Mr. Baty, in a discussion with me about the factory, said that he needed another instructor, and I said, "Why don't you try Margie Stacy, she seems to be a bright and alert girl," and I see her name on the list of instructors, so I suppose that he did.

Q. Could you indicate what factors in her experience impressed you with her qualifications for being an instructor?

Mr. Reed: I think that is a ridiculous waste of time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that an objection, Senator?

Mr. Reed: I object. It is a ridiculous waste of time.

A. I don't remember the exact experience; she had been an operator for several years, and the main thing, to me, was she seemed to be alert and bright, and a nice looking girl.

Now, that was why I recommended her. I was also told that she was a good operator, and when I called her up a couple of times again, to use her as a model, I liked her as a model, and someone said, "Well, she is a pretty expensive girl to use as a model, that girl makes good money," and that was another reason that I would have suggested she be an instructor, if she was a good, fast operator.

Miss Weyand: Could you describe the duties of Rose [fol. 3599] Todd, in January of 1935?

Trial Examiner Batten: Before we start on this line of questioning, I think we will recess a few minutes. Mr. Hogsett, I want to see you—I don't mean just you—and Mr. Ingraham.

(Recess was accordingly taken.)

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What were Rose Todd's Duties in January of 1935?

A. I wouldn't be able to state definitely what her duties were in 1935; Mrs. Reeves was running the plant, and Miss Todd was working under Mrs. Reeves.

Q. What did Rose Todd do?

A. What did she do? I think I testified yesterday that she had done several things; she had been a floor girl.

Trial Examiner Batten: This was '35?

A. In '35.

Trial Examiner Batten: I assume that is what you are asking?

Miss Weyand: That is what I was asking, yes.

A. I am not exactly sure. She probably was a floor girl. I know she was a floor girl for a while, but I don't know in just what year she was. Miss Todd did receive different things to do.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was she instructor, subsequent to January, 1935?

[fol. 3600] A. I am not sure that Miss Todd was instructor. She was on the floor. Whether she was really an instructor or not, she was on the floor and gave out work, I know that. I am not sure that she was ever instructor in a section herself.

Q. When you say you do not know that she was an instructor, in a section herself, do you mean to say she never served as instructor in any section at any time subsequent to January, 1935?

A. I know that instructors in a section—usually there is an instructor and floor girl, and we have had, at different times, special machines, and sometimes we have had a group of special machines, and we might have just one person giving out the work, because the work didn't originate in that section, they simply did a special machine operation for some other section.

My remembrance is at one time Rose Todd was in one of these special sections, but I am not sure whether she was considered an instructor or not.

Q. What were her duties when she was in the special section?

A. Well, one of the duties would be to give out the thread and the work, and the special machine work would come directly from another section, and probably the instructor from another section would bring that work over, and put it on the box or the so-called "horse" of the opera[fol. 3601] tor that was to do that work.

I know, in our special section, that at different times, when we didn't have many people working in them, we attempted to get along without an instructor, without that expense.

Now, whether she was in that situation, I am not sure. I don't remember; I don't know.

Q. You said one of her duties was to give out work. What were her other duties?

A. In that situation, it would be to give out work that another instructor gave her. I don't know whether she would give it out, but she would give out thread and trimmings, or whatever was used in that section, that was necessary to get the work out.

Q. Did she have other duties than to give out the thread?

A. I couldn't say for sure. I am not entirely informed on that.

Q. Did this special section receive instructions similar to the instructions sent down to the sewing department?

A. I don't know; the method of that might have been changed. It was changed at different times, according to whether we had a great abundance of a certain kind of work to get out, or whether we were simply trying a new method, and we have had our special machines. We have tried having them in the section, and we have tried having them in a group together, and we have tried having some of them in the sections and some in a group, and then, I [fol. 3602] believe, we tried having all special machines—having a special machine section, but, when those different changes were made—

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Of course, that isn't the question, when they were made. The question is if, during the time, Mrs. Reed, your special machines were in the sewing section, naturally, there would be written instructions.

A. At that time, I know Miss Todd was not in charge of the special machines.

Q. I am not talking about Miss Todd, I am simply saying that when the special machine was in the sewing section, the instructions which came down would include the use of the special machine, would they not?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the question is, when you had a section which included only special machines, did they also receive from the planning department, some sort of instructions on the work they should do in that section, if you know?

A. I don't know for sure. The special machine section has always been simply doing one specific thing to a garment. That was very definite, and the instructions on that might have come right along with the instructions how to make the garment, but I don't know for sure.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Who would show the girls in the special section how to do their work?

[fol. 3603] A. The special sections — when we first put up a special section, everybody that went into that section already knew how to do the work. It was like a double stitcher, and she had probably learned to do the work at some time in the regular section.

Q. Did you ever hire girls for work in the special section who were not previously trained?

A. Not if we can help it.

Q. Do you ever hire them?

A. I don't know.

Q. What machines are in the special section?

A. Well, at the present moment I couldn't tell you what machines are in the special sections. I know a good many special machines are in the regular sections right now.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. But when you had a special section, what machines were in it?

A. Well, when the machines were all put in the special section, I can't recall what they would be, exactly.

Q. Is the machine special, or the work that is special?

A. No, it is the machine that is special, that is made to do one kind of work; for instance, you have a section, and there is a double stitching machine, then all of the double stitchers from a group are in that section, and that would be done on those double stitching machines.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. In addition to the double stitching machine, what [fol. 3604] other machines were in the special section?

A. We had a section where overcasting was done.

Q. What other operations were done in the special section?

A. At various times, hemstitching.

Q. Anything else?

A. Embroidery work, but I believe the embroidery machines would be in a separate section.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You mean a separate section of just embroidery machines?

A. Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What other special machines are there, in addition to the ones you have named?

A. Many other special machines we have used in the past 25 years; outside of the double stitching machine I don't know of any one that we used continuously for 25 years.

Q. Have you ever trained a girl in your plant to run a special machine?

A. I wouldn't know that of my own knowledge, although I am sure that —

Mr. Reed: Did you mean personally?

Miss Weyand: No.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was there ever a girl trained in the plant, by anyone, to learn to operate a special machine?

A. In the past number of years, I wouldn't know that of my own knowledge.

[fol. 3605] Q. Have you been informed such was the fact?

A. I have never inquired.

Q. Was it ever stated to you whether such had occurred?

A. No.

Q. Do you have a special section today?

A. We have put most of our special machines back in the section, and I don't know the status of the special section today, exactly.

Q. In addition to the duties which you have described, which Rose Todd at various times performed, what other duties did she perform?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean in 1935?

A. In all of the years she has been there?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Since 1935.

Trial Examiner Batten: Since.

A. Since 1935, Mrs. Reeves and later Mr. Baty took pretty much complete responsibility for managing the plant, and I would not be informed as to just what her duties were.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know who she was responsible to?

A. To Mr. Baty and Mrs. Reeves, at different times they were in charge of the plant.

Q. Well, was there ever, since January of 1935, any intermediary between Rose Todd and the production management?

A. I would not know that.

[fol. 3606] Q. Turning now to April 1937, was Rose Todd assigned to any department of the plant?

A. I testified about three times that she went through the plant supplying notions or thread, or whatever supplies might be missing to complete cuts.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Reed, the question is, was she assigned to any department? Was she assigned to any definite department or section in April of 1937?

The Witness: No, her job was just to go through the plant from one section to another.

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, she was not a part of any sewing section or department of the plant or the business; is that right?

The Witness: She was a part of all of them. She simply went from one place to another, and when there was something missing, she would find out what it was, and then she would go to the notions department, if it was to get more thread, or—

Trial Examiner Batten: I understood you to say she was directly responsible to Mr. Baty. Is that right?

The Witness: I said I didn't know, Mr. Batten. I said Mr. Baty had charge of the plant, and just exactly how he was running it, as to the details, I don't know.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Who informed her when a section was lacking in some material?

A. My understanding was that she just went from one section to another to see.

[fol. 3607] Q. Of whom did she inquire in a section?

A. She might— I think if some of the girls saw her coming, they would probably ask her why they couldn't have more green thread, or whoever needed the material would be just as apt to ask her for it as anyone.

Mr. Langsdale: Pardon me.

Will you read that answer?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Langsdale: I move that the answer be stricken as based upon supposition and speculation, without any knowledge on the part of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you know, Mrs. Reed, as a matter of fact, just what the procedure was in the plant?

A. I know that I was having a great deal of difficulty having my work come through promptly. We always were having a hard time filling the orders.

Q. My question to you was—

A. May I explain?

Q. Just a moment.

A. My—

Q. Just a moment, Mrs. Reed. My question was, whether or not you know the procedure in the production part of the plant? Do you know the procedure?

A. I know I told Mr. Baty that we would have to have somebody in the plant going through to check up the work. [fol. 3608] Q. You told him that. But do you know what procedure Mr. Baty outlined to take care of the thing you wanted corrected? Did you know that?

A. Not in a definite way.

Trial Examiner Batten: That was my only question, whether you knew just exactly the procedure Mr. Baty put in.

The Witness: No.

Mr. Langsdale: I renew my motion to strike.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I hand you Board's exhibit 28-A, being the stipulated pay roll of time-workers. Can you tell me offhand which heading Rose Todd is located under on your pay roll?

Mr. Reed: What is the pending question, please?

Trial Examiner Batten: What heading Rose Todd's name appears under on the pay roll, Board's exhibit No. 28, Senator.

Miss Weyand: Exhibit No. 28-A through—

Trial Examiner Batten: All of 28. I don't know how many pages there are; I think there are 50 or 60—something like that.

Miss Weyand: Sixty-eight.

Mr. Reed: I submit, if her name appears in this document, counsel might call attention to the place, and if it does appear under a particular heading of the pay roll, that [fol. 3609] is the best evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: I see no objection to Mrs. Reed's telling us where it appears, Senator.

A. She is under the heading of "Designing-Sewing."

By Miss Weyand:

Q. You are referring to Board's exhibit No. 28-H, being the pay roll for April 16, 1937, to April 30, 1937?

A. She may have worked up there for a little while. She was an operator and sewer. These names here (indicating)—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mrs. Reed. The question was— I will have the reporter read you the question. Perhaps you have forgotten it.

Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you just answer that?

The Witness: I am, but I think it would only be fair to let me say she might have worked up there. She might have been—

Miss Weyand: I would like to have Mrs. Reed explain.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may explain, but—

The Witness: I would like—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mrs. Reed. I thought you had forgotten the question.

The Witness: No.

A. I don't know—I know that these girls do sewing for the designers and do extra sewing. Now, Rose Todd could [fol. 3610] sew on a machine. She may have been sewing on a machine there.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know whether she did that from April 16, 1937, to April 30, 193[illegible]

A. I don't know. I recognize names of girls here who did sewing. Frieda Smeltzer did sewing, and Pearl Doyle did sewing up there.

Q. That is the period, is it not, in which you described her duties generally as keeping the sections supplied with materials?

A. I also said Mr. Baty was running the plant and I didn't know exactly what every person in that plant was doing every day. Now, we very often, in the designing department, need extra help, and it would be possible to have asked for her to come up and help in that sewing—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mrs. Reed—

A. (Continuing) We very often do that, particularly in that department.

Trial Examiner Batten: If I could make a suggestion which I think might be helpful to you,— If you do not know of your own knowledge the answers to these questions, then I think it is proper for you to say that you do not have the information upon which to base an answer.

The Witness: But, Mr. Batten,—

Trial Examiner Batten: Rather than tell us all of the possibilities.

[fol. 3611] Now, you do not have to follow my suggestion, Mrs. Reed. I am simply saying that, after all of this conversation which you and I have had— I thought you just said a moment ago you didn't know all of the details of the plant.

The Witness: I don't.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, if you do not know, Mrs. Reed, I don't think I would attempt to answer the questions.

The Witness: I do know that Ceva Vaughn sews on a machine in the designing department, and I know that Ann Scott does, and that Norma Duncan does. I know a number of these girls sew on power machines in the designing department, and Rose Todd's name is with them. I say Rose Todd did know how to sew on a machine, and there might be a possibility that she was borrowed for a week or two weeks and was up there.

Trial Examiner Batten: I agree with you, Mrs. Reed, that there is that possibility. I could say, myself, that there is that possibility. My only point was, I was trying to be helpful to you, was all.

[fol. 3612] Miss Weyand: Mrs. Reed, I would like to have you look at Board's exhibit No. 28, for the pay roll period of May 1 to May 15, 1937, at the page on which the designing section is set forth, and tell me if you see Rose Todd's name there?

Just take your time and see if you find "Designing" and if not, if you find "Rose Todd" at any other place on that exhibit.

[fol. 3613] A. I don't find it.

I would like to call the Examiner's attention to the fact that I was puzzled about this pay roll list yesterday, and last night I looked up to see why these queer headings would be on certain pages, and I saw the original pay roll that was put in evidence, and apparently when this was copied the pages were not followed. Now, when—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you have the original pay roll?

A. Yes. We brought it down.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest that you make the original pay roll available, then.

The Witness: Well, not for this date here (indicating), but—

Trial Examiner Batten: When that pay roll was furnished before, wasn't that supposed to be—

Mr. Ingraham: We brought in the original pay rolls.

Trial Examiner Batten: And wasn't this supposed to be a copy of it?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes. I do not have any recollection of [fol. 3614] making a copy of those pay rolls. We brought the original pay rolls in.

Trial Examiner Batten: Whoever made them, they were marked as an exhibit and were received on the assumption that they were a copy of the pay roll. Now, are they a copy or aren't they, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: They are a copy, as far as the names and wages are concerned.

I think this is what actually happened: I was asked by the Board's counsel to produce the pay rolls for their inspection, and I brought up the pay rolls, including the ones for the particular exhibits that you were inquiring about yesterday, and the Board took those pay rolls—

The Witness: The pages were mixed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you mean the Board inserted these titles?

Mr. Ingraham: No. But the pages got mixed up.

The Witness: A title would be carried over to the next page, and the wrong page would be there.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest that the original pay rolls be marked and photostats be provided.

Mr. Langsdale: If the Examiner please, I object to that change from the record as it now exists, until we look at the record and see what actually happened.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not accepting them, Mr. Langsdale.

[fol. 3615] Mr. Langsdale: My own recollection is, we asked them to produce the pay rolls, and they brought in the typewritten lists, which were copied into the record. I don't remember our ever having the original pay rolls.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it can be checked and—

Mr. Langsdale: The record should show how those got in there.

Mr. Ingraham: I was asked to produce these pay roll records, and I did produce them, and the next thing that appears is this stipulation.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, you signed the stipulation, didn't you?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, it seems to me, if there is anything wrong with it, it is up to you folks to check it up—

Mr. Ingraham: We will produce the pay roll records.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't agree with that. I want to rely upon what they did produce in 1939.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may rely completely, Mr. Langsdale, upon what is in the record, unless it is changed. Unless what is now in the record is corrected, it will remain, and any counsel may use it.

Now, the question still is, Mrs. Reed, do you find Rose Todd's name on that pay roll?

[fol. 3616] A. I do not.

Mr. Reed: There was an explanation undertaken here and partially given, I think.

The Witness: It seems to me—

Mr. Ingraham: We are talking about different things, Mrs. Reed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Reed injected the question as to whether this pay roll record is correct. There is a question pending—

The Witness: The pages are not in proper order.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute, Mrs. Reed. That hasn't anything to do with the question. The question is, whether Miss Todd's name is on Board's exhibit No. 28. Now, if you want, your attorneys may now proceed to the matter you are explaining. Let's clear up one thing at a time; that is all I am trying to do. If it isn't correct, permit your counsel and other counsel to clear it up. You are the witness, Mrs. Reed.

The Witness: Well, I have to be on my guard about unfair practices.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mrs. Reed, I want to say now you do not have to be.

The Witness: I do. I fear that I must be.

Trial Examiner Batten: I say now you do not have to be, because if I feel that anybody in this hearing room [fol. 3617-3618] is taking unfair advantage of you, or anyone else, I will do everything I can to protect you—

The Witness: But, Mr. Batten, you may not understand it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. —and every other witness, Mrs. Reed. I don't think, this far in the hearing, I would concede for one moment that any counsel participating in this hearing has been unfair.

The Witness: But, Mr. Batten, the copy that was showed me yesterday, the wrong pages were put—one page would be in the wrong place, and then it shows that a heading was on a certain page, and when copied they were carried over and the wrong pages went along.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest, then, you have Mr. Ingraham straighten it out. He was counsel for you and he signed the stipulation. If it is incorrect, then it is up to counsel, it seems to me, to make the corrections, and not the witness.

The Witness: I don't know who made the copy, but—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't either, Mrs. Reed.

We will proceed.

Miss Weyand: Will you look at Board's exhibit No. 28-U and see if you see Rose Todd's name on that page?

A. I do.

Mr. Reed: What page?

[fol. 3619] Trial Examiner Batten: 28-U.

Mr. Reed: That isn't the page number, is it?

Miss Weyand: The page number in the Circuit Court of Appeals record is 4767.

A. I see Rose Todd's name.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you state the department under which she is listed?

A. On this page she is listed under "Hand Sewing Department."

Q. Why was she placed under "Hand Sewing" for the two-weeks' period from May 1 to May 15, 1937?

A. I don't know whether she was placed under that or not. I don't know whether that is still a part of the pay roll being mixed up and the headings being mixed up in the copying or not.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, as far as that exhibit is concerned, that is where her name appears, isn't it?

A. As far as this exhibit is concerned, it is, but—

Q. Whether it is correct or not, you don't know? Is that what you mean?

A. I don't know whether it is or not.

[fol. 3620] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was she working in the hand sewing department from May 1st to May 15th, 1937?

A. I do not know.

Q. Can you explain any reason why she might have been placed in that section of your pay roll record for that period?

A. No.

Q. Will you look at the next pay roll period, being the period from May 15th to May 30th, 1937, and tell me if you see Rose Todd's name thereon and what department she appears therein?

A. I have found it. It is in the hand sewing department again.

A. Page 4773.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was Rose Todd working in the hand sewing department from May 15th to May 31st, 1937?

A. I do not know.

Q. Do you know why, or do you have any reason why that should be put under that heading on the pay roll?

A. I do not. The pay roll was so mixed up yesterday, there might not have been any reason at all.

Trial Examiner Batten: If she were in that section on the original pay roll would you know why?

A. If she were in that section on the pay roll, it was [fol. 3621] because she was doing hand sewing.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you look at the next pay roll period, and tell me what department Rose Todd appears in? I suggest that you look at page 4783.

A. In that it is button and buttonhole department.

Q. Was Rose Todd working in the button and buttonhole department from June 1st to June 15th, 1937?

A. I don't know. I don't know where Rose Todd was working in the plant, actually doing the work, on every specific day. I still say that this pay roll is mixed up.

Q. If her name appears on the original pay roll in the button and buttonhole section, from the period of June 1st to June 15th, 1937, can you explain why it so appears there?

A. I couldn't explain, except the person making up the pay roll thought she was working there. I don't make up the pay roll, and I don't look over the pay roll.

Q. There would be no other reason for putting her in the pay roll classification of button and buttonhole department, except her working in the section?

A. Surely not.

Q. By "working in the section" you mean working as operator in that section, or instructor or thread girl in that section?

A. I don't know. I wouldn't know, I don't know what she was doing on any specific day in the plant.

[fol. 3622] Q. Unless Rose Todd worked there from June 1st to June 15th, 1937, as operator or thread girl or instructor in the button and buttonhole section, would her name appear on that department on your pay roll?

A. That is an awfully long sentence.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is: if she worked some other place, would she be carried on the pay roll of that section?

A. I don't think so.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Would you know of any reason why she might be carried on that pay roll, even though she might be working somewhere else?

A. I don't know of any reason why they would make up a pay roll that was incorrect.

Q. Will you look at page 4791, in the same exhibit, and tell me what department Rose Todd was in, on June 15th to June 30th, 1937?

A. I don't know what department she was working in, but the heading of this page, 4791, is button and buttonhole department, and Rose Todd's name appears on there.

Q. Would your answer with respect to that be the same, with respect to the statement you made as to the period of June 1st, 1937, to June 15th, 1937?

A. Still is, this pay roll is mixed up, the pages that were copied were not copied in the right sequence.

[fol. 3623] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. The question is, if her name appears under that section, would that indicate she was working in that section at that time?

A. If there wasn't any error in making up the pay roll.

Q. If it does appear?

A. There would be no reason to put that on our pay roll, put a person in a section where they were not working.

Q. Where they were not working?

A. No, our pay roll is gotten up in an automatic way; at this time there are about 35 or 40 people working on it, and certainly there would be no instructions to put anybody where they wouldn't belong.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Would you look at 4805, and tell me in what department Rose Todd's name appears for the period of July 1st to July 15th, 1937?

A. Will you repeat the question?

Q. It is the same question. What department does Rose Todd's name appear there listed?

A. The heading of this list says, "Receiving department, piece goods, continued, period ending 7-1 and 7-15-37," and it gives the employees names, and Rose Todd's is on that list.

Q. Was Rose Todd working in the receiving department, from July 1st to July 15th, 1937?

A. Not to my knowledge.

[fol. 3624] Q. Do you know of any reason why Rose

Todd's name should be placed under that department on your pay roll for that period, if it was so placed?

A. I still say it was an error in copying the pay roll. It is an error. She is at the top of the page of the receiving department, piece goods, and the other employees under that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mrs. Reed, assuming that is correct, would there be any reason for her being there in that department?

A. I know of no reason why she should be.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, do you have all of these pay rolls?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, we do.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, rather than have this question come up, have you checked these pay rolls against these exhibits?

Mr. Ingraham: I have not.

Trial Examiner Batten: You signed it as attorney, and stipulated it?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is it your opinion it is incorrect, or hasn't been properly put in the record?

Mr. Ingraham: I am advised, evidently sheets that were loose leaf sheets, probably a few got misplaced and put in [fol. 3625] ahead of some other sheets, when this exhibit was made up.

Now, I don't recall who made up the exhibit.

Trial Examiner Batten: Didn't you, as attorney, check it before you signed the stipulation?

Mr. Ingraham: I don't think we did check it. The Board took this, as my recollection of this, came over and got these actual pay roll sheets, and I think I had them in court for their inspection, and this is a receipt that I find in our files, that they got the records, dated July 17th, 1939.

Trial Examiner Batten: Irrespective of that, I think I will recess now, and Mrs. Reed and you can take these pay rolls and take these exhibits and sit down here at this table, and I want you to go through every one of those pay rolls, and tell me what errors you find. I want it done now.

There is no use proceeding with questions when—

A. (Interrupting) That is founded on mistakes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Whether it is or whether it is not, I want you and Mr. Ingraham to sit down here now and check every one of those pay rolls and mark down any errors you find.

Mr. Langsdale: Don't you mean the differences, instead of errors? I don't concede—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) I mean in line, if there are pages misplaced or anything, you will make notes of it, and I want it done now.

[fol. 3626] We will recess while it is done.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, we will have to send down and get these pay rolls. We only have the—

A. (Interrupting) One week.

Mr. Ingraham: We have two weeks. We have the complete two weeks on which Mrs. Reed was examined yesterday.

Trial Examiner Batten: How long would it take to get the pay rolls down here?

Mr. Ingraham: Probably some of those are in the basement.

A. Yes, probably some are in the basement. You can show Mr. Batten what happened on that one.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I want a complete statement on the whole thing; how long would it take to get the pay rolls down here?

Mr. Ingraham: I can't tell you. It probably would be quicker if we would go down to the plant.

Trial Examiner Batten: I want it here. I don't want you to go down there. I want it done here.

Mr. Ingraham: I don't know—these pay rolls were evidently made up by weeks, and mixed up between March 1st and July 31st, and the Board picked up whatever they wanted to pick up.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, they asked you for pay rolls for certain periods.

[fol. 3627] Mr. Ingraham: That is what they took.

Trial Examiner Batten: I recall they called for certain pay rolls, and you brought them in.

Mr. Ingraham: I did, and it was evidently a period of March 1st to July 31st.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you find any error except this one page?

Mr. Ingraham: That is just on the period of April 1st to April 15th, that she is referring to. That came up yesterday, and we got the pay rolls for that period.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I understood Mrs. Reed to imply there were errors in all of these.

Mr. Ingraham: She is only talking about April 1st to April 15th.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, she has gone down to June now.

Mr. Ingraham: Miss Weyand is asking for specific pay rolls, other than the pay roll we sent up to the company for, yesterday. There are other periods in this exhibit.

Trial Examiner Batten: She is now asking about the last two weeks in June.

Mr. Reed: I think I can explain this, if Your Honor will permit.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you think I would not?

Mr. Reed: Well, cut off some attempted explanation, [fol. 3628] and please let me explain this.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am sorry —

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) There came up the question as to the title of — what was that title?

Mr. Ingraham: Buying records.

Mr. Reed: Buying record. There was a good deal of controversy about it, and attention was called to the fact that names appeared in certain places, and Mrs. Reed was on the stand and was puzzled, evidently, by it. She said some of those names were out of place, and she couldn't see why they were on this list; so last evening we got the original record, and checked it, and we found out what had happened was that a certain title was there, and then a page had been misplaced in this copy, so that it did not truly reflect who was in that department.

We haven't challenged the entire record yet.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mrs. Reed has.

Mr. Reed: I think not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment ago she said that she couldn't say that this was correct, there might be pages misplaced, and that was concerning a June pay roll.

Mr. Reed: I know this: that other mistakes were made, and she was asked to take that document and say whether that is absolutely correct, and she raised the question that she couldn't positively do that, because there were already [fol. 3629] mistakes having been found.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if Mrs. Reed is willing to testify, assuming this is correct, that she has no explanation of Rose Todd being there, I don't presume there would be any objection to that. Her answer has always been that this is incorrect, and that she can't testify, and we couldn't proceed with the hearing on that basis.

May I see the pay roll? Show me what —

Miss Weyand: I would like it to appear on the record, what those mistakes were about the buying record.

Mr. Ingraham: Here is the buying record these girls followed, and in that department —

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, doesn't that follow?

Mr. Ingraham: No. No, this exhibit in the record, this page was put, evidently, in ahead of this page (indicating). Now, here is Herb Fountain.

Miss Weyand: Does Herb Fountain appear on your buying record of June 1st to June 30th?

Mr. Ingraham: Under — let's see.

Trial Examiner Batten: Under Audit No. 4688 and 4625.

Mr. Ingraham: That one page has been dropped out.

Miss Weyand: Will you examine the record and see if Herb Fountain does not appear on the buying record of July 31st, 1937?

Mr. Langsdale: I assume that you are talking about [fol. 3630] the records made in 1939?

Miss Weyand: Yes, and stipulated to and produced by the Respondent, and it appears on the face of the record that there is no substantial difference in the personnel of the buying record, from July 1st to July 15th, 1937, by a change of pages, because of the fact that the same personnel could n't change for every two weeks' period, throughout the period from April 1st, 1937, to July 31st, 1937, and that page couldn't have gotten out each two weeks.

Mr. Ingraham: Miss Weyand, I was requested to bring in the pay roll for each two weeks' period, and it may be whoever was gathering up this information got out of place on this one, or pulled one out of place, this sheet, for each period.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, it doesn't hardly seem like that would occur.

Mr. Ingraham: That is evidently what happened. These people on this pay roll, that follow the three girls that are on the bottom of this one sheet — and these three girls are Lulu Courtney, Hilda Richmond and Mary Stratton — then these girls on this next page are in that department, there is no question about them being in that department, and they aren't in the accounting department; and there is Margaret Quinn, Jane Daugherty, Freda Cordell, Jane Wilkins and Lyda Burns, and however it hap-

[fol. 3631] pened, I produced these records, and they are loose-leaf pages.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think in view of Miss Weyand's statement, that it appears consistently through July in the present record, which we believed to have been correct, Mr. Ingraham, if you want to change those, you may stipulate later, when the time comes to correct it.

Miss Weyand: I would like to have Mr. Ingraham at this time take the copy I have been showing to Mrs. Reed, and compare it with the copy he has in the courtroom, or did have yesterday.

Do you have it now?

Mr. Ingraham: I have this one, April 1st to 15th.

Miss Weyand: I am asking for the Circuit Court record, including these record pages from 4744 through 4810, and tell me if they coincide with the record pages which have been in the copy of your Circuit Court record.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I suppose that the copy that the Board sent me of the record of it in the Circuit Court, compares with that record. It is a copy the Board made up and sent to me, and I suppose you have the original of that record.

Miss Weyand: You used that record throughout the preparation of the brief in the Circuit Court case, without noticing any errors therein.

Mr. Ingraham: That's true, Miss Weyand, and the [fol. 3632] Board, as I recall, never challenged the division of the people in the pay roll, there never was any question raised.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, we will proceed on the assumption it is correct, until otherwise shown.

Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Examiner, Mr. Ingraham has just brought in such a small portion of what he says is the original record that is agreed on and stipulated, and introduced in the U. S. trial. Now then, if there is to be any further bringing in of loose leaves, I would suggest to the Examiner now that he commission some representative of the National Labor Relations Board, and some counsel or someone else, to go down to that plant now and get it, and dig out these original records. Certainly I am not going to be satisfied if, tomorrow morning, they come in here with some loose leaves.

I would like to see some representative of the Labor Board see where they get them, and see if they are there now, and not tomorrow morning or the day after, or any other time.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Langsdale, we produced the record the last time, that the Labor Board asked for, and I brought them in, and I have a receipt in my pocket.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, just a minute. I just said we are going to proceed on the basis this record is correct. Now, if the parties who contend it is not, may [fol. 3633] or may not have an opportunity to present it in this hearing, I am not going back, I don't think, now, on this record, and revise it from page 1 up to 3200, whatever it is, including all of the numerous exhibits.

[fol. 3634] Mr. Langsdale: My point is this, Mr. Examiner: If there is going to be any contention that the records they bring in here are the originals, I think it would be well to send someone representing the National Labor Relations Board down there this afternoon to see where they get them and how they get them and whether or not these are people who have been there any length of time.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think so, Mr. Langsdale, because I think the burden is entirely on Mr. Ingraham's shoulders. He signed this stipulation and agreed to this. It is in the record and has been used since—what is it now? —since July 1939.

If it isn't correct, I think the burden is on you, Mr. Ingraham, to produce whatever is necessary to show that it is incorrect. You agreed to the stipulation.

Mr. Ingraham: I agreed to the stipulation but—

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, on that basis, as I said awhile ago, we are going to proceed on the assumption that this is correct.

Mr. Langsdale: I say, if they are going to come in later with a lot of—

The Witness: I didn't say this was incorrect. I said it was incorrect in the way it is put together. Sometimes the heading is carried over and sometimes refers to the employees on the next page, when it shouldn't.

[fol. 3635] Mr. Ingraham: I didn't make up this exhibit. I produced the pay rolls and Mr. Leary took the pay rolls and checked them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Whether you prepared them or not, you were the attorney who signed the stipulation.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes. The Board had these pay rolls before them—

Trial Examiner Batten: Therefore, you must assume the responsibility of entering into the stipulation.

The Witness: We didn't know the Board would do a thing like that until this morning.

Trial Examiner Batten: If you find it is incorrect, check it up and— The burden is on you.

Mr. Ingraham: I will, if necessary, bring the pay rolls in.

The Witness: We didn't know the Board puts papers in the wrong place—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just minute, Mrs. Reed.

The Witness: They admitted this morning they did, and that has been done right here.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Reed, I think it would be better if you would permit your counsel to represent you.

We will proceed.

Miss Weyand: Could I have the last question and answer read?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter [fol. 3636] as follows:

"Q. Do you know of any reason why Rose Todd's name should be placed under that department on your pay roll for that period, if it is so placed?")

A. I do not.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What was Rose Todd doing during the week of July 1 to July 15, 1937?

A. I do not know.

Q. Looking at Board's exhibit No. 28-HHH, being record page 4804, what was Ed Corbin doing during the week of July 1, 1937, to July 15, 1937?

A. What was the date?

Q. The pay roll date July 1, 1937, to July 15, 1937.

A. I don't know what he was doing then. He was hired as one of the watchmen we got when there was so much violence going on by the I. L. G. W. U.

Q. Why should a watchman be placed in the receiving department?

A. I have no direction over making up this pay roll and I don't know why the person making the pay roll up would do that.

Q. It is true that he appears there above Rose Todd's name in the receiving department?

A. I do not see Rose Todd's name here.

Q. Preceding her's, on the page—

[fol. 3637] A. The next page, saying, "Receiving Department (Continued)," has the name "Rose Todd."

Q. Proceeding backwards among the persons in the receiving department, piece goods, the same exhibit and page number, the next name is Robert Eckart. What was Robert Eckart doing during the week of July 1, 1937, to July 15, 1937?

A. I don't know.

Q. Will you notice the salary which is placed opposite his name?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you state the amount?

A. $112.50

Mr. Langsdale: For the two-weeks period?

Miss Weyand: Yes. That is what is indicated.

A. I would assume that is it.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you see anyone in that department who received a higher salary?

Trial Examiner Batten: Than Eckart?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

A. Not according to this page.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you look through the preceding 10 pages of this exhibit, being the preceding pages covering the pay roll period July 1, 1937, to July 15, 1937, and tell me how many employees and who made a higher amount of pay for that pay roll period than Robert Eckart?

[fol. 3638] Mr. Reed: Now, if Your Honor please, those documents, under your ruling, are accepted here as correct by you. The documents speak for themselves. Now, what is the use of going through and having the witness say that she sees a name on there that is that? It just simply is a consumption of time.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't see the purpose of it. If the document speaks for itself, and there are four or five names on there of people that received more, do you intend to ask the witness, then, what they did?

Miss Weyand: I intend to ask her if she knows what they did.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, under those conditions, Senator, I would permit Mrs. Reed to go through it and locate any names that were receiving more than Eckart. That would be the only way for Miss Weyand to determine, I presume, what these people do, unless Miss Weyand took the document and went through it—

Mr. Reed: Miss Weyand could take it, if she wanted to, and ask what each of these individuals did and the difference between them, or state what it does tell with reference to their wages. There is no use going through this thing and having the witness—

Miss Weyand: The document will show that there are a very few persons on the exhibit that received more than $112.50.

[fol. 3639] Trial Examiner Batten: Why wouldn't it save time, Miss Weyand, if you merely asked about those individuals? You have already gone through it? You already know who they are, don't you?

Miss Weyand: I do.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, it would save time if you would just ask her.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. The first employee who received more than Robert Eckart, who appears on this two-weeks' pay roll period, is Ted Scoles; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. He is listed as receiving—

A. —$119.17.

Q. And you are fully cognizant of the duties that Ted Scoles was performing at that time?

A. I was not.

Q. You have described here what Ted Scoles's duties in general were and that you knew who he was, haven't you?

A. I have described what they could have been. He was under Mr. Baty's direction. Just what he was doing, I don't know. I have no way of actually knowing.

Q. You will notice that there is no one else on page 4796 that receives over $100?

A. I notice that.

Q. You notice that there is no one on page 4797—

[fol. 3640] Mr. Reed: I say again, the instrument will show, itself. It is here in evidence.

By Miss Weyand (Continuing):

Q. —down to Robert Eckart, on page 4804, who received over $100 for that two-weeks' period?

A. No one listed on this received more than $100 except those two.

Q. Following Robert Eckart, there is no one else on record page 4804 who received more than $100; is that correct?

A. That is right.

Mr. Reed: I insist, if Your Honor please, those papers will speak for themselves.

Trial Examiner Batten: I thought you were going to ask her about the people who received more.

Miss Weyand: Well, if there is anyone— We have discussed Ted Scoles and—

Trial Examiner Batten: You are now turning the pages, and saying, "There is no one on this page?"

Miss Weyand: I want to show that the witness is aware of what this pay roll record of the time workers shows when she answers the questions which I intend to ask her in reference to the few workers who received more than $100.

Mr. Reed: She can ask that without going through this pay roll.

Trial Examiner Batten: Proceed.

[fol. 3641] Miss Weyand: She has stated before she was unacquainted with the exact salaries of many of the employees at this period, as I recall, and I want her to have in mind exactly who was receiving more than $100, for this line of questioning.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. There is no one on page 4805?

A. No.

Q. 4806?

A. No.

Q. On 4807 there is one person receiving more. Who is that person?

A. Oscar Steinborn.

Q. Does it appear on the face at all why he received more than $106?

A. They mention there is some overtime.

Q. Noticing the number of hours listed, 100 hours—

A. That couldn't all have been overtime.

Q. That would probably—or would you know what that is? Would that be his total normal time plus overtime, or would you know what that 100 hours meant?

A. I really have never had anything to do with getting up a pay roll.

Q. Do you know Mr. Oscar Steinborn?

A. I know he is one of our cutters.

Q. I notice there he is listed under "Designing-Patterns."

A. He is one of the ones that probably at times comes [fol. 3642] up to do grading work.

Q. How long has he been working for the company?

A. I don't know.

Q. Is he an old employee?

A. Not as old as some.

Q. Was he working at the plant prior to January 1, 1935?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know Mr. Steinborn personally?

A. I know him to speak to him when I see him, yes.

Q. And you know what he does around the plant generally?

A. I really don't. I have seen him in meetings I have had with cutters.

Q. Does he do cutting work?

A. I classify him in my own mind as a cutter.

Q. What does he do?

A. I don't know, to be absolutely sure.

Q. There is no other person on page 4807?

A. No.

Q. 4808?

A. No.

Q. On page 4809 we have a whole row of persons, this being the buying records department.

Mr. Reed: The what?

Miss Weyand: The buying records department.

Mr. Reed: Of course, I can't hear counsel if she stands [fol. 3643] right over the witness and between me and the witness.

Miss Weyand: I am very sorry. I will try and speak louder. If you do not understand me on any occasion, just ask me and I will repeat what I said. I am thoroughly sorry if I do not always make myself plain.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you see the name of any employee on that page with whose duties at that general period you were not acquainted?

A. I see a number of employees that did their work under the direction of Mr. Baty. Some of them are designers.

Q. Will you name specifically which ones, instead of saying "some" when you refer to them?

A. Lillian Marrs was a designer; Yolanda Haines was a designer; Nellie Kraft was a designer; Gertrude Cain, a designer; Florence Strickland, pattern maker; Marvin Price would be in the maintenance department; Ella Mae Hyde was the personnel director; Lulu Nichols works on piece rates; Katie Schleicher works on making the original cost cards; she does that work herself.

The designers and Florence Strickland, Lulu Nichols, and Katie Schleicher all work on the 9th floor, and on that floor I am more familiar with what these workers actually do.

Marvin Price, Lena Tyhurst, Anna Wherry, and Herb Fountain all worked entirely in the plant and under Mr. Baty's direction, and I would not be able to tell what their [fol. 3644] duties were from day to day and what their activities were in the production of the merchandise.

Q. The next page, 4810, there are two persons who make over $100. Are you acquainted with those two persons and their duties?

A. Derrien Riley is in our New York office, and Pauline Hartman is in the accounting division. I don't know what they actually do. Neither one of them have ever been under me directly.

Q. On page 4811 there is no one making over $100?

A. No.

Q. On page 4812 there is no one making over $100?

A. No.

Q. I believe of the persons making over $100—I want you to correct me if this is not correct—Robert Eckart is the only person whose position and duties you do not know?

A. Well, the ones I have gone over there, I told you I don't actually know what their duties are from day to day.

Q. You do not know who they are at all? A. Yes.

Q Do you know who Robert Eckart is?

A. It comes back to me now— I believe he was one of the men we employed as a watchman at the time we had to close our lobby because we were afraid of pickets coming in and sitting down in the lobby. That is my remembrance.

[fol. 3645] Q. Do you know Barbara Eckart?

A. I know—

Mr. Langsdale: Pardon me. Let me get that date. July 1 to July 15?

Miss Weyand: That is the date at which he appears on the pay roll at $112, which we were discussing.

Mr. Langsdale: That was after the injunction was issued against any picketing.

The Witness: I said I believed he was a watchman we employed in the building. He was a watchman we employed in the building for a while.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question now is, do you know who Barbara Eckart is? Is that correct, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

A. I know Barbara Eckart works at our place.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know how long she worked at your place?

A. I really don't know. I believe, quite some time.

Q. Was she working there prior to January 1, 1935?

A. I would say that she was. That would be my remembrance.

Q. Is she Robert Eckart's wife? A. I don't know.

Q. Looking at page 4786, do you see Robert Eckart's name thereon? A. I do.

[fol. 3646] Q. What department is he there listed under?

Mr. Hogsett: Objected to because the document is the best evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us.

A. The heading on that page says "Accounting Department (Continued)."

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was Mr. Robert Eckart ever in the accounting department, to your knowledge?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you know of any reason why he should be listed on the pay roll, assuming he was so listed, in the accounting department? A. I do not.

Mr. Langsdale: Would you mind calling attention to the date, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: This is the pay roll. June 1 to June 15, 1937.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. That is correct, isn't it, Mrs. Reed?

A. Yes, that is what is on the page here.

Q. Calling your attention to page 4794, do you see Robert Eckart's name thereon? A. Yes.

Q. You notice he is again listed in the accounting department, do you?

A. I notice that the heading at the top of the page says [fol. 3647] "Accounting Department (Continued)."

Q. And that is the pay roll period June 16 to June 30, 1937; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was Mr. Eckart in the accounting department at that time? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you know of any reason why his salary should have been carried under the heading of "Accounting Department," if it was so carried, at that time?

A. I do not.

Q. In January 1935, did your employees have any organizations limited to employees of the plant?

A. I don't know much about the organizations. They had a number of organizations in the plant as far back as I can remember.

Q. What organizations did they have in January 1935?

A. I don't believe I could remember them. I just never bothered about their organizations.

Q. Do you remember the name of a single organization which they had in January, 1935?

A. They had an athletic association for a great many years.

Q. Was it in existence in January, 1935?

A. I am very sure it was.

Q. Was there any other organization of your employees in January of 1935?

[fol. 3648] A. I am not definitely sure about the date. I am not very good at remembering dates. I don't know exactly.

Q. Can you state whether there was or was not any other organization in January of 1935 than the athletic association?

A. There was a—what do they call themselves? Pioneers. We have had the group of Pioneers for a number of years, I believe.

Q. What kind of an organization is that?

A. That is a group of the employees who have been employed at my place 15 years or over.

Q. Did you have any organization at your plant in January, 1935, in addition to the athletic association and the Pioneers?

A. I have never had any organization at my plant of employees.

Q. Did any organization of employees exist at your plant, other than the Pioneers and the athletic association, in January of 1935?

A. When you put that date of January, 1935 in, I can't be awfully sure, Miss Weyand, of any others.

Q. Do you know the name of any other that you know did exist at that time?

A. To say just what existed in 1935, right at this moment I can't recall definitely. I know the athletic association has been there for a great many years, so I could say I know that was there in 1935. And I know the Pioneers were organized then. But what other ones were organized—you see, that's seven years ago—I might not be sure.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3650] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Mrs. Reed, I show you Board's Exhibit No. 2, which is record pages 4361 to 4364 inclusive, of the Circuit Court of Appeals record in this case. I would like to have you read this sufficiently to tell me if you ever saw or read it before.

A. I know that I never have seen this copy or original document before.

Q. That includes all four pages there, does it not?

A. I haven't read the others; I have read this front page, and I know I have not seen this copy or read this [fol. 3651] copy, nor have I ever read anything with this information in it. The same is true of pages 4362 and the same is true of 4363. The same is true of 4364.

Q. Do I understand your testimony to be that you have never read those four pages, nor the articles therein contained, prior to your reading them here on the witness stand here, today?

A. You may understand that, because that is a fact.

Mr. Langsdale: Pardon me. Is that Board's Exhibit 2?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you know, prior to today, that the Athletic Association published a news letter, news sheet?

A. I don't remember the Athletic Association publishing a news sheet.

Q. Did you ever hear of their issuing anything of the sort that purports to be?

A. I know I have never seen any of those papers until I read them today, and never read what was in them.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you know they issued one, some sort of a bulletin?

A. I have some faint remembrance that the Athletic Association may have gotten out some sort of a bulletin, but I have no remembrance what it was; but I do know from the context, what is in these pages, I have never read them before, because there are certain things I know [fol. 3652] if I had ever seen I would have remembered, and I know that I have never seen those papers before.

Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Company furnish the Athletic Association facilities for the printing of notices or other matters which it might wish to issue?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Calling your attention to the left-hand column on Board's Exhibit 2, page 4362 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record,—

A. (Interrupting) Which column do you mean?

A. This column. Will you state whether or not you know of the existence of the clubs therein named?

A. I do not know of the existence of those clubs, and I didn't know that they ever existed.

Q. Did you ever hear of a Twilight Club, prior to reading that today? A. I did not.

Mr. Hogsett: What possible difference would it make if she did or did not? I object; it is immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: I overrule the objection; the answer is necessary.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was there a T.N.T. Club?

A. I never heard of it.

Q. Was there a Wanee Club?

A. If there was, it existed without my knowledge.

[fol. 3653] Q. Directing your attention to the second column, was there a Whiz Bang Club?

A. I never heard of it before.

Q. Was there a Three Star Club?

A. I never heard of it.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Did you ever hear of any of those listed there?

A. No. They are entirely new names. I never heard of them.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Directing your attention to the fourth column, which pertains to the Loyalty League, will you read that article, and state which of the facts or statements therein made had come to your attention prior to your reading thereof today?

Mr. Reed: That is not a fair question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, why don't you ask the witness, Miss Weyand, whether any of these particular matters ever came to her attention? I think that would save time, rather than having her read it and then let her pick them out.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did 900 persons join the Loyalty League in February of 1935?

A. If they did, I haven't any knowledge of it. I have no way of knowing that 900 people joined the Loyalty League.

Q. Do you know how many people joined the Loyalty League?

[fol. 3654] A. I do not.

Q. At any time?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know whether a majority of your employees at any time were members of the Loyalty League?

A. I do not.

Q. Were you ever informed that a majority of your employees were members of the Loyalty League?

A. I was not.

Q. Did a group of your employees meet at the home of Mrs. Gray on February 5, 1935, to discuss forming a league?

A. I have no knowledge of that meeting.

Q. Was a mass meeting of your employees held February 8th for the purpose of forming a Loyalty League?

A. I do not know.

Q. Did each of your departments have a representative in the Loyalty League?

A. I have no knowledge of anything about the formation or the organization of the Loyalty League.

Q. I don't think you answered the question.

Miss Weyand: Will you read the question, please?

(Question was read by the reporter.)

A. I do not know. I was never so informed.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was Herbert Mutchler a chairman at one time, of the Loyalty League?

[fol. 3655] A. I really do not know.

Q. Did the Loyalty League have a Loyalty pin?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did the Loyalty League have any sort of a pin?

A. I don't know. I seem to have some remembrance of a discussion about a pin, but I wouldn't know. I wouldn't have any actual knowledge.

Q. Did you ever seen an employee wear a pin which bore the word Loyalty?

A. Right at this instant I don't remember.

Q. Do you recall ever seeing such a pin?

A. I recall having seen some sort of a pin, but just at the instant I don't recall it to mind.

Q. In recalling some sort of a pin, do you have reference to a pin of an organization of your employees, that was worn by employees?

A. My employees often wear many pins.

Q. This recollection that you speak of, can you be more specific what you recall about a pin?

A. The Pioneers wear a pin.

Q. What other pins are worn around the plant?

A. I don't specifically recall.

Q. Do you recall any pin other than a Pioneer pin being worn around the plant?

A. I don't recall definitely. I have a faint recollection [fol. 3656] of a pin, but I can't remember the form or really much about it.

Q. The pin of which you have a recollection, is the one of some organization of your employees?

A. I don't call to mind in a definite way a pin. I have heard discussions of a Loyalty pin, or a pin with the name Loyalty on it, but I don't remember that it was ever brought to my particular attention.

Q. Was such a pin sold to employees around the plant?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. Hogsett: If the Examiner please, I object to this line of questioning as being wholly immaterial, and not having the remotest infinitesimal value, whether proving the Donnelly Garment Company dominated a garment union. It has not even a faint tendency to prove that. We are all sitting here, wasting the time of the government, and every individual in this room, to no purpose at all, listening to such examination.

I know that Your Honor, and I think I might say that it is commendable—I know that you have been liberal in the examination in chief and in cross of this witness, for the reason, I think, that was commendable and a proper thing to do, but there must be a limit.

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, I am sure that the Examiner is not going to be impressed by the constant use of superla-

[fol. 3657] tives and words like infinitesimal, and all that language that Mr. Hogsett is using. It is unfortunate that he was not here when this other testimony was given, that everybody wore a Loyalty button, and everybody belonged to it, except Mrs. Reed and Mr. Baty, everybody over the entire plant. It was organized for keeping the I.L.G.W.U. out, and the Board so found, and it has been admitted by counsel that was the reason.

For him to get up and say that it is immaterial, in all charity I say that was due to the fact that he wasn't here, and doesn't know what the record says about the Loyalty League.

For Mrs. Reed, who was claiming to be in close touch with this factory, to swear that she didn't know that 900 people were wearing that Loyalty badge around over her plant, day in and day out, to me, is some of the most important testimony that we have had in here.

. . . . . .

[fol. 3658] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I am going to pursue the same policy I have consistently followed, unless I feel that it is entirely beyond any matter which we covered in the original hearing, and there was a great deal of testimony in the first hearing concerning the Donnelly Loyalty League. I will permit you to continue, Miss Weyand.

. . . . . .

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When did you first hear of the Loyalty League?

A. I don't remember.

Q. When you heard of it, had it been in existence for a month?

[fol. 3659] A. I don't know, Miss Weyand. To me it was just another club of the people down there, and they had been having clubs of all different sizes and names, and I just can't really remember; I didn't pay any great amount of attention to it. They had a pin — if they had a pin it must have been a rather small one. I don't remember it being made, or anyone coming up showing me their pin. I don't say that they didn't wear them, but I say right at the present moment I don't have in my mind a picture of a Loyalty pin, with Loyalty on it.

Q. Can you give us an approximation, in terms of days, weeks or months, that the Loyalty League had been in existence when you first heard of it?

A. I really can't.

Q. You have no idea whether it was a year later?

A. Oh, I probably heard of it sooner than that.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you know when you first heard of it?

A. No, I really don't, Mr. Batten. At times, down at that place, I have been so pressed, when I have left there at six or seven o'clock I hardly know my own name, and I would not be bothering about little organizations that my employees have.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did your employees ever have an organization prior to the Loyalty League, that embraced all of the employees [fol. 3660] of your plant?

A. I do not know.

Q. Did the Loyalty League hold meetings in the building in which your plant was located?

A. I don't know. In 1935 I didn't rent all of the floors in this building.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. The question is, do you know whether they held meetings in the building?

A. I don't know.

Q. The building in its entirety?

A. I don't know whether it was floors that I didn't rent.

Q. I presume the entire building, whether you rented it or not?

A. I don't know where the Loyalty League held their meetings.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did they ever hold a meeting in the building in which your plant was located, so far as you know?

A. I don't know, to my own knowledge.

Q. Did you ever hear of it?

A. In a general way, I have heard it discussed, but I don't know of my own knowledge that they held a meeting in that building.

Q. Has your knowledge been sufficient upon which to form a belief as to whether meetings were held or not [fol. 3661] held in the building in which your plant was located?

A. No.

Q. What information did you receive, which you have referred to, in saying you had some knowledge but not enough to form a belief?

A. I didn't say I had some knowledge.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What information did you have about it, Mrs. Reed?

A. Oh, I don't know. I remember some place I heard it discussed. Really, Mr. Batten, I couldn't say where I heard they had their meetings.

Q. Could you say what you heard?

A. I couldn't even say that. I have a vague idea, but I don't even know whether they held it there or if they were charged with holding it there. I have no information or definite belief in my own mind whether they did or not.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Prior to March 18th, 1937, was there ever a meeting of all of the employees of your plant, held in the building in which your plant is located?

A. There was one or two political meetings held there. Miss Perkins spoke in a vacant room in my building, to my employees, both in '32 and '28.

Q. In addition to those two meetings, were there other meetings of your employees in your plant?

A. I don't remember specifically. We used to have style [fol. 3662] shows, and whenever I had room enough, I always invited all my employees to see the new style show to the salesmen, and I believe a few times we had the room so that everybody could come.

Q. Aside from those instances, were there ever meetings of all your employees in the plant?

A. Not to my knowledge; I don't know.

Q. At these style shows were there speeches made to your employees? A. No.

Q. Did you ever speak to your employees at the style show?

A. I didn't ever speak to my employees especially. At style shows I usually had a number of buyers from different parts of the country, and I had my salesmen, and I used to make a little talk, I didn't call it a speech.

Q. Did your talk on any occasion include labor matters?

A. No.

Q. Did Senator Reed ever speak at these meetings?

A. No.

Q. He never spoke at any of the style shows at which your employees were present, in your plant.

A. No. When you mention it now, when I was asked by some candidate to make a political speech at noon to my employees, I said I would be willing to do it, if we could [fol. 3663] invite some one from both parties. I don't remember who asked me to have their candidate speak, but I know that there were candidates from each party, and I believe that the one speaking for the Democrats asked that Mr. Reed introduce them, and I have some remembrance that he did that.

Q. Did he make any remarks pertaining to labor relations, in his introduction?

A. I am sure that he did not.

Q. How were these meetings called?

Trial Examiner Batten: Which meetings.

Miss Weyand: The style shows and political meetings to which she has referred.

A. Of my own knowledge I don't know.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How were the employees notified of the meetings?

A. I just said that I do not know of my own knowledge.

Q. I am sorry. I didn't know that notified might include called. I thought there might be a difference in your mind, between notifying and calling. I didn't mean to ask you the same thing you answered.

All of the meetings you have described were called by the management, were they not?

A. I would say that the meetings were called—I would say that on the style shows, when I had the style shows and where I had room, I invited the people in the plant to [fol. 3664] come. Nobody had to come, but they were invited to come and see the style show, and the same way with the political meetings. No one had to come, but they were invited to.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. I presume the management, whoever that is, probably made the arrangements for the political meeting? I mean by that you at least advised the candidates and the style show, of course, the company organized and planned both of those types of meetings?

A. But no one was told they had to come to a style show.

Q. No, I didn't mean to imply that.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did these meetings occur during working hours?

A. The meeting for Miss Perkins occurred during working hours.

[fol. 3665] Q. On the latter occasion, or the first occasion, or both?

A. Both occasions, as I remember it.

Q. Did any of the other meetings occur during working hours?

A. The style shows—I don't remember what time we had the style show, but it would seem like it would be partially during working hours.

Q. Were the employees docked in their pay for attending the meeting you have described?

A. For a good many years there was no time-worker docked for any time they lost in my plant.

Q. Were they docked for these meetings?

A. Not with my knowledge or consent.

Q. Was any arrangement made to pay the pieceworkers the average rate of pay or some other pay for the time they spent at these meetings?

A. I know the two times they spent at the meetings to listen to Miss Perkins they were paid.

Q. Were they paid on any other occasions?

A. I don't remember that they were.

Q. On the two occasions on which you remember they were paid, was a record kept of who attended the meetings, and just those girls paid, or—.

A. Well, in those two instances—

Mr. Reed: Now, it does seem to me that this is very far [fol. 3666] afield. Miss Perkins came here, did I understand, in 1932—

The Witness: Yes, she was the Labor Commissioner in New York State, and I thought my girls would like to hear her talk. I had met her and thought she was an attractive, clever woman, and—

Trial Examiner Batten: Was she Labor Commissioner of the State of New York, Mrs. Reed? She was head of the Board of Public Welfare, wasn't she?

The Witness: Well, didn't Al Smith have something to do with—

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't know. But she was head of the Board of Public Welfare.

But, do you know, Mrs. Reed, if records were kept on those occasions of who attended and whether they were docked in pay for it?

The Witness: Not of my own knowledge. My impression is that everybody went, and then at the end of the week—We never have checked things awfully tight down there, not until the Wage and Hour Law came along.

Trial Examiner Batten: It wasn't your intent, anyway, that they should be docked for that?

The Witness: No.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was any meeting called by the employees, in which the management did not participate, held in your plant prior to March 18, 1937?

[fol. 3667] A. I don't know. If the management didn't participate in it, I wouldn't be asked, and I wouldn't know of my own knowledge.

Q. The question is, did you know?

Mr. Reed: I submit, that is answered.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you know of any such meeting, Mrs. Reed?

The Witness: Not of my own knowledge.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Have you been informed there were such meetings?

A. Not in such a way that I could swear there were.

Q. In what way have you been informed?

A. Oh, in hearsay.

Q. What did you hear in that regard?

A. I couldn't state exactly what I heard.

Q. Could you give us the general substance of what you heard?

A. No, I couldn't. I have the general impression that it is said there was a meeting of employees in the same building that we occupy. My impression is, they held the meeting on a floor that we were not renting at the time.

Q. Do you know the approximate date of this meeting which you heard about?

A. It would be in the spring of 1937.

Q. Prior to March 18, 1937?

[fol. 3668] A. No. After that.

Q. Did you hear of any meetings prior to March 18, 1937?

A. I have no clear understanding of that, of any meetings held before that.

Q. What understanding do you have?

A. I have no understanding of it.

Q. I wish to show you I. L. G. W. U.'s exhibit No. 10, being pages 5961 to 5974, inclusive, of the Circuit Court of Appeals record.

(Addressing the Trial Examiner) Do you wish to see what I am showing her?

Trial Examiner Batten: No. I will look at it later.

Q. (Continuing) I wish to direct your attention specifically to the last page thereof, being record page 5974. You will notice it bears the date March 5, 1937.

A. I do.

Q. Was that page ever presented to you?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Will you look at the other pages and state whether they were presented to you?

Trial Examiner Batten: What is that, that petition?

The Witness: Yes. I am going to examine all of these papers that come to me now very carefully. (Looking through pages indicated above.) I want to be sure there hasn't been anything funny slipped in here. (Continuing [fol. 3669] examination of pages above indicated.)

Q. You have examined pages 5961 to 5973, inclusive, and acquainted yourself sufficiently therewith to state to me whether those were the pages presented to you on March 2, 1937?

A. They look like the pages that were presented to me—photostatic copies of them.

Q. Could you tell, as to each page, whether it was or was not presented to you?

A. If someone wanted to take them out of the record and recopy them, it probably could be done. I couldn't tell you that every single name on here is just as it was. I don't remember every name and every girl's signature. I couldn't identify it t that extent. I would have to have confidence that it was put in here in good faith—

Trial Examiner Batten: As far as you can tell, it appears to be photostats of the petition you received; is that correct?

A. As far as I can tell, it appears to be a photostatic copy of the petition that was received by me, yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you ever see page 5974 before?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you know that some girls signed a page after the other pages were presented to you?

A. It is my understanding they did.

[fol. 3670] Q. What information did you have on that subject?

A. Merely an understanding. I don't know exactly how I arrived at it.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What was your information, Mrs. Reed, about it?

A. Well, I simply— If you ask me now— This happened back in 1937, five years ago. I don't know how I arrived at it.

Q. Did you know there were some girls that signed later?

A. Yes, I have heard of it. But I don't remember how these other names were handed to me, if they were.

Q. Well, do you remember anything about it, any of the details at all?

A. I remember in hearing our cases discussed that this was discussed, but I don't remember the details about it, Mr. Batten.

Miss Weyand: Did you, at the time, know that some girls signed subsequent to the other girls?

Mr. Hogsett: That has been answered within the last 10 minutes three times—at least three—I think maybe four.

Miss Weyand: I want to refer to prior to the arising of the Labor Board hearing and the discussion thereof which her last answer dealt with. I want to know whether she heard of it prior to that discussion.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. I think you said in answer to me, Mrs. Reed, that in [fol. 3671] the discussion of these cases you heard something about it?

A. Yes.

Q. Prior to the time any of these cases started, do you recall whether you heard about a number of girls signing it after March 2?

A. I recall hearing about it, but for me to place a time, Mr. Batten, of just when I heard about it and who told me, I can't do that.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you ever receive a sheet of that nature subsequent to the presentation of the main bulk of the petition?

A. At this instant I don't remember specifically, although the sheet must have come to me, because it is here with these other sheets. Now, when and just who presented it to me, I don't remember.

Q. Will you read it over and see, after reading over the names thereon and the substance thereof, whether you remember receiving that?

A. Well, I said that I don't remember the specific time that I received it or the circumstances under which I received it.

Q. Did you see that sheet?

A. I saw this sheet, yes.

Q. Was the time at which you saw that sheet sometime [fol. 3672] in the spring of 1937?

A. I would say it was.

Q. Can you state in any general terms the nature of the duties of the persons whose names appear on that sheet?

Mr. Reed: What sheet?

Miss Weyand: The last sheet we are discussing, dated March 5, 5974.

A. Most of them are instructors. There is one man from the cutting department whose name I recognize, John Ferretti. Heath Cowan would not be an instructor. Is that Jennie Mudd (indicating on sheet)?

Miss Weyand: Jessie Mudd, I believe, is the name.

The Witness: I don't remember Jessie Mudd ever having been an instructor.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you give instructions to Anna Wherry, Lena Tyhurst, or any of the other persons whose names appear on that sheet, as to the attitude they should take in regard to labor organizations?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you issue any instructions to your supervisory personnel as to whether they should be neutral in labor matters?

A. I did in the discussions with Mrs. Reeves and Mrs. Hyde say that we should be absolutely neutral, and if a girl wanted to join a union, that was her own affair, and we [fol. 3673] were to keep completely out of it.

Q. Did you give such instructions to Anna Wherry?

A. Mrs. Reeves would have given instructions to her, probably.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, did you?

The Witness: I don't remember specifically ever giving any kind of instructions to Mrs. Wherry about her attitude or about the union. I don't remember ever discussing any union activities with Mrs. Wherry.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did it ever come to your attention that Mrs. Wherry or Lena Tyhurst had ever expressed themselves as opposed to a union? A. It did not.

* * * * * * *

Miss Weyand: I will withdraw the question and ask [fol. 3674] another question.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did it ever come to your attention that any supervisory person expressed an antiunion attitude?

A. Not that I can remember of, ever.

* * * * * * * *

Q. Did you ever hear of Herb Fountain making any statement of an antiunion character? A. No.

Q. Did you ever criticize Anna Wherry, Lena Tyhurst, or Herb Fountain for having signed the statement which appears at the top of page 5974?

A. I have already said I don't recall of my own knowledge of this being put in my hand.

* * * * * *

Q. Did you consider that petition notice to you that the employees in your plant who signed the petition did not want you to deal with any union?

A. With any outside union, is the way I really felt about it. At that time the only union that was on the horizon was the I. L. G. W. U., and it was an outside union.

Q. Did you have any reason, other than the fact that the only union then on the horizon was the I. L. G. W. U., to assume that this notice referred to the I. L. G. W. U., rather than it meant that the employees did not want to [fol. 3677] deal with any union of any kind?

A. At that particular time Mr. Perlstein and Mr. Dubinsky were making statements in the newspapers about how they were going to force me to sign a contract. They appropriated $100,000 to use to force me to organize my plant, and they had said they were going to start to boycott my goods, and I had every reason to believe that my employees feared that I might acquiesce and sign a contract that would force them to join that union, because that had been the practice. That had happened in Kansas City and many other places.

Q. You did not feel that this statement referred to any other union that might come along except the I. L. G. W. U. union? A. I did not.

[fol. 3678] Miss Weyand: Were any instructions ever issued from your plant to the instructors, directing them to maintain a neutral attitude in labor matters?

Mr. Reed: I object to that, because it is no employer's business to issue instructions to its employees that they must be neutral. The employees have the right to contend for the union they prefer and to battle the question out between themselves, and the employer has no right to interfere and demand that they shall stand neutral. That certainly is the position occupied by the I. L. G. W. U. They claim the right to fight amongst themselves or all who oppose them and to get out with clubs and razor blades and red pepper and attack people who don't belong to their union. What duty is there, anywhere, to go around amongst the employees and instruct them "You must be neutral."

What duty is there, anywhere, to go around amongst the employees and instruct them, "You must be neutral"?

Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Reed, have you ever issued any instructions to instructors that they were to be neutral in this union matter?

A. I never issued any instructions, no.

Miss Weyand: Did anyone else in the plant issue such instructions?

Trial Examiner Batten: As far as you know.

A. Not to my knowledge.

Trial Examiner Batten: As far as you know, no one ever did? A. No.

Miss Weyand: Did you ever issue a statement to the [fol. 3679] employees in your plant, that you did not care whether or no they joined a labor organization?

* * * * * *

A. I made a statement something to that effect at one time in a meeting.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What meeting are you referring to?

A. A meeting on March 18th.

Q. Did you take any steps to make certain that notice came to all of the employees?

A. I made a statement to that effect, to a large meeting of my employees.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Outside of making the statement at the meeting, did you take any further steps thereafter in that matter, Mrs. Reed?

A. They all heard what I said.

Q. Everybody at the meeting heard you?

A. Yes, heard what I said.

Miss Weyand: Were there employees employed in your plant who were not present at that meeting?

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't presume you know, do you? A. No, I don't know.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know whether a majority of your employees were present at that meeting?

[fol. 3680] A. No, I do not know how many, but a great many.

Q. Did the employees in the office force attend that meeting?

A. I don't know which employees attended that meeting, Miss Weyand.

Q. Were there employees in the plant who continued to work while that meeting was being held?

A. I don't know that. My remembrance is, that meeting was very late in the afternoon, because I remember very specifically that I was going to Florida that night, and I was downtown with Miss Frances, shopping, in the afternoon, and I simply stopped in the afternoon to see if anything of any great importance had come up or any mail had come in of special importance, and the meeting must have been at five o'clock, when I got down there.

Q. Were the employees present there at the meeting wearing uniforms?

A. A number of them were. I don't remember specifically how they were dressed. My plant employees do [were] white uniforms.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You thought some of them were wearing uniforms?

A. If this hadn't come to my attention, I don't think I would have thought about it. I didn't think about it.

Q. Is that your recollection?

[fol. 3681] A. I don't remember.

Q. Then, Mrs. Reed, when you are asked these questions and you don't remember, say you don't remember.

A. The first thing I was thinking of, naturally, Mr. Batten, my plant employees do wear white uniforms, and, it being time to go home in the evening, some of them may have changed or they may not.

At the time I wasn't thinking how they were dressed, so I don't remember whether they were wearing uniforms or not.

Q. I would suggest that you give some thought to these questions, because after all that is the reason you are here, to answer these questions.

A. I have been on the stand about five hours, and I am tired.

Q. Irrespective of that, I would suggest that you give thought to these questions, and take your time.

A. All right. Thank you.

Q. And don't proceed to make an answer, and then make the statement later that you don't remember. I would think about the question first.

A. Well, thank you very much.

* * * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do instructors in your plant wear uniforms?

[fol. 3682] A. They wear white dresses.

Q. Is the uniform in your plant something other than just a white dress?

A. In the last few years, that is the case. Originally I had a specific uniform, and the styles changed, and the girls didn't want to wear that, because it became old-fashioned, so I said, "Wear anything that you want to, just so it is white."

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. That is, the operators could make their own choice, as long as it was white? A. As long as it was white.

Q. And it doesn't follow one absolute uniform?

A. Originally the operators wore a specific uniform, and the instructors wore a different uniform, and at the present time they all wear white dresses, of any style that they want to.

[fol. 3686] Proceedings.

Trial Examiner Batten: The hearing will be in order. I think we will proceed. I want to say that I have reviewed the record of, I believe, August 6th was the date that Board's Exhibit 32-A, B, C, D and E was introduced, and after reviewing that record, I see no need of changing the ruling which I made with respect to it, unless counsel feel that further consideration should be given my decision at that time.

In other words, at that time I struck out everything pertaining to Board's Exhibit 32-E, and those questions which related to an application of any of those pages.

I might say it was my intention to strike out all that testimony except the received exhibits and the identification of Mr. Green's signature. I think, in substance, that covers my ruling. If there is any question about it later, you may review that and then let me know whether or not you think that clarifies it sufficiently.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3688] Miss Weyand: I would like to ask if counsel for the company have secured the accurate pay roll at this time, and will state what, if any, corrections they desire to make in Board's exhibit No. 28. I hesitate to go ahead examining the witness unless there is some agreement that we can assume it is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten. Miss Weyand, I said we will proceed on the assumption that it is correct. It is in the record, and it was stipulated, and unless some action is taken by one of the parties to make a motion or take some step to correct it, we will proceed on the assumption that the record is correct.

Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Examiner, it appears to me, if they have in mind taking any steps to change it, they ought to do it right away, instead of waiting two or three days, until after the examination has taken place on the one that is assumed to be correct, and then having Miss Weyand [fol. 3689] go back over the other one.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not going to initiate any action to change the record. The record stands. It has gone through the hearing, it has gone through the Board, and it has gone through the Court, and as far as I am concerned, I will accept the record as it is.

Mr. Langsdale: But, representing the I. L. G. W. U., I am saying they shouldn't wait until Miss Weyand is through with her examination and then come out and say the examination isn't correct.

* * * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know how long the meeting of March 18, 1937, had been in progress when you first learned of it?

A. I do not.

Q. Who told you there was such a meeting?

A. There was a small group of employees came to my office and told me there was a meeting in progress.

Q. Was Frances Strine in your office when they came?

A. Mrs. Strine is my secretary, and she may not have been in my office. She probably was near.

Q. When employees desire to see you, do they first go to your secretary and arrange an appointment or ask to be allowed to see you?

[fol. 3690] A. Generally speaking.

Q. Is that the usual procedure?

A. It is the usual procedure, but there is no strict rule to that effect.

Q. Can they walk into your office without first making an appointment and receiving permission from your secretary? A. They could.

Q. Do they?

A. On occasions I have someone come into my office.

Q. How frequently has that occurred since January, 1935?

A. I couldn't say how frequently. Perhaps someone might be on the 10th floor and in going by my office, if my office door was open and they had something they wanted to say to me, they might just step in and say it.

* * * * * * *

Miss Weyand: Is the door to your office one that leads into an outer reception office, or is it directly connected [fol. 3691] with the main part of the building?

Mr. Reed: Now, Mr. Examiner, I have to object. This is a mere consumption of time. What difference does it make where her office door leads, or how many minutes it is open during a period of six or seven years? I can't see the reason for questions of this character.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, as I have indicated before, I am not going to attempt to limit the examination at this point in any way. Whether it is material or not, I presume will appear. I don't suppose I can ask any of counsel on preliminary or introductory questions just the purpose.

I will permit you to proceed, Miss Weyand.

* * * * * * *

A. There are two doors in my office. One of them is on the main aisle in the office and one of them is a side door, where there isn't an enclosed room, but about the amount of space of an ordinary enclosed room, where Miss Frances's desk is.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember what arrangement you made to [fol. 3692] take Miss Frances to the meeting of March 18, 1937?

A. I don't remember exactly what I said, but I indicated to her—I asked her to come along and take notes of what I would say.

Q. Where did she sit at the meeting?

A. I don't know exactly where she sat.

Q. Was it on the platform in front or down amongst the audience?

A. I don't recall exactly. I am pretty sure it wasn't on the platform, but it must have been very nearby.

Q. Did you direct her to take down merely the remarks you made, or all of the remarks made at the meeting?

A. Remarks I made.

Q. Who introduced you to the meeting?

A. My remembrance is that Miss Todd said I did not need an introduction, or something to that effect. There was no speech made, that I remember of.

Q. Was Miss Todd presiding at the meeting?

A. To the extent that she said I didn't need an introduction, or—I think she said something along that line. That would be as far as I know, because there were no other—nothing else. There was no one else spoke while I was there. As soon as I came in there I went up to the platform, and Miss Todd then made whatever remarks she made—I don't remember—and then I started talking. [fol. 3693] Q. Was Miss Todd on the platform when you arrived?

A. I don't remember for sure, but she probably was. I couldn't say she wasn't.

Q. Were the audience in their seats, or did it appear that the meeting had not yet begun?

A. I can't remember exactly. There were a number of people already there, but to say whether the meeting had already begun, I don't know.

Q. You say a number of people were already there. Could you give us some estimate of whether there were 100, 500, or 1,000?

A. I couldn't estimate it, but it seemed like—the room seemed to be about full.

Q. How large a room was it?

A. Our rooms down there are—I think there's approximately—There is a gross square footage of 10,000 feet, but—

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You mean on the floor?

A. I mean on the floor, but elevators and lobbies, and all of that, are off of them.

Q. Was this meeting held in a room in which— The entire floor was one large room, is that it, outside of the elevator shafts, and so forth?

A. I am not absolutely sure. It seems to me there was some small partition, partitioning a part of it off. It was a good sized room.

Q. It is your recollection that at least the largest part [fol. 3694] of the floor was the room in which the meeting was held? A. Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did it appear to you that substantially all of your employees were present?

A. It appeared to me that a great many of them were.

Q. Were you at the plant on the morning of April 23, 1937? A. The morning of April 23?

Q. That is the morning on which it was alleged the Sylvia Hull and Fern Sigler incident occurred. Were you present that morning?

A. It isn't my practice to go to the office early in the morning. Miss Frances comes to my house first and we dispose of correspondence that may come to my home, and then she discusses with me about appointments, or a number of things of that kind, so we usually don't go to the office until about 11 o'clock.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mrs. Reed, do you recall whether you were or were not at the plant on that morning?

A. I don't remember, but I'm sure I wasn't there at the time the incident occurred.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you learn of the incident immediately upon your arrival at the plant?

A. I don't remember the exact moment that I learned of it, but I probably learned of it sometime that day.

[fol 3695] Q. Who informed you of the incident?

A. I presume Mr. Baty did, but I don't remember for sure.

Q. What information were you given at that time of the occurrence?

A. All I remember is that in a general way I knew that the operators in some section refused to work while these two girls were there. They said they wouldn't work with them.

Q. Did you take any steps to investigate the exact incident which occurred?

A. By the time it came to me, the whole thing was over with. Mr. Baty told me what they had done and said that these girls—I don't remember which one of them—said that the best thing to do would be to go home, and Mr. Baty said that that was a good thing to do, that the whole thing would probably quiet down in a few days, and I didn't have any idea that there was anything else to do about it.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question was, Mrs. Reed, did you make any investigation of it yourself after Mr. Baty reported the incident to you?

A. After the incident was reported to me I made no further investigation.

Miss Weyand: Did you give any directions that the girls should be contacted and assured protection to remain in the plant and work?

A. Mr. Baty was in charge of the plant, and I didn't feel that it was necessary for me to go into that incident at all.

[fol. 3696] Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, Mrs. Reed, did you? Did you do anything about it?

The Witness: But I say I didn't feel any reason for it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let's assume that you felt that way, did you do anything about it?

The Witness: I did not.

[fol. 3697] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Were you in the plant on the afternoon of April 27, 1937?

A. I probably was. I was there every working day until I was ill, and I probably was there.

Q. Did you know, during the time that the meeting of the employees which took place that afternoon was in progress; that it was going on?

A. I did not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you know that any meeting of your employees was taking place that afternoon?

A. I did not.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When did you first learn that such a meeting had been held?

A. When Rose Todd came to see me, I think the next day, but very shortly afterwards.

Q. What did she say to you?

A. That the employees had had a meeting, and had voted unanimously to form a union of their own, and had elected a committee to represent them; and she asked me if I would meet with that committee.

Q. Did you have the cards which she brought to you counted?

A. I asked Miss Frances to look them over and to have them checked. Miss Todd said that the union had been formed by a unanimous vote, and I merely said that, "Well, Miss Frances will check these," or something to [fol. 3698] that effect. I don't remember exactly what I said.

Q. Did Miss Frances report to you how many cards she received?

A. I don't remember that it was ever reported to me just how many cards were received.

Q. Was an approximate number given you?

A. I don't remember any number being given me at all. I do know that — I remember now that I discussed this with Mr. Baty, probably the following day or very shortly after that. It may have been the same day, I don't remember exactly, but between his report and Miss Frances' there seemed to be no question in their minds there was at least a big majority, so I didn't follow through to have the exact number counted.

Q. When you say there was no doubt in your mind there was a big majority, you mean a large majority, saying they signed the cards which had been presented?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have further conversation with Rose Todd or a committee of the union, prior to the presentation of the draft contract?

A. Yes.

Q. When did the conference occur, subsequent to Rose Todd's visit with you about the formation of the union?

A. I don't remember the exact day or date, but it was [fol. 3699] probably several days after that.

Q. Was that the meeting you had with the committee you have described?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there further conferences prior to the presentation to you of the draft contract?

A. There were.

Q. How many were there?

A. I couldn't say how many, Miss Weyand, five years ago, but I know there were conferences after that.

Q. Were there formal conferences of which minutes were taken, and some of them informal?

A. I have done so few things formally in my business that I don't know what you consider formal, and what you would consider informal.

Q. Did the committee come in and state to you they were calling upon you as a committee of the Donnelly Workers' Union?

A. After the first day this committee came to talk to me, it would have been after Miss Todd had made arrangements for them to come at a certain time, and I don't remember whether or not there was any formal statement made, but it wouldn't be necessary, because the appointment would have been made. They would have arrived at a certain time, and I would have known it was this com- [fol. 3700] mittee that had come to confer with me.

Q. They called upon you as a committee of the Donnelly Workers' Union on those occasions?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you discuss at the meetings, between the first meeting you had with the committee and the presentation of the draft contract?

A. It would be impossible for me to repeat the details, or just what was said, or who said what, at a meeting that took place five years ago.

Q. Do you remember the subject matter discussed at the meetings?

A. I remember those things — I remember about those meetings, I felt that somebody must have been talking to this committee about something was going to happen to me, or I was going to die, because it seemed to me the main thing in their minds was they wanted to be sure to get written down all of the privileges they had, because something might happen to me.

I am just saying one thing, that made a great impression on me, because of course it affected me, and I didn't know whether someone had some inside information about something that was going to happen to me, that I didn't have, and it gave me a very queer feeling, I know that.

Q. Do you have any notion as to whether these con-
[fol. 3701] ferences occurred every other day, or once a week, or how many there were?

A. I don't have, Miss Weyand. I have so many conferences with individuals and groups in my business, and just to say how many conferences I had with this union committee, in a certain length of time, I couldn't say that.

Q. Do you have any recollection as to whether it was on one or two occasions, or whether they were of almost daily occurrence in those few days?

A. They weren't daily, I know that, but I would say there were several. A few, not many.

Q. Would you give any number that one could estimate it?

A. I really couldn't.

Q. Were minutes kept of these conferences?

A. I don't even know. Probably some notes were kept, but just for you to ask me now to give that information, I didn't pay a lot of attention to whether there were or not.

Q. If such notes were taken, would they be in your file at the present time?

A. They wouldn't be in my file; we didn't take any notes of it.

Q. You did not have a stenographer present to take notes on behalf of the company?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you have any notes preserved, which you kept?
[fol. 3702] A. Not of these conferences with the committee.

Q. Do you have any notes or records, pertaining to any conferences between the first occasion upon which the committee called upon you and the date upon which the draft of the contract was presented?

A. I know that whenever we had the lawyers present, and they worked on drafts — but I am saying when I talked to the committee without any lawyers, I don't remember that I had any stenographic notes made of the discussions. That remains in my mind, they were very informal, and more or less the committee telling me what they wanted.

Q. If you kept records back that far, would they still be in existence, if you had those notes taken? Could you check your records to see if they do exist, or would they be destroyed?

Trial Examiner Batten: I thought you said you didn't keep any notes.

A. I don't remember of having kept any notes at all of these informal meetings, when I met with the committee without lawyers being present. Whenever we had the lawyers present, it seemed to me they were always drawing up papers.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. I thought you said a moment ago that you didn't keep any notes, or don't you remember?

A. I said that we didn't keep any notes when the law-

[fol. 3703] yers were not there.

Q. I mean when the lawyers were not there.

A. I have no remembrance of keeping any notes.

Q. Then there may be some?

A. My remembrance is I didn't.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may proceed, please.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I would like for you to state if there were such, would they have been destroyed by now, or is it your practice to retain all such records?

A. I don't have anything to do with the files or when they are cleaned out. There is a practice down there that some files are kept for six months, and other files for a year, but those files are cleaned out, without asking me about them.

Q. Then you do not know whether or not the files that would have these minutes or notes, if any were made or not, were in existence at the present time?

A. I do not. I have nothing to do with the files being cleaned out.

Mr. Reed: I object to that. It is rather unfair. The witness has said that she doesn't know of any notes being taken.

Trial Examiner Batten: She says she doesn't remember of any, Senator.

Mr. Reed: Very well. She has asked "if there were [fol. 3704] such", when there is no evidence there were any.

Trial Examiner Batten: There isn't any evidence there were or weren't.

Mr. Reed: I think there is evidence there weren't.

Trial Examiner Batten: As far as this witness is concerned, she has not said that there was not, and she doesn't recall any. I think it is a proper question, if there were any, whether they would be in the file or whether it is the practice to destroy them, if she knows.

Miss Weyand: I would like to ask that the company have those files checked, and if some such notes and minutes exist, they will produce them.

A. All right.

Miss Weyand: Did the Reporter get the statement that the company would?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Were lawyers present at any of the meetings prior to May 27, 1937?

A. Well, I discussed this contract, the making up, with my lawyer several times prior to that.

Q. Were your lawyers present in any conference that you had with the committee of the union prior to May 27, 1937?

A. It seems to me there was a conference the day before that, and then we had one on the 27th. I am not entirely clear on that, but it seems to me there was.

Q. Was May 26th the first day upon which it is possible [fol. 3705] that lawyers were present, as far as you recall?

A. As far as I recall, that was the first time the committee and all the lawyers got together.

Q. Did Mr. Tyler appear on that occasion as attorney for the committee?

A. He did.

Q. Had you conferred, received letters or otherwise had any communication with Mr. Tyler, prior to his presence at that conference?

A. I had not.

Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Company or you, personally, ever employ the lawyers of Gossett, Ellis, Dietrich and Tyler?

A. Many years ago, Mr. Donnelly employed Mr. Dietrich of that firm for some personal business. I don't remember their handling anything else.

Trial Examiner Batten: That isn't the question. The question is whether you or the Donnelly Garment Company ever employed them.

A. I never had, and I don't remember that the Donnelly Garment Company had.

Miss Weyand: Is it possible that the Donnelly Garment Company could have employed that firm or any member thereof, and you not know of it, or not remember of it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well now, just a minute. What [fol. 3706] period of time are you talking about?

Miss Weyand: Well, I am talking about any time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, supposing the company had employed their firm, fifteen, or ten years ago, or twenty years ago, how is that material to this case?

Miss Weyand: It is only material if we can show it continues down to the very certain date the employees had known they had been working for the company.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let's start with the present, instead of starting back so many years, and coming forward. I don't think there is any reason to go into that, unless there is some reasonable showing that such examination can bring forth something that is material.

Am I supposed to answer a question?

Miss Weyand: I believe I will have to state a new question, as I take the Examiner's attitude to this line of questioning.

Trial Examiner Batten: I want you to understand this, Miss Weyand, as well as the other attorneys, and I think the others do. I frequently make the matter in the form of a suggestion. Now, if you don't agree with the suggestions I make, I just don't want you to accept something I say, necessarily; if you don't agree with me, say so. We will proceed.

Miss Weyand: I should like to have the company pro-[fol. 3707] duce a statement of any cases or any matters in which law firm of Gossett, Ellis, Dietrich and Tyler, or any of the members thereof, were employed by the Donnelly Garment Company, subsequent to the year of 1930. The record will indicate you have undertaken to do so.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: If the Examiner please, while he is at it, I would like for him to produce a record of any employment of A. N. Gossett or anyone connected with the organization, by the Donnelly Company down to date. Now, when Miss Todd—how she happened to go to Mr. Gossett, she said that she had met him in some hospital or something of that sort. It is my belief A. N. Gossett represented this corporation, and Mrs. Donnelly and Paul Donnelly, for a number of years prior to the time when Senator Reed commenced to represent them. My information was, about 1928, Mr. Gossett was their lawyer; I may be wrong, but I do know of some matters on which he represented them, and I think that has some bearing on this, why this girl, who was described as the handyman of the Donnelly Garment Company, went to Mr. Gossett. She went to Mr. Gossett, and he was busy, and sent her to Mr. Tyler. It may not be conclusive, but I think it has some bearing on the matter, so if they are going to get the record of Gossett's employment, I want it all. I expect to inquire about it all.

[fol. 3708] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I can't see, unless there is some showing in recent years, Mr. Langsdale, where it is at all material. It seems to me that if every attorney may be called upon in the future to show his connections with any client he may have had, and from that you would draw what?

* * * * * *

[fol. 3709] By Miss Weyand:

Q You signed the contract, I believe, that the Donnelly Company entered into with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? I wonder if you can tell me what time of day that contract was signed?

A. I think it was pretty late in the evening.

Q. Could you be more definite? What do you mean by "pretty late in the evening"? As I recall, here in Missouri, afternoon is referred to as evening.

A. Oh, I don't know. I would say probably around six o'clock, between six and seven.

Q. How soon after the execution of the contract of May 27 did negotiations begin, looking to the preparation of a supplemental contract bearing wage rates?

A. Just as soon as we were able. We had an understanding that a contract embracing wage rates would be entered into later, and that all the information the committee needed for that would be furnished promptly, as promptly as we could.

Q. Was that understanding, that a supplement bearing wage rates would be entered into, prior to the execution of [fol. 3710] the May 27 contract?

A. Yes, they wanted one thing, they wanted to have—they were willing to take a $15.00 minimum, at least for the present, and they wanted an $18.00 minimum for people that worked on merchandise that sold above $45.00 a dozen wholesale, and I had been all through those different minimums with the N.R.A., and I didn't want to differentiate, because it was so difficult to say when anyone was working on one price goods and when they were on another, and I didn't feel, right at that time, that I wanted to sign that; and so we cut that out. It was with the understanding that the wage rates would be gone into. That was another point, that I, myself, might not be there to give them the allowances I had been giving them for the 20-odd years, or nearly 20 years.

[fol. 3711] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. When you talk about a $15.00 minimum, is that a discussion that took place in the May 27 conference?

A. That is my remembrance.

Q. When you discussed the $16.50, was that in the May 27 conference?

A. That was a later conference, no, when we made the wage agreement.

Q. When you talked about the $16.50, that is during the time you were arriving at the wage scale and classification, is that what you mean?

A. Yes.

Miss Weyand: When did the committee first raise the request for a $16.50 minimum?

A. My remembrance of that was, at a conference on the contract that included the scale of wages.

. . . . . .

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You may answer the question. When did the committee first raise the question of a $16.50 minimum?

A. My remembrance is it was at the conference we had in setting the scale of wages.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When did that conference occur?

A. Well, that was late in June. I don't remember [fol. 3712] the exact date.

Q. Do you mean late in May or late in June? As I recall the supplement was signed June 22, so that answer wouldn't make sense.

A. The supplement was signed June 22nd.

Q. And you mean it was raised just shortly before June 22?

A. As a matter of fact, I believe that the question of the $16.50 minimum was raised the day we signed that supplement.

Q. I am sorry. When you say late in June, I thought it would be later than June 22. Then your recollection is that the $16.50 request was not made much earlier than June 22nd, and perhaps not until June 22, is that correct?

A. It could be. I know I didn't think I should have to pay an actual minimum of $16.50, when contracts were made all around in this territory, with scale of wages of $13.00 a week, where people paid 40 to 60 percent of the $13.00 a week.

Q. Is it your best recollection that the $16.50 request was not made until June 22, or thereabouts?

A. I don't remember thinking about it seriously, until then. I know then it was the last thing that hadn't been settled, and Mr. Reed said, "Oh, go ahead and sign it. Let's finish this thing up," or something to that effect.

Q. Whether you thought seriously about it or not, did the committee make that request June 22?

A. I don't recall whether they did or not. There had [fol. 3713] been so many requests and so many discussions of different amounts, and we finally, on that last day, had gotten together on our scales, and the only reason that I particularly remember it is, at that time, it was the last thing, in my mind, that we hadn't cleared up.

Q. Were there drafts of the supplemental agreement prepared prior to June 22?

A. I don't remember exactly what was prepared, but I know that whenever the committee and our lawyers got together, they would write up drafts and check them over, and change them. I left so much of the writing of the contract to the lawyers, that I really don't remember very distinctly what they did do. The substance was always—I was always consulted about the substance, but the actual writing of the contract, I didn't dictate or have anything to do with that.

[fol. 3714] Q. Did you participate in the conferences personally? A. I did.

Q. Did the company or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union prepare the first draft of the supplemental agreement of June 22?

A. My remembrance is that Mr. Tyler presented the first draft.

Q. Did he present that draft sometime prior to June 22, or was it on June 22 itself?

Mr. Reed: Which contract, now, are we speaking of?

Trial Examiner Batten: The supplemental contract, Senator.

A. I don't know whether any other drafts had been presented. I can't remember for sure, because there was so much work going on all of the time about the contracts, but I do know that Mr. Tyler did make a little speech and say that he had a draft of the supplemental contract, and it was read and looked over and discussed.

Miss Weyand: What date are you referring to now?

A. I don't know the exact date.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Was it the day it was signed?

A. I can't, Miss Weyand, say what thing was done on just what day. After all, that was five years ago, and—

Q. My question was, Mrs. Reed, was this discussion you ha[d] just been telling us about in the talk about Mr. [fol. 3715] Tyler and his draft, was that the day you signed the contract? Irrespective of the date, do you remember if that was the day you signed it?

A. I don't remember.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was it the day before you signed it?

A. I can't place exact dates or days when each draft would have been presented.

Q. Were there several drafts presented?

A. I don't know whether there were several drafts presented. I know that we did a lot of talking, and it seems to me then the attorneys would do some dictating. I really sat in and discussed general points that went into these contracts, but the actual working them up, I didn't do anything about them. I probably just relaxed and let the attorneys work on them. I don't recall making drafts and just exactly what was done.

I very definitely recall the part Mr. Reed had in this contract, the last contract, and that was on the arbitration.

I don't believe in the draft that Mr. Tyler presented there was any clause about arbitration.

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you talking about the supplemental contract?

A. Yes. I remember that being discussed and Mr. Reed's saying that any kind of a contract, a union contract,—that there should be a means of arbitration if there should come up any dispute, and he suggested, if we couldn't agree, that we would have a district judge appoint an arbitrator.

[fol. 3716] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you have some sort of a written draft of the contract to work with prior to June 29?

A. I don't remember a written draft. I remember that it was taken up with me at different times about the classification of the employees; in what form, I don't recall.

Q. How soon after May 27 was the first conference between the lawyers on this supplemental agreement?

A. I wouldn't be able to say, Miss Weyand.

Q. When was the first conference between yourself and the committee on this supplemental contract?

A. I don't even remember that exactly.

Q. You did have numerous conferences, however, between yourself and the committee?

A. We did have different conferences, yes.

Q. On different dates? A. Yes.

Q. Who, for the company, secured or worked up the information in regard to pay rates and classifications.

A. Mr. Baty and Mrs. Hyde were the ones, I remember, that did that.

Q. Do you recall whether they typed out classifications and rates and handed it to the committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Miss Weyand, I don't know what they did. While this contract and all of this work was going on I tried to [fol. 3717] give attention to the important parts, but in the meantime I was bringing up a new line and I had many things to do in my business. I was attending to my business right along. So, on the contract I depended a great deal on Mr. Baty and Mrs. Hyde on the detail, and on my lawyers for writing up the contract. I didn't feel the complete responsibility. I didn't do all of the work that was to be done on it. I felt that the lawyers, on the one hand, in writing the contract, and Mr. Baty and Mrs. Hyde, on the other hand, could take a great deal of the work off of me of making a contract.

Q. Could you give us any statement of the extent to which you personally participated in these negotiations?

Mr. Reed: Mr. Examiner, don't you think that has been fully gone over?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the witness may answer that—to what extent you personally participated, Mrs. Reed.

A. I felt that I kept in touch with the—

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, did you meet with the committee and the representatives of the management every time they met; do you know? A. I am sure that I didn't.

Q. Did you participate, on any occasions, in meetings between the management and the union committee in which there was a discussion of all of these different classifications and rates?

A. I know that that discussion came up at some meeting [fol. 3718] that I attended with them.

Q. Did it come up, Mrs. Reed, in general, or did you participate in the discussion of all of these various detailed rates and classifications with the committee?

A. No, I didn't participate in all of those detailed rates.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you go over all of the detailed rates before Mr. Baty or Mrs. Hyde submitted them to the committee?

A. To say whether I went over every one of them, I am not absolutely sure, but I know that Mr. Baty would come and see me with some figures and say, "Now, I am furnishing these to the committee."

Q. Did you authorize Mr. Baty to take it upon himself to furnish figures to the committee without your first having checked them over and approving them?

A. I did, because those figures were a matter of fact. I expected him to furnish what was accurate, and it was facts that he was dealing with.

Q. Did you spend a good deal of time studying the rates and classifications to determine what amount you could pay for which classification?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, the witness testified, Miss Weyand, that she didn't approve or didn't discuss all of these individual classifications and rates, and the witness further testified that she delegated some of [fol. 3719] that responsibility to Mr. Baty, and she has further testified, as I recall it, that she did not go into it in that detail.

Is that right?

The Witness: I recall that the work of getting the figures and all of that was turned over to Mr. Baty.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mrs. Reed.

Will you read my remark? And then you tell me if I recall it correctly or whether it was incorrect. If it is incorrect, tell me in what respect.

(Thereupon the above statement by the Trial Examiner was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, is that correct, or am I incorrect?

The Witness: Well, I think that is reasonably correct. I don't recall to just what extent I went into any detail. I do know that I relied a great deal on Mr. Baty's handling that. After all, he had been managing the plant and was familiar with that kind of work.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you refer back to Miss Weyand's question, please, and read it?

(Thereupon the question above referred to was read by the reporter as follows:

"Did you spend a good deal of time studying the rates and classifications to determine what amount you could pay for which classification?")

[fol. 3720] Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. I don't remember how much time I spent. My remembrance is that I relied mostly on Mr. Baty for that.

Miss Weyand: Was there any problem raised in connection with the supplemental agreement to which you devoted any large amount of time?

A. I don't recall right now. If I would see the supplemental agreement, I might recall.

. . . . . .

Miss Weyand: I have secured my copy of Board's exhibit No. 7, which appears at pages 4382 to 4394, inclusive, of the Circuit Court of Appeals record.

. . . . . .

[fol. 3721] Trial Examiner Batten: I think the easiest way to straighten that out is, when you refer to a record in the Circuit Court, you simply say "Circuit Court record page so and so."

. . . . . .

[fol. 3722] A. Miss Weyand, I don't exactly understand what you mean by your question on just what part I did any work on in this contract. Is that the question?

Miss Weyand: You had testified that you didn't spend a great deal of time on the job of details and classifications. [fol. 3723] I just wondered if there was anything in regard to the contract that you did spend a great deal of time upon.

A. Everything in the contract was discussed with me. Every part of the contract I was familiar with and it was discussed with me.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is there any particular part of it that you spent a great deal of time on, more so than others—any particular part of it?

A. The rates of pay would probably have taken more of my time, because each of those classifications were at some time or other brought to my attention.

[fol. 3724] Miss Weyand: You say "probably": Did they? A. Well, they were, yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well now, just a moment.

A. Oh, I am so tired, Mr. Batten, I am sorry.

Miss Weyand: I think, if the witness is feeling too tired, if she can't answer the questions without difficulty, proper steps should be taken that no further examination be given until she feels like she can answer fairly and honestly. I do not intend to impose upon the witness. I don't want the record to show that she is continuing to answer questions when she is so tired.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think if Mrs. Reed doesn't care to continue she will state that she does not.

A. I will continue. I simply read this contract, and for about an hour, ago a contract just written in St. Louis and our wages are so much higher and everything so much better, I admit that it disturbed me somewhat. And I am being grilled on a situation where the results are so much greater to the employees.

Mr. Langsdale: I move that speech be stricken out as in no way material to any issues in this case; any other contract hasn't anything to do with this case. It is not responsive to any question.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand. It is not in answer to any question.

[fol. 3725] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was there any discussion of any check-off of dues in connection with the May 27 contract?

A. I don't remember that there was. There was a discussion of a closed shop all along the line. I had run an open shop for nearly 20 years, and I don't like the idea of—

Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Reed, the question was, was there any discussion about a check-off. That is the question.

A. I don't remember that there was. As a matter of fact, my remembrance—I have no recollection of any discussion of a check-off. I can't, right this instant—I know that I at first didn't want a closed shop.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union ever request you to give them a check-off provision in a contract?

A. I don't recall that they did.

Q. What was the first recollection you have of a discussion of a check-off arrangement?

A. I think Mr. Baty—that the union wanted a check-off, because it made so much trouble for the girls to have just the exact change to pay their dues. I remember discussing that with Mr. Reed and Mr. Ingraham, and they said that I had no authority to take any money out of a person's pay, unless the individual requested it themselves.

Q. Do you remember the approximate date upon which [fol. 3726] the discussions first arose?

A. I do not.

Q. Would it be subsequent to the June 22, 1937, supplemental agreement?

A. I am not sure, Miss Weyand.

Q. What arrangements did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union make with the company to check off dues?

Mr. Reed: That is, assuming that the company did, and the witness just said that it was an individual transaction with the individual members.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she may state whether or not there was any arrangement between the company and the union on the check-off of dues.

A. I didn't make any arrangement myself, and I have no knowledge. I wouldn't be able to say.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Who did make the arrangement, if you know?

A. I assume that Mr. Baty would have.

Q. Do you know what the practice in regard to checking off dues is?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean in this plant?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

A. Of my own knowledge I really don't.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know whether all of the employees have authorized that their dues be checked off?

[fol. 3727] A. All of the employees don't belong to the union.

Q. Whether all of the employees who are eligible for and do belong to the union have authorized it?

A. I am sure they would, because our attorneys advised us we should have individual requests to that effect.

Q. You do check off dues of all of the employees who are members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I understand that there is what is called in union circles a check-off system; I am not sure of my own knowledge. I am not familiar with how it works.

Q. Do you know whether there are any employees who are members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, whose dues are not checked off by the company?

A. I do not.

Q. Has there been a renewal of the May 27 contract?

A. Well, it is the same; if there isn't a renewal, it is continuous. I am not sure what the arrangement is. The contract is still in force, except that we have had an increase in wages in the last few months.

Q. When did this increase in wages occur?

A. Sometime this spring.

Q. Could you fix the date more definitely?

A. I am sorry but I can't.

Q. Is the May 27, 1937, contract still in force and effect?

A. That would be my remembrance, with the addition of [fol. 3728] the increase in wages. There may be some others, I don't know whether there is any clarification or anything more or not. In general that contract is still in force, at least the wages and hours and so forth, with the addition of new increases of this spring.

Q. That is, the May 27 contract as supplemented by the June 22 contract, is still in force?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether there were negotiations at the expiration of the first two-years' period of the contract?

A. Yes, there were some discussions.

Q. Do you know what discussions took place?

A. No. That was when I was ill, and I don't—I wasn't in on that, that I remember or recall.

Q. Do you know whether there are other written documents which state changes or clarifications of the May 27 contract?

A. It seems to me there is another short document, I believe that was written in '39, I am not sure. But in '39 I was so ill most of that year that I don't remember having had anything to do with it. It might have been discussed with me, but I didn't have much to do with it, if anything.

Q. To determine the contract under which the company and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union are today operating, what document do you have to look to?

A. Well, I would—if something came up where I per- [fol. 3729] sonally had to look at the contract, I would immediately get in touch with Mr. Ingraham, and have him get any document. I don't have them in my possession.

Miss Weyand: I would like to ask if the company would supply such supplements and clarifications to the May 27, 1937, contract, any supplements thereto, so we may determine what contract is in existence today, between the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Mr. Ingraham: Very well.

Trial Examiner Batten: You are still secretary of the company?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Does the Donnelly Garment Company afford desk space to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Does the president of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union have assigned to her a desk at which she is authorized to conduct business on behalf of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Does the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union distribute announcements of its meetings through the plant during working hours?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Has it ever done so?

[fol. 3730] A. Not to my personal knowledge.

Q. What information do you have on the subject?

A. Oh, I have heard in a general way that they were accused of doing that, if you want to use that word.

Q. Did you ever investigate to determine whether or not it was done?

A. No.

Q. In reference to the question as to whether the Donnelly Garment Workers, or the president thereof, was afforded a desk, will you answer that question in reference to the entire period from April 27, 1937, to date?

A. It would be the same, to my knowledge.

Q. Do you know whether the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union uses mimeograph machines, typewriters or other facilities belonging to the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Not to my personal knowledge.

Q. Do you know whether they have ever done so?

A. I don't know. I know that employees have used typewriters and sewing machines, and any equipment that we have down there, at different times.

Q. Do you know whether employees have used equipment in connection with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union matter?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you have any information on the subject?

A. Only what I have gathered from accusations made [fol. 3731] against the union.

Q. Did you ever investigate whether there was any truth to those accusations?

A. No. It never made any difference to me whether any of the employees used any equipment. They have done it for 25 years, whenever they wanted to. I have known it. They know that I know it, and I haven't ever done anything about it.

Q. Has the Donnelly Garment Company ever been called upon to discharge any employee because he failed to maintain his membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you state which employees that is true of?

A. There were two employees, and right at the moment I happen to remember the name of May Stevens; I don't remember the other name.

Q. Will you state what occurred in that connection?

A. My information is that these two young women informed the union, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, that they preferred to belong to the I.L.G.W.U., and inasmuch as the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union had a closed shop contract with me, they served notice that in order to—for me to live up to the agreement with them that I had—that these young women should be dismissed, and their employment should cease with us.

[fol. 3732] Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, what has that to do with this proceeding?

Miss Weyand: Well, this proceeding is concerned with whether or not the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union is company dominated.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean since the last hearing?

Miss Weyand: The questions which counsel for the company put, brought the situation at the plant down to date.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, assuming that it did, I still say, with respect to the questions the company's counsel asked, and you asked, too—with respect to the questions that the Respondent asked on direct, and you have asked on cross, I have been wondering for a long time whether we are going to try out all of the issues that have arisen in this matter since the last hearing. I thought we were here for the purpose of taking certain testimony which was proper, and which, at the last hearing, I rejected. Now, are we here for that purpose, or are we not?

Miss Weyand: I haven't had it clear. I thought that I was sent out here from Washington to deal with that, but the direct examination of the witness did deal with matters subsequent to the last hearing. The offer of the company, while it was written and made in 1939, did speak in terms of whether or not the employees had joined and continued to hold their membership in the Donnelly Garment Work-[fol. 3733] ers' Union of their own free will.

Trial Examiner Batten: What do you think, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: I think that the hearing is limited to the charges that are in the Board's complaint, and whatever questions were asked, we were merely bringing out all of the facts in connection with various employees, without in any way, of course, enlarging the charges in the complaint.

Trial Examiner Batten: That isn't what I asked Miss Weyand. Do you think we have anything to do with anything that transpired since the last hearing?

Mr. Ingraham: I don't think that the Respondent can be convicted of any matter outside of the charges in the complaint.

Trial Examiner Batten: Are we interested—is it your idea in this hearing we are going to take all of the testimony from the time of the last hearing down to date on everything that has happened in that intervening period?

Mr. Ingraham: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, what do you think?

Mr. Langsdale: As I thought, I have very clearly stated in the beginning, I think that all this hearing was supposed to be was to take testimony which you had ruled to be [fol. 3734] immaterial and had ruled out at the other hearing, but you have placed no limitation whatever on counsel for the Respondent. The first 30 minutes that Mrs. Reed talked was about the budget she made in 1940, and there has been a lot of testimony about that.

As a representative of the I.L.G.W.U., am I not to be permitted to respond to any of that, because it happened in 1940, if it did happen at all?

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you asking me? I was asking you a question.

Mr. Langsdale: That seems to be your question. I would like to limit it to what the Court of Appeals said it was to be limited to, that was certain offers of proof which Respondent made, and which you refused to accept, which the Court of Appeals says you refused to accept on the ground that it was immaterial or incompetent, or for some other reason. But nearly all of this hearing has been about things that happened since that time, and are we to sit idly by and let it go unchallenged?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think that you should, Mr. Langsdale; I don't think I asked you to.

Mr. Langsdale: You asked me if I thought we had a right to go into anything that happened since the last hearing, and I say the only reason I think we have that right is that the Respondent has done it up to now. We [fol. 3735] either have to do it, or sit idly by or let it go as true.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Tyler, what do you think about it?

Mr. Tyler: Well, Mr. Examiner, I believe in an examination of the charges as of the time they were made, and since incomplete evidence was taken at the first hearing, the evidence which was omitted at that time should be included. I do not think this is a continuing charge, in which the complainant may select any day in five years, and have a hearing on any day in five years.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is true, but my question to you is, on the basis of the Court sending it back to the Board, If you would take the testimony which was offered at that time, would it include these matters that have occurred subsequent to the hearing in July?

Mr. Tyler: I think not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I am inclined to think not, too.

Mr. Langsdale: I wonder if counsel and the Examiner would be willing to strike everything that has been testified to by Mrs. Reed since the last hearing. If so, there wouldn't be anything that we will have to respond to.

Miss Weyand: Mr. Trial Examiner, I agree that noth-[fol. 3736] ing subsequent to the last hearing should be taken; however, I notice a decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals, I believe it was the Goodyear case, recently came down, in which the Court refused to enforce an order disestablishing a dominated union on the ground that several years had elapsed since the last event concerning which there was evidence on the record. If counsel for the company and counsel for the intervening union are willing to agree they would not urge upon the Court the absence of evidence concerning events since the last hearing, I should be very glad to limit it to that period.

Trial Examiner Batten: But my further question to you on that is, we are here on an order of the Board, which I take it very definitely limits my power, very definitely because it says in the Board's order, "It is further ordered that the record be reopened and further hearing be held for the purpose of taking additional evidence, in accordance with the said opinion and decree of the aforesaid court." If that doesn't limit me in my authority to receive evidence, I would like to have someone explain to me how much latitude I have.

Miss Weyand: It seems there may be no limitation in the Circuit Court's order and therefore may be no limitation to the Board's order. It is a matter of, what did the Circuit Court mean?

[fol. 3737] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't mind saying to you, I think the Circuit Court definitely limited us, and I think so more today, I am more convinced of it today than when we had this conference off the record, that this hearing should be limited to receiving testimony that was offered at the last hearing and rejected, and nothing more.

Mr. Langsdale: That has been my contention from the first 30 minutes of this hearing.

Trial Examiner Batten: But I didn't mean to inject this at this point. I told all counsel that I am going to proceed with Mrs. Reed, I didn't limit the Respondent, and as soon as we are through with Mrs. Reed, I can tell you all that we are going to very definitely decide this question, and I simply injected the question to you at this time, Miss Weyand, because I am inclined to believe that is going to be the limitation I shall put upon it, and I don't mind telling all counsel, if I do put that limitation upon it, I intend to strike out all of the testimony thus far received, that is not limited to that.

Mr. Langsdale: It appears to me, Mr. Examiner, these gentlemen here are so insistent now that the testimony be limited to the scope which you have defined, that is, the testimony which you refused to accept in 1939, they ought to be willing to consent that everything else be stricken out, and then we will know what we have to date in the [fol. 3738] way of witnesses.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, we will proceed with this witness. I think I have, perhaps, again expressed my views about what authority I think I have in this hearing, and I think Miss Weyand has conceded that under the Board's order of further hearing I am limited to the Circuit Court's decision, which means that I then have to decide what the Circuit Court meant, and when the proper time comes I shall tell you all what I think the Circuit Court meant. Another reason that I raised that, was this: I thought that you were leading into a subject matter which might bring up a question of further discriminatory discharges, and raise a new issue in this hearing, which would mean additional testimony, rebuttal testimony, and so forth.

Now, I tell you frankly, that is the reason I asked you. I don't want to find myself in the position where I have let any counsel examine a witness on certain matters, and then be confronted with a motion to amend the complaint to include other issues, other than those before me.

Miss Weyand: I have no intention to make any such motion, and I have quite definitely made up my mind not to make any such motion. I assume any other unfair labor practices, the Board would have no jurisdiction over them until the union would file charges and a new complaint issue thereon, and until that occurs we cannot decide any-[fol. 3739] thing about whether there should be a hearing or it should be held concurrently with this hearing.

I think I am prepared to state that I have no intention whatsoever, I do not think it would be proper under the remand, to include any other complaint. I do feel, however, I should say that the Board— I believe that the Board's order, based on the present complaint, should properly cover the returning of dues checked off.

I also think, under the present complaint, and under the remand, it would be proper for the Board, if the evidence introduced in this hearing should disclose that the domination of this union has resulted in the loss of further sums of money to these employees, to include the return to them of those further sums of money.

Aside from those matters, I feel there is nothing.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, on what theory would you proceed on that? You are not presenting an affirmative matter by the Board. Does the Board, in this hearing, have any affirmative position at all?

Miss Weyand: The Board in this matter has no affirmative position. However, if the evidence brought out on the offer of proof and the testimony introduced in rebuttal thereto discloses that broader relief should be granted than has been granted in the first order, it is my position that the Board would be entitled to enter a broader [fol. 3740] order than the order it entered into on the previous decision. I feel that in fairness to counsel for the company, I should state that is my position at the present time, if the Board's order is to be entered upon the evidence taken on the remand it does not have to be limited to the order entered in the previous decision.

However, it would have to be an order limited to the issue raised by the complaint which is now on file, and I do not intend to ask that be amended.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, the Board having set it aside, its order and decision, I presume the Respondent and the Intervenor or Union are all aware of the fact that in a new Board order and decision, it may be as broad as the complaint, whether that would be any more broad than the one it did issue. Of course, that is a difficult question, and I am not concerned with it.

Well, we will proceed with Mrs. Reed.

Mr. Langsdale: The question I raised with the Examiner is, whether or not we would have a right to bring in witnesses to meet all of the testimony given by Mrs. Reed, that was not limited to what the Court of Appeals said.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't believe I would worry about that, until we are through with Mrs. Reed, at which time I am going —

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) Well, it worries me. [fol. 3741] I can't get away from it. I have to get witnesses.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am going to attempt to set my limitations with the Court's order for further hearing. If there is anything in Mrs. Reed's testimony which I feel is inconsistent with that ruling, naturally it will be stricken. So we will proceed on that basis.

Miss Weyand: I would like to make a further remark. In connection with the suggestions I made, and which grows in my mind, due to the action of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in the Goodyear case, I think it is necessary that the Board bring down to date the evidence on a dominated union. However, I do think we should consider, whether or not the Circuit Court of Appeals or the Board so intended, when we are having a hearing and witnesses are on the stand, we could easily, without very much greater effort, bring the events down to date.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, as far as I am concerned, you are going to be limited to the Board's order. I don't intend to go beyond it.

Miss Weyand: I do not know whether the Board does or does not decide this matter.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am pretty well convinced that it does. If any counsel intends to go beyond that Board's order, as it refers to the Circuit Court's decision,

I can tell you now that it is going to be with authority from [fol. 3742] the Board and with instructions to me that I do so. So we will proceed.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3743] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union give the company a written notice that it desired the company to discharge these two girls?

A. That is my remembrance.

Mr. Reed: Wait a minute. We object to that. That is opening up exactly the question the Commissioner has ruled out.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't rule it out, Senator.

Mr. Reed: If you didn't rule it out—

Trial Examiner Batten: I have been trying to arrive at some sort of a limitation. I said we will proceed with Mrs. Reed. I do not intend, Senator, as I previously stated, to attempt to limit the matter at this time. When Mrs. Reed is through, I am more than convinced we have to work out some sort of a limitation on this thing.

Mr. Reed: This is something we didn't go into at all. It raises the question, if it raises anything, whether or not these girls were properly discharged.

[fol. 3744] Miss Weyand: The company did go into the resignation of various persons, Jack McConaughey and Lyle Jeter, that happened in 1939, 1940, and 1941.

Mr. Reed: If the company went into the question of Jack McConaughey and somebody else who resigned from the union, that has nothing to do with the discharge of these two girls. There is no connection between them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter as follows:

"Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union give the company a written notice that it desired the company to discharge these two girls?")

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us. Do you know whether you received a written notice, Mrs. Reed?

A. My information is that we did receive a written notice.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you then discharge these girls because they had failed to maintain their membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I didn't, myself, discharge them. My understanding is that they were discharged.

Q. Were there other instances besides these two girls where discharges took place as the result of a request of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Not to my knowledge.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3745] Q. Did the union negotiate with the company in respect to piece rates as they were set on each style of garment?

A. No. My remembrance is that we agreed, in a general way, that the way the piece rates had been set would be the same, because it had resulted in the operators making more money than was being paid in any other similar dress company, and the union had no objection to our getting up the piece rates as we had gotten them—as we had worked them out before, on the same basis.

Mr. Langsdale: I move that that answer be stricken as not responsive to the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did the company submit piece rates to some representative of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. My understanding is that on each new line that was made up, as the piece rates were made they were submitted to the president of the union for her O. K., or if she didn't [fol. 3746-3747] O. K. them, for suggestions. They couldn't go into effect until the president of the union had O. K.'d them.

Q. Do you know just what procedure was followed in submitting the piece rates to the president of the union for her O. K.?

A. No, I don't know.

Q. Who acted for the company in submitting those piece rates to the president of the union?

A. Mr. Baty would have had the general responsibility.

Q. Did he take each piece rate as it came up and submit it to Rose Todd and ask her if she would O. K. it?

A. Of my own knowledge, I don't know how they worked it out, but I think they would have the piece rates on perhaps the greater part of the line before it would be O. K.'d. I don't think they would take one at a time. We get the line into the plant rather promptly.

Q. Did Rose Todd have with her certain other persons who acted as a committee of the union to O. K. piece rates, or did she just, as president, O. K. them?

A. It is my understanding that she had some sort of a piece rate committee, with one girl from each type of work that was done.

Q. When did this system of having one girl from each type of work assist Rose Todd begin?

A. Of my own knowledge, I don't really know.

Q. Was that the practice from the very first?

[fol. 3748] A. I don't know. The responsibility of dealing with the union on their piece rates was in Mr. Baty's hands.

Q. Did Lulu Nichols participate in negotiating with Rose Todd in reference to the piece rates?

A. Lulu Nichols got up the piece rates. Of my own knowledge, I couldn't tell you just how they did, Miss Weyand.

Q. Do you know what the present practice in regard to piece rate negotiations is?

A. No more than, in a general way, that the committee and the president meet with Mr. Baty and whoever else he wants to be there, and they check over the rates, and if there is any dissatisfaction or they are not in agreement, they get together on it.

Miss Weyand: I would like to ask at this time if the company has checked the wage and hour reports and is prepared to state to us whether the ones introduced for identification were correct, or if they were not correct, if they can supply us with the correct material.

Mr. Ingraham: Miss Weyand, the photostats that you gave me were loose pages, and I couldn't check, because I didn't have those pages properly hooked together; and also, there were no reporter's marks to indicate what exhibits they were on the photostats.

Miss Weyand: Will you check those with the court reporter?

[fol. 3749] Mr. Ingraham: If I could get a— Do you still have the originals?

Miss Weyand: I gave them to you in the courtroom.

Mr. Langsdale: The exhibit designation is on the back of each page of the photostat on the copy that Miss Weyand furnished me. I assume that the same is true of the others.

Mr. Reed: I still ask the question, if I may, where are the originals?

Mr. Ingraham: Miss Weyand, Friday night, when Mr. Batten called us back here, I left the original and you gave me the photostatic copies.

Miss Weyand: I did not take the originals, but, as I understand, the reporter did.

Trial Examiner Batten: I suggested that the reporter take them, after you had the photostats, and I asked you if the photostats were satisfactory; so, naturally, the reporter kept the originals.

Mr. Ingraham: So the reporter has the originals?

Trial Examiner Batten. Yes.

Mr. Ingraham: I can check with the originals, then.

Trial Examiner Batten When, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: Is it all right for me to take the originals tonight?

Trial Examiner Batten: It is all right with me, if you want to give a receipt to the court reporter.

[fol. 3750] Mr. Ingraham: I will give a receipt to the court reporter. My photostats that I had didn't have any exhibit mark on them, and I am sure there wasn't anything on the back.

Miss Weyand: I think you are correct, that there wasn't.

Mr. Ingraham: The pages were all loose.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Reporter, do you have those pages marked, the originals?

The Reporter: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, you may take the originals, Mr. Ingraham.

Miss Weyand: I have learned from the Wages and Hours Division that we may retain the originals, so that there will be no necessity for substituting the photostats, and the originals may remain in the record.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I have indicated before that counsel should not take these exhibits to be photostated unless there is a mark on there indicating the exhibit.

Miss Weyand: I had these photostats made prior to introducing the documents even for identification, with the intent that we could all discuss them in the courtroom better if there was a copy in the hands of each counsel in the case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's proceed.

You will have those in the morning, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you state what position Hobart Atherton holds with the Donnelly Garment Company?

[fol. 3751] A. He is in the maintenance department.

Q. Does his position bear a title or term or description?

A. No.

Q. What does Mr. Atherton do in the maintenance department?

A. Of my own knowledge, I don't know exactly what he does. One of the things I have, myself, seen him do is to help put up runways for style shows.

Q. Do you have any information as to what he does do?

A. I really don't know exactly what he does do.

Q. Do you know what he has done at any time since January 1935?

A. In a general way, I know that he is in what we call the maintenance department.

Q. Do you know anything further about Mr. Atherton's duties since January 1935?

A. I have seen him numerous times sitting down in the lobby at the front door, relieving our door man.

Q. Do you know anything further of what he has done or has done since January 1935?

A. I really don't, Miss Weyand.

Q. If I recollect correctly, you stated that the Donnelly Garment Company had recently established a committee to deal on behalf of the company with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union; is that correct?

A. Yes. I established that committee.

[fol. 3752] Q. Who are the members of that committee?

A. Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Baty, Mrs. Strine, Mr. Green, and Mr. Bachofer.

Q. Are you a member of that committee?

A. No.

Q. When was that committee established?

A. Sometime last winter.

Q. Do you know the procedure which that committee followed in its negotiations with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I do not, of my own knowledge.

Q. Have you any information on the subject?

A. Not any more than when the president of the union has a complaint filed with her and she wants to talk to this committee, she makes an appointment, and I believe that her—I don't know whether her whole committee always meets with them or not, but she asks for an appointment and they meet with her.

Q. Prior to the establishment of this committee, who, on behalf of the company, was authorized to deal with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Mr. Baty. And if they asked to deal with me directly, I would do so.

Q. Was the increase which you spoke of, describing it as, in some instances, 5 percent, 7-1/2 percent, 10 percent, or 12 percent, an increase in the minimum guarantee of the various operators'?

[fol. 3753] A. No. That was an increase in the piece rates and to the week workers.

Q. Did the pieceworkers receive any increase at that time?

A. They received an increase in their piece rates.

Q. It was an increase in the piece rates, as to the pieceworkers, and an increase in the time rates, as to the timeworkers?

A. That is right.

Q. Was this increase included in a written contract with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I think it was just handled through letters.

Q. Did these letters merely state that the increase would be granted, or did they provide that, as a term of employment, that the increase should be in effect for a period of time?

A. My remembrance was, the increase was granted, and we wrote a letter to the union that that had been granted.

Q. Would you provide us a copy of the letter which you wrote to the union granting the increase?

The Witness: Will you do that, Bob?

The increase was agreed upon, and I haven't heard that they didn't get it. I am sure I would have heard, if they didn't.

Q. Did you make any agreement that such increase would be in effect for the remainder of the contract term?

A. I, myself, took it for granted that that would be the situation. I sat in on most of those conferences, and I [fol. 3754] didn't put any term on when they would run out. I just had the feeling that that was an increase in their wages; and I didn't stipulate that they wouldn't have them permanently. As far as I am concerned, that is the wage rates in the place there.

Q. Do you have records of the various disputes which have been taken up by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union with the company?

A. Not of my own knowledge. I don't know whether there are any or not.

Miss Weyand: I would like to ask counsel to furnish them, but I would be very glad to make that subject to the limitation, if it is ultimately put in effect, I do not intend to question Mrs. Reed about them, but if there is no limitation I would like the records furnished to date.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean all records of various grievances handled?

Miss Weyand: If they keep records of grievances and disputes at the Donnelly Garment Company.

Trial Examiner Batten: Suppose we had them, are they particularly material to the issues in this case?

Miss Weyand: Yes, I think they are. It will show in many instances who purported to speak on behalf of the company and, I presume, who purported to speak on behalf of the workers.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, that is the purpose of the question?

[fol. 3755] Miss Weyand: Yes, that is the purpose of the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, will you see if there are any of those in the files, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know the date on which Jack McConaughey withdrew from the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know the date on which Lyle Jeter withdrew?

A. I haven't any knowledge of the details of when these people withdrew from the union.

Q. Is that true also as respects Dewey Atchison?

A. Yes.

Miss Weyand: I believe that is all of the cross-examination I have, subject, however, to permission to direct some cross-examination to Mrs. Reed at the time we have an agreement as to what the proper wage and hour reports are.

Trial Examiner Batten: I understand, then, you are passing the witness, except for examination with respect to Board's exhibits 32, 33, 34, and 35?

Miss Weyand: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: That, I believe, covers them all.

Miss Weyand: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, that covers them all, Board's exhibits 32 to 35, inclusive.

Miss Weyand: And any other documents which may be introduced, if those should not prove to be the accurate [fol. 3756] wage and hour reports.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3758] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mrs. Reed, I believe that you testified that when the membership cards were given to you by Miss Todd, that Mrs. Strine counted them?

A. I didn't say that she counted them, I said I turned them over to her to check them. Miss Todd said that the employees had unanimously voted to form their own union.

Q. All I asked you was did you turn them over to Mrs. Strine to count.

A. I said—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. Will you read the question, please, the original question?

(Question read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you know whether she counted them or not?

A. I don't know whether she counted them or not.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you examine them yourself?

A. Only casually; I didn't attempt to count them, what proportions were there.

Q. Did you look at them for the purpose of seeing who had joined this union?

A. No. I asked Mrs. Strine to check them over, and she could probably get Mr. Baty's help.

Q. Did you observe a card signed by Dewey Atchison?

A. I don't remember any particular name on them; as a matter of fact, I don't remember exactly the cards at all.

[fol. 3759] Q. Did you learn that Dewey Atchison had signed a card and became a member of that union?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever learn that?

A. I did not.

Q. You then don't know who did join the union and who did not, do you; Mrs. Reed?

A. I don't know every single person that did. I was informed that all of the working employees joined the union.

Q. Was Mr. Atchison at that time assistant factory manager?

A. He never had that title, to my knowledge.

Q. Didn't he perform the duties of assistant factory manager?

A. He assisted Mrs. Reeves in planning what garments should be cut so that there would be an equal distribution of the work in the plant, in that he would make up a chart and show how many units of single needle work there was, and how many units of double needle work, and all the things on the line, and they would make a cutting card, and she would use that information, and she wouldn't put more work in the plant of a specific kind, or on a specific kind of machine, more than that specific kind of machine could handle.

Q. Did he perform the duties of assistant factory manager?

A. He never did. Dewey Atchison was never assistant factory manager.

[fol. 3760] Q. Who was your factory manager in 1935, in the N.R.A. hearing? A. Mrs. Reeves.

Q. Did she have an assistant?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. What were Dewey Atchison's duties at that time?

A. Dewey Atchison has always been an individual worker in the plant. I advised with him many times how we would work out a pattern, and he has helped me make patterns. He has gone over the line with me to see if we couldn't improve operations, and he would work with Mr. Baty to give suggestions on how certain types of operations would go through the plant, and make it easier. He worked with Mrs. Reeves along that line.

Q. Did he ever have any authority to hire or fire anybody? A. No.

Q. Did he ever have any duty to pass upon who should be fired or who should not be fired, or who should be laid off, or anything of that sort?

A. At one time, the way we used to work, about whether an employe would be laid off, he worked with us on that.

But as to Dewey in that regard, it was more whether we had a certain amount of work, or if we would have, for instance, a lot of double stitching, if we were going to [fol. 3761] have a lot of double stitching on our line, we would be informed and we wouldn't lay off any double stitchers. As far as him having personal power over anybody's job, I never felt that way about it.

Q. Wasn't he one who, in the employment of the company, had to pass on whether or not a sewing girl operator remained in the employment or was laid off?

A. Oh, no, he simply kept us informed about whether we would have enough of a certain type of work for the amount of machines. We would have, for instance, 25 or 30 embroidery machines going, and it would be his job to keep us informed whether, according to our records, we would have enough embroidery work for 25 machines, or maybe only 15.

Q. And then he never did have anything to do with passing on who should be discharged or laid off, and who didn't?

A. Just from what I said, Mr. Langsdale, he kept us informed about the work that was coming through, and he knew the type of machines we had in the plant, and how many we had.

Q. Now, you attended the N.R.A. hearing, didn't you?

A. I did.

Q. That was in 1935? A. I believe so.

Q. And were you there during all of the hearing?

A. I think I was, most of the time, anyhow.

[fol. 3762] Q. Were you there when Mrs. Reeves testified? A. Most of the time.

Q. Let me ask you if you heard her give this testimony, which appears in Exhibit 1 of the N.R.A. hearing, page 307. This is by Elizabeth Reeves: (Reading)

"Answer: Nobody is let out of the Donnelly Garment Company unless four people pass on it. After we decide that we have to lay off a certain group or number of people, we go over our records with the instructor, and she makes the recommendation because she is in close touch with the operator, and knows the type of work that the operator does and whether she is efficient, obedient and co-operative and reliable."

Was that true in the N.R.A. hearing?

Mr. Reed: I object to that, because he is reading somebody else's testimony given in another case, and that is an improper method of examination, if I know anything about it.

Mr. Langsdale: I am asking if that was the condition.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us if that was the situation at that time.

A. He is reading from a record there, and Mrs. Reeves apparently made that statement, if that record is a true record.

[fol. 3763] Trial Examiner Batten: He is not asking you whether Mrs. Reeves' testimony is true, but whether that situation at that time was correct.

A. I don't exactly know what she means, but I do know that Dewey, in that committee, was to tell us how much work was to be done, and—

Mr. Langsdale: Now, Mrs. Reed—

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) I insist the witness should be allowed to answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. I want to be certain that the witness has not forgotten the question.

Mr. Reed: The witness was answering the question and was interrupted.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. Can I answer one question at a time?

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. I am asking you now, Mrs. Reed, if this was the true condition at the time of the N.R.A. hearing.

A. Will you please read what the testimony is?

Q. (Reading) "Nobody is let out of the Donnelly Garment Company unless four people pass on it." Is that true?

A. I know that four people were consulted on it.

Q. (Reading) "And after we decide that we have to [fol. 3764] lay off a certain group or number of people, we go over our records with the instructor, and she makes the recommendation, because she is in close touch with the operator, and knows the type of work the operator does and whether she is efficient, obedient, and co-operative and reliable." Is that true at that time?

A. That part of it—you see, Mrs. Reeves was running it; I don't know. Mrs. Reeves was running the plant, and she said that is what she did. Now, just for me to know that was exactly what they did, I don't know. I do know that we had four people getting together in a consultation before we laid anybody off.

Q. Do you say that is or is not true, what has been stated by Mrs. Reeves, about the duties of the instructor?

A. I know that the instructor, from one angle, would have something to do with who was laid off.

Q. "And after the instructor makes that selection, it is checked by Mrs. Wherry, who is in charge of our factory, who knows what is going on in every section of the place, and Mrs. Wherry might make a suggestion that, well, possibly we wouldn't be able to use that girl in the section, and we might be able to transfer her into another section. That is gone into very thoroughly." Was that true at that time?

A. Mrs. Wherry was never made a manager of the factory by me. I don't know if she was considered to be a manager.

[fol. 3765] Q. You said it wasn't true?

A. No, Mrs. Reeves was manager of the plant, and Mrs. Reeves had a great many other duties, and she relied on Mrs. Wherry to a great extent, to a greater extent than I had realized, when I heard the testimony in the N.R.A. case.

Trial Examiner Batten: It is five o'clock.

Mr. Langsdale: I would like to ask one more question.

Mr. Langsdale: "Then, that group of people are taken up with Mr. Atchison, and Mr. Atchison discusses with them very thoroughly, he sees what they have made and he knows the reason that happened, he has listed each week on pay roll cards with the instructor, and Mrs. Wherry," was that true?

Mr. Reed: I insist, if Your Honor please, this witness ought to be asked direct questions, and not have things read.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is not whether Mrs. Reeves' testimony is true, but was that the true situation in the plant at the time, if this witness knows.

Mr. Reed: I object to that method of examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection.

Mr. Reed: As incompetent, and immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you know if that was the method?

[fol. 3766] A. Mrs. Reeves was in charge of the plant, and I of my own knowledge don't know exactly.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. The question was, was Mr. Atchison, one of his duties, as I related to you, "Then that group of people are taken up with Mr. Atchison, and Mr. Atchison discusses with them very thoroughly, he sees what they have made, and he knows the reason what has happened, and he listed each week on the pay roll cards with the instructor, and Mrs. Wherry," was that true or not?

A. Of my own knowledge I do not know.

Q. You didn't know Mr. Atchison was performing those duties at the time of the N.R.A. hearing in 1935?

A. I don't know exactly what duties he was performing.

Q. Did you ever hear it from Mrs. Reeves or anyone else, that he was performing those duties?

A. I was really under the impression that Mrs. Reeves went over those cards with the instructors themselves.

Q. You never heard that Mrs. Reeves went over those people, four people went over them, and one person being Atchison?

A. My general knowledge is there were four people that went over them.

Q. Well, who were the four?

A. Well, one of them was Dewey, and the instructor, and I believe Mrs. Reeves and Mrs. Wherry.

Q. Right.

[fol. 3775] Q. And Mrs. Reeves was your production manager at that time, was she not? A. Yes.

Q. And reading further from the same testimony—

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) Just for the record, we object to the testimony with reference to what happened in [fol. 3776] 1935 and prior thereto, as entirely remote. It does not throw any light, it does not furnish a background for this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may have a continuing objection to each question.

Mr. Reed: All right.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is, with respect to the 1935 situation.

By Mr. Laugsdale:

Q. Let me ask you if this method was employed in the Donnelly Garment Company plant in 1935, at the time Mrs. Reeves testified in the N.R.A. hearing: "We treat our people like individuals, and decide certain things they can do, and we classify them, and so forth, and after that is done it is brought up to me for final O.K. I go into all the reasons and whys and wherefores, then if we all four agree that this group of people should be laid off, we lay them off." Was that method employed, to your knowledge, in 1935?

A. I would have to say that, to my own knowledge, I couldn't say just what they did. Mrs. Reeves was the production manager, and handling all those points at that time.

Q. Well, you have no information at all that that was [fol. 3777] not true, have you?

A. No.

Q. Let me read further, and ask you if you know of your own knowledge anything about this incident: "Like I repeated in the case of Thelma Owens, I had overruled the instructor, Mrs. Wherry, and Mr. Atchison, just about a month before she was finally laid off, and then it was brought up again to me, with her past record; I have to agree, because I expect certain things of those instructors." Do you know anything about the Thelma Owens incident, personally?

A. Not of my own knowledge, I do not.

Q. Then, referring to the instructors, "They have to get out a certain quantity of work in order to make our factory efficient, and I certainly expect them to get out quality as well. I cannot expect them to keep people in their section that won't co-operate and won't help them to maintain the quality and standard of our work, so sometimes we did come along and say, 'Well, maybe we can put this girl in another section, and maybe she can get along a lot better.'" Was that the method employed, to your knowledge, in 1935?

A. I would just have to say the total management of the plant was—I couldn't say of my own knowledge.

Q. Let me ask you, Mrs. Reed, if the operators were [fol. 3778] required to be efficient, obedient, co-operative and reliable?

A. I never made that rule myself.

Q. Did Mrs. Reeves make it?

A. She may have, she was managing the plant.

Q. Was that without your consent?

A. I don't believe that those specific things were discussed with me.

Q. Mrs. Reed, I believe you have said in this trial that you got along in your plant with a minimum of supervision, that is, you don't have many supervisors, bosses. Is that so?

A. I don't think we have a lot of bosses in our plant.

Q. How do you compare with other plants, of which you have knowledge?

A. I don't know. I know that I recently had an industrial engineer in there that told me that he thought that the fact that I had more intelligent employees made it more difficult for the industrial engineer, because he was used to having people do what they were told, because they were told to do it. But he said that down in my plant people had to have explained to them why they should do it.

Q. Let's get back, not to now, Mrs. Reed, but to 1935. How would you say your factory compared with other factories, as to supervision and the number of supervisors [fol. 3779] per person, if you know?

A. I think that our work has always had more careful examining and more thought on the product.

Q. Well, then, that requires you to have a large number of supervisors and heads of departments, did it not?

A. It is according to what you would call a supervisor and head of department; you might have people directing certain work, and have more examiners than they have in other plants, and we had a lot more planning, is my information.

Q. Didn't you call those people supervisors?

A. Well, I don't know that you would call them supervisors. It is according to what you mean by supervisor.

Q. What do you mean by supervisors?

A. Well, I think it is a rather broad term.

Q. Well, do you agree with the definition of a supervisor being one who had the right to direct someone else's work?

A. Yes, I would say that.

Q. Now—

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, just a moment.

[fol. 3780] Q. Mrs. Reed, let me ask you if you didn't testify as follows at the N. R. A. hearing, page 1074 of that hearing:—

Mr. Ingraham: Is that in this record of the circuit court?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

Q. (Continuing) "A. Now, in our plant I think that we have more supervision and more executives than—I know I have—more than are usually in a plant of this kind."

Did you make that answer?

A. If it is in that hearing, I must have.

Q. What do you say it is, Mrs. Reed?

A. I certainly know I felt that we have more planning, more supervising of our merchandise.

Q. More supervision and more executives?

A. Probably so. I have a larger plant than is usual in this business.

Q. Did you make this answer in that hearing, at page 1077 of the record of that hearing:

"Now, in my plant I have 40 operators, 40 machines, under this one supervisor with an assistant. One of them is in charge of quality and the other quantity."

Did you make that answer?

A. I must have, if it is in that hearing.

Q. Which one was in charge of quality?

A. I am not absolutely sure that we always had—that [fol. 3781] that was an invariable rule.

Q. Well, did you mean, Mrs. Reed, by that answer that you gave in the N. R. A. hearing—

Mr. Reed: Let her finish her answer.

Mr. Langsdale: I thought she had, Senator.

A. That was seven years ago, and the point that was being reached there has gotten a little hazy in my mind, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Well, if you can, I want you to tell the Examiner which one of the supervisors had charge of quality at the time you gave this testimony.

A. I really don't remember. We have tried out so many different ways of production, in our methods of production, that I don't believe that a particular method was carried along, and I can't right now remember whether the instructor or the floor girl was charged with the quality or the quantity.

Q. What is the difference, or what was the difference at that time, between an instructor and a floor girl?

A. The instructor planned the work—what work each operator should do, and the floor girl would give out the work or furnish the thread—perhaps do more of the carrying of the work from one operator to another.

Q. Is the floor girl sometimes called thread girl?

A. Yes.

Q. So that the two people you had in mind when you [fol. 3782] said one was in charge of quality and the other quantity were the instructor and the thread girl or floor girl? A. Yes.

Q. And right now you can't say which one had charge of quality and which one had charge of quantity?

A. I would say we would have given the responsibility of the—

Q. —quantity?

A. Yes. I believe that would be— You see, it's seven years ago, and I don't remember just what point was being brought out. We have constantly had the problem of turning out mass production and maintaining quality, and the instructor would be the one that would decide which work each—know what work each operator was capable of doing, and she would be saying what work she would do—directing the work through.

Then, the floor girl—I believe it comes back to me now—we thought as long as she was in the section she could be watching the quality of the work as it went along.

I am not absolutely sure, Mr. Langsdale, because that's seven years ago and it isn't a plan that has always been in effect, or I don't think it has been in effect for some time, at least not to my own knowledge.

Q. Let's refer back to some of Mrs. Reeves's testimony and see if that can help you:

"I expect certain things of those instructors. They have to get out a certain quantity of work in order to make [fol. 3783] our factory efficient, and I certainly expect them to get out quality."

A. Well, that would be consistent with just what I have said.

Q. Now, you at that time were in pretty close touch, were you not, with the instructors?

A. Well, at that particular time, it was after we had had two or three years of depression, Mr. Langsdale, and I was devoting an awful lot of my time to trying to design merchandise that would sell. I put in at Christmas time new lines of silk pajamas that retailed for $25.00 apiece. I did most of that designing myself, and I also directed the selling of that, because our regular trade didn't want to buy it. So I had a couple of special salesmen, particularly one very bright girl, and we sold those to people on Michigan Avenue and on Fifth Avenue in New York. We got about $300,000 worth of business out of them and kept our girls working.

Q. The question was, did you keep in pretty close touch with these instructors at that time, in 1935?

A. I think a great deal of that testimony was about, not just what happened in 1935, but what happened several years previous to that time.

Q. I am not now referring to any testimony, but asking you if you kept in touch with the instructors at the time of the N. R. A. hearing.

A. No, I wasn't in such close touch with them. But at [fol. 3784] that time Mrs. Reeves had taken over the entire management of the plant, and for several years before that.

Q. I will ask you if you recall giving this answer, at page 1107 of the record:

"Q. And I suppose your instructors are more or less under your personal supervision?

"A. Yes. I come in contact with them all the time,"

Did you make that answer then?

A. I probably did.

Q. Was that true?

A. Well, I certainly would be in touch with the instructors, but I didn't direct their work, Mr. Langsdale, at that time. I have always tried to keep in touch with my plant as much as I could. Sometimes I would be in touch with them as much as four months, and then I might not see several of them for a few months.

Q. Well, you wanted to see that they were efficient operators and were good instructors?

A. The instructors were not operators at that time.

Q. I mean, good instructors.

Mr. Reed: I don't know what that last question means.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think the question was, you wanted to see that they were good instructors? Is that right, Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

[fol. 3785] A. I don't understand your point.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, efficient instructors.

A. Of course, I wanted to have the most efficient instructors I could possibly have, always.

Q. Is that what you meant by saying you came in contact with them all of the time?

A. I would be in contact with them as often as I could.

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed, I believe you have stated that you turned the management of the factory or the plant over to Mr. Baty? A. Yes.

Q. In the summer of 1935? A. Yes.

Q. In July or June; do you remember which?

A. I think it was in July. I don't remember. June or July.

Q. Now, how long had Mr. Baty, at that time, been with your company? A. Oh, I think a couple of years.

Q. It had been that long?

A. I am not sure just when he came. Maybe a shorter time than that.

Q. Could it have been as short a time as six months?

A. It could have been, yes.

Q. What was Mr. Baty's employment before he went with your plant?

A. He was employed by the M-K-T-Railroad Company. [fol. 3786] Q. In that capacity?

A. I don't know the exact capacity. He had been with them for a number of years and I felt that he had a pretty good job—something in the maintenance work, keeping track of the maintenance work.

Q. Was it mechanical or clerical? What kind of a job was it, if you know?

A. He was in what the railroad would term the clerical department.

Q. Did you investigate his previous employment to see whether or not it in any way fitted him to be manager of your plant?

A. Well, Mr. Langsdale, I have had an awful lot of criticism as to how I run my business, but I have run it for 25 years and I have made a pretty good success of it.

Q. I am asking you if you made any investigation of Mr. Baty's past experience to see whether or not it fitted him to be the manager of your plant?

A. I talked to Mr. Baty about coming into my plant and discussed many general things with him. And I felt at the time I talked to Mr. Baty about coming in there—I knew Mrs. Reeves was working too hard, and I would like to have some relief for her. I didn't have anybody in my business that I felt I could turn that job over to, and I asked Mr. Baty to come up and to come into the plant and to work in any capacity that he was asked to do, to learn the management of the plant, and told him that [fol. 3787] eventually I expected he would be able to take it over.

Q. Mr. Baty is a relative of yours?

A. He is the husband of my niece.

Q. Do you know how many employees there were in the Donnelly Garment plant—Donnelly Garment Company and Donnelly Garment Sales Company, in 1935, at the time of the N. R. A. hearing?

A. Oh, anywhere from 800 to 1,000, I think. I don't know exactly.

Q. Did that number gradually increase as the years went on?

A. Yes.

Q. In 1935, did it exceed 1,000?

A. I wouldn't say that it did; I don't believe that it did.

Mr. Reed: Are you inquiring about the total number of employees in the company or the number in the plant?

Mr. Langsdale: The total number of employees in the company.

The Witness: I answered the question.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you read the question?

(Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did it exceed 1,000 in 1936?

A. I am sure that we had a growth in 1936.

Q. Well, if your judgment is that the number was 800 to 1,000 in 1935, what would be your judgment as to the num- [fol. 3788] ber in 1936?

A. Mr. Langsdale, I have never made it a point to count how many people we had. When we had more business, if it was my judgment to put on more machines, I would do it, and then we would just employ more people—

Q. I am just asking you for your best judgment, Mrs. Reed, as to the maximum number of employees you had in 1936, if you have any judgment on that matter.

A. I have no exact information I could give you. I know the business increased in 1936 over 1935.

Q. Can you give me an approximate number?

A. I really can't.

Q. Did it increase in 1937 over 1936?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you give me an approximate number of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company in 1937?

A. My remembrance is that— Well, there were 1,300. Now, I am trying to remember what year that was in. That was in 1937, I believe, that the figure is in my mind that we had 1,300 employees.

Q. Did it increase in 1938, the number?

A. Not to any extent, I believe.

Q. It remained about the same?

A. Yes.

[fol. 3789] Q. And in 1939, did the number increase, decrease, or remain about the same?

Mr. Reed: We can supply those figures, approximately. That might save some time.

A. I think—

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed, Mrs. Reed.

A. There hasn't been a great many more people. In 1940, I know we had an increase in sales, but we tried to do a little better management job and have not had to increase our number of employees.

Q. Did you decrease them?

A. The office employees I decreased.

Q. When?

A. Well, I don't remember the exact time. In 1940 we had, I believe, 140 people that were doing office work, and some time ago the figure that I got—I won't say that that is exact—was that there were only 95. But I didn't discharge any of those people, Mr. Langsdale. I remember very well going over it with Mr. Bachofer, and we felt we had too many people in the office, but I gave him instructions that nobody was to be discharged. On the other hand, I gave very definite instructions that there was no new person to be employed that wasn't direct labor and that we would ask some of the people doing clerical work—we thought there were too many doing that—I would ask some of them to learn stenography or to learn how to run [fol. 3790] our tabulating machines, or learn some other work, and they would be given first preference on any new jobs that came up. Of course, when you have a lot of women working for you, you always know a certain number of them are going to quit and be married or will leave because their husbands move away, or for different reasons, and when anybody quit a job it was agreed that before we would hire a new person to fill it, we would have to find out, in the first place, whether the job needed anybody at all, and then, if it did, if there was somebody in our organization to take it. So that when we cut our office force from 140 to 95, we did not discharge anyone. I believe we had one or two girls who had seen how much money the girls made in the factory and they said they would rather go down there and work.

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed may I conclude from that answer that the number of employees in 1940 was about the same as in 1939?

A. I would say probably so.

Q. So between 1935 and 1940, it was almost the same, except—

A. In 1935?

Q. In 1935 you said you had about 1,300?

A. I think I said about 800 or 1,000.

Q. The 1,300 figure was reached in 1937, then, was it?

A. I believe that was about the time.

Q. Was that the top figure?

A. Around 1,300 or 1,350, I believe, was about the top. [fol. 3791] Q. And that was in 1937?

A. Well, Mr. Langsdale, I think those figures are in our case. Just at this instant, for me to say that was in 1937 or 1939, I am not absolutely sure. That may have been in 1939, the 1,300.

Q. When the 1,300 figure was reached, that has been the top, has it?

A. I believe I saw some place a list of 1,350.

Q. Do you recall the testimony was that 13 hundred and something signed cards to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. Would you say that is about right?

A. Well, no, because— I don't recall. 1,357?

Q. Thirteen hundred and something. I don't remember, myself, but something over 1,300.

A. No, I don't remember anybody ever telling me that over 1,300 people had joined the union.

Q. Well, isn't it true that over 1,300 people did join the union?

A. I don't know.

Q. Isn't it true that not over six or eight people employed by the Donnelly Garment Company remained out of the union?

A. Mr. Langsdale, I never had anything brought up with me about the eligibility of people joining the union, [fol. 3792] or who joined the union, or who did not—no one ever asked me about that.

Q. The question is, do you know that all but six or eight people employed by the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company joined this Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I do not know that.

Q. Do you say it isn't true?

Mr. Reed: Now, wait a minute. The witness has said she had nothing to do with the organization.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if she doesn't know, I presume she couldn't say whether it is true or untrue.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You have no information that it is untrue, do you?

Mr. Reed: I object to that.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may state that, whether she has such information or not.

A. I have no information on that.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. As to who and how many belonged to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I say it was never discussed with me about who was eligible to belong or who would join. Any of that part, in any connection with the union, Mr. Langsdale, was never discussed with me.

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed, on March 18, 1937, you were on [fol. 3793] your way to Florida, were you?

A. I left Kansas City that night.

Q. How long did you remain in Florida?

A. A little over two weeks.

Q. What part of Florida?

A. Sarasota.

Q. Were you there for a vacation?

A. I was, for a rest.

Q. You stayed a little over two weeks?

A. Yes.

Q. Could you be more definite than that? How much over two weeks?

A. I couldn't say exactly.

Q. Now, in this transcript that was produced in evidence, which it has been testified was taken of your speech by Mrs. Frances Strine, is a statement that you had been negotiating with the street car company for buses?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you start that negotiation?

A. I didn't personally do that negotiating, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. How long had it been going on, to your knowledge?

A. I couldn't say now.

Q. Well, have you any judgment at all as to how many days or weeks or months any negotiations had been going on by anybody for the Donnelly Garment Company to have [fol. 3794] buses to haul your employees to and from work?

A. I couldn't tell you how long those negotiations were going on.

Q. Had it been as much as a month?

A. I say, of my own knowledge, I really haven't any idea.

Q. How did you know it had been going on at all when you made that speech? From whom did you get the information?

A. From Mr. Green and Mr. Bachofer.

Q. That they had been negotiating with the Kansas City Public Service Company for buses?

A. I don't know whether they are— Mr. Keyes may have. Some one of the executives there was doing the negotiating.

Q. When did you get the information with reference to the time you spoke to this meeting on March 18?

A. I really couldn't tell you now.

Q. Did you get it that day?

A. I say I couldn't tell you, Mr. Langsdale. I can't remember just what information came to me which day.

Q. You have no information at all, then?

A. I have not.

[fol. 3795] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. When did you establish some watchmen at your home, with reference to the 18th of March, 1937?

A. I believe it was that spring when there was so much violence going on, so much threatening going on.

Q. Was it before you went to Florida, or after you came back? A. I don't remember exactly.

Q. Do you have any recollection at all?

A. I really haven't any recollection exactly.

Q. And do you know the names of any of the watchmen that you had out there?

A. I know that Mr. Corbin was out there.

Q. Who else was out there?

A. I don't know the names of the others.

Q. Who is Mr. Corbin?

A. He is still a watchman in my plant.

Q. How long has he been a watchman in your plant?

A. Since he was watching out at my house.

Q. Is he still there? A. He is still there, yes.

Q. You employed him for that particular occasion, did you, and kept him? A. That is right.

Q. Has he any other duties, except those of a watchman?

A. I don't know. He may take care of certain—part [fol. 3796] of the cleaning up of some of the offices. I don't know; there is a possible chance that he has.

Q. A big part of what? Cleaning?

A. Yes, but at one time—oh, I remember years ago, the night we had—we had a night watchman in our plant for a great many years, and one night watchman, just one night watchman in the plant, and I have a slight remembrance that this night watchman cleaned or took care of two or three private offices that we have, but I don't know whether they still do that.

Q. Well, then, was he somewhat of a janitor?

A. No, we called him a night watchman.

Q. Why did you pay him as much salary as you did?

A. Mr. Corbin?

Q. Yes.

A. I suppose that that was what we were expected to pay him. They worked 12 hours, and I think we sort of paid them by the hour.

Q. Where did you get him?

A. I didn't personally employ those watchmen. My remembrance is that there was some discussion with the police department for recommendations.

Q. Did you get him through the Pinkerton Detective Agency? A. Not that I know of.

[fol. 3797] Q. Who is Mr. Eckert?

A. Mr. Eckert is another man that was employed as a watchman.

Q. What were his other duties?

A. My remembrance of Mr. Eckert was that he was always a watchman. He was one of the ones employed to stay in the lobby and watch while all the violence was going on.

Q. Well, when did you first employ him?

A. Sometime in that spring. Now, Mr. Eckert, I recall, had, years before, been employed by us to watch our pay roll when we used to pay by cash. We had a little pay roll girl go through the plant, and we had two guards to go along with her; and then there were so many pay roll holdups, we decided even though we had guards someone might be shot, so we decided to pay by check, and then we didn't have the guards any more.

Q. Well, when did you first employ Mr. Eckert, if you know?

A. Well, it was back when we were in the Coca Cola Building, because that was when we paid by cash.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3798] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. And he has been with you ever since? A. Oh, no.

Q. Mr. Eckert? A. No.

Q. Is he employed by you now?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. He was employed in 1937, was he not?

A. That was when he was employed to watch, in 1937; I don't think he has worked for us—

* * * * * *

[fol. 3799] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. He was not continuously employed from 1937 up until now?

A. No, not up until now; I don't want any misunderstanding about that.

Q. I want you to give your answer.

A. Because, Mr. Eckert, I know, was employed by the Pinkerton Detective Agency, but he never worked for us as a detective, he worked for us as a guard for our pay roll.

Q. Well, why did you pay him over $200.00 a month to just act as a guard?

A. I don't know that we did pay him over $200.00 a month. I don't know how much we paid him, but I know we paid by the hour, and those men worked, I think, 12 hours. I don't think a detective has to be paid more than a guard, anyhow, do they? I never heard of it.

Q. The amount of their wages is governed by the character of their work, isn't it?

A. I don't know anything about detectives. I never hired one in my life.

Q. You got Mr. Eckert through the Pinkerton Detective Agency?

A. Originally we hired him as a guard, through the Pinkerton Detective Agency.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3800] Mr. Langsdale: Now, the record pay roll offered in this hearing shows that in 1937 Mr. Eckert was paid $225.00 a month.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3801] Mr. Langsdale: That is the particular pay roll period from July 1st, 1937, to July 15th, 1937, and shows Mr. Eckert was paid $112.50 for that particular period; that would be $225 a month, would it not?

A. Well, I didn't know until this minute he was paid that much; I don't know why he was paid that much; I didn't make the arrangements with him.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You didn't employ him? A. I did not.

Q. Wouldn't it occur to you that, just for a salary, that is some salary?

A. Except they may have put in a lot of hours, and they had to pay overtime for it.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3803] Q. Mrs. Reed, you have testified you told Mr. Baty to take away from the instructors any authority they had as supervisors, or to correct or direct the oper-[fol. 3804] ators, because it had been charged in the N.R.A. hearing that those instructors played favorites, and treated some of the girls better than others, is that correct?

A. I didn't tell him to take any directing away they could do.

Q. But any authority to criticize or—

A. (Interrupting) I did. I told him that I had been surprised while I was listening to something in the N.R.A. hearing, that these criticisms had been made; I didn't say that I thought they were unfair; I didn't think Mrs. Wherry was unfair to the girls.

Q. You deny that any of your instructors had been unfair to any of the operators, in the N.R.A. hearing, don't you?

A. I still think they were not unfair; I think it was not a fair charge, but the charge had been made, and I thought it would be a good idea for him to take the authority himself. He would have nothing else to do but be in the plant; originally when I was running the plant, I had other things to do, and while she was running the plant, she had many other things to do, and now he would have nothing else to do, and certainly when these little differences came up, it wouldn't be better for him to settle them, and then there would be the charge that these instructors, or Mrs. Wherry, or someone else was playing favorites.

[fol. 3805] Q. Well, you didn't believe any of these charges, did you? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Nevertheless, you changed the entire system in your plant as to the authority of instructors?

A. I don't believe there is any reason for me to be in this Courtroom today, but I am here; sometimes we have to stand it, whether it is right or is not, if some people think certain things.

Q. But when you made the change, you weren't in any Courtroom, were you?

A. I was not, but I had been in what was like a Courtroom, I had been in a room in the hearing, where I was questioned, where I heard our instructors questioned as if they were criminals.

Q. And despite the fact that you didn't believe it, you acted upon those charges by taking the authority away from the instructors?

A. As a matter of protection to the instructors. At the time the N.R.A. hearing was over, my instructors and Mrs. Wherry were in a very unhappy and nervous condition, and I thought if there was to be any protection, I would say, "Now, Mr. Baty, you go in there and take charge of that plant."

Q. So, on account of that condition of nervousness, jitters, you just took all authority away from them?

[fol. 3806] A. I told Mr. Baty to take the responsibility away from them.

Q. Why did you do that, Mrs. Reed?

A. I just thought that would protect them.

Q. Protect whom? A. From criticism.

Q. The instructors? A. The instructors.

Q. From whose criticism?

A. From the criticism we were having at the time from the I.L.G.W.U.

Q. And because the I.L.G.W.U. was criticizing your instructors, you took all the authority away from them, is that correct?

A. I took the—I told the I.L.G.W.U.—now, wait a minute, let—

. . . . . .

A. That is the reason I took it away from them.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. What was the reason?

A. I expect to protect them from criticism.

Q. From whom? A. From anybody.

Q. Well, who besides the I.L.G.W.U.?

[fol. 3807] A. I didn't know at the time but what other girls in the place may be criticizing them.

Q. Did you have any reason except the criticism from the I.L.G.W.U. to take the authority away from those instructors, in July of 1935?

A. I thought maybe it would be a little better set-up in the plant.

Q. In what way?

A. Well, the authority would be in one person, and there would be less chance of dissatisfaction.

Q. Dissatisfaction with whom?

A. Between the girls.

Q. And so, then, you did believe that there was dissatisfaction among your operators, about the conduct of your instructors?

A. I don't believe that the instructors were unfair; if I had believed that, I would have discharged the instructors.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3812] Q. Now, up to the time of that N.R.A. hearing, you were perfectly satisfied with the system that was being used in the Donnelly Garment Company plant, as to your instructors?

A. Mr. Langsdale, I have never been perfectly satisfied with anything that was done in the Donnelly Garment Company; I always thought we should do it better.

Q. Well, but you hadn't made any change in it for a number of years?

A. No, it had just gone along for a number of years.

Q. And your system was as Mrs. Reeves testified in that hearing, up to the time of that hearing, wasn't it?

A. She had been running the plant for several years, and that was the way she was running it.

Q. Yes. Now, you said that in 1940, in November or December, you went back to that system?

A. I didn't say I went back to that system. I found that it was not practical to have the instructors feel that they had no responsibility at all; as for the operators, I think they went to an extreme in just turning the entire responsibility over to Mr. Baty.

[fol. 3813] Q. So, finding the system you had put into operation in July, 1935, was not working, you went back to the system that you had before you put that change in?

A. I just answered that question, and said I didn't just go back—I didn't say we were going to go back to the system that was here prior to 1935.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You did give the instructors, in the winter of 1940, the authority to run their sections and get the work out, didn't you?

A. I told them they had to take the responsibility of getting the work through the plant, through their section, and they told me then that if that was the case, they would have to be given the authority to say to the girl that she must do certain work.

Q. Well, you gave them that authority then, did you?

A. I told them what authority would be required would be given to them, and I would talk it over with Mr. Baty and see what we would think they would have to do.

[fol. 3814] Q. And the authority was given to them, was it?

A. Well, you say the authority was given to them; what do you mean by "the authority"?

Q. The authority they demanded or wanted.

A. The authority to say what work each girl should do was given to them, although from a practical standpoint down there, yet, if a girl does not want to do the work that the instructor tells her to do, she can, and I believe at times does, call Mr. Baty, to see if she has to do it.

Q. Do you know of any instance at all when any girl ever refused to do what the instructor told her to do, and Mr. Baty was called in?

A. I haven't gone into the details to that extent.

Q. Can you give us just one instance, one girl, one time?

A. No. I know this, Mr. Langsdale, that I had reports of work staying—one cut of work staying in a section as long as five weeks.

Q. I am not asking you that. I am asking you—

A. (Interrupting) Well, I am explaining, that cut would stay in there five weeks, and when I asked why that stayed that long, then the instructor would say, "Well, I can't get anyone to do operation No. 7, and there was plenty other work to do; there was other work she wanted to do and we just kept putting new work in, plenty of work to work on."

Mr. Langsdale: Mrs. Reed—

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3815] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Reed, the question is, can you give us the name of one girl or one incident where a girl refused to do work directed by an instructor; do you personally know of one incident?

A. I haven't any personal knowledge of the exact people or whether that exact thing would come up, except in a general way, and I don't know whether a girl would absolutely refuse, but I believe that a lot of times an instructor simply took the easiest way, and if the girl didn't want to do it, and there was other work there she did want to do, she did that work.

Q. Mrs. Reed, your answer is, then, that you can't give us one incident by naming a girl or time or place or section or instructor, is that right?

A. I would have no knowledge of that myself, I didn't go into it to that extent.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3816] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed, I think you testified that the first knowledge you had of a petition signed by a large number of employees, which has been called the Loyalty petition, was when it was brought out to your home by two girls?

A. I never heard the petition that was brought to my home called "the Loyalty petition." This is the first time I have heard that.

Q. You didn't know that was the term that was used to describe it all through the other hearing?

A. I did not.

Q. You know what petition I am referring to, do you not?

A. The petition that was brought to my home, I know what it was, yes.

Q. And you know it was signed by several people?

A. A large group. I didn't know how many.

Q. Do you know how they got those signatures?

A. I do not. My impression, gained from the two girls who brought the petition to my home, was that they had circulated the petition, but nobody ever told me just how they did it or any of the details about it.

[fol. 3817] Q. Where did you learn that they had circulated that petition?

A. At my home, when they brought it out to me.

Q. Where did they circulate it?

A. I don't know where they circulated it. The petition had the names of people in my plant on it.

Q. Did you make any inquiry as to where they had circulated it? A. I did not.

Q. When did they circulate it?

A. I wasn't told, but my impression was that they did it the day they brought it out.

Q. Now, that had about 1,000 signatures. Was it your impression that they did that in one day, these two girls?

A. I didn't inquire, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Did you learn they had gone from machine to machine and had the girls sign this petition?

A. I never inquired how they got it.

Q. Did you know they did that during working hours?

A. I just didn't inquire about that petition, how or when they got it signed. They brought it out to me on the evening of March 2nd.

Q. Did you learn that three girls had refused to sign it?

A. No.

Q. Did you hear that Sylvia Hull was one of those who refused to sign it?

[fol. 3818] A. The girls didn't tell me anyone had refused to sign it.

Q. Did you ever learn that three girls refused to sign it, at any time?

A. I don't know when I learned it, whether it was in some of these cases, or when. I have some recollection that some girls did refuse to sign it.

Q. Did you learn that one of them was Sylvia Hull?

A. My impression is that she was one of them.

Q. Did you learn the names of the other two?

A. I am not [not] absolutely sure. It seems to me it was Fern Sigler and May Fike. I am not absolutely sure.

Q. Did you learn that, after refusing to sign this petition, Sylvia Hull then did sign it? A. No.

Q. And that Ella Mae Hyde had erased her name from it?

A. No. I don't know the details of that petition.

Q. Did you ever hear that Ella Mae Hyde assumed the authority to take her name off that petition?

A. No, not of my own knowledge.

Q. Did you ever learn it at all, from any source?

Mr. Ingraham: She stated she didn't.

Mr. Langsdale: She said, not of her own knowledge.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. I am asking you if you ever learned from any source that Ella Mae Hyde took Sylvia Hull's name off the petition after she had signed it?

[fol. 3819] A. No. I have some faint recollection that someone told her to take it off, or that she took it off herself, but I couldn't say who told her, or whether she took it off herself, or—

Q. Your information on that is very hazy, is it?

A. It is.

Q. Did you say to these girls that you wanted them to go back and get names of employees who had not signed it?

A. I did not, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Did you say that to anybody at all? A. I did not.

Q. Who were the girls who came to your house?

A. Mary Sprofera and Inez—I can't think of her name. Her name escapes me at the moment. I know it, but—

Mr. Ingraham: Inez Warren.

A. Inez Warren, that's right. Just for the instant the name escaped my memory.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You never did tell Mrs. Warren or the young woman who was with her that you wanted them to go back and get the names of any person or persons who had not signed that petition? A. I did not.

Q. Do you know how they happened to do it?

A. I do not.

Q. Did you learn they did get another petition on the 5th of March?

[fol. 3820] A. I learned that another petition, another page, was gotten up later.

Q. And you don't know why that was done?

A. No.

Q. You had nothing to do with it?

A. I had nothing to do with it, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. You say that it happened that Roy Roberts was out at your home? A. Yes.

Q. When these girls came out?

A. No, they were not there.

Q. After they had left, I believe? A. Yes.

Q. And he suggested that it might be front page news?

A. That is what he said.

Q. And told you he would like to have them come out again so that he could have a photographer there?

A. Yes.

Q. How did they get there again?

A. I don't remember.

Q. How did you convey that information to them?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you do it at all? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Who did?

[fol. 3821] A. I don't know whether Mr. Roberts did or—

Q. You didn't give Mr. Roberts —

Mr. Reed: Let her finish the answer.

A. (Continuing) —or whether I told Miss Frances that Mr. Roberts wanted them to come out. I didn't do it myself.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. But, at any rate, you got the information to the girls that Mr. Roberts wanted them?

A. I didn't say I got the information to the girls.

Q. Well, did you?

A. I said I didn't know whether Mr. Roberts called there or whether someone, through me, called there. I know that they did come out and that the Star had a photographer and, I believe, a reporter— I'm not sure—there.

Q. And you don't know how or through whom the girls got the information that they were wanted out there again?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Were you in the garden when the girls came out the first time, or were you talking to Mr. Baty in the house?

A. My remembrance is that Mr. Baty and I had been working that day on the building we intended building.

Q. Your recollection is that you were not out in the garden when the girls got there? A. Not that evening.

Q. I mean when the girls got out there with this petition.

A. I may have been the next day when they came out. [fol. 3822] I am not sure.

Q. My question is confined to the time the girls arrived at your home first with the petition.

A. I couldn't have been when they came the first time, because it was in the evening.

Q. Then, you were not in the garden?

A. Not the first time they came.

Q. Do you know who gave the girls authority to go through the plant, from machine to machine, and have these employees sign?

A. I don't know that they were ever given the authority.

Q. Do you think they just did it on their own, without any suggestion from anyone in authority?

A. It would be the perfectly natural thing for them to do in the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Would you think that is true?

A. I would think it is very possible, knowing the way the Donnelly Garment Company is run.

Q. Two or three girls just took some petitions and went from machine to machine and had them signed, without any of the management knowing anything about it?

A. I wouldn't say without anybody knowing anything about it, but I would say it would be perfectly possible for two girls to take a petition and start out, without asking anybody about it, and having it signed in the plant.

[fol. 3823] Q. What was Inez Warren's job?

A. My remembrance is she was in the shipping department.

Q. What did she do in the shipping department?

A. Helped assemble orders.

Q. Who was head of the shipping department at that time? A. Mr. Keyes.

Q. Would she have to get Mr. Keyes' permission to leave her place of employment and go through the plant getting names on the petition?

A. Knowing my people down there, I am sure they wouldn't feel they had to get permission—

Q. Well, would she, Mrs. Reed, if you know?

A. There was no rule to that effect.

Q. And who was the other girl? A. Mary Sprofera.

Q. Was she in the shipping department, too?

A. Yes.

Q. And there was a third girl, was there—Shawder? Do you have a girl by that name?

A. Pauline Shartzer, I believe.

Q. Shartzer? A. Yes.

Q. What did she do?

A. She had something to do with getting some of the petitions signed, because she came out with them the [fol. 3824] next day for the picture. She wasn't with them the night they brought it out.

Q. What was her employment at the plant?

A. A pay roll clerk.

Q. Was her place of employment on the same floor with the other two girls? A. No.

Q. What floor was her place of employment on?

A. I am sure she was on the tenth floor.

Q. What was the place of employment of the other two girls?

A. In the shipping department.

Q. What floor?

A. I don't know whether the shipping department was on the fifth or fourth floor then. We have moved it now. Either the fifth or the fourth floor.

Q. Do you know how these two shipping department girls got together with Pauline Shartzer on the petition job? A. No, I do not.

Q. You have never heard? A. No.

Q. Who was head of the department Pauline Shartzer worked in? A. What date would that be?

Q. March 2, 1937.

A. Well, I would say that Mrs. Keyes was in charge of the office.

[fol. 3825] Q. Would it have been necessary for Pauline Shartzer to get Mrs. Keyes's permission to leave her place of employment long enough to get 1,000 names on these petitions? A. I merely say—

Q. I am asking you about this girl.

A. From my information of the way the Donnelly Garment Company was and is run, a girl wouldn't hesitate to get up and go out to get some petitions signed.

Q. Would she have the right to go out a whole day to do it?

A. Well, if— I wasn't running the department there—

Q. Would you have approved of her going around and getting these petitions signed and taking a whole day?

* * * * * * *

Mr. Reed: There is no evidence that she took a day.

Mr. Langsdale: I am going to assume it would have taken a day to get 1,000 names signed.

Mr. Langsdale: On that assumption, would you have approved of that?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3826] A. I know we had week workers that would go out and have their hair done and—

* * * * * * *

Mr. Langsdale: Would you have approved of these three girls taking the time necessary to go through the [fol. 3827] plant to get 1,000 names on that petition?

A. I don't know what I would have approved if something would have come up to me at the time and I would have passed on it, Mr. Langsdale. I don't know whether I would or not.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you ever disapprove of their taking the time necessary to get these petitions signed?

A. I don't know what good it would have done.

Q. Did you ever?

A. It was never brought up for me to decide. A lot of things go on down at the place that I never decide whether I approve or disapprove of.

Q. Did you ever disapprove of it?

A. I said the decision was never brought to me.

Q. That wasn't the question. Did you ever approve [fol. 3828] it or disapprove it, Mrs. Reed?

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you take any action at all with respect to this petition after you received it?

A. No.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3835] Q. You testified in the Judge Miller hearing, didn't you? A. At the very end of the case.

Q. But you did testify?

A. At the very end of the case, yes.

Q. And you knew that witnesses had testified in that hearing that in the March 18th speech you had said you would close your plant before you would have a union in there, didn't you?

A. Well, I am under the impression that they testified to that.

Q. Well now, you did not tell Judge Miller you had Mrs. Strine there to take down your speech, did you?

A. I did not. Mr. Walsh would hardly let me answer a question. He said it was immaterial, and all of the other legal phrases. Every time I started to say anything about that speech Mr. Walsh would object.

Q. Were you asked by your attorneys if Mrs. Strine [fol. 3836] had been there and taken down your speech?

A. No.

Q. So Mr. Walsh didn't object to that question, did he?

A. Mr. Walsh objected to practically everything I said, and I was very ostensibly ill, and Judge Miller kept saying he didn't need any more testimony, and nobody seemed to want to allow me to testify.

Q. You didn't testify to that, did you?

A. I wasn't asked about it.

Q. You were not asked by your own counsel whether or not you had had Mrs. Strine take down what you actually said at that meeting?

A. I don't know what he intended to ask me. I know Mr. Walsh kept objecting and objecting and—

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, Mrs. Reed, did your attorneys ask you that question?

Mr. Reed: The record is the best evidence of that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you remember whether they did ask you that question?

A. No. But I say, Mr. Walsh kept constantly objecting, and finally Judge Miller stopped the questioning.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, had you had it in your mind to tell Judge Miller about that Strine incident?

A. Mr. Langsdale, I was so ill when I was down there that I really didn't have any great amount of things in mind.

[fol. 3837] Q. Mrs. Strine wasn't ill at that time, was she?

A. I don't remember that she was.

Q. Did Mrs. Strine tell Judge Miller anything about being at that meeting and taking down your speech?

A. Mr. Langsdale, I was seriously ill all during that hearing and wasn't in court, and I wasn't consulted about the trial or the evidence they put in. I wasn't in consultation with the lawyers on any day while they were hearing that case. The only connection I had with the Miller case was the last day, when I went down to testify. There were one or two points the lawyers felt they wanted me to come in and testify on.

[fol. 3839] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, this article is dated February 26th, 1937. It is entitled, "Reopen a Garment Feud, Union Plants to Seek Donnelly Company Recognition. Regional Director says the International Headquarters will give Financial Backing to Campaign." When you read that article, did you talk to Mr. Baty after you read it?

A. I don't remember. I read so many articles, and I talked to so many different people.

Q. Well, did Mr. Baty ever put in any pay increases without talking to you about it?

[fol. 3840] A. Oh, not very many.

Q. Did you know that on the next morning after this article came out, that Mr. Baty went down to the plant and put in a large number of pay increases?

A. If he did, I don't see that it would have any connection with that article.

Q. I am just asking you, if you know, whether or not he did.

A. Well, you say after he read that article he went down and did it?

Mr. Langsdale: Wait a minute. Will you read me my question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please.

(Question read by the reporter.)

Mr. Langsdale: Did you know that?

A. I knew that 1936 was the first good year we had after the depression started, and that in the spring we would very naturally, as soon as we knew we were going to have our spring business come on, we would naturally give raises, that is about the time we usually do, in February or March.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Reed, the question is, do you know the next day after this article appeared in the paper, that Mr. Baty did put in a large number of increases, in the plant; do you know that fact?

[fol. 3841] A. I don't [—] that was the next day after that article was in the paper, that a number of increases were put in, because any increases that were discussed with me were not discussed in any connection whatever, in any way, with Mr. Dubinsky.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You don't know that he did?

A. I don't know what date the raises were put into effect.

Q. But if he did put in a large number, he would have to talk with you about it?

A. Generally a large number, he would talk with me, and it would probably take a week or longer, but I know that he did not put in raises a day after that was in the paper. He couldn't have possibly gone over them with me, because when we put in raises, we would take a whole group that he would select, and we would discuss them, so it would have taken longer than that. I never knew of him putting in a number of pay increases without discussing them with me, Mr. Langsdale.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3847] Trial Examiner Batten: I think, if you are going to start on another subject matter, Mr. Langsdale, I was going to have Mr. Ingraham to make his statement with respect to those exhibits he has checked up now, so that you will know through the noon hour, Miss Weyand, the status of them. So, Mr. Ingraham, will you —

Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) I thought Mr. Langsdale was about through.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, whether or not he is through, I want to be sure this is taken care of before lunch.

Mr. Ingraham: With regard to Board's Exhibit 32-A, B, C, D and E.

Trial Examiner Batten: You don't need to stay here, if you don't care to, Mrs. Reed.

The Witness: Thank you.

Mr. Ingraham: I wish to state that 32-A, B, C, and D is a separate document. It was mailed to the Wage and Hour Division by Respondent, on or about October 30, 1940. Exhibit 32-E is a separate document that was not attached to Exhibit 32-A, B, C and D, and was not filed until after December 29, 1940. Exhibit 33 is a document that was filed by Respondent company on December 20, 1940. At that date there was no schedule or any attached [fol. 3848] document to Exhibit 33.

These Exhibits are the Board's Exhibits.

Board's Exhibits 35-A, B, C and D is a document that was filed with the Wage and Hour Division on December 20th, 1940, by the Donnelly Garment Sales Company. Board's Exhibit 35-E is a separate document that was not attached to Board's Exhibit 35-A, B, C and D, and was not filed until after December 29, 1940, by the Donnelly Garment Sales Company.

Board's Exhibit 34-A, B, C and D, purports to be a copy of Board's Exhibit 33. It is on a different form, but had practically the same information that was in Board's Exhibit 33. Now, Board's Exhibit 34-E is a copy, a separate document, and was not attached to — or is a separate document and purports to be a copy of Board's Exhibit 32-E.

Now, I want to make it clear that Board's Exhibit 32-E and the copy of that exhibit, which is Board's Exhibit 34-E, was not a part of any of those other exhibits, and was not filed until December 29, 1940.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, was it, Mr. Ingraham, filed separately at the request of the Wage and Hour Division?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: And I think Miss Weyand asked if you had any correspondence on it. You have the letter — I mean, did the Wage and Hour Division request you in writing to furnish them?

[fol. 3849] Mr. Ingraham: No, I don't know of any letter. My understanding is that in December a representative of the Wage and Hour Division was checking, and was personally down at the plant and made this request, that this additional information be furnished.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, was it mailed in?

Mr. Ingraham: Then it was mailed in.

Trial Examiner Batten: Was it covered by a letter?

Mr. Ingraham: No, it was not covered by a letter.

Trial Examiner Batten: It was just mailed in as shown there, as 32-E?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I think the record ought to show, before we go much further, that 32-A to E has been received, and 33, 34 and 35 are merely marked for identification, so don't any of you get mixed up; in other words, 32-A to E has been received, 33, 34 and 35 according to my records have been marked for identification only. I didn't want anyone reviewing the record to get the impression, Mr. Ingraham, that these exhibits had all been received.

Mr. Reed: I beg pardon for interrupting, but my recollection is that Miss Weyand, particularly about 34, that is the copy, said that she offered it for whatever it is worth, and I think she offered the other exhibits.

[fol. 3850] Miss Weyand: I did not offer any of the exhibits following 35-A, B, C and D in evidence. I offered —

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) 32, you mean?

Miss Weyand: 32-A, B, C, D and E, that is correct. I presented Board's Exhibits 33, 34 and 35, and had them marked for identification only, and in connection with 34 I was having it identified merely as the document which I had received from the Wage and Hour Division, and knew nothing further than that they had given it to me as a copy of some original document, which they purported to have in their possession.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think we can proceed.

Miss Weyand: I would like to ask a further question.

Trial Examiner Batten: You hadn't finished, had you?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, I had.

Mr. Langsdale: Let me ask you this question, Bob. Are you saying 35-E is the same document as 32-E?

Mr. Ingraham: No.

Mr. Langsdale: I thought you did.

Mr. Ingraham: No.

Mr. Langsdale: 35-E purports to be a list of executives of the Donnelly Garment Sales Company, whereas 32-E purports to be a list of executives of the Donnelly Garment Company.

Trial Examiner Batten: 33-E is another list.

Mr. Ingraham: 34-E.

Trial Examiner Batten: 34-E is another list, Mr. Langs[fol. 3851] dale.

Mr. Tyler: 32-A to E, do I understand, has been received? Does that mean inclusive to 32-E?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Miss Weyand: They have been received in evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: That's right.

Mr. Reed: 32-E does not belong in that document.

Mr. Langsdale: That has been gone over several times.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, is that the information that you desire, Miss Weyand, on these exhibits?

Miss Weyand: Well, I wanted the further information of whether 32-E constituted a statement of the employees referred to in paragraph numbered in Roman numerals, VI, on Board's Exhibit 33-C for identification.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, now, Miss Weyand, are you offering 33 and 34?

Miss Weyand: No, I wanted to get straight first what relation there was, if any, between 32-E and the statement on 33-C, that the company had 29 employees, whom the firm considered exempt from the provisions of the Act, and I wanted to ask a similar question with respect to whether or not —

Trial Examiner Batten: Let us take one at a time.

Miss Weyand: Well, it is the same sort of question, it is a parallel.

Trial Examiner Batten: I know, but let's don't get [fol. 3852] too many in here at once.

Mr. Ingraham: I don't understand the purpose of asking a lot of questions and getting a lot of testimony in the record if Miss Weyand isn't going to offer these in evidence. I think she should offer them in evidence, and then ask me the questions.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think, Mr. Ingraham, I shall tell Miss Weyand to offer them. I don't think I would tell you if you had an exhibit marked for identification.

Mr. Langsdale: I'll offer them the first thing this afternoon, if you want them in.

Mr. Ingraham: We want them in.

Miss Weyand: I don't prefer to offer them until I know the circumstances under which they were furnished and what they purport to represent, and I have not yet learned whether 32-E is considered to be and was furnished as a statement of who the 29 employees referred to on Board's Exhibit 33-C were.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, as I understand it, and if I am not correct, Mr. Ingraham, you correct me —

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: 32-E was furnished, was it not, in connection with 33?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: And is that the list referred [fol. 3853] to in 33-C?

Mr. Langsdale: 32-C.

Mr. Ingraham: That is my understanding, Mr. Batten.

Mr. Langsdale: Don't you mean 32-C?

Trial Examiner Batten: No, 33-C.

Mr. Ingraham: 32-E at the top states, "Pursuant to your request of December 29th, the persons coming within the provision of the second part of paragraph six in the questionnaire as at December 20th, 1940, are as follows," and it is my understanding that this is a list of the people that —

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Are referred to on 33-C.

Mr. Ingraham: That's right. I'll check them again.

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, if that is not correct, you will let us know?

Mr. Ingraham: That is right.

Miss Weyand: Then, I want to know if Board's Exhibit 35-E for identification was a list of persons whom the firm considered as being exempt from the provisions of the Act, as set forth in 35-C, the Donnelly Sales Company, as distinguished from the Donnelly Garment Company —

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, 35-E, is that the list which is referred to in 35-C, in the body of the instrument?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, that is my understanding.

[fol. 3854] Miss Weyand: And you will check that so I can have it definitely stated?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Miss Weyand: Will counsel for the company agree with that identification, that your statements in the record will be sufficient, or will we be required to call some official in that company who participated in furnishing these documents, to identify them as the documents furnished?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, if there is any question about my statement, I would rather have you call the person who prepared the documents.

Miss Weyand: I am willing to rely on your statement that it is true, if counsel for the company is not going to insist there be any further identification, and not going to raise any question as to the validity or identity or the purpose of those documents. If counsel for the company are going to question further —

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, the whole question, Mr. Ingraham, is this. You have told us what they are and the circumstances under which they were furnished, and unless you notify us otherwise, 33-E and 35-E are in accordance with the statements you made?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, the only question is, may that statement of yours be accepted without any question [fol. 3855] on the part of the Respondent, or do you prefer that the person who made out these documents come up here and testify to something you have told us?

Mr. Reed: I think when counsel stands up here and makes a statement of fact, it becomes binding, and if it is agreed to by counsel of the other side it becomes a binding fact in the case. However, we can produce the man who carried on these negotiations, and made these papers, and in view of the fact there seems to be a mix-up here, some difference, I think we had better have him.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it is immaterial to me.

Mr. Langsdale: I am willing to accept Mr. Ingraham's statement.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you accept it?

Miss Weyand: Yes, I accept it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, all right. If your statement is accepted with respect to it, then it stands, and if any of the parties want to call anybody else, I am not trying to say you can't have further testimony.

Mr. Langsdale: Let me ask Mr. Ingraham this, if he knows, was any list furnished of the 49 executives described in the second paragraph of Paragraph six?

Miss Weyand: In Board's Exhibit 32-C?

Mr. Langsdale: Of Board's Exhibit 32-C. It says there were 49 employees whom your firm considers exempt from [fol. 3856] the provisions of the Act. Did you ever furnish the Wage and Hour Administration a list of those 49?

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Langsdale, I understand that 32-A, B, C and D was filed as a consolidated return for both Donnelly Garment Company and Donnelly Garment Sales Company.

Mr. Langsdale: It doesn't say so.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, it was; and the Wage and Hour Department wanted the companies separated, and came down and asked that separate returns be filed, and that was the reason that on December 20th, 1940, two new returns were filed, one for the Garment Company and one for the Sales Company, and they broke down these exempt employees, and placed them in the respective companies.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think there is anything further on this. We will adjourn until two o'clock.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, is Miss Weyand offering these in evidence?

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you offering them now, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: Yes, I offer them now in evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, is there any objection to the reception of 33, 34 and 35?

Miss Weyand: I don't offer 34. I offer 33 and 35.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if there is no objection, 33 and 35 will be received.

[fol. 3857] (The documents heretofore marked "Board's Exhibits Nos. 33 and 35, Witness Reed," for identification, were received in evidence.)

Mr. Ingraham: The Respondent would like to offer 34.

Trial Examiner Batten: Any objections?

Mr. Langsdale: What is it?

Miss Weyand: My copy.

Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no objection, it will be received. It is the copy which Miss Weyand had marked and from which she worked, Mr. Langsdale. Is there any objection, Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: Not from me, if Miss Weyand has no objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received.

(The document heretofore marked "Board's Exhibit No. 34, Witness Reed," for identification, was received in evidence.)

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3858] Miss Weyand: I think that, since the respondent introduced as their exhibit the document which I had previously had marked as Board's exhibit No. 34 for identification, they should have it marked with a respondent's exhibit number.

Trial Examiner Batten: Oh, I don't think that is necessary. The record will show that they offered it. It doesn't make a great deal of difference to me who puts the facts in the record, as long as we get them.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3859] Mr. Langsdale: Mrs. Reed, are you familiar with the handwriting of Lee Baty? A. Yes.

Q. I hand you a photostatic copy of Board's exhibit No. 31-A, and call your attention to the name "Lena Tyhurst."

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3860] By Mr. Langsdale:

(Handing document above referred to to the witness.) I call your attention to the name Lena Tyhurst, Mrs. Reed, which is right here (indicating).

A. That is right.

Q. Is that in Mr. Baty's handwriting?

A. I would say it is.

Q. You see what follows the name, over in the next column? A. Yes.

Q. What is it?

A. "Assistant factory manager."

Q. And the date of that is June 1—

A. —June 1, 1937. That was, I believe, before Mr. Baty took entire charge of the factory.

Q. Nevertheless, it is in his handwriting, isn't it?

A. He was assistant to Mrs. Reeves at that time. Mr. Baty was assistant to Mrs. Reeves for six months, but he was working in the plant for two years before he took over the job as manager of the plant.

[fol. 3861] Q. It was as Mrs. Reeves's assistant, then, that he wrote this, "Lena Tyhurst, assistant factory manager"? A. I would say so.

Q. At any rate, it is in his handwriting?

A. Yes, and he was her assistant at that time in the factory.

Q. I call your attention to the name "C. Marvin Price."

A. Yes.

Q. That is in Mr. Baty's handwriting? A. Yes.
Q. What follows that?
A. "Head machinist," "Head mechanic," I guess.
Q. "Head mechanic"? A. Yes.
Q. That is on the same document? This is Board's exhibit No. 31-A? A. That is right.
Q. I call your attention to the name "Ortense Root."
A. "Sample department head."
Q. That is in his handwriting?
A. Yes, it is, but Mrs. Reeves was managing the plant at that time.
Q. I call your attention to the name "Anna Price."

. . . . . .

[fol. 3862] By Mr. Langsdale:
Q. You see that name there, do you, Mrs. Reed?
A. Yes.
Q. What follows that?
A. It says "shipping clerk head."
Q. You have no information, have you, that Lena Tyhurst was not the assistant factory manager on June 1, 1937? A. I have no—

Mr. Ingraham: Now, just a minute. I object to Mr. Langsdale's questioning the witness from a paper that Mr. Baty prepared, and he testified in respect to the preparation of the paper, and how he happened to put these names after the respective people, and Mrs. Reed didn't have anything to do with the preparation of it and doesn't know—obviously can't know anything about why the certain [fol. 3863] titles are after these people's names.

. . . . . .

Mr. Langsdale: I asked you if you have any information that Lena Tyhurst was not in the position that she is described as here in the handwriting of Lee Baty on June 1, 1937?

[fol. 3864] A. Mr. Langsdale, I have said over and over and over again here that while Mrs. Reeves and Mr. Baty were managing the factory I had no knowledge of my own of the details of how they did it and what they called the people who are in the plant.

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is this: Do you have any information that Lena Tyhurst was not assistant factory manager on this date as described on this document by Mr. Baty?

A. I have no information, of my own knowledge, of what she was called on that date.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Have you any information at all from any source that C. Marvin Price was not the head mechanic on June 1, 1937? A. The answer would be the same.

[fol. 3865] Q. Have you any information of any kind or character that Ortense Root was not the sample department head on June 1, 1937?

A. My answer would be the same in regard to Ortense Root.

Q. Have you any information that Anna Price was not the shipping clerk head on June 1, 1937?

A. I have no that information. I never made up a pay roll, I never checked over a pay roll, and I never checked over any working papers Mrs. Reeves or Mr. Baty had in regard to these people.

Q. I will hand you a copy of Board's exhibit No. 27, Mrs. Reed, and ask you if in your readings you came across that article?

[fol. 3866] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You read it, apparently?

A. I would say that I have, I did.

Q. It is an article in the Kansas City Times of May 11, 1937, and purports to quote a speech made of Senator Reed, or an interview.

Mr. Reed: Are you offering it?

Mr. Langsdale: No, it has been offered in evidence.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. This particular part, Mr. Reed said, "It's a pretty tough proposition to be called on to answer any screed emanating from David Dubinsky. He has the nerve to talk about Americanism, although he was born in Russia and has only been in this country a few years." Did you read that? A. Yes.

Q. Did you call your employees' attention to it?
A. I did not.
Q. Did you make any similar statement yourself?
A. I did not.
Q. Mr. Reed was then your attorney? A. He was.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3869] Q. "One question—" this is quoting again [fol. 3870] from the interview—"one question that will have to be settled is whether the people of Kansas City can run their own business and the 1,300 employees of the Donnelly Garment company can maintain their own union, or whether they are to be disrupted and destroyed by a man born in a foreign country and now living hundreds of miles away from Kansas City." Do you share that opinion?

Mr. Reed: If Your Honor please, I have no objection, as far as I am concerned, if this article goes in there.

Mr. Langsdale: It is already in.

Mr. Reed: Very well; the question is as to whether she shared an opinion I expressed, and has nothing whatever to do with this case, or the charges here filed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she may at least tell us whether she shares those views.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you think it made any difference whether Dubinsky was born in Russia? A. No.

Q. Did you agree with Senator Reed, because he was born in Russia he ought to stay away from the Donnelly Garment Company's plant?

A. I have no feeling about whether he was born in Russia, or Turkey, or where he was born.

Q. Now, let's see if you remember this, quoting from the interview: "The employees of this company aren't only satisfied but on their own motion some months ago organized a Loyalty League to resist the activities of Mr. [fol. 3871] Dubinsky and his crowd, and substantially all the employees became members of that association." Is that true?

A. I said of my own knowledge I didn't know a lot about the organization of the Loyalty League, Mr. Reed was giving that interview, I didn't give it.

Q. Well, did you tell him it was not true, or disapprove of it?

A. I didn't discuss that interview. Mr. Reed isn't in the habit of asking me about what he said in an interview.

Q. Was it true, as far as you knew, at the time he made the statement?

A. Mr. Langsdale, I have said, and it is really absolutely true, of my own knowledge I knew very little about what the Loyalty League was doing at the time it was organized, and around that time I was very pressed with other duties.

Q. Well, you read that, this interview, at the time it appeared in the Kansas City Times, on the 11th of May, 1937, didn't you?

A. What difference would it make? I read a number of interviews, I read a lot of things in the paper.

Q. Well, have you read this interview in which your chief counsel said that some months ago the employees of this company organized a Loyalty League to resist the activities of Mr. Dubinsky and his crowd? Did you ask him [fol. 3872] where he got that information?

Mr. Reed: Ask me?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

Mr. Reed: I think that is about the limit.

Mr. Langsdale: Did you make any investigation to see whether or not it was true?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. What is the objection, Senator? I mean, to the question; whether she discussed it—read the question, please.

Mr. Reed: I submit that that question probably never was asked before in a court of justice, to ask a man's wife where she got—state her opinion, whether she shares in her husband's opinion.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, perhaps I might not be qualified to speak about that, but I have heard of wives asking their husbands where they got information; whether they would on matters of this kind, Senator, I don't know.

A. Well, I'll settle it by saying I did not.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you make any investigation of the truthfulness of that statement at all?

A. I am not in the habit of checking up on Mr. Reed's interviews.

Q. Then, you just assumed it was true, did you? [fol. 3873] A. I didn't assume anything, I just read it; I don't remember any particular reaction to it.

Q. Did you make any investigation to see whether or not the Loyalty League was organized to resist the activities of Mr. Dubinsky and his crowd?

A. Well, I didn't; if they had, it probably would have been their own business.

Q. You didn't investigate it?

A. I did not investigate; I don't investigate what my employees are doing about Mr. Dubinsky.

Q. Then, this excerpt from the interview, I note that Dubinsky states that he would not get a graduate of Bolshevism to teach him a lesson in Americanism. Did you read that? A. I read that article.

Q. Did you permit your employees to think that Mr. Dubinsky was a Bolshevist or Communist?

A. I don't know whether my employees read that or not; it certainly is not my responsibility to check up on what my employees read and believe or don't believe.

Q. Did you check up on that statement that Mr. Dubinsky was a Bolshevist? A. I did not.

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed, you have already identified the originals of Exhibits 32-A, B, C, D and E, of which those [fol. 3874] are photostats?

Mr. Reed: She identified the signature of Alec C. Green on those documents. The statement that she identified or passed on the document is incorrect.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, will you, for the Senator's benefit, read the question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question, please.

(Question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think all that testimony was stricken out, was it not, except—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) The identification.

Trial Examiner Batten: (Continuing)—the identification and the signature.

A. They look like the photostats.

Mr. Langsdale: What ones? The ones that you saw the other day?

A. Of A, B, C—let's see who they are.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the original is here, is it not, Mr. Reporter? Here is the original 32-A, B, C, D, and E.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Maybe you had better look at this. I withdraw, for your examination, the photostats, and hand you the original exhibit, Board's Exhibit 32-A, B, C, D and E, and ask you if you saw those exhibits the other day when they were handed to you by Miss Weyand?

[fol. 3875] A. I did, but this insert (indicating) is still in the wrong place.

Q. Well, that isn't the question. You saw them, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. All right. You may just hold them and I will use these. Now, you were asked by Miss Weyand, this question with reference to this exhibit, 32-A, B, C, D and E:

"Question: Will you look at the exhibit, and tell me if you are acquainted with that document?"

And you answered:

"Answer: The filing of the document was discussed with me, I don't remember whether I just ever saw the document after it was completed."

A. That's right.

Q. You did look at it then, when she handed it to you?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you were asked this question:

"Question: You participated in the preparation of the document through discussion with the persons who actually typed it up, did you?

"Answer: I did."

[—] Is that true?

A. Not the person who typed it up, but the one who had it typed up.

[fol. 3876] Q. Well, the reporter has it here, "The person who actually typed it up."

A. I am sure I wouldn't have said that, because I didn't have anything to do with having it typed up.

Q. Do you think that answer, then, should be changed so it would read—

A. That would be correct, because I didn't have anything to do with the person who typed this up.

Q. Then, that would be some stenographer?

A. I would think a stenographer for Mr. Bachofer.

Q. Then, you were asked this question:

"Question: Does it represent a correct statement of the supervisory force of your company in November and December, 1940?

"Answer: I would say that it does."

Did you make that answer?

A. If it is in the record, I probably did.

Q. Well, anything wrong with that answer?

A. I think that this heading here directly tells what time this—

Q. (Interrupting) I am asking you if there is anything wrong with your answer to the question, "Does it represent a correct statement of the supervisory force of your company in November and December of 1940?

"Answer: I would say that it does."

[fol. 3877] A. Well, I think Miss Weyand put that answer in my mouth, is what I would say.

Q. Well; do you want to change the answer?

A. Well, certainly; I think this paper here has a heading telling when it refers to. I don't know why she wanted to put in November and December, but the heading here is very expressive of just what it purports to be.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question to you is, do you want to change this answer.

A. I say, it would be correct to leave it, as the heading of this insert specifies, that is the correct time.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, does Exhibit 32-E represent a correct statement of the supervisory force of your company in November and December, 1940?

A. It simply says it would be the 20th—of my own knowledge I wouldn't know just what date this—whether it was in November and December—however, when a responsible person from my plant comes out and makes a statement and says it was December 20th, then I say it was December 20th.

Q. Were you looking at the statement when you answered the question?

A. I don't know whether I was or not.

Q. Well, it very plainly—

A. (Interrupting) I was confused by this date in front of me, being October 30th, these papers all being put [fol. 3878] together incorrectly confused me, Mr. Langsdale.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Reed, the question was, were you looking at the date on top of Board's 32-E when you answered this question.

A. I may have been looking at the date, October 30th.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You were asked this specific question:

"Question: Does it represent a correct statement of the supervisory force of your company in November and December, 1940."

And you said:

"Answer: I would say that it does."

Now, did you make that answer without looking at the statement?

A. I probably did.

Q. You think you did?

A. I don't know, but I know I was confused by these statements being put together in the wrong dates; this October 30th was — it was all something that came from the Government Board, and I was confused.

Q. Well, do you know whether you were looking at the statement when you answered the question as to whether or not it correctly represented your supervisory force?

A. I don't know whether I was or not.

Q. Is there anything about your answer that you would [fol. 3879] say is wrong?

A. I would say that the best answer on that would be to take this paper, that is made out by a reliable person, and sent in to a Government — oh, I don't know what they call them.

Mr. Reed: Department.

A. (Continuing) — department, as an actual fact, that it would be better than my memory.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, is there anything wrong with your answer, that that list correctly represents your supervisory force for November and December, 1940?

A. I would say that this paper — this date would be more accurate in the way of telling it than just from my memory, because I didn't make these papers up; I didn't keep in mind a certain date; I have people down there, and it is their job to do it.

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed, I am going to keep asking the question until I get a direct answer, unless the Examiner tells me to desist. Does that list represent correctly your supervisory force for November and December, 1940?

Mr. Reed: I submit that the statement itself shows to the contrary. It is dated December 20th, the slip is, and it is made as of December 29th, if I remember right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. I don't see anything inconsistent about the question, and the question [fol. 3880] to the witness is, does that list represent a correct list of the supervisory force during November and December, 1940, in the plant, if this witness knows, without any reference to this exhibit, Senator.

A. Well, of my own knowledge of an exact date, I wouldn't know.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, why did you say you did know? You said, "I would say that it does."

A. Well, she hands me a paper here dated October 30th, and it is a very legal looking paper, and signed by people from my company that I have confidence in their honesty and integrity, and I also think a Government Board would have their papers straight, and I say the way this was handed to me confused me, and an answer was put in my mouth. With me looking at this December 20th, and then looking back here at this October 30th, I was confused.

Q. But, Mrs. Reed, you weren't asked that question. You were asked if that list is a correct statement of your supervisory force in November and December, 1940, and you said that you would say that it does. Now, did the way she handed that document to you mislead you into making a false answer?

A. It did — not a false answer, but an incorrect answer. I wouldn't make a false answer that I know of, Mr. Langsdale, any place.

[fol. 3881] Q. Then, your answer was based entirely upon that October 30th date, you say, and not from any information you yourself have, is that right?

A. That is right, I was confused by those two dates.

Q. And you don't have any information except what you saw on that document, is that correct?

A. I had no specific information. These changes that were made were all discussed with me, but I didn't personally put them into effect, and I don't know on just which date they were put into effect, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Well, let me ask you this, was Nell Quinlan Reed president of the company in November and December, 1940?

A. I was.

Q. Was Lee Baty factory manager at that time?

A. He was.

Q. Was John B. Bachofer Controller at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Mr. C. W. Howard head of the New York Office at that time?

A. He was.

Mr. Ingraham: What date is that?

Trial Examiner Batten: It isn't making any reference to the exhibit, as I understand it.

Mr. Langsdale: No.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Was Elizabeth Reeves merchandise manager in [fol. 3882] November and December, 1940?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Beulah Spilsbury chief of designing department?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Ella Mae Hyde personnel manager in Noyember and December, 1940?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Ted Scoles supervisor, cutting department?

A. Now, he is one of the ones that the change was made on this December 20th.

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed, are you now willing to swear he wasn't supervisor of the cutting department in November and December, 1940?

A. I would swear that a supervisor, as we meant it in this instrument, he was not a supervisor in November, 1940, as we meant it in this instrument.

Q. I am not talking about as you meant it in that instrument. Was he supervisor of the cutting department in November and December, 1940?

A. Well, I say as we meant it in that instrument.

Q. How do you know what was meant in that instrument? You didn't get it up.

A. No, I didn't, but I know those supervision jobs were put into effect after we got our budget system up.

Q. You had a budget system long before that document [fol. 3883] was handed to you?

A. Yes.

Q. You had a budget system long before you talked to Mr. Bachofer, wherein you detailed the persons who were supervisors?

A. I didn't get that question.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Reed, in this hearing several days before you ever saw Board's Exhibit 32, you told us that Mr. Bachofer had prepared some sort of a budget and called your attention to the fact some departments were loosely run.

A. That is right.

Q. Now, I think that is Mr. Langsdale's question.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Didn't you say that was done in the latter part of November or the first part of December, 1940?

A. He discussed the budget with me.

Q. Didn't you say that was when you made the change?

A. No.

Q. You didn't say that in this hearing before you were shown that document?

A. I said I discussed the budget with Mr. Bachofer, but I didn't say when Mr. Bachofer put the budget into effect.

Q. Let's get you right. You say you didn't say you made the changes in the latter part of November, or the [fol. 3884] early part of December, 1940?

A. I wouldn't be able to say, because I didn't make them personally.

Q. Do you know when they were made?

A. I don't know exactly when they were made.

Q. Was Marvin Price the supervisor of the building maintenance in November and December, 1940?

A. No.

Q. Why do you say he was not?

A. Because I know that the first group of people that we had that were supervisors, or executives, which were asked for as exempted from the Wage and Hour Act merely included the top executives and the salesmen, and people that were considered professional people, and I believe that number was 49.

Q. Well, aren't these among the 49?

A. Some of them are.

Q. Aren't they all among the 49?

A. No.

Q. Which ones aren't among the 49?

A. Ted Scoles, Marvin Price, Lyle Jeter, Ella Brown, Florence Strickland, Martha Gray, Rose O'Leary, Pauline

Hartman, Harlan Justus, Helen Hauser, Betty Belter — I am not sure about Hilda — no, I am sure about Hilda.

Q. What about Dewey Atchison, assistant factory manager?

[fol. 3885] Mr. Reed: Let her answer the question.

Mr. Langsdale: She is skipping those names, Senator.

A. The first time that I, of my own knowledge, knew that Dewey was having any managerial work was when we began to put in some line production, and it was his own idea, and I said that we ought to hold him responsible for it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, was he one of the 49, Dewey Atchison?

A. I don't know. He hasn't been considered down there, more in the — he would be classed professional, because he has always been a special worker.

Q. Well, you never did class him in the class of a professional executive, did you?

A. Well, Dewey is one of these people who are difficult to classify, he has been an individual worker there for a good many years, until we got this line system going; to my knowledge, now, until we got to doing some special — certain special kind of work in there, to my knowledge, I didn't hold him responsible for any really managing job.

Q. Well, was Dewey Atchison assistant factory manager in November and December of 1940?

A. I don't know exactly when he was put in as assistant to the factory manager, but it may have been —

Q. (Interrupting) You saw the pay roll which Mr. [fol. 3886] Baty described him as assistant manager in December, 1937?

A. That was Mrs. Reeves, and he was assisting Mrs. Reeves, and I didn't know until I saw that, that he was called assistant factory manager.

Q. As long ago as June, 1937, he was described by Mr. Baty as assistant factory manager, wasn't he?

A. Well, that would be in June, 1935, that he was being —

Q. (Interrupting) 1937.

A. I thought that paper was dated June, 1935.

Q. Do you want to see it again?

[fol. 3887] Q. You say the date here is June 1, 1937, Mrs. Reed? (Handing Board's exhibit No. 6 to the witness.)

A. Is Dewey's name on there as factory manager?

Q. Dewey Atchison— I don't believe it is. I think that is one on me.

A. I think you will find that paper was dated June 1935, when Mrs. Reeves was in charge of the plant, Mr. Langsdale.

Trial Examiner Batten: Board's exhibit No. 6, that was— a photostatic copy, I believe.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't believe his name is on this list.

(Addressing Miss Weyand) You take the list and see if it is there. (Handing Board's exhibit No. 6 to Miss Weyand.)

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. But in 1935 he was assistant to the factory manager, was he not?

A. Mrs. Reeves called him that, but not to my knowledge. I had no personal knowledge of it.

Q. Well, he was one of the "big 4" who were meeting to see who should be fired and who kept working?

A. He has always been consulted on the kind of work to put through, what kind of machines to use, how many machines we had, and how much work we had from our orders for those machines, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. And to see who should be fired and who should be kept working?

A. Well, his—

[fol. 3888] Q. Now, wasn't that his duty in June 1937?

A. Wait, now,— Let me tell you. I know what Dewey has done. He has worked for me for a long time. We have depended on Dewey for information about the machinery we have to do certain work. He has also, at different times, compiled from our orders how much work of certain types we had, so that we could match it up with machines. But Dewey's help has always been from ideas instead of any managing responsibility.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, I thought this morning, in that old N. R. A. record—wasn't he one of the four that were mentioned as passing upon the people?

A. I am saying they would get his opinion and— The reason they would get his opinion, Mr. Batten, was to see how much—if we had a lot of double-stitching to do, he would be the one to know it and—

Q. Irrespective of what they got his opinion on, he was one of the four, was he not, Mrs. Reed?

A. But his opinion was always on the work.

Q. Whatever his opinion was on, he was one of the four mentioned by Mrs. Reeves, wasn't he, when she said they always got the opinion of these four people before they did anything?

A. That is right. But I am trying to say, Mr. Batten, the reason his opinion would be worth something was because of his knowledge of how much of a specific kind of work we had to get through and how many machines we [fol. 3889] had to do it with, and from that point of view.

Q. Well, of course, I didn't ask you why he is there.

A. I think you ought to let me explain.

Q. Mrs. Reed, I have no objection to your explaining. My only question to you was, was he one of the four mentioned this morning?

A. But it seems to me you ought to let me explain. It wasn't that he had personal control over the woman who was on the job, but he could tell us how much work we had of a certain type that this woman could do. We didn't lay off any double-stitchers if we had—

Q. Mrs. Reed, I think you have explained that several times.

A. But it comes back all of the time, Mr. Batten, and it would seem that Dewey had control of managing the plant.

Q. No, we are not interested in managing the plant. We are interested in what these people did.

A. I am trying to explain it to you.

Q. Well, Mrs. Reed, you have already explained it several times. In fact, I think it was explained to Mr. Ingraham on direct examination and to Miss Weyand on cross-examination.

A. Well, Mr. Langsdale seems to want to know about it again.

Mr. Langsdale: I just don't want you to be confused about it, Mrs. Reed.

The Witness: I am not confused about Dewey. You are the one that is confused about Dewey.

[fol. 3890] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Didn't Mrs. Reeves testify:

"Nobody is let out of the Donnelly Garment Company unless four people pass on it."

Would you say that is true?

A. That was my general knowledge.

Q. Would you say this is true:

"Then that group of people are taken up with Mr. Atchison and Mr. Atchison discusses them very thoroughly and he sees what they have made and he knows the reasons about what happened each week because he analyzes each week our pay roll cards with the instructor and Mrs. Wherry."?

A. That wasn't my testimony, was it, Mr. Langsdale?

Q. I asked you if that was true. That was Mrs. Reeves's testimony.

A. I told you Mrs. Reeves was running the plant, and as to all of the details, I don't keep track of them. Now, she testified in that case that that was the way she handled it. She was in charge of the plant, and it was all right with me if that was the way she handled it.

Q. I asked you if it is true that that was the way she handled it?

A. Well, of my own knowledge, I don't know, because I didn't check up on her about it.

Q. Did you have any information at all that what Mrs. Reeves said was the system down there wasn't the system?

A. If she said it was the system she had there, I would [fol. 3891] say she would tell the truth about it.

Q. Mildred Francis was assistant to the president in November and December 1940, was she not?

A. Well, she—

Q. If she ever has been?

A. Well, she is.

Q. She is your secretary, isn't she?

A. She has been my secretary and now I consider her my assistant. She is doing many things for me. She has taken over certain things to do for me.

Q. Was Hilda Fitzgerald the chief of the designing department in November and December 1940?

A. She is head designer.

Q. She is described here (indicating exhibit) as "assistant to Chief of Designing." Is that correct or not?

A. That would be correct. Miss Spilsbury is the chief of the designing department.

Q. Was Fred Brown, in November and December, assistant to the cutting supervisor?

A. I know that these supervisory jobs were definitely put in effect on December 20, as it says here (indicating exhibit), because Mr. Bachofer told me that they were.

Q. Do you, then, say Hilda Fitzgerald was not assistant to the chief of the designing department in November and December 1940?

[fol. 3892] A. Well, no, I wouldn't say that.

Q. Do you say Fred Brown was not assistant to the cutting supervisor in November and December 1940?

A. I would say he was made that on December 20, because I have before me a paper that Mr. Bachofer got up, and it says he was made that on December 20.

Q. I don't think it says that, Mrs. Reed. It doesn't say you were made president on that date, does it?

A. No.

Q. It says—

A. Well, I know, of my own knowledge, in working with Mr. Bachofer, when he got up the budget system, we were going to put these people in a responsible position, and I know that before this budget system was put into effect Fred Brown was not considered in any supervisory capacity.

Q. Is there anything on that document that tells you when this budget system went into effect?

A. Well, the understanding I had with—

Q. I am asking you the specific question, is there anything on that document that says anything about any budget system?

A. This doesn't say anything about the budget system, but I know this budget system was to go into effect at the time this report was to be made to the Wages and Hours Division.

Q. Why do you pick on December 20 for the other executives, when you have been president for many years? [fol. 3893] A. Because I know I have been president for many years, and I know these supervisors were not considered supervisory until this budget system was put into effect.

Q. But you were telling this to the Wages and Hours administration, that you were president as of December 20, 1940?

A. They asked for a tabulation of the people that covered the form that was turned in to them December 20.

Q. That's it.

A. And this form included all of the executives who had always been executives, and also included the people to whom we had given supervisory powers under our budget system.

Q. Had Cecile Ealy been the assistant to the factory manager in November and December 1940?

A. No. She came in under the budget system.

Q. What budget system?

A. The budget system we put in our plant.

Q. And she wasn't assistant to the factory manager in November and December 1940?

A. I don't know what date exactly—

Q. That is what I am asking you. You haven't produced any budget records here. Why do you pick on December 20 as being the date the budget system went into effect?

A. Because Mr. Bachofer makes the statement here, asking that certain people be exempt from the wage and hour law on December 20, and I take it he would have asked [fol. 3894] for that exemption at the time he would get his budget system going.

Q. And that would include Nell Quinlan Reed, Lee Baty, and John B. Bachofer—

A. It doesn't say in here that we formerly made a statement. On that first statement that was made, the Wages and Hours didn't ask us for a statement of who was on there. That first one was made of the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company, and then, when they asked for the second one, they asked us that, after we turned that first one in. My understanding is—now, this is what Mr. Bachofer told me—they asked for a statement of separate—to have the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company make separate returns, and then when they were turned in they asked him for a list of who was covered on that. We were never asked for a list covering October 30—

Q. Do you know why they wanted a list of your supervisory employees?

A. I don't know. Maybe the Labor Board wanted them. I don't know.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, Mrs. Reed, what do you mean by that remark, "maybe the Labor Board wanted them"? What do you mean by that? You knew this was not going to the Labor Board, didn't you?

A. I certainly didn't have any idea. I thought whenever we turned in a paper—

[fol. 3895] Q. Just a moment, Mrs. Reed, please.

A. Can't I say that—

Q. Just a moment. My question to you was, you knew this was not going to the Labor Board, didn't you?

A. I had no idea it was. I didn't know the boards exchanged papers.

Q. Then, why did you say, "maybe the Labor Board wanted it"?

A. Oh, I was just making a facetious remark, Mr. Examiner. I apologize.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, it has reached the Labor Board.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, but that does not justify the comment that at the time maybe the Labor Board wanted it. I think Mrs. Reed realizes that that perhaps was a side remark, and I think she has very nicely and very womanly, in a ladylike manner, disposed of it, Mr. Stottle, and I do not care to continue it any further.

* * * * * *

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter as follows:

"Do you know why they wanted a list of your supervisory employees?")

[fol. 3896] A. I don't exactly know why they did. I suppose that was a part of their procedure, but I don't know.

Q. You have no notion at all? Did any one of your attorneys tell you why they had any right to demand it?

A. There was a law passed that certain regulations of workers—

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you familiar with the wage and hour law, Mrs. Reed, yourself?

A. I am not familiar with it enough to discuss it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, paragraph 6 of this form contained on exhibit No. 32-C has this statement, "Total number of employees whom your firm considers exempt from provisions of the Act."

Did you know why they were exempt from the provisions of the act, the people that you listed as executives?

A. I had a general understanding that certain people were exempt if they had certain supervisory duties, but, Mr. Langsdale, I never analyzed the Act, or never—

Q. Exempt from what, Mrs. Reed, do you know?

Mr. Reed: Let her answer.

A. Exempt from the Act, from the workings of the Act, or whatever—

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Of course your supervisory employees were paid much more than the minimum scale provided by the Act?

A. Everybody in my place was paid much more than the minimum—

[fol. 3897] Q. So, from what provision would these executives be exempt—

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, just a minute, please.

Read the answer this far, please.

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

A. (Continuing) —required by that Act.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. From what provision of the Act did you understand these executives would be exempt?

A. I didn't analyze the Act myself, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Well, Mrs. Reed, Ted Scoles, you say, became a supervisor of the cutting department when? Have you any personal knowledge as to just when he became supervisor of the cutting department?

A. The only personal knowledge I have is the understanding I had with Mr. Bachofer in putting in the budget system. Now, when we put that budget system in, I didn't go into anything about the Wages and Hours Act. The budget system was put in to improve the workings of our business.

Q. Do you know when Ted Scoles became supervisor of the cutting department?

A. I do not, of my own knowledge.

Q. Ted Scoles is not with you now, you say?

A. He is not.

Q. When did he leave your employ?

A. I think, last fall.

[fol. 3898] Q. Do you know where Ted Scoles is?

A. No.

Q. Have you any idea?

A. I have not, of my own knowledge. I have heard that he is in Chicago.

Q. Do you know what his salary was on December 20, 1940?

A. I don't know the exact amount. It was maybe $70 or $75, or somewhere around there.

Q. Had he had an increase within the year prior to December 20, 1940?

A. I really don't know.

Q. You have no information at all about that?

A. I don't recollect the increases for people in the plant. Mr. Baty would bring a list up that he would recommend, and he would go over them and give me reasons at the time, and if we agreed on those raises I didn't do anything more about them; he would put them into effect.

Q. Do you have any recollection of Mr. Baty talking to you about any increase in Ted Scoles's salary within a year prior to December 20, 1940?

A. I don't remember that now, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Have you any recollection at all with reference to that matter?

A. Within what time?

Q. A year prior to December 20, 1940.

A. I don't remember any discussion about it.

[fol. 3899] Q. Now, I am sorry, but I have forgotten what your recollection is as to Ted Scoles' salary on December 20th, 1940.

A. I said that I didn't actually recollect what it was.

Q. Did you say you had some thought about it?

A. I think that wouldn't be very far off from $75 a week, either under or over.

Q. Well, this pay roll record introduced into the hearing in 1939 showed that Ted Scoles was getting a bi-monthly salary of $119.17.

Mr. Ingraham: What page is that?

Mr. Langsdale: That is on page 4745.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. $119.17, that would be about $238.34 a month. Was that ever increased after April 30, 1937?

A. I am inclined to think that it was.

Q. Do you know when?

A. I do not.

Q. Have you any recollection at all as to how much it was increased?

A. I really don't know, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Can you give me any information as to why his salary would be the odd sum of $238.34?

A. Because it would be based on a weekly basis, and then when they put it bi-monthly, it would make it in an odd amount.

Q. You have no definite recollection that his salary was [fol. 3900] ever increased after the 30th of April, 1937?

Mr. Reed: I object to that as repetition. It has been gone over three or four times.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question now is whether Mrs. Reed has any definite knowledge. I understood her prior answer to indicate she was under the impression she didn't know when, but would you be able to recall the amount, is that it?

A. Well, hardly anybody was there three years without a raise.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you know definitely who received any increases after the 30th of April, 1937?

A. Well, Mr. Langsdale, these increases in salaries would be taken up with me at a certain time by someone like Mr. Baty or Mrs. Reeves or Mr. Bachofer, and at the time we would go over it and settle it, and then I dismissed it from my mind.

I didn't tell the persons they were to get a raise, I didn't tell the persons in charge of the pay roll to give the raise. The one that came to me about it would put it into effect, so I just dismissed those things from my mind, and I really don't remember just when a raise was given, and particularly to a specific person.

Q. Well, then, is your answer that you don't know whether he ever received a raise after April 30th, 1937?

[fol. 3901] A. Well, of my own knowledge of giving him a raise at a specific time after that date, I don't know.

Q. Marvin Price, do you know what his salary was on the 20th day of December, 1940?

A. I would say around $70.

Q. Well, had he received any raise for the one year next preceding December 20th, 1940?

A. I have no remembrance of a specific time or a specific raise, of my own knowledge.

Q. Do you know whether or not he had been raised since April 30, 1937?

A. I don't remember specifically.

Q. Lyle Jeter, do you know his salary December 20th, 1940?

A. Not exactly. I know that Lyle has gotten more raises comparatively, because he came there later, and he came in as just an ordinary mechanic, and he showed he was a very good mechanic, and did some very clever things, and I know that he was raised rather often.

Now, just specifically when and how much I couldn't tell you.

Q. Well, have you any recollection as to whether or not he was raised within the one year next preceding the 20th of December, 1940? A. No.

Q. Ella Brown, do you know her salary on December [fol. 3902] 20th, 1940? A. Not exactly.

Q. Do you know whether she had received any raise in salary for the one year next preceding December 20th, 1940?

A. Not of my own knowledge, at that particular time.

Q. Florence Strickland, do you know her salary on December 20th, 1940? A. Approximately.

Q. What? A. $80.

Q. Had she received any increase in salary for the year next preceding December 20, 1940? A. I don't believe so.

Q. Has she received any increase since that time?

A. I am not sure. I don't know.

Q. Martha Gray, do you know what her salary was on December 20th, 1940? A. Around $40 a week.

Q. Had she received any increase prior to that—one year prior to that?

A. I don't know, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Has she received any increase since that time?

A. I am not absolutely sure.

Q. Rose O'Leary, do you know what her salary was December 20th, 1940?

[fol. 3903] A. I am not absolutely sure what it was.

Q. Do you know whether she had received any increase for the year next preceding December 20, 1940? A. No.

Q. You mean you don't know, or she didn't?

A. I don't know about a particular date, about a particular person, when they received—

Q. (Interrupting) I am just asking you, if you do know.

Mr. Reed: Let her answer.

Mr. Langsdale: Isn't she through, Senator?

Mr. Reed: She was not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Have you completed your answer, Mrs. Reed?

A. Well, I hadn't quite completed it. I think Mr. Langsdale,—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Well, will you read it thus far, please?

Mr. Langsdale: I thought you were through.

(Answer read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you complete your answer? A. When they received an increase.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, then, you don't know whether she received an increase during the year next preceding December 20, 1940? A. I do not.

[fol. 3904] Q. And you don't know whether she has received any increase since that time? A. Not for sure.

Q. Pauline Hartman, do you know what her salary was on December 20, 1940? A. Not exactly.

Q. Can you approximate it?

A. I would say around $50.

Q. $50 a week? A. Yes.

Q. Had she received any increase during the year next preceding December 20, 1940?

A. I don't know, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. And has she received any since that time?

A. I will tell you I don't keep track of those raises.

Q. I understand your answer—

A. (Interrupting) The total of them.

Q. I understand your answer, Mrs. Reed. I want to ask you that with reference to these persons, I'll group them and ask you if your answer will be the same about these people, and we can save time, if it would. I want you to tell me whether or not any of these people have received an increase during the year next preceding December 20, 1940: Harlan Justus, Helen Hauser, Betty [fol. 3905] Belter, Dewey Atchison, Mildred Francis, Hilda Fitzgerald, Fred Brown, Cecile Ealy, Lena Tyhurst, Katie Schleicher, Lula Nichols, Nellie Kraft, Yolanda Prosperi, Gertrude Cain:

A. I don't know whether they received any raises prior to the year next preceding; I am sure they have received raises since that time.

Q. Well, will you tell me the one or more in the list there that have?

A. I couldn't tell you which, but of all these people you mentioned, I know that some of them have received raises since 1940, since December, 1940.

Q. But you have no information of any one of them having been raised in salary for the year next preceding December 20, 1940?

A. No, we hadn't had a very good year, and I wouldn't think there would be very many raises then.

Q. Now, Mildred Francis, do you know whether or not she was a member of the union, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I don't know. I don't think she was.

Q. I have no recollection about it myself; that is the reason I didn't ask about her. Taking all these names I have read you from Exhibit 32-E, can you tell any one of them that has been raised any time since January 1st, 1940, we will say?

[fol. 3906] A. I think most of them have, because our production has increased, and our business has been more profitable, and I am very sure practically all of them have had some increase.

Q. When?

A. Oh, different times, as their department improved, and as our business improved.

Q. Well, your recollection is that none of them received any increase during the year 1940?

A. That would be my recollection.

Q. Now, these people are your supervisors, as shown by this list, some of them at any rate. Had you ever paid Ted Scoles any overtime?

A. I would certainly think that he would be paid overtime.

Q. When? A. If he worked overtime.

Q. In 1940? A. I would say so.

Q. Well, do you know? A. I don't know.

Q. Your supervisors get paid for overtime, the same as your other employees?

A. The people in responsible positions, and who have a responsibility of their departments, are not paid overtime; their compensation is supposed to be in their salary.

Q. Well, wasn't Ted Scoles in a responsible position in [fol. 3907] December, 1940?

A. He was put in a responsible position at that time.

Q. Well, did he get overtime after that?

A. I would say that he didn't.

Q. Do you know whether or not he did?

A. I am sure that he didn't.

Q. Did he receive any overtime prior to that?

A. If he worked I would say he would.

Q. Have you any knowledge of it? A. I haven't.

Q. Marvin Price, Lyle Jeter, Ella Brown, Florence Strickland, Martha Gray, Rose O'Leary, Pauline Hartman, Harlan Justus, Helen Hauser, Betty Belter, Dewey Atchison, Mildred Francis, Hilda Fitzgerald, Fred Brown, Cecile Ealy, Lena Tyhurst, Katie Schleicher, Lula Nichols, Nellie Kraft, Yolanda Prosperi, Gertrude Cain, do you know whether those people were paid overtime in any part of the year 1940?

A. I am sure Mildred Francis was not paid any overtime, and I don't believe Dewey Atchison was. I don't know whether these people worked any overtime. I don't keep the time.

Q. Well, do you know, Mrs. Reed, whether any of them was paid any overtime during the year 1940?

A. I don't know; Mr. Bachofer would certainly know. I have nothing to do with seeing who was paid overtime.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Reed, as a matter of fact, you wouldn't know [fol. 3908] if they were?

A. No, I wouldn't know if they were being paid overtime.

Q. In other words, your answer to the question is you don't know, isn't that right? A. Yes, it is.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, what I am getting at, Mrs. Reed, is this: if you don't know when this overtime was filled out, and you say you consulted with the man who made it out, that the reason for disclosing to the Wage and Hour Administration the names of those whom you were claiming to be supervisors was so that they would be exempt from the provisions of the Wage and Hour Act?

A. I wouldn't say that.

* * * * * *

Mr. Langsdale: Did you know when this list of executives was given to the Wage and Hour Commission by [fol. 3909] Mr. Green, or by whoever it was, that gave it to the Wage and Hour Commission for the Donnelly Garment Company, that it was being given to the Wage and Hour Commission, so that the Wage and Hour Commission would know that they were executives, and you wouldn't have to pay them overtime?

A. Will you read that question again, it is so long.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, Mrs. Reed, did you know when this list was prepared and sent in that it was for the purpose of exempting these people from overtime payments?

A. I don't remember that this list was discussed with me, that it was for the purpose of not paying overtime; I thought it was in compliance with the law that the Wage and Hour people put out, and then you have to comply with that law, except that if you have certain employees that are in certain positions, they don't come under that law, and the Wage and Hour department sends blanks to fill in; and I think they say something about complying with it, and then how many people that we consider didn't come under that law.

Q. Then you didn't realize at the time, Mrs. Reed, that by preparing this list and sending it in, it would remove those people from the operation of the law? You understood that, did you?

A. I don't remember that this was discussed with me, with any great detail.

[fol. 3910] Q. Well, whether it was or not, my question to you was, did you know at the time the list was made and sent in that by sending it in, these people would not be subject to the Wage and Hour Act? Did you know that?

A. I don't right now recall that I had anything to do with sending in that form.

Q. Well, let's assume that you didn't. I understood your testimony to be that you were consulted about it, were you not?

A. I would be consulted; Mr. Bachofer would probably say, "I am filling out a form and sending it in, and asking these people be exempted from the Wage and Hour Law—", yes, I would be consulted on that.

Q. Then, my question to you is, did you know that by sending in a list—not this list, but sending in any list of supervisors, that it removed them from the operation of the law, did you know that?

A. Well, I will say I did.

Q. Well, I don't want you to say it if you didn't.

A. Well, it is sort of one of those things, I didn't bother very much about it.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, Mrs. Reed, let's get onto something maybe a little simpler. This form that your company furnished the Wage and Hour Administration on December 20th states there were 1090 people in the employ [fol. 3911] of the Donnelly Garment Company.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you get the original and refer to the number of the Exhibit, Mr. Langsdale, please? I believe that is Exhibit 34 or 35, one of the other.

Mr. Langsdale: That is 32-C.

Trial Examiner Batten: 32-C. You are still using 32?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: It should be right here.

(Here Mr. Langsdale hands Board's Exhibit 32-C, original, to witness.)

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Will you turn to Board's Exhibit 32-C? How many people does 32-C show here on the pay roll of the Donnelly Garment Company, on October 30, 1940? A. 1090.

Q. Now, do you know whether that included those in the employ of the Sales Company or not?

A. My information is that it does—or did, rather.

Q. That is, the 1090 is the total number of employees on the pay roll of both companies?

A. Apparently that is true.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think Mr. Ingraham said it was true, was it not?

Mr. Ingraham: That was my information.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Pardon me. I notice in 35-C, which is the return for the Sales Company, there are 117 employees. Would [fol. 3912] the 1090 include that 117 in your opinion, Mrs. Reed?

A. Well, in October it was probably a low time, we don't employ new people usually until we begin building up our force in December, and usually people leave, and we don't reemploy new people in the fall, because that is the time we have the least amount of business and we try to give our old employees all the work there is, so in October that would probably be a low number of employees, so including that 117— I couldn't say that that exact number of persons would be included. There may be some of that 117 that would be new employees, but my understanding is that this first form would include the Donnelly Garment Sales Company and the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Well, now, maybe you are confused, and it seems to me to be some little confusion here. 32-D shows a total number of employees of 1100.

A. It says approximately 1100.

Q. Yes. Well—.

A. (Interrupting) This might be—you see, there is 1090 there, and on the other place they use the word "approximately", and I suppose they used the figure 1100 instead of 1090.

Q. Now, looking at that same paragraph on 32-C, it says, "Total number of employees whom your firm considers exempt from the provisions of the Act. (Refer to Employers' Digest)", and then they have written in there [fol. 3913] "Includes salesmen" 49. A. Yes.

Q. At that time you didn't furnish a list to the Wage and Hour Administration, did you?

A. I didn't furnish this at all, this was gotten up in my office.

Q. Well, did anyone for your company furnish the list on October 30th, 1940, of the 49?

A. My understanding is they didn't ask for a list, and there are no blanks on here, telling you to fill in a list. They filled out what they were asked to do, Mr. Langsdale.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, so far as you know, Mrs. Reed, no list was furnished at that time?

A. That is as far as I know, there was not any furnished. There is no place on this bank to put a list. I don't see a request for a list.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, do you know personally whether or not, after you furnished this document without giving the list of the 49 employees, whom you considered exempt, that the Wage and Hour Administration requested that you furnish that list?

A. I have never heard that they requested them to be furnished a list of these 49.

Q. Do you know who the 49 were?

A. I don't know exactly who they were. We have 27 or [fol. 3914] 29 salesmen; I can furnish you a list of them, Mr. Langsdale, but I couldn't tell you that exactly.

Q. There are only 29 on the Donnelly Garment Company 32-E as of December 20th. Do you know who the other 20 were, if this 29 is part of the 49?

A. I don't know what part the 29 were of the 49.

Q. You can furnish the list of people? A. Yes.

Q. That is, who were meant by the 49?

A. That's right.

Q. Where can you get that?

A. I can get it at my office.

Q. From whom? A. Mr. Bachofer.

Q. Up to now, the list of that 49 has never been furnished to the Wage and Hour Administration, so far as you know?

A. So far as I know they have never asked for it.

Q. Well, if you will look at this paragraph on 32-E, at the top of the page, it reads, "Pursuant to your request of December 29th, the persons coming within the provision of the second part of Paragraph 6 of the questionnaire as at December 26, 1940, are as follows:" Now, the second part of Paragraph 6, "Total number of employees whom your firm considers exempt from the provisions of the Act," and you say 49?

[fol. 3915] A. But that was dated October 30th, that first one, and here it says, "Pursuant to your request of December 29th."

Q. Yes, but you didn't furnish them on October 30th.

A. They didn't ask for it.

Q. How do you know?

A. Well, I know they would have furnished it if they had been asked.

Q. Mrs. Reed, do you know, yourself, they didn't ask for it?

A. I have been informed by Mr. Bachofer they didn't ask for it.

Q. Was that what they were asking for on December 29th?

A. No. The man, as I understand it, came down some time late in the month, and I don't know whether we had turned in these December 20 ones or not, but they wanted,—the Wage and Hour people wanted our returns separately, but I don't know when they made that request.

Q. Well, you do know, from reading these documents and from talking with Mr. Bachofer on October 30th, you filled out this form, 32-C, and stated you had 49 people exempt?

A. That's right, including 29 salesmen.

Q. And you do know, on this document filled out in December, it says this, "Pursuant to your request of December 29th, the persons coming within the provisions of [fol. 3916] the second part of Paragraph 6 of the questionnaire as at December 20, 1940, are as follows"?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you didn't fill out any other form like 32-C on December 20th, did you? Mr. Bachofer didn't either, did he?

A. I don't get what you are talking about, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. What I am talking about is this, have you got it from Mr. Bachofer or anyone else that 32-E was simply to complete 32-C and give the Administration the information that was not given to them on October 30th?

A. No. It says very plainly it is pursuant to "your request of December 29th."

Q. I understand that.

A. "Within the provision of the second part of paragraph 6 of the questionnaire as at December 20th." So he certainly would have understood it was the December 20th questionnaire that they were asking for this detailed information about.

Q. Now, the second part of Paragraph 6 is where you see "49" without giving the names, isn't it?

A. They didn't ask for the names, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Do you know why they did ask for the names on December 29th and didn't ask for them on October 30th?

A. I do not; furthermore, I was under the impression [fol. 3917] that all these documents that you put in — given to one division of the Government, was confidential.

Q. Why were you under that impression?

A. I was under that impression. I thought this information asked for is confidential. Mr. Bachofer brings different things to me, and says they are supposed to turn those in, I wouldn't want everyone to know about my business.

Q. Did you mind the Labor Board knowing about this document?

A. Well, I didn't mind it, but I think it is rather strange.

Q. Would the document have been any different if you had known it was going to be produced here in evidence?

A. No.

Q. And do you think the company was injured any by the Labor Board getting the document you filled in for the Wage and Hour Board?

A. No, I do not; it just seemed queer to me.

Q. Does it seem queer to you that one department of the Government might co-operate with another department?

A. I thought when the Government was asking for so much information about your business they kept it confidential.

Q. And wouldn't violate your confidence by letting another department of the Government, which is charging you with violating the law, have the information that might [fol. 3918] be valuable to that department?

A. My understanding has been that you fill out papers, to go to one department of the Government, giving information about your business, that it is kept confidential.

Q. As far as that is concerned, it could be hidden from another department?

A. Well, I don't know as you would hide things, but it is confidential.

Q. There is nothing confidential about this, is there, 32-E?

A. I don't think there is anything confidential, but I just think it is strange.

Q. You would rather the Labor Board wouldn't have gotten it?

A. No, I think it is perfectly all right, if they wanted it. I want this Board to know everything possible about my business; I think if they do know it all, I wouldn't have any trouble, Mr. Langsdale.

Miss Weyand: I don't know whether it is proper for the record to show for the witness' information, but the National Labor Relations Act does make provisions for the Labor Board to secure information from other government agencies.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think we need to spend any time on that. May I say this, Mrs. Reed --

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) What I wanted to [fol. 3919] know was Mrs. Reed's idea about it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think that all the attorneys know, of course, and realize that all the different Government departments co-operate unless they have a provision which prohibits, makes secret, you might say, as some laws have, information received by those departments.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, let me get back to your testimony about this Exhibit E.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute. If you are going to ask her some more about the exhibits, I wanted to look at them, Mr. Langsdale.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, the last answer you made that I have referred to on this examination is as follows:

"Question: Does it (referring to 32-E) represent a correct statement of the supervisory force of your company in November and December, 1940," and your answer is,

"Answer: I would say that it does."

(Colloquy)

"Answer: This is made up as of October 30, 1940, I would say it was close to November or December, 1940."

Did you make that answer?

Mr. Ingraham: What page is that?

Mr. Langsdale: 3538.

A. I still say the improper inserting of the list in that October 30th document confused me as to the dates at [fol. 3920] the time.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mrs. Reed, your answer here was that it was. You say this was made up as of October 30th, 1940?

A. I would say it was very close.

Q. November or December, 1940, did you make that answer?

A. I apparently did.

Q. Was that true?

A. I wasn't sure about what time it was.

Q. Well, you weren't saying then that it was October 30th, were you? You said it was November or December.

A. I know we had discussions about this budget system in November or December, but it turned out to be that it was December before it was put into effect.

Q. Well, you did make this answer at that time?

A. I did.

Q. "I would say it was very close to November or December, 1940"?

A. Yes.

Q. And you believed that when you made that answer?

A. Well, I say it turned out to be December; that is probably as close as I can get to it.

Q. Again, let me ask you if, long prior to the introduction of 32-C you didn't state the change in status occurred in November or December, 1940?

[fol. 3921] A. I said we discussed it at that time.

Q. What did you do besides discussing it?

A. Well, I know that one thing came up, that putting some of these new arrangements into effect was a matter of whether Mr. Baty could go on the hunt; we usually go up to Michigan and hunt the last two weeks in November, and we have a place up there, and Mr. Baty has been in the habit of going, and he told me if he changed the responsibility of these instructors before he left, he couldn't go on the hunt, because he wanted to be there himself when this additional authority was given to the instructors, and so

I said, "Well, I think you'd better come along on the hunt, there isn't any heavy manufacturing now, and as a matter of fact, I had rather be here myself when this additional authority is given, so if there is any question about it, we will both be here," and I know that I left for the hunt about the 10th of November, and I wouldn't have gotten back until after the 1st of December.

Q. Now, the number of employees in December, 1940, was about 1090?

A. I believe it was in October, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. October 30th, 1940?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that increase or decrease in December?

A. I would be inclined to say it increased.

[fol. 3922] Q. How much?

A. I don't know.

Q. Have you any idea how much it increased?

A. No, I really haven't.

[fol. 3923] Q. As much as 100?

A. It could.

Q. Do you think it would?

A. I hardly think it would.

Q. Would 50 be closer?

A. Of my own knowledge, I don't know, but I know that usually we begin to employ new people and get our force up beginning somewhat in December.

Q. At any rate, it was 2 or 3 hundred fewer than in May 1937?

A. May 1937 would be at the height of the season, and this time in October would be at the very lowest point, in my opinion.

Q. In May 1940, how many employees would you say you had?

A. I don't know exactly. Somewhere around 1,200, I suppose, or 1,300.

Q. About the same as 1937?

A. There might have been some more.

Q. When did you go on this hunt?

A. I don't know the exact day, but we asked our guests to be there on the 13th—

Q. The 13th of what?

A. Of November. —and I tried to be up there a day or two before, and it takes a day and a night to get there.

Q. Now, you had discussed this budget matter prior to that, had you?

[fol. 3924] A. Yes.

Q. As early as October?

A. I don't remember that I discussed the budget matter. I discussed the budget matter, but I didn't do anything very definite about it.

Q. Mr. Bachofer was the one who brought that to your attention, wasn't he?

A. Yes.

Q. And suggested that you make these changes?

A. Yes.

Q. Where were you when he made that suggestion to you?

A. I probably was in my office.

Q. Is it your recollection that you were in your office?

A. I don't remember exactly, but I would think it was in my office.

Q. Do you remember who was there when you made the suggestion, besides you and Mr. Bachofer?

A. About the budget system?

Q. Yes.

A. My remembrance now would be, when he first talked to me about it I don't remember that anybody else was there.

Q. Did you have more than one talk about it?

A. Yes, we had numerous talks about it.

Q. Who was present at any time besides you and Mr. Bachofer?

[fol. 3925] A. I don't remember that anybody was.

Q. Ever?

A. I don't specifically remember.

Q. How did he bring the matter to your attention?

A. Well, he often comes into my office to discuss with me the different situations of the business. This budget system had been suggested to me before, but I didn't—

Q. By whom?

Mr. Reed: Let her answer.

A. Oh, I don't remember. Perhaps by Mr. Bachofer. I think when he first came to our place he thought we ought to have a budget system.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. But this is the budget system out of which grew a change in the authority given to certain people in your plant?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you and he just sit down and talk it over by yourselves?

A. The budget system we did, yes. He presented me with the idea, and I would say that he persuaded me that that would be the thing to be done.

Q. Did he do it in writing or orally?

A. No. Just talked to me about it.

Q. He never did present you with any written document suggesting who should be made supervisors who were not supervisors before?

[fol. 3926] A. I don't remember whether he had any written documents. I know that he went down the line, more or less, of different departments, and said he thought the expenses in these departments were too high, and that if we would hold some specific person responsible and more people that were right on the job were responsible, that we would be able to reduce the overhead.

For instance, Miss Spilsbury was in charge of all patterns and designing, and then she had a little office that took care of the purchases of the materials she used in the designing department, and in that little office they made up this information for the merchandise department and they got up original costs. There were many activities, and Miss Spilsbury was in general charge, but she was away a great deal of the time, and Mr. Bachofer thought if we would put certain specific people in charge of smaller activities, that those people would feel responsible and do a better job.

Q. But he never did give you any written report on Ted Scoles, Marvin Price, Lyle Jeter, Ella Brown, Florence Strickland, Martha Gray, Rose O'Leary, Pauline Hartman, Harlan Justus, Helen Houser, Betty Belter, Dewey Atchison, Hilda Fitzgerald, Fred Brown, Cecile Ealy, Lena Tyhurst, Katie Schleicher, Lulu Nichols, Nellie Kraft, Yolanda Prosperi, or Gertrude Cain?

A. Now, will you please read your question? I was distracted by all of those names.

Mr. Langsdale: Read the question, please.

[fol. 3927], (Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Q. —as to why they should be given supervisory authority which they didn't have prior to that time?

A. No.

Q. Did he give you any written authority as to why he thought all of these instructors should be given back some of the authority they had prior to the time Mr. Baty took it away from them in July of 1935?

A. Mr. Langsdale, there would be no point of his writing a lot of stuff if he had me there to talk to.

Q. I am asking you, did he?

A. I don't remember that he ever did.

Q. What do you call Mr. Bachofer down there, his title?

A. I suppose, comptroller.

Q. Doesn't he make reports to you?

A. He reports to me verbally. He brings along, sometimes, a certain list of expenses, and he will say that a certain department has cost so much last month, or our expenses are so much.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Reed, as a matter of fact, he makes regular reports to you, doesn't he, on income and outgo? If he is a comptroller, doesn't he make you regular financial reports?

A. He doesn't make me regular—oh, reports like I used to get. A long time ago we had an accounting firm—[fol. 3928] Q. My point is, doesn't he make you a regular report on the financial status of the company, as a comptroller?

A. You may think it is queer, but he doesn't. I go over with him certain records that he has and—

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You mean he doesn't give you any—

Mr. Reed: Let her answer.

Mr. Langsdale: Pardon me, Senator. I thought she had finished.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question and answer.

(Thereupon the last question by Trial Examiner Batten, and the answer, were read by the reporter.)

A. He brings records into my office and shows me the progress we are making, or certain records that he has, but to just file records with me, he doesn't do that; he keeps everything himself. I don't get a financial—

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Are there any stockholders?

Mr. Reed: Now, let her answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: Had you finished, Mrs. Reed?

A. The thing that you are talking about may be the same thing. I mean he doesn't turn over to me anything. He has them, but I let him keep them and take care of them.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Reed, I didn't mean, do you file them in your office? What I meant was, at regular intervals he makes you a report, does he not? You will go into his office or he will come into your office and he will point out to you [fol. 3929] the financial status of the company?

A. Yes, he does that.

Q. At more or less regular intervals?

A. Yes, he does that.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You are a majority stockholder?

A. Yes.

Q. Doesn't the comptroller make out financial reports for the benefit of the stockholders, showing the income and [fol. 3930] the disbursements?

A. I know that he makes out statements of the income and disbursements and how much money we make, and regular statements, yes.

Q. He has charge of the pay roll statements, doesn't he?

A. Yes. He has general charge of all of the accounting.

Q. Now, your discussion about this budget system you have been talking about was just oral between you and Mr. Bachofer?

A. Mr. Bachofer was supposed to make up a budget for each of his departments, and then he would go over these with either the person then in charge or the ones that were given charge of a certain activity; he would show them how much that activity had cost last year and how much—he discussed with them whether they thought that was too much, or if he thought it was too much, if they thought they could do it for less.

Q. Did he furnish you any written statement as to these changes in authority that you are talking about?

A. I don't remember. He may have. I didn't pay a lot of attention to them, if he did.

Q. What is your best recollection, that he did or did not?

A. I just don't recollect at all, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. So that all you are able to give the Examiner is your statement that you and Mr. Bachofer talked it over?

A. Well, Mr. Bachofer may have more about it, but, Mr. Langsdale, you must remember that I do a great deal [fol. 3931] of personal designing and a lot of work in getting up my line, and I discuss the merchandise, and I discuss the management. That would be something I would expect Mr. Bachofer to do. As a matter of fact, I think one reason I never put in a budget system was that I didn't want to bother doing it myself. He told me that he would personally discuss and talk this over with each of these people, so that I wouldn't have to do anything about it.

Q. You mean he would go and talk it over personally with each of the instructors?

A. Not with the instructors. The instructors' difference in status wasn't in connection with the budget. It just came up at that particular time because we were trying to improve our management, and the whole thing went along together.

Q. Then, the status of the instructors had nothing to do with this budget system you have been talking about?

A. Except that it was planned about the same time.

Q. I thought you said something about the instructor being held responsible for the expense of the particular section of which she was instructor.

A. I am sure I said she was not.

Q. Is it true that the instructor was held responsible for the quantity and quality of work that the section turned out?

A. Yes. But that wouldn't mean for the expense of the section. She had nothing to do with making piece rates and—

Q. But don't you think that the quantity and quality [fol. 3932] of the work turned out by a section has something to do with the cost of getting it out?

A. Certainly it has, but we have no budget system to control that.

Q. Now, commencing on page 3529 of the transcript—:

By Miss Weyand:

"Q. Had that supervisory status changed at your plant at any time prior to November 1, 1940?

"A. This document you mentioned is dated October 30th."

A. I say, Mr. Langsdale, I was very much confused by that paper, and the difference in dates, and the wrong paper being inserted in the wrong form.

Q. But there is nothing wrong about that answer, is there?

"This document you mentioned is dated October 30th."?

A. I don't think there is anything wrong with it.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

"Q. I think the question was, prior to October 30th, the date of the document, prior to October 30th, 1940.

"A. I would say that this was the time that we decided that we were going to put in the supervisory arrangement, the budget arrangement, at that time.

By Miss Weyand:

"Q. Did that supervisory status there presented, exist in operation at your plant, prior to October 30th, 1940?

"A. It did not."

There is nothing wrong about that answer, is there?

[fol. 3933] A. No.

Q. Then:

"Miss Weyand: I offer this exhibit in evidence, Exhibit 32.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Any objections? There being no objection, it will be received.

"(The document heretofore marked, 'Board's Exhibit No. 32, Witness Reed,' for identification, was received in evidence.)

"May I see it?

"A. Yes. I would like to see it myself, again, please. What did you say?

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) I said, Mrs. Reed, if there is no objection, it would be received.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't hear an objection.

"Miss Weyand: I would like the reporter to mark the pages thereof, on the front of the first page, 32-A, 32-B, on the back of the first page, and 32-C on the front page of inner sheet, and 32-D on the back of the form sheet, and 32-E on the attached information."

Mr. Reed: What page is that?

Mr. Langsdale: 3530.

Q. (Continuing) Then:

"A. May I see that, please?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Is there any objection to marking these sheets like that? Miss Reporter, will you [fol. 3934] mark this, please? That will be A, B, C, D and E.

"(Thereupon the documents above referred to were marked 'Board's Exhibits 32-A to E, inclusive, Witness Reed,' for identification, and received in evidence.)

"Miss Weyand: I am going to ask leave that this exhibit be withdrawn and photostatic copies substituted, and in that connection I would like to have counsel, after looking at the documents and ascertaining the facts stipulate that the documents, I mean on the face thereof they bear the stamp of the Wage and Hour Division, showing the document was received at 9:30 o'clock in the morning, October 31st, 1940, since such stamps usually do not photograph well—

"Trial Examiner Batten: I suggest that you have the photostats made, and when the photostat is available, then you may ask to withdraw it, and substitute the photostat, and I will determine if the photostats are such that you should be permitted to withdraw it. I wouldn't want to now.

"Miss Weyand: Usually photostatic copies cover all written material, and do not cover the stamp."

Mr. Reed: Is this a question?

Mr. Langsdale: I am getting down to it.

Q. (Continuing) Then there is the answer:

"A. I would like to have permission to read this, inasmuch as I haven't read it before. I would like to take the time now to read it, inasmuch as I have been asked the [fol. 3935] question about it."

Do you remember making that answer?

A. I remember being very much confused.

Q. Do you remember you took the document and read it? A. I took the document and read parts of it.

Q. Is there anything concealed about the three lines at the top of Exhibit No. 32-E?

A. No. That is what's confused me, that this paper would be inserted, and not only inserted, but attached to a blank of October 30.

Q. Of course, that didn't confuse you, because you didn't know anything about why it was inserted, did you?

Mr. Reed: Now, that is mere argument and not a question at all.

Mr. Langsdale: Did you? Did you know why it was inserted then?

Mr. Reed: How could she know why it was inserted, when Miss Weyand says she inserted it?

Trial Examiner Batten: All she has to do is to say she did or didn't, Senator.

A. No, I don't know why it was inserted in the wrong place.

Mr. Langsdale: Did you know it was inserted in the wrong place when you made the answer:

"I would like to have permission to read this, inasmuch as I haven't read it before. I would like to take the time [fol. 3936] now to read it, inasmuch as I have been asked the question about it?"

Were you confused when you gave that answer?

A. I felt that there was something wrong about that document being attached to an October 30 form, and I didn't know why it should be.

Q. Why did you think there was something wrong about it, Mrs. Reed?

A. Because the form was dated October 30, and this document was dated December 29th, and Miss Weyand seemed to be so anxious for me to say that that insert would be dated the same as the October 30. She was so particular about the dates and constantly asking about the dates, and she wanted it stipulated that that did belong on that date, even though she was going to have it photostated; and, as a matter of fact, the thing that showed on that photostat was the date, more than anything else.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Reed, when you gave that answer did you know that the document was dated October 30 and the insert dated December 29?

A. I couldn't make it out, Mr. Batten.

Q. Just a moment, now. I gathered from what you just said that you observed at that time, at the time that you gave this answer, that there was a discrepancy in the dates. Did you?

A. No, I didn't clearly understand. I might be stupid, [fol. 3937] but I didn't clearly understand.

Q. It doesn't make any difference to me, Mrs. Reed, whether you understood or not. When you gave the answer, did you notice that one document was dated October 30 and the other December 29?

A. It didn't come to my consciousness entirely. I just couldn't understand why Miss Weyand was so anxious to get a date of October 30 on it.

Q. My question to you still is, not what Miss Weyand wanted, my question is, when you gave the answer what was there about the document that confused you?—not Miss Weyand's questions to you. What was there, if anything, in the document that was not clear to you?

A. The questions she asked me were what confused me.

Q. I am not talking about Miss Weyand's questions. What was there in the document, after you looked it over carefully, that confused you?—not Miss Weyand's questioning.

A. It just didn't seem consistent.

Q. What didn't? A. The dates.

Q. Then, you did observe that there was a difference in the dates?

A. It didn't just dawn on me that there was another form that that should be in.

Q. Well, whether it did or did not, you did notice that [fol. 3938] there was a difference in the dates, did you, Mrs. Reed, when you read it carefully?

A. Well, I say that the whole thing frightened me, because it seemed inconsistent, and I couldn't understand why Miss Weyand wanted to pin a date down that wasn't consistent with the insert.

Q. What wasn't consistent? A. The date.

Q. What date? A. October 31.

Q. Wasn't consistent with what? A. The insert.

Q. What was the date on that?

A. It was dated December 29. But I didn't notice that until after she started talking and asking for a stipulation that that document was received in that office on the 31st, and then I thought that was queer, that she should ask for a stipulation that this document was received in the office of the wage and hour people on October 31, when the insert was dated December 29.

Q. But you testified before—

A. That was after my testimony was given. I didn't ask to see that until after she had talked about the stipulation.

Q. Now, just a moment, Mrs. Reed, please. I can't keep up with you.

[fol. 3939] When you gave the answer which Mr. Langsdale read, at that time you observed a discrepancy in the dates, did you not?

A. I don't remember that I did. I remember specifically the time I thought about the dates was when Miss Weyand asked the attorneys to stipulate that this whole document, 32—and she made it so plain—32-A, B, C, D, and E, was received in the wage and hour office on October 31.

Q. That was prior to the answer which Mr. Langsdale read, was it not?

A. I don't think so. I think it was the last thing.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you permit the witness to read it?

Mr. Langsdale: Here is what Miss Weyand said, that she refers to:

"I am going to ask leave that this exhibit be withdrawn and photostatic copies substituted, and in that connection I would like to have counsel, after looking at the documents and ascertaining the facts—"

The Witness: No. That is incorrect reporting—ask that the lawyers stipulate. That isn't correct there.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you permit me to read it, Mrs. Reed?

The Witness: I know that isn't correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read it as it is?

The Witness: That has been corrected.

[fol. 3940] Trial Examiner Batten: It has not been corrected, Mrs. Reed. That is the record until it is corrected.

The Witness: It is incorrect.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you permit me to read it?

The Witness: All right.

Mr. Langsdale: On page 3530 appears the following:

"Miss Weyand: I am going to ask leave that this exhibit be withdrawn and photostatic copies substituted, and in that connection I would like to have counsel, after looking at the documents and ascertaining the facts stipulate that the documents, I mean on the face thereof they bear the stamp of the Wage and Hour Division, showing the document was received at 9:30 o'clock in the morning, October 31st, 1940, since such stamps usually do not photograph well—"

Mr. Langsdale: Now, that is what you have in mind when you say she wanted a stipulation, is it not, Mrs. Reed?

A. Yes. She wanted to stipulate that the whole thing was received on October 31.

. . . . . .

[fol. 3947] Mr. Ingraham: Just a minute. Mr. Langsdale, have you left your line of questioning on Exhibits 32, 33, 34 and 35?

Mr. Langsdale: At least temporarily.

Mr. Ingraham: Has the Examiner changed his ruling? I understood the other day you announced you were striking out Mrs. Reed's testimony in regard to Exhibit No. 32. Now, since then, Mr. Langsdale has spent considerable time inquiring into that testimony, and the Examiner himself inquired from Mrs. Reed about that matter.

If that testimony was stricken out, I would like to know the purpose of that inquiry.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Langsdale may tell you if he desires.

Mr. Langsdale: After you had struck out the cross-examination that had been made prior to the discovery that had been made by Miss Weyand of the true situation [fol. 3948] with reference to 32-E, that has nothing whatever to do with my right to cross-examine her about the same exhibit.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, the testimony was not stricken out prior to Miss Weyand's discovery. The testimony was stricken out just yesterday or the day before.

Mr. Langsdale: What did I say, Mr. Reporter?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean subsequent?

Mr. Langsdale: Subsequent. I should have said after her discovery. I didn't mean to say prior.

Mr. Ingraham: If Mr. Langsdale and the Board and the Examiner intend to inquire, and they have already inquired in this matter, Respondent wishes to withdraw its motion to strike.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will take it under advisement.

Mr. Langsdale: Will counsel state why he is withdrawing the motion to strike?

Mr. Ingraham: Because the Examiner and you, Mr. Langsdale, have gone into matters that were stricken. You have cross-examined from the testimony that Mrs. Reed gave, you read that testimony into the record, although the Examiner announced two or three days ago that that testimony had been stricken.

Mr. Langsdale: Was it your contention on the ruling that it precluded me from cross-examining Mrs. Reed?

[fol. 3949] Mr. Ingraham: I suppose the Examiner's purpose in striking it out was because he felt it was immaterial to the issues in the case, I don't know. He didn't announce his purpose.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll take the matter under advisement and dispose of it. It is presumed that it does not preclude any other counsel from cross-examining this witness from 32-E.

Mr. Ingraham: Does that mean it is proper for counsel to take up what you have stricken from the record, and ask questions on it?

Mr. Langsdale: On cross-examination I have a right to ask her any questions about anything.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question, Mr. Ingraham, is should you read into the record the testimony I have stricken?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, for that matter, if you intend to go into it, Respondent wishes to withdraw its motion.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I said I would take it under advisement.

Mr. Langsdale: I just want to say one further thing in that connection. My own conception for the reason of the ruling of the Examiner, was that the counsel for the Respondent were insisting that Mrs. Reed had been misled by [fol. 3950] the intermingling of these exhibits, and the cross-examination should be stricken.

Mr. Ingraham: We certainly do think the witness was misled.

Mr. Langsdale: You aren't inferring that I misled the witness?

Mr. Ingraham: No, not at the time you were cross-examining Mrs. Reed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I still feel, as far as Board's Exhibit No. 32 is concerned, except for its receipt in evidence, the testimony and even the remarks with respect to it, perhaps, should be stricken. I will take it under advisement, but if I strike your testimony, I am inclined to believe I should strike the whole matter before the receipt of the exhibit, and then if you want it to be reoffered—

Mr. Ingraham: That sort of a ruling is highly unfair.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I haven't ruled yet.

Mr. Ingraham: That is certainly why it is unfair, because Mrs. Reed is examined about those matters apparently on a fishing expedition, and if something isn't disclosed helpful to you, then her testimony and everything in connection with it will be stricken out.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, you are the man who made the motion.

Mr. Ingraham: We made the motion at the time.

[fol. 3951] Trial Examiner Batten: Now, it is not material to me, if you counsel here all agree that you want to go into the matter, I have no objections. If you are undecided what you want to do, well—

Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) I don't think it is fair for Mrs. Reed to be examined at length about a certain matter, and then, apparently, if nothing is developed helpful to the Board, then it is going to be stricken out.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute. Who said if there is nothing helpful it is going to be stricken out?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, what is the purpose of examining Mrs. Reed, both counsel for the Board and—

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale will have to tell you that. I can't tell you his purpose.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Langsdale got up in Court, and he agreed that the testimony should be stricken, and he said that he was doing that out of an abundance of caution. Now, he spends considerable time inquiring into it.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is your desire? I suggested I would go over the matter, Mr. Ingraham, and take under advisement your suggestion to withdraw. Now, do you prefer that to having me straighten the matter out?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: And strike it?

Mr. Ingraham: I would rather have our motion with-[fol. 3952] drawn, and the evidence left in the record.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is there any objection, Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: Not a bit. I think, as a matter of fact, although I was not going to urge it, a motion from the Board's counsel or the I.L.G.W.U., to reinstate the testimony would be in order after Mrs. Reed's testimony yesterday afternoon in which she plainly showed that she was not misled, that she read that sentence at the top of Board's Exhibit 32-E before she made her answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, what is your position? Do you have any objection to withdrawing the motion to strike, and reinstating the testimony?

Miss Weyand: I have no objection at all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, what is your position?

Mr. Tyler: No objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, as soon as you are all agreed, I will allow your motion.

Mr. Ingraham: All right.

Trial Examiner Batten: The motion to strike is withdrawn and I will reinstate the testimony.

. . . . . .

[fol. 3957] Q. Now, when you testified about the Mamie Tubessing conversation, you were unable to give us the name of the girl who told you that. Can you now give us the name of the girl who told you that?

A. My remembrance is— I remember the girl's name. Just at that time I couldn't remember it. It was Maude Fisher.

Q. You say Maude Fisher is the one who told you that?

A. Maude Fisher is the one who told that she had met—I believe it was Thelma Owen, rather than Mamie Tubessing. She told several people down there. She told Mrs. Reeves, I believe.

Q. Did she tell you that?

A. I don't remember that Maude told me that herself. I know that some of the girls did talk to me about this [fol. 3958] violence, and they understood that they were going to "take me for a ride."

. . . . . .

[fol. 3974] Mr. Langsdale: Was Exhibit No. 35 offered and received in evidence?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. Up to and including 36, in fact, all of the exhibits that have been marked, those offered have been received, I believe, Respondent's as well as Board's.

Mr. Ingraham: That is my understanding. May it be understood that the exhibits offered by Respondent, which I think were Exhibits 17 to 38 inclusive, have been offered?

Trial Examiner Batten: 16 to 38 inclusive.

Mr. Ingraham: 16 to 38 inclusive have been offered and received in evidence?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, my records indicate they have been.

Mr. Ingraham: That is my recollection. I was not sure whether I offered each individual newspaper; I had them identified.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, your news articles were 18 to 38; they were all received.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3975] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mrs. Reed, in answer to one of Miss Weyand's questions as to whether or not, after Mr. Baty became your production manager, prior to December, 1940, the instructors had met with Mr. Baty to discuss the operators; my recollection is that your answer was, "Not generally". Is that your recollection of your answer?

A. I really don't know how Mr. Baty — what his operations were. I am under the impression the meetings which Mrs. Reeves had with the instructors was not kept up; she constantly had meetings with the instructors. Of course, she was not in the plant like Mr. Baty.

Q. What do you mean by "not generally"?

A. Just what I said.

Q. Just occasionally?

A. I probably should have elaborated a little more. Just as I have said now, Mrs. Reeves used to have the instructors meet with her very regularly.

Q. Once a week?

A. I don't know how often she did, exactly, but being on the same floor, I saw them when they came on the office floor, and I don't believe that those meetings were kept up like she had them, because Mr. Baty was right [fol. 3976] on the floor, and went into the sections; I don't believe he ran it that way. It is not my understanding he ran the plant like Mrs. Reeves did; as a matter of fact, it is my definite recollection he didn't.

Q. You said "not generally", or "not regularly". Do you mean once in a while, or as often as Mrs. Reeves met with them?

A. It is rather a broad term. I certainly knew he hadn't been meeting with them regularly; now, whether he met with them, of my own knowledge I don't know.

Q. Do your employees generally wear uniforms?

A. They wear —

Q. (Interrupting) Or white dresses?
A. They wear white dresses.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3977] By Mr. Langsdale:
Q. Did your executives and supervisors wear uniforms, ever?
A. My understanding is that everybody in the plant, all the women in the plant, wear uniforms or white dresses.
Q. Mrs. Reeves didn't, did she?
A. Mrs. Reeves was not in the plant, Mr. Langsdale; her office was on the tenth floor.
Q. Did Rose Todd wear a uniform?
A. I don't know; I suppose she did.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3978] Q. You don't know whether she wore a uniform or not?
A. I do not. The girls on the 9th floor, except those that sew on the machines, all the time, don't wear uniforms or don't wear white dresses; those people in the pattern department don't, their work being done on the 9th floor.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3979] Q. I don't recall that you have been asked the duties of W. G. Weaverling, in 1937, at the Donnelly Garment Company's plant?
A. I think that we called Mr. Weaverling the doorman, but he stays in the lobby all the time, and takes care of packages for the girls.
Q. How long had he been employed by the Donnelly Garment Company in April, 1937?
A. I don't know exactly. It was sometime after the [fol. 3980] depression, because he had had a much better job, and he came to our place and wanted some sort of a job.
Q. And he is there yet?
A. He is there yet.
Q. Do you class him as a watchman?
A. I wouldn't class him as a watchman, he is a doorman.
Q. T. G. Boozell, what are his duties?
A. He is a watchman.
Q. Where does he watch?

A. Well, these men relieve one another. I don't know exactly the details on their watching; I know that Boozell is there, and Ed Corbin is there.

Q. And Eckert is there?

A. I don't believe Eckert is there. I don't believe he has been there for some time.

Q. Mr. Boozell, I see, in April, 1937, received a salary of $150 a month. Now, for that $150 was he doing anything except just standing around watching?

A. Not to my knowledge. You see, I don't know whether — those men worked long hours, and a number of days — and I believe they worked 12 hours a day watching, or whatever you can call watching, whether it is working or not; to my knowledge all they did is watch.

Q. All of those watchmen watch 12 hours a day?

A. I believe they do.

[fol. 3981] Q. Mr. Weaverling got $108 a month, whereas Boozell got $150 a month?

A. Well, Mr. Weaverling only works 8 hours a day.

Q. I see. Do you know whether Mr. Boozell worked 12 or not?

A. I am not sure; I am under that impression.

Q. On what do you base that impression?

A. Well, I know at one time he did; now, whether he continued to do that or not, I don't know. It has been the practice of watchmen, generally, to work 12 hours, I believe.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You mean Weaverling, is that the man?

A. No, no, Mr. Weaverling is a door man.

Q. No, no, I want to ask a question about him, Weaverling; is that the man, is that the name, Weaverling?

A. Yes, Weaverling.

Q. Well, as I understand it, he worked days, is that right?

A. Yes. He may work 9 hours, I don't know. He doesn't work as long.

Q. My only point is, distinguishing between the two. Did he work days and the other man nights, or what was the difference?

A. The difference was he simply sits down at a sort of [fol. 3982] an information desk, and if someone comes in and they want to go to the advertising department or something like that, he tells them where to go. He is really an information man.

Now, in addition to that, when the girls buy merchandise, the packages are left with him, and he takes care of them for them, and he is really an information man and a lobby — in the lobby there, you know what I mean.

Q. Yes, I understand. But the thing I don't understand, Mrs. Reed, did all three of these men work days?

Mr. Langsdale: Four of them, Mr. Examiner.

A. I think they change about.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Oh, they were on shifts?

A. Well, we have — I am not absolutely sure, except it seems to me I see one of them when I come in and out, and it seems to me we have a watchman there day and night. We may have, I really believe we have. I am not sure of it.

Q. Do you know, in 1937, if these men all worked days, or did some of them work days and some of them nights, outside of the door man?

A. Outside of the door man?

Q. Outside of the door man.

A. The door man is always there. Mr. Weaverling does a little clerical work there.

Q. That is the part I didn't understand.

[fol. 3983] A. Mr. Weaverling was a bank cashier before he took that job there.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do I understand you don't know just what Mr. Boozell did in his duties as a watchman?

A. I don't know what he did as duties of a watchman. I expected him to watch the building.

Q. To whom was he responsible at the plant?

A. Well, I would say probably to Mr. Baty.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3990] Mr. Ingraham: Well, I would like to adjourn until 2 o'clock, in order to go over the cross-examination and see what points we do want to redirect examine Mrs. Reed on.

Trial Examiner Batten: There has been so little this morning, Mr. Ingraham, I don't think I would be warranted at all in adjourning until 2 o'clock.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, there have been four or five days, I believe, of cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is correct.

Mr. Ingraham: Would it be all right to withdraw Mrs. Reed and put another witness on, in order that we can save time?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. Will you then have Mrs. Reed come back on at 2 o'clock?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, or later, as soon as we finish with the next witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't want to agree to that, Mr. Ingraham. That might be days, and I think from Mrs. Reed's standpoint, as well as the arrangement of the hearing, it is well to dispose of Mrs. Reed as soon as possible. Now, I am willing, if you want to put on another [fol. 3991] witness and let Mrs. Reed go until in the morning, to do that, but I think we ought to dispose of her.

Mr. Ingraham: That is all right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Reed, you may be excused, then, until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

(Witness temporarily excused.)

* * * * * *

Wave Tobin, a witness called by and on behalf of respondent Donnelly Garment Company, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Wave Tobin.

[fol. 3992] Q. Where do you live, Miss Tobin?

A. 1016 Locust, the Drake Hotel.

Q. Are you employed? A. Yes, I am.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am the Manager of the Kansas City Joint Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Will you state what the Kansas City Joint Board consists of? A. It is made up—

Mr. Langsdale: It seems to me that is repetition. Miss Tobin testified to that before.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't remember. It will only take a moment. She may answer.

A. It is made up of elected representatives of the different locals of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union here in Kansas City.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Does the Joint Board enter into contracts with other garment companies in Kansas City?

A. With the garment companies in Kansas City, yes.

Q. Do you have charge of that particular business of the Joint Board? A. Of negotiating contracts?

Q. Yes. A. No.

[fol. 3993] Q. What do you have charge of?

A. I have charge of the shops that are under contract with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. I take up the complaints and hold local meetings.

Q. You are familiar with the contracts that have been entered into between the Joint Board and the various shops? A. Yes.

Q. Now, what shops come under the Kansas City Joint Board in Kansas City?

A. You mean, the names of the different shops?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, there are about 25 or 26. I don't think I could call them off from memory.

Q. Can you name the ones that you remember?

A. Stern-Slegman Prins Company, Brand & Puritz, Louis Walter & Company, Fashion Belt Garment Company, Maurice Coat Company, Styline Garment Company— I am trying to name them by groups. That is of the coat shops. How many have I named?

Mr. Shepard: Five, I believe.

A. (Continuing) Carl Mann, Rosewin Coat Company, and Morgan-Rice.

Marlene Dress Company, Lee's Dresses, Quality Hill, Betty Lou, Gordon Bros., Gernes, Liberty, Mayfair, Azars Braburn,— I am sure there are more, but I can't re-
[fol. 3994] member, unless you would want to read the list back to me, and then I might be able to think of some more.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Would you, at noon, make out a complete list?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, are employees in these various shops in separate locals, or in one local?

A. They are grouped. Cloak locals, silk dress locals, cotton locals, sportswear, and one children's local.

Q. Who belongs to the locals? I mean by that—

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, who is eligible to belong; is that it, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: No, I wasn't asking her that yet.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I understood, Miss Robin, that Gernes have a separate local.

A. That is our children's and misses' dress local.

Q. Are there any other shops that have their own particular local?

A. Yes, the Stern-Slegman Prins shop, which is in North Kansas City, and Brand & Puritz.

Q. Is there any difference in who is eligible for membership in the respective locals?

A. I don't think I understand your question, Mr. Ingraham.

Q. I mean, these shops that have their own locals; do you have the same eligibility requirements in those shops as you do in the locals that take in more than one shop?
[fol. 3995-3996] A. Yes.

Q. They are all the same? A. Yes.

Miss Weyand: Mr. Trial Examiner, I would at this time like to raise the question of the limitation of this hearing to the offer of proof. As I recall it, there is no offer of proof which covers Miss Tobin's testimony, at least I am unable to call to mind any offer within the terms of which her present testimony might be included.

As I understand, we are limited to the remand, and I would like to object to the further questioning of Miss Tobin unless counsel for the company can identify it as coming within one of the offers previously made and which the circuit court directed the Board to take evidence upon.

Trial Examiner Batten: Where would this come, Mr. Ingraham, under the proffers of proof?

Mr. Ingraham: Our offers of proof were offers made on behalf of employees. However, Mrs. Reed was permitted to testify on the principle, as I understood it, that she was head of the company and wasn't able to testify before. Now, certain issues have been raised, and Miss Tobin is in charge of the I. L. G. W. U. activities in Kansas City, and there are just a few matters that we want to ask her about.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean matters that were raised in Mrs. Reed's testimony? Is that what you mean?

[fol. 3997] Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you mean by that, Mr. Ingraham, that any matters that were raised in Mrs. Reed's testimony, then all of the parties would have the right to call witnesses with respect to that testimony? In other words, I would like to have a general idea of how wide this thing is going to be.

Mr. Ingraham: I don't like at this time to state what my purpose is.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I am not asking you your purpose. I merely asked you if you feel, with respect to Mrs. Reed's testimony—not this witness's testimony—that all of the matters that were brought out in her testimony, all of the parties are now at liberty to call witnesses to either corroborate that testimony or to deny that testimony?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, it is my view that unless the Examiner limits the scope of the hearing—and, as I understand, he has not definitely ruled on that yet—that if the testimony is not limited, if respondent desires to corroborate Mrs. Reed's testimony, and it is material, that the respondent would have that right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I am not denying you that right; neither am I saying you have that right. My only question is, whether because I was liberal with Mrs. Reed's testimony, in view of her inability to be here at the [fol. 3998] last hearing, it opens up her testimony for all of the parties—I am speaking not only of the respondent but of all of the parties—to either corroborate her testimony or to call witnesses for the purpose of explaining it or denying it. That is the point I am concerned about, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: If there is testimony Mrs. Reed has given that is material, I would think the other parties would have the right to present any evidence they wanted to present on that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, that, in substance, means that any of the parties would be able to call such witnesses, because you would proceed on the assumption, Mr. Ingraham, I presume, that all of the testimony she has given is material or it wouldn't be in here.

Mr. Ingraham: I think that on cross-examination there have been matters brought out that are not material, but we didn't object. We permitted counsel for the Board and counsel for the intervener to pursue that line of questioning.

Mr. Langsdale: Generous of you.

Mr. Tyler: If Your Honor please, the only point of these questions so far is as to membership of various unions in the local board and contracts. Now, if I recall correctly, that subject was opened up and an offer of proof was made in the previous hearing. So that is well within the purview of this hearing, whether the hearing is going [fol. 3999] to be further opened up or not.

Trial Examiner Batten: But, Mr. Tyler, that offer of proof was not included, was it, within the statement of the circuit court when it said the offer of proof with respect to these 1,200 employees—that was not part of that offer of proof, was it?

Mr. Tyler: I think so. I think that obviously is part of the consideration which governed these employees of the Donnelly Garment Company in their choice of a union, and that is one of the subjects which the Circuit Court of Appeals said should be received and evidence bearing on it accepted and considered.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, I presume that raises the question, doesn't it, Mr. Tyler, of whether such testimony then shouldn't be through the 1,200 employees? Don't you, from reading the decision, feel that the court limited the testimony to these 1,200 employees?

Mr. Tyler: If Your Honor means, limited the testimony to solely these 1,200 employees, I do not agree. I think the 1,200 employees are entitled to testify, by the ruling of the Circuit Court of Appeals, and also corroborative evidence tending to show why they formed the union should be admitted, even though it does not come out of the mouths of these 1,200 employees. I think why they formed the union is one of the subjects the Circuit Court of Appeals said ought to be received in evidence, and I [fol. 4000] do not believe it is limited to coming solely out of their mouths.

Miss Weyand: Mr. Trial Examiner, I think the discussion of Mr. Tyler's has suggested that he believes Miss Tobin should be heard here on the contracts, because the employees may have joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union by reason of their information about these contracts.

You will recall, a parallel problem arose in dealing with Mrs. Reed's reading of the newspapers. At that time counsel for the company stated that they desired to show Mrs. Reed's attitude, and they offered the newspaper articles, not to show the truth of the facts therein recited, but merely as showing the basis upon which Mrs. Reed formed her attitude.

I think the same view should be taken as to the contracts. If the employees desire to state here that they formed or joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union because of some understanding they had as to the nature of these contracts, I believe that under the court order that is permissible.

However, I do not believe that opens up an investigation by the National Labor Relations Board of whether their understanding of those contracts was accurate or inaccurate. It, therefore, is immaterial whether or not these contracts do exist and what their terms are.

For that reason, I believe that the line of inquiry which [fol. 4001] the company seems to be opening up in the questions which they have directed to Miss Tobin is not within any offer. If the company still believes that it is, I would like to have them produce the offer and relate it specifically, rather than talking in vague generalities about offers which were made.

I have here before me the offer on 1,200 witnesses, and I find no reference to the contracts. I do find reference to the employees' understanding of the violence which was alleged to be taking place at certain of these factories prior to the time and around the time they formed the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and I had assumed and so interpreted the court's opinion to mean that the employees could get on the stand and state their understanding of those facts and the relation it had to the action they took in forming or joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. I felt it did not open up the question of whether that violence occurred.

On a separate offer which was urged upon the circuit court, the failure of the Trial Examiner to try the issue of conspiracy and violence, the court ruled:

"We are of the opinion that the Trial Examiner did not err in confining the issues to those which were tendered by the complaint filed by the Board. We are satisfied that the Board was not required to try the International for alleged conspiracy, nor to try the charge that the Board had conspired or colluded with the International."

Taking that statement by the court in the light of the [fol. 4002] issues tendered by the petition for review, the answer thereto, and the motions made in that court, the briefs thereon, and the oral argument, it seems to me clear beyond any doubt that the circuit court did not intend that we try the contracts which the I. L. G. W. U. may have with other concerns, or any violence in which the I. L. G. W. U. may or may not have engaged at the time in question.

Mr. Tyler: Mr. Examiner, I do not concede there is any obligation on the people who sign an affidavit to state that "We hereby include reference to all of the evidence which may develop to support our position." Certainly that is not the case.

When these employees say, "We offer to prove why we joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union," the position of the Circuit Court of Appeals is obviously that any information that rationally indicates that or disproves that is accepted.

Trial Examiner Batten: I believe I would agree with you on the statement you have just made, as I understand it. In substance, it is this, is it not, Mr. Tyler, that these 1,200 people acted because of certain things which they, in their own minds, knew or heard or read, and they have a right to testify in this hearing to the things which motivated them in joining the union or in organizing the union?

Now, that, it seems to me, is true, Mr. Tyler. But it doesn't seem to me that that is the question in issue here now.

[fol. 4003] Mr. Tyler: Your Honor, let me go farther.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Tyler: Their testimony was, throughout the case, that they thought their contract was a better contract than the International's. Now, undoubtedly they should be able to show that, as the comparison they made on which they based a choice, which they say they voluntarily made.

Now, it would be an extraordinary ruling to say that you could compare your contract and reach a conclusion, but we won't let such a contract or the facts of such a contract in evidence. We are not offering to show whether it was good or bad, but we are saying, "Here are certain contracts. The employees say they learned about these contracts." Now, if they learned about these contracts, what was really in the contracts is important as to whether it is probable that they felt that their contract was better.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will go along with you on the latter part of your statement, this far, that if these employees joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union because they felt they had a better contract, that issue, of course, can only arise with the number of employees who joined the union after the contract was signed, and it wasn't signed until May 22. But—

Mr. Tyler: I do not agree with you.

Trial Examiner Batten: But even assuming it was [fol. 4004] signed before, Mr. Tyler, I have no objection to these people testifying that was one of the reasons—

Mr. Tyler: If they thought they could get a better contract than the one in existence, that would be a valid reason.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. I have no objection to that. But I can't see yet where—

Mr. Tyler: After learning what opinion they formed about these contracts, is it not important what the contracts were?

Trial Examiner Batten: It is important what information they had upon which they arrived at their decision.

Mr. Tyler: And the probability of their having the information is influenced by what were the effects of these contracts.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is important, also, to know what information they had. I say, "what information they had"—not what information was available in somebody's office, Mr. Tyler. What information did these people have upon which they acted?

Mr. Tyler: And what information they had is made either probable or improbable by what the facts were. There were many people in town who knew about these contracts. Now, whether a thing is true or not, there is some showing of probability about where you get that information. If I am informed that a building is on the north side of the [fol. 4005] river, the fact does have some bearing on the probability of whether I got that information or was influenced by it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let us say a person joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union because he felt that the contract which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union had would be better than the contract which the International had. Now, the question which arises is not, what is in the International contract? The question that arises is whether or not that person knew what was in the International contract, and what was the basis of that decision.

Now, supposing that the fact was that the International contract was much less desirable, but this individual didn't know that, or the facts concerning the contract, the rates of pay or the hours or conditions of employment, how could that possibly have any effect on that individual's mind in joining one or the other union?

Mr. Tyler: In this way, Your Honor: If Your Honor is going to pass on whether these people really did get that information, and you are also going to pass on whether that was a probable reason for their joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, is it persuasive or is it ridiculous? The facts as to what the contracts were are certainly persuasive as to whether these people really got information and whether the information was correct and whether they were persuaded by it. If some statement gets out that the International is working for $1.00 a week, I [fol. 4006] don't think Your Honor would consider that is persuasive, and I don't think you would consider they got that, if you know what is in the contract. But the facts bear on the possibility of these people getting information about it, and whether that information persuaded them. To try that in a vacuum, without anything to show what that claim was based on—

Trial Examiner Batten: Let me inject this, Mr. Tyler: It seems to me the way to proceed in this hearing is to take the testimony first which I rejected; in other words, the testimony of these, 1,200 people. Now, it seems to me that that is the first thing that ought to be done.

Now, if that raises some of these points that you have mentioned, Mr. Tyler, it seems to me that that is the time to receive that testimony.

I am inclined to feel that, as Examiner, I have a perfect right to discuss the order of proof, and I am inclined to believe that we should receive first the testimony which the Circuit Court of Appeals said I should have received.

Now, what is wrong with proceeding in that manner?

Miss Weyand: Mr. Trial Examiner, in line with that fact, I wish to point out, as far as my acquaintance with the case goes, the Board and counsel for the Board have regarded it immaterial how grossly erroneous the opinions of the employees may have been in regard to violence or in [fol. 4007] regard to other contracts. It has been the Board's position that the objective acts done by the company at its plant resulted in the employees joining the union, that those acts constituted unfair labor practices, and that it was immaterial what the employees thought or how misled they were. Now, I will not state that if the employees should go on and show statements of fact that were highly improbable, that we might not at that time say we would like to show how improbable those facts are.

It is my opinion that there will be no necessity on my part to challenge any statement of an employee as to his belief about the undesirable nature of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union or the undesirable character of the contracts which the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union enters into. It is my position that it is immaterial how bad he thought the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was, or how undesirable he thought its contracts were.

Of course, I cannot tell until I have heard the testimony of the employees' to what extent the testimony may look so exaggerated that it might become necessary to question whether he really believed that or not, but from all of the testimony in the record so far there is no indication to me that any such issue should arise.

I, therefore, think that Trial Examiner Batten's suggestion that it is a matter not in issue at the present time [fol. 4008] and would only be an issue if I should challenge the statement of belief which an employee made—that is, if I should challenge whether or not he really believed that. Not until I challenge that is there an issue as to whether the employee reasonably believed what he stated he did.

For that reason, I think the line of questioning now opened up should not be pursued at this time.

[fol. 4009] Mr. Tyler: I submit that this suggestion must be made at this time, and that Your Honor should again clarify his position after that.

Trial Examiner Batten: I can thoroughly agree with you on that, Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Tyler: The position of the Board is that it is not important what these employees think.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't think she said that.

Mr. Tyler: The record will show what she said.

Mr. Langsdale: I am sure she didn't.

Trial Examiner Batten: Irrespective, the record will show what Miss Weyand said, and what Mr. Tyler said. Let's let the attorneys make their statements.

Mr. Tyler: The position of the Board is that it is not important as to what the employees think, or their mistaken ideas, as the Board would classify them; that is a position that doesn't agree with the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals, which says that obviously their reasons for taking an action which means what they think is important evidence in this case, and should be taken and weighed.

The position of the Board, if Miss Weyand correctly states it, is that the whole purpose of this Act is to be simply reversed. Instead of enabling the employees to choose the things they desire to choose, the position of the [fol. 4010] Board is that that makes no difference, and some technical action by the employers could reverse the entire purpose of the Act.

I think that is a complete distortion of the whole purpose of this hearing, and that the Circuit Court of Appeals recognized that in directing that the testimony of these employees as to their choice, which means what they think whether they were right or not—

Trial Examiner Batten: I agree with you.

Mr. Tyler: (Continuing) —should be weighed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Should be weighed, that we should take the testimony of these employees as to what they thought, what motivated them in doing the things they did. I agree with you on that.

Mr. Tyler: And also as to whether that is probably true or untrue.

Trial Examiner Batten: On that, I may even go that far and say that that might be true if I had received the testimony of the 1200 employees. In other words, it does seem to me that that is the primary purpose for which the Court sent it back, to take the testimony of these people, what they thought, why they did these things.

Now, it seems to me the logical way to do is to take their testimony.

Now, it may bring up some testimony which appears to [fol. 4011] be logical, and so forth, which may or may not make it necessary to go further into that matter, but it seems to me we are reversing the process and taking the testimony by starting down at the end, rather than at the beginning, when the Court said the testimony of these 1200 people should have been received.

Mr. Tyler: Is Your Honor making it solely a matter of order, but admitting that inasmuch as these contracts were not as good as the employees believed they could get, that makes it more probable the employees are telling the truth when they say they think they are getting a better contract?

Trial Examiner Batten: I am saying this: The testimony which the Court said I should have taken first it is easy to tell then whether additional testimony is necessary. I mean, in other words, aren't we anticipating something that may or may not be necessary?

Mr. Tyler: Of course, Your Honor is the sole judge as to the proper order of the procedure, but I submit you are hardly going to be able to take the testimony of all the employees, solely on the point of what they thought, and exclude all other evidence. We have before us, ready to be produced, part of the admissible evidence, and it seems to me as long as it is here and ready to be produced, it should not be postponed; as to the matter of the testimony of the employees, it should be taken.

[fol. 4012] Mr. Ingraham: Miss Weyand jumped to a conclusion that the scope of my examination was for a certain purpose. I have an entirely different purpose in inquiring of Miss Tobin about certain matters. As I ask these questions, I will disclose my purpose. I don't want to do that until I ask the questions. It will be very brief, and we can finish by 12.30, if I am just permitted to go ahead.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I think you would agree with me, Mr. Ingraham, that whether someone was trying to anticipate your purpose, no one has asked you your purpose and I don't intend to, but I think you agree with me and Mr. Tyler and Mr. Langsdale and Miss Weyand, that the issue we have been discussing is one which I do have to decide shortly.

Mr. Ingraham: Sooner or later.

Trial Examiner Batten: It doesn't seem to me to be later now. I am not talking with respect to these issues. I have no objection, if you want to finish with Miss Tobin, but that was one reason why I wanted to proceed with Mrs. Reed at 2 o'clock, because I thought we could dispose of Mrs. Reed, so she could get back to her business, and not have to be around here any longer; and then, before we take on another witness, I will have to decide that question; that is one of my purposes. Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, I am interested in this issue. [fol. 4013] I happen to represent this witness as counsel, and I am not going to permit her to introduce any contracts here for the edification of the front row, and have them go out and testify they knew all about these matters after hearing them paraded on the witness stand; for one reason, I don't want the witnesses in the Courtroom so they can be educated. Now, there are a couple of reasons why this is utterly immaterial, this line of examination.

Mr. Ingraham: I haven't started yet, Mr. Langsdale.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, you are asking about the contracts of the I.L.G.W.U., and it has no employer here.

Mr. Ingraham: I asked her about the contracts.

Mr. Langsdale: In the first place I am not putting the I.L.G.W.U. up against the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or what they believe about the two unions; I don't concede that is the issue, that they might prefer some other unions, that they might not want any union at all. The issue here is whether or not the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized, financed and dominated by the Donnelly Garment Company, not whether they wanted to join the I.L.G.W.U.

Mr. Tyler, in his argument, says that one balance of the scales is the I.L.G.W.U., and the other balance of the scales is the Donnelly Garment Company union contract. What difference does that make? Does he say the I.L.G.W.U. contract is better than the Donnelly Garment Workers' [fol. 4014] Union contract, that the people ought to join the I.L.G.W.U.? It isn't here, that is not the case; that is not the question. The I.L.G.W.U. is not on trial here at all.

The issue is not whether or not these people joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or joined the I.L.G.W.U. On top of that, what difference does it make what these people thought? What is actually in these contracts is not material. I concede this order to be so broad that if one of these girls comes forward and says she has a bad dream about the I.L.G.W.U. and in favor of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and she acted on that dream, she had a right to do it. It doesn't make any difference whether it was true or false; and if they come in here and say they heard certain things about the I.L.G.W.U. contract that aren't true, would it be proper for us to come in and introduce the contracts and prove they weren't true?

As a matter of fact, if they did hear something about the I.L.G.W.U. contracts, and did believe them, and that honestly caused them to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, if that is material, we couldn't come in and say they are wrong, that our contracts aren't that way at all.

57, Tabulation relative to Comparative Earnings of Piece Work Operators—First Six Months—1937 and 1938	7131	4321

The Examiner would have a right to say that doesn't make any difference, she believed it honestly, and that is why she joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. [fol. 4015] So, there are a number of reasons why these contracts aren't material or proper in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, in view of Mr. Ingraham's statement—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) I am not going to allow these witnesses to bring the contracts in here unless they are made to.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed, Mr. Ingraham. It may be the very matter we are discussing wouldn't be raised by the testimony, although I think you will all agree with me it has to be decided on.

Mr. Tyler: I think I should be allowed to meet Mr. Langsdale's statements, please. I suggest, which does Mr. Langsdale prefer working for, out of two employments, the fact one pays him $5,000 for some amount of work, that the other pays him $200, which he prefers to work for?

Mr. Langsdale: I might not even have the chance to get the $5,000 client. Is that any reason why I should have to take the $200 client? That is not the issue here.

Mr. Tyler: I would say, what would be your choice is the issue.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I would say the only difference is this, Mr. Langsdale knows he would get $5,000 from one and $200 from the other. I say that is immaterial here. What the 1200 employees knew in their mind when [fol. 4016] they made their own decision, not what is on file in someone's office.

Mr. Tyler: And whether they knew it is certainly material, whether it is a fact or the wildest uncertain dream.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I think it depends primarily on what they knew. Let's assume it is false, but they didn't know it was false—

Mr. Tyler: (Interrupting) Yes, but the fact it is false lessens the possibility they heard it or believed it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let's proceed, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: Miss Tobin, in how many shops that you have named are there head pattern makers?

Mr. Langsdale: I object. That is immaterial, doesn't tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case. We are not trying the I.L.G.W.U. here or their contract, and how many pattern heads they have hasn't anything to do with it, whether or not the pattern department in the Donnelly Garment Company influenced or coerced the other employees to get into the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think that has anything to do with the contract. It has to do with this question, with the function, what was the head pattern—.

Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I think it is material [fol. 4017] in this case.

Mr. Langsdale: In what way?.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't care to go into it.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to it. I suppose his next question is whether or not that head pattern maker belongs to the I.L.G.W.U., and I think that is immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't know what his next question is. You may tell us. Read the question.

A. Please.

(Last question read by the reporter.)

A. I would be handicapped, because out of the 29 shops, I don't remember just which ones I named, but we don't have head pattern makers, we have a head cutter in the larger shops, and two of those would be the Stern and Prins shop and the Brand and Puritz shop.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. At how many shops you have named do you have instructors?

A. I believe there are instructors in all of the shops.

Q. Now, Miss Tobin, are instructors that are in these various shops members of your Locals?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial. It doesn't tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case. It doesn't state whether or not the Donnelly Garment Company influenced the employees of that shop to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. What the custom is [fol. 4018] in the other shops has no bearing on that issue.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us.

A. They are not.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. They are not members of the I.L.G.W.U?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, can you give me the names of the instructors, at the present time, in Marguerite Keyes, Inc.?

Mr. Langsdale: That is objected to as immaterial, doesn't tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case. This is his witness, he puts her on the stand and vouches for her testimony. I suppose now he wants to know whether she is telling the truth or not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. I am not interested in whose witness she is.

Mr. Langsdale: I am.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not, and I am only concerned about this, and I intend to follow this rule. Whoever puts the witness on the stand may proceed with the witness; we are interested in getting the facts. If it becomes obvious the witness is adverse, even to the person who puts the witness on, I will allow more latitude in the examination; that is the matter that interests me. I don't intend to hold out whose witness it is.

Mr. Langsdale: That is the rule.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is the rule to the point [fol. 4019] where we will have to get into a discussion about whose witness and whether the witness is adverse and whether you are trying to impeach your own witness, I am not going into all that.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I will submit, as far as this woman is concerned, your rule is correct, but I don't think they ought to be permitted to build up a strong defense and knock it down.

Trial Examiner Batten: Was there a question? Yes. Do you know the names of the instructors?

A. No, I don't. I may know some of them, if I saw the name or if I saw the girl, but I can't remember the names of the instructors.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Is May Stevens a member of the I.L.G.W.U.?

A. I believe that she is, I am not sure.

Q. Has she been acting as instructor at the Marguerite Keyes shop?

A. I think she was made an instructor about two weeks ago.

Q. And she is still a member of your union?

A. If there has not been a meeting since she was made an instructor, she is.

Q. So if there hasn't been a meeting, she is still a member? A. Yes.

[fol. 4020] Q. Now, you answered, in answer to a previous question, there were head cutters that belonged to the I.L.G.W.U. In what shops are those head cutters employed? A. I said that?

Q. Yes, you said there weren't any head pattern makers, but there were several head cutters in the larger shops.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I don't think she said they belonged to the union.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Well, do they belong to the union?

A. Head cutters do not belong to the union.

Q. What cutters do?

A. Cutters who do productive work, who do actual cutting.

Q. If a cutter does actual work part of the time, and then the balance of the time directs other cutters in their work, would that person be eligible for membership in your union?

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, that is not material to any issue in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she can tell us.

Mr. Langsdale: Are we comparing the unions here?

Trial Examiner Batten: She may tell us.

A. I don't know of any of our shops where the work is done that way.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. How is it done?

A. In some very small shops— I mean in the shops where they have one or two cutters, there is no head cut-[fol. 4021] ters; there is possibly one of the cutters who does the productive work, takes care of the cutting tickets and decides what work has to be cut throughout the day, but there is no head cutter.

Q. Now, the cutter that does that kind of work, is he qualified for membership in your union?

A. Any worker that does productive work that actually works on the garment, is eligible for membership.

Q. Even though part of their work does consist in directing others in what has to be cut and the tickets, as you stated, in making the tickets?

A. As I stated, yes, his work isn't directing others, because it is in the small shops where there are only one or two cutters, or possibly three.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I suppose I have a continuing objection to this line of questioning?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Miss Tobin, in the small shops where there are only one or two cutters, doesn't one cutter direct the work that is done?

A. As far as handling the cutting tickets, I presume it is done that way.

Q. What do you mean, handling the cutting tickets?

A. The tickets are given to them by the employer, that such and such a style is to be cut that day.

[fol. 4022] Q. And then he directs the others according to those tickets?

A. That I wouldn't know. I am not familiar with it. I don't take care of the cutters. Mr. White does that.

Q. Now, Miss Tobin, in the plants where they employ instructors, what work does the instructor do?

A. She teaches the people on new styles, gives out work, watches the quality of the work, trains new girls, recommends whether they should be kept or laid off, tells the firm when they need new people, tells them when they have too many people and wants somebody to be laid off.

Q. Now, it is your testimony that the instructors in these shops, that have contracts with the I.L.G.W.U., aren't members of the I.L.G.W.U.?

A. I think that I am safe in saying that all of our contracts say that the supervisors can't belong to the union.

Q. I am not talking about your contracts; what are the facts? A. That is the fact.

Q. And you are sure about that?

A. In some of the shops where they may not have an instructor, they sometimes take one of the girls from the machine, and make her an instructor. It is also understood when they do that, that those girls are to take a withdrawal card, or give up their rights in the union, they immediately [fol. 4023] cease attending union meetings, and then they either take out a withdrawal card or give up their active rights in the union.

They sometimes remain members to keep their insurance up, but they don't attend meetings, and they have no rights and no protection in the union.

Q. Now, when you mentioned withdrawal, that doesn't mean resigning from the union? A. Yes.

Q. It does? A. It does.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment. There is a difference, Miss Tobin, between withdrawing and resigning, is there not? I mean that when a [persons] resigns from the union, they sever all connection, don't they?

A. That's right.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Now, if a person withdraws from the union, as many unions do when a person becames a foreman or a supervisor, they will be able to keep up their insurance and pay on death benefits? A. That's right.

Q. But they don't have any vote?
A. That's right.
Q. They don't attend meetings? A. That's right.
[fol. 4024] Q. They don't have a right to act as a negotiator?
A. That's right.
Q. Or handle any grievances?
A. That's right.
Q. So there is a difference between withdrawing and resigning, is there not?
A. Yes.

Mr. Ingraham: I am looking for an exhibit, Mr. Examiner.

By Mr. Ingraham:
Q. While I am waiting for this exhibit, Miss Tobin, when you describe the duties of the instructors, in plants with which you have contact, did you state that they had authority to discharge?
A. To recommend discharge.
Q. To recommend discharge?
A. Yes.
Q. And did you state they had authority to employ?
A. They have authority to employ. I know in some shops they interview the girls for employment; in others, the girls are sent to their sections, and they pass on whether they are capable.

Mr. Ingraham: I haven't got the papers here that I wanted to inquire into.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I thought you only had two or three questions, Mr. Ingraham. Now, you see, we have to go over until two o'clock with this witness, and [fol. 4025] at two o'clock I had intended to make my ruling on this entire matter. Now, how much longer, roughly?

Mr. Ingraham: I would say not to exceed 15 minutes, at the most.

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, I am going to have a right to cross-examine her, and I am not going to put a limit on it, unless the Examiner puts a limit on it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am going to make my ruling at two o'clock with respect to what testimony I am going to receive, and in what order I will receive it. So, from that point on, at least, you will understand the order in which the proof is going to be submitted.

Well, we will adjourn until two o'clock.

I don't mean by that I am going to dispose of this witness. I have started with this witness, and I intend to finish with this witness.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4026] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Miss Witness, are you familiar with the fact that 2 o'clock was the time?

A. Yes, I was, and I am very sorry, I couldn't get a cab.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed with this witness.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Miss Tobin, you stated there were certain shops that you considered larger shops and certain shops that were smaller shops. Will you give the names of the larger shops that you have reference to?

A. Stern-Slegman and Prins; Brand and Puritz, Gordon, Gernes and Liberty, I would say are our larger shops.

Q. And did those larger shops have separate locals in each shop?

A. No.

Q. Will you give the shops that did have separate locals in those larger shops?

A. Stern-Slegman and Prins; Gernes, Brand & Puritz.

Q. Now, will you tell me the time that the I.L.G.W.U. entered into a contract with Stern-Slegman Prins?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial. It [fol. 4027] doesn't tend to prove or disprove any issue in the case.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us, if you know.

A. I believe that it was in January or February of 1937, I am not real sure.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you give me the same information with regard to Brand and Puritz?

A. It was a week or two following the Stern-Slegman Prins agreement.

Q. Now, can you give me the names of the presidents of the locals at Stern-Slegman Prins, since 1937, or since the contract was entered into?

• • • • • •

[fol. 4028] A. Well, I think I can recall most of them.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Tell us, if you recall.

A. What name did you ask me?

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Well, Stern-Slegman and Prins.

A. Homer Ross is the president of the local at this time, and I believe that he has been reelected each time since.

Q. Now, Brand and Puritz?

A. Brand and Puritz — I believe the first president was Lloyd Brown, and Carl Brower is the president at this time; and Ethel Carpenter was president one term, and there may have been another one, but that is all I can recall.

Q. Well, Brown was the first president, then Carpenter?

A. No, I would not say that they followed each other; I believe Brown and then Gertie Reel, then Carpenter, then Brower.

Q. Now, Homer Ross, what was his job at Stern-Slegman?

A. I think he is a marker; he is in the cutting department.

Q. What was the job of Lloyd Brown?

Mr. Langsdale: What time are you talking about?

Mr. Ingraham: When he was president.

A. When he was president, he was supervising the cut-
[fol. 4029] ting room at Brand and Puritz.

Q. Did he have charge of the cutting at Brand and Puritz?

A. I know that he had something to do with it. I don't know whether there was a man over him or not, that I can't say; he is no longer a member of the union, he took a withdrawal several years ago.

Q. But at the time he was president, he was in charge of the cutting?

A. I know that he had something to do with the management of the cutting room, but whether he is in charge of it, or somebody over him I don't know.

Q. Now, who passed on the qualifications of these people for membership in your union?

A. They were taken in at the time the agreement was signed, and at that time the Board hadn't been set up, and didn't function and didn't pass on the qualifications; at the present time the executive boards pass on them.

Q. Now, that was in 1937?

A. Right.

Q. Isn't it a fact, Miss Tobin, that in 1937 all the employees were taken into the union after this contract was signed in these respective shops?

A. No, that is not a fact.

Q. Well, who passed on their qualifications?

A. At that time I told you there was nobody passed on [fol. 4030] their qualifications until the executive boards were set up, and now the executive boards pass on the qualifications.

Q. When was the executive board set up?

A. The year following the signing of the agreement.

Q. Now, during that time, is it not a fact that instructors were taken into the union?

Miss Weyand: I object to the question as not material to the issues in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us.

A. Instructors were not taken into the union.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall a rule that your union adopted that instructors could remain in the union, but wouldn't be given the right to vote?

A. That doesn't cover the complete ruling. They could remain in the union, but they were not permitted to attend union meetings, and they had no right to vote, and they had no protection from the union; in other words, if they accepted the job as an instructor, and were discharged for one reason or the other, they had no union protection.

Q. And they could remain members of your union?

A. They could remain members of our union, with that qualification.

Q. And that did occur with a lot of instructors, they did remain members of your union?

A. Not a lot of them, Mr. Ingraham.

[fol. 4031] Q. But a great number?

A. No, not a great number, a very few.

Q. How many?

A. Well, I don't know the exact number, but I know that it wouldn't be more than five or six.

Q. How many more than five or six? Well, would you say 50?

A. 50?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Mr. Langsdale: She said it wouldn't be more than five or six.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Oh, not more than five or six; I thought you said over five or six.

A. That's right.

Q. Now, you classify cutters into top cutters or head cutters?

A. No, we don't classify them.

Q. Does your union?

A. I mean, it would depend on the work they were doing in the shop.

Q. Well, do you have such people as head cutters and top cutters?

A. In some of the larger shops, they do have head cutters.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, does the union have a classification of cut-

[fol. 4032] ters?

A. It is divided into two classifications, cutters and spreaders.

Q. Well, do you have any classifications within those two general classifications?

A. Well, they would be cutters and spreaders, but there is no classification known in the union as head cutters.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Let me ask you if you have this sort of a classification, head cutters who were members of the union, but nevertheless exercised duties in their directory capacities, over other cutters, without becoming subject to censure or discipline by the union, providing that such head cutters do not violate the provisions of the contract; head cutters who are members of the union, who shall not be allowed to cut except original samples only?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as immaterial to the issues of this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us.

A. We don't have that in Kansas City contracts.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you know of that provision being in the I.L.G.W.U. contracts?

A. No.

Q. Do you have cutters known as top cutters?

A. No, we don't.

Q. In Kansas City?

[fol. 4033] A. We don't classify them that way.

Q. How do you classify them?

A. Just cutters, choppers and spreaders, and in some of the larger shops they have markers.

Q. And in some of the larger shops is there a cutter that gives directions and orders?

A. In the larger shops there is a man that gives the directions

Q. Is he a cutter?

A. He doesn't do prodpctive work.

Q. Have you any man like that, that does productive work and gives orders in addition?

A. Not in the larger shops. As I explained this morning, in some of the smaller shops.

Q. Now, you consider Brand and Puritz a larger shop in Kansas City?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, what did Brown do?

A. Well, Mr. Ingraham, I know at the time the contract was signed there was one cutter who had joined the union before the contract was signed, his name was Henry Dellick, and he was asked to take a withdrawal card, because he does supervise the cutting room—I mean he has charge of the cutting room at Brand and Puritz. Brown, it is my understanding, did some productive work at that time.

[fol. 4034] There was more or less of a dispute about it, for some time, and then after a year or so he was asked to take a withdrawal from the union, and he did.

Q. Do you know whether or not Brown was president of the I.L.G.W.U. Local for more than one year?

A. I think that he was, but I don't remember the exact time.

Q. And you elected your officers each year, don't you?

A. No, every two years.

Q. Then, did he serve two terms as president?

A. No, he didn't serve two terms, two full terms, I am sure, but I don't remember how long he served.

Q. Are you sure he was not reelected after his first term?

A. I am not sure of that.

Q. Did Brown voluntarily resign or ask to resign from the union?

A. I don't remember just how it happened. I know at the last there was some discussion about it for some time, and I don't know whether it was because the board asked him to or whether he finally decided it was the thing to do, I don't remember.

Q. Do you recall a number of instructors that had been members of the I.L.G.W.U. asking to resign from the union?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you recall any controversy about that?

[fol. 4035] A. No, I don't.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4039] Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Langsdale states for the record that he is instructing the witness not to produce the contract. Now, I would like to know if the witness is willing to bring in the Brand and Puritz contract.

Trial Examiner Batten: The witness may indicate whether she is willing or not.

Mr. Langsdale: There is a way to determine whether or not it is material, and that is by subpoena duces tecum.

Trial Examiner Batten: I say the witness may indicate whether she is willing or not.

A. I would like to ask which contract you are asking for.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I would like all the contracts for Brand and Puritz.

A. I can't bring you in the 1937 or 1939 contracts; I could bring you the present contract; but after a contract is renewed it is taken out of our files.

Q. Where is it?

A. I think it may be in the St. Louis files, in Mr. Peristein's office.

Q. Could you communicate with his office and get the two contracts which you refer to, which are not in your files?

[fol. 4040] Trial Examiner Batten: Wouldn't the company have them?

Mr. Ingraham: I don't know.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you know what happens to the company's copies?

A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest, Mr. Ingraham, you find out whether or not the company has them in their file, rather than go through all this. I am not passing upon whether they are relevant or not, I am merely suggesting that that is a method.

Mr. Langsdale: My position is that I would not—I don't want to be put in the position of consenting that this is material, or should be produced. If we have it, and he gets out a subpoena duces tecum for it, then we will produce it, and argue the admissibility of it then.

Mr. Reed: That is strange talk about a subpoena duces tecum, when they have been demanding our contracts and our records, and they have been produced without any subpoenaes.

Trial Examiner Batten: May I say this, Senator: Maybe they have been demanding or requesting them, whichever you want to say, but I am not instructing you to produce this, but I will say that everything I have suggested to Mr. Ingraham to produce, he has brought in here, so far as that is concerned. There is no question about it, the record will support that position.

[fol. 4041] Mr. Reed: Perhaps you will now do the same thing with reference to the prosecution that you did with the defense, you will request these people to bring in this document.

Trial Examiner Batten: When the proper time comes, Senator, I will treat you the same as I treated the other people. I still want this witness to answer this question, as to her willingness to produce this document. You were looking at me, Senator, I thought you were directing your remark at me.

Mr. Reed: It was objected to the other day because I looked at Mr. Langsdale.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, but if you are making a remark, if you look at the person to whom you are addressing your remark,—I can't tell—

Mr. Reed: I was looking at the Examiner in a perfectly proper way, in order to get his ruling, but I did say, in reply to Mr. Langsdale, that it is a strange thing for them to set up the proposition that we should have a subpoena duces tecum served by us.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am trying to agree with you. Your client has been very fair in producing these documents.

Mr. Reed: I am not criticizing you in the least.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't want to be misunderstood on this question. If the Examiner should request this witness to bring them in, we will bring them in, but I don't want [fol. 4042] to voluntarily admit they are relevant; she will bring in anything you ask us to bring in.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you bring them in? What is it you want?

Mr. Ingraham: The 1937 and 1939 Brand and Puritz contracts.

A. It may take me a day or two.

Mr. Langsdale: My only point was that by bringing them in, we might be admitting their admissibility, which I don't want to do. If you will request it—I assume you will rule on that when the point is raised.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think there is any admission, Mr. Langsdale.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Miss Tobin, are examiners or inspectors employed in the shops with which the International has contracts in Kansas City?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that term "inspector" or "examiner" the same? Does it have the same meaning?

A. Yes, it has the same meaning.

Q. Now, are examiners or inspectors eligible for membership in the I.L.G.W.U.?

A. Yes.

Q. Do the shops that you have referred to employ floor girls, floor ladies?

A. I don't think I understand what you mean by floor girls.

[fol. 4043] Trial Examiner Batten: Or thread girls.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Or thread girls.

A. Some shops do.

Q. Do those terms mean the same kind of work?

A. You would have to repeat that.

Q. Well, a floor girl or a thread girl?

A. No, they do not.

Q. What do you understand is meant by a worker that is described as a floor girl?

A. We don't use that term.

Q. What do you mean by a thread girl?

A. Well, we don't use the term "thread girl" either.

Q. What term do you use?

A. I don't know what we use; possibly floor girl would come nearer describing it. They are girls that—

Q. (Interrupting) And what—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) Let her finish her answer.

A. They are girls that bring thread and recuts and so forth to the girls.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. And bring in supplies that might be needed by the operators?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, are those workers eligible for membership in the I.L.G.W.U.?

[fol. 4044] Miss Weyand: I object to the question; however, I hesitate to keep stating an objection unless the Trial Examiner desires me to state it to each question; if he has ruled he is going to allow this kind of questioning, I would like —

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Well, you may have a continuing objection. You may tell us, are they eligible for membership in the union.

A. It may be in some cases. In other cases the executive board decides on who is eligible, and it depends upon the work they were doing in the shop.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, what work would they be doing when you would classify them as being eligible?

A. Productive work; I mean if they handle the work, any productive work in the plant.

Q. What do you mean "handle"?

A. Well, we have girls that do turning and marking that we call floor girls, that is productive work. I can't recall any one shop where a girl's only duty is to bring thread or to bring recuts; I mean they do that and a number of other things.

Q. But you do consider carrying recuts and threads as productive work?

A. Well, we have never had to decide that, because the people that do that do other work like turning belts, turn-[fol. 4045] ing collars, marking off pockets, and that sort of work.

Q. Well, people that carry thread and bring cuts, would you classify those workers as being ineligible for membership in your union?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as purely speculative. She says they did not have any specific instance in which that has arisen.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I don't think this is the first speculative question we have had thus far in the hearing. I think you may answer.

A. It would depend entirely upon what they were doing. I mean, we didn't have people that do just that work, and, as I said before, the executive boards decide who were eligible. Each local has their own by-laws, and the people that want to come into the union have to go before the executive board, and at that time they are questioned as to what they do on the job, and if they decide the work is productive work, they would be eligible for the union.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Well, now, what floor girls has this executive board classified as being ineligible for membership in your union?

A. Now, that would be those in a supervisory capacity.

Q. What would the person or employee be doing that would classify them as a floor girl, and yet be in a supervisory position?

[fol. 4046] A. Well, if they were in a position in any way to have authority over the girls, then they wouldn't be admitted to the union.

Q. What do you mean by authority over the girls?

A. I mean if the girl's job was in any way affected by those people.

Q. You mean if they had the authority to fire?

A. Or to hire or to make recommendations for hiring or firing.

Q. If they don't have that authority, they would be eligible for membership in the I.L.G.W.U.?

A. No. If they have anything to say about the division of the work, they would not be eligible for membership in the union.

Q. With that exception, they would then be eligible?

A. If they had no authority to hire or fire, or no authority over the working conditions, as to whether the girl gets good work or bad work, or the division of the work, then they would be eligible to join the union.

Q. You stated that certain employees that do directing are members of the I.L.G.W.U., and are eligible for membership, this morning. That is what I understood you to say? A. No, I don't think I stated that.

Q. Well, what did you say?

A. I said in the small shops where there were one or [fol. 4047] two cutters, and the cutter does productive work; he might do a certain amount of directing as far as taking the orders from the employer and seeing what they are going to cut today, but he cuts along with the other cutters right along.

Q. If a man does cutting and does have some directory authority, or directing authority, he is eligible then for membership in your union?

A. To the extent that I stated in my answer.

Q. Now, in a large shop, if a man does productive work and has some directing authority, is he eligible for membership in your union?

A. Well, in the larger shops they are not set up that way. They have a head cutter and a man who is in charge of the cutting room, and directs the work.

Q. Now, do you know what the position of Brown was in Brand and Puritz in 1937?

A. I stated in 1937 that I believed that Brown did do some directing in the cutting room; I know that he was taken into the union at that time, and that Hank Dellick was asked to take a withdrawal because he was in charge of the cutting room.

Q. Did Hank Dellick continue to work for Brand and Puritz after the contract was signed?

A. Yes; he is working for them at the present time.

Q. Has he been over Brown at any time?

[fol. 4048] A. Well, that was a matter that was in dispute. I don't know what their difficulty was, or whether Dellick is over him or just how it is set up.

Q. At the time the contract was made with Brand and Puritz, were you in charge of the organization campaign, as you call it, for the I.L.G.W.U., in that shop?

A. I was assisting in it.

Q. You knew at that time the position of Brown, did you not? A. No, I did not.

Q. Well, did Brown assist you in that organizational campaign? A. He did not.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Positive.

Q. Do you know whether or not he solicited employees to join the I.L.G.W.U.?

A. I know that he did not.

Q. But you do know that he joined the I.L.G.W.U., and was elected the first president? A. Yes.

Q. And afterwards he served for two years?

A. I don't know the length of time that he served. I know that he served for some time.

Q. Now, Miss Tobin, there has been reference in this [fol. 4049] case to strikes at 26th and Grand, in the spring of 1937. Were your in charge of the strikers in the Missouri Garment Company plants?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment—

Miss Weyand: (Interrupting) I object to that question as not within the scope of the remand of the Circuit Court of Appeals. It was urged that error had been committed by the Trial Examiner and the Board in excluding evidence of violence in other plants. The Circuit Court's position, taken in connection with the issues there presented, clearly indicates that the Court believed the Board and the Trial Examiner properly limited the issues and properly refused to try the question of whether or not violence had taken place by the I.L.G.W.U. at other plants in Kansas City.

It is true that the offer of proof as to 1200 employees, relating to their state of mind and motives for forming and joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, did include their understanding of the nature and type of violence then occurring.

However, as I stated this morning, I believe the issue to be purely whether or not these employees were motivated by an understanding of some violence, and no question is raised at the present time in the case as to whether or not the violence did take place. That could only become an issue, if it could become one at all, if employees did [fol. 4050] allege such an understanding as a motive, and the Board should contest the honesty of the employee's statement of his understanding.

The Board, so far, hasn't contested or raised any issue that any employee who stated that he heard of violence hadn't so heard of violence.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4051] Trial Examiner Batten: I say to you, is this an introductory question opening up the question of violence through this witness?

Mr. Ingraham: We made an offer of proof by the employees on the facts involved in the so-called strikes at 26th [fol. 4052] and Grand, and I was briefly going to inquire of Miss Tobin who had charge of the strikes up there and if it was the I. L. G. W. U. and what went on.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then that raises again, doesn't it, the thing we discussed this morning, proving the fact, and is it the fact that you want to prove, or is the important thing in the court's decision the frame of mind of the employees and what they thought?

Mr. Ingraham: One of the reasons we have for showing what did occur is a remark that I believe you made at the last trial to the effect that it is more or less usual for violence—that is not correct, but you did say that—you described what we call violence as the usual organizational activities.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Ingraham, I presume that all of my sins should plague me, and they undoubtedly will, at least through this hearing, but my question still is, is this introductory to raising this entire question of violence through this witness?

Mr. Ingraham: I think that we have a right to show by this witness what the facts were up there, so that—

Trial Examiner Batten: As to violence, yes.

Mr. Ingraham: —so that there will not be any question but what this violence did occur.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, I will say I am going [fol. 4053] to rule that it is immaterial, to this extent: I am now going to direct the order of proof to this extent, I am going to direct that we first receive the testimony of the 1,200 witnesses, if they testify to material evidence that was ordered by the court, in accordance with the order of the court remanding the case.

Now, I think I said, and, if I am not mistaken, Mr. Hogsett—and you check this with him and call it to his attention in the record—agreed with me to this extent, as to Mrs. Reed—I said on at least three occasions I felt Mrs. Reed should testify about any and all facts, because, unfortunately, she could not be here in July 1939, and I would not attempt to limit Mrs. Reed's testimony.

I said, further, that as to any other executive officer of the company or any other person who couldn't be here at the last hearing, I would apply the same rule.

Now, Miss Tobin was here at the last hearing.

I am going to direct that order of proof at this time. And I am further going to do this— I am not going to make a ruling at this time on how extensive the Circuit Court of Appeals' ruling goes, because I want to give further consideration to it. Now, I am going to spend the rest of the afternoon listening to any argument which counsel have on my ruling that we will proceed with the 1,200 witnesses, as the court stated that testimony should [fol. 4054] be received. I will listen to any arguments there are with respect to how much the Circuit Court wanted included in this. Now, I will listen to any arguments there are.

Mr. Ingraham: Before Miss Tobin is excused, and before making any offer of proof, I have just one other question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she has not answered the last one, has she?

Mr. Ingraham: No. I understood you to state that you were going to have us make an offer of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I want an offer of proof on that, as far as this witness is concerned; not a general offer of proof, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Miss Tobin, who is the chairlady at the Marguerite Keyes shop at the present time?

Mr. Langsdale: Now, just a moment. The Marguerite Keyes shop wasn't in existence in July 1939, as I understand it—not until sometime later.

Mr. Ingraham: I am asking her, at the present time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that in connection with your other question, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: What other question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Your question concerning violence.

Mr. Ingraham: Oh, no.

Mr. Tyler: Mr. Examiner, before you leave that point, I [fol. 4055] think I am entitled to insert an objection to the ruling as I think it is.

Trial Examiner Batten: What do you think it is?

Mr. Tyler: I think you have directed that this witness not go further into the question of violence at this time. I wish to except to it for the reason that the issue here is not as has been stated by Mr. Langsdale, of the employees stating what they thought was the violence. It will be stated whether they thought there was violence and the circumstances were such as to make it seem probable that that would have persuaded them to form their own union. Now, if the violence was real, then there is more probability that that was a weighty reason with them.

This witness can testify and has been asked whether the violence was real. It doesn't follow that that would open up a trial as to what caused the violence, but the fact and the connection of the violence with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is competent evidence, showing that these employees had that as a valid and probably truthful reason for wanting to form their own union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, if I conveyed the idea that I was not going to finish this witness's testimony, I certainly didn't intend to. I am still convinced, more than ever, that the thing I must do is to make a ruling on the order of the proof; and, secondly, on how extensive the [fol. 4056] remand is. And until I do that, I think all counsel in this case are as much at a loss as I am to plan their case. So, I think that you, as counsel for these parties, are entitled to have some kind of a ruling from me.

Mr. Tyler: I understood Your Honor to say you were going to hear from the 1,200 employees as to their motives before going into it with this witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, that is what I stated as to the order of proof, but I didn't intend to say I did not intend to go farther with this witness's testimony.

Mr. Tyler: Has Your Honor passed on whether evidence of violence is admissible yet?

Trial Examiner Batten: I have not.

Mr. Ingraham: May the witness answer the question I have just asked, so that we can go ahead and present any argument we have on this legal point?

Trial Examiner Batten: I prefer that you present your arguments now, Mr. Ingraham. That was my request.

Mr. Reed: I want to say first, that the order of proof in a case is in the hands of the counsel who proffer the proof. If they do it in an improper way, it is then for a court or an examiner to rule on the evidence as it is offered. But no court has the authority to tell counsel the order in which they shall introduce proof. I don't think I am mistaken about that.

[fol. 4057] So, I say we propose to exercise our right to offer our proof in the manner which seems to us is best and proper. If the Examiner sees fit to exclude it, we can only save our exception at that time.

Now, in regard to this witness, you have stated that you did not propose to make any rule or follow any rule with regard to who brought in a witness—that you might bring in a witness and you might ask them questions like you would on cross-examination—

Trial Examiner Batten: If they become adverse to you, Senator.

Mr. Reed: Yes. Now, we have the right to show the interest of this witness. That is what we are trying to show, her employment for a number of years by the prosecuting force in this hearing. We have the right to show her interest and to show that by her acts. And if we had no other ground than that, we have the right to ask this question and to have it answered now, and not two weeks from now, or some other time when we may reach it.

I insist we have the right to ask this lady if she was here when those strikes occurred and to ask her if she did not take part in them, and to ask her if she did not have direction of the violence that took place, and to show her photograph here—her picture in the pictures that display the riotous conduct of these strikers. That for the purpose [fol. 4058] of showing her interest, if nothing else.

Then, this evidence is competent for another reason. Of course, it cannot be that in a strike of this kind, violence of this kind, where there were hundreds and perhaps thousands of people concerned—we could not be expected to show by every one of the witnesses that we may put on here that they saw the strike. Some of them saw parts of it. But if we offer the person that was conducting the strike, who knows all about it, and prove the fact that the strike took place and the kind of strike it was, that it was given publicity through the papers and the employees hear of it and know it—the air is full of it, the air is full of danger for them, and that is a reason why they would want to organize a union of their own, to be protected against this violence, that is clearly within the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Now, here is what they said:— Mr. Hogsett called attention to it very graphically.

"At the hearing before the Trial Examiner, the petitioners proffered the evidence of the employees of the Donnelly Company, some 1200 in number, to show how and why they formed the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, to show that no influence was brought to bear upon them by the employer either in the formation or administration of the union, to show how and why they organized the union."

One of the whys is that this riotous conduct was going [fol. 4059] on, these brutal abuses were being visited upon girls going to work, that the threats had been made that the same thing would be done to the Donnelly Garment workers, so that they were intimidated into riding there in busses or riding there in streetcars, all of that forms a part of this picture.

The only question, then, is, was the violence here? Not what reasons they had for it. We do not have to go into that. But was the violence here? Was the danger here? Was the threat here? Those things we have the right to go into.

Now, here is the lady who conducted the strike. We want to ask her a few brief questions about it.

Now, if Your Honor undertakes to take this case out of the hands of the attorneys and tell us how we shall introduce our evidence and the order of it, all I can say is that we will have to do as we did before, save our exceptions.

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, might I ask you this question: Do you agree with me to this extent, that it is advisable for me to determine, at least in my own mind, and make some sort of a ruling as to what I think the Circuit Court intended us to cover? Do you agree with me that we have to determine some sort of a yardstick?

Mr. Reed: I say we stand here upon this decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals. I have my opinion about it, and it isn't the same as the opinion that you have expressed, if I understood your expressions or interpreted [fol. 4060] them properly, so that all we can do— We are hailed here to the bar and charged with violating a law. We don't think we violated any law. You have held that we did. And the Circuit Court of Appeals said there was certain evidence that had been excluded which must be received and considered.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, then, isn't it necessary for me to determine what evidence I think ought to be received?

Mr. Reed: It is necessary for you to determine what you are going to receive, but we propose to offer our evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. I am not telling you not to. I simply wanted to know if you agreed with me that it is up to me, as the Examiner, to decide that question. Now, I have discussed it on several occasions, and I want to say that I have given a lot of thought to it, and I intend to give some more. I further want to say that I intend to adjourn this hearing until next Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, while I am attempting to decide just what the Circuit Court intended when it sent that decision back.

Mr. Ingraham: Won't you let us finish with the question that is asked this witness?

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, if there is any further argument about that question, I want to hear it now.

Mr. Langsdale: If the Examiner please, the fiery speech just made by the Senator is one reason why you should [fol. 4061] determine the order of proof. He lines the front row up with his future witnesses and wants to educate them about what he wants them to testify about, and—

Mr. Reed: I object to that as an indecent statement.

Mr. Langsdale: I say, I think that is the motive. Now, he can take that or leave it, as he sees fit. He has made that kind of a speech every time he gets the chance before these girls.

Mr. Reed: Now,—

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, let Mr. Langsdale complete his statement, and then you may talk again.

Mr. Langsdale: I say he has no right to line his witnesses up on the front row to educate them on these things.

Every chance he has had he has made that kind of a speech, which we say isn't true, and I think the record will show it isn't true.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, the record will show Senator Reed has not made that speech before.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Ingraham, the record will speak for itself. Will you permit Mr. Langsdale to finish?

Mr. Langsdale: The speech is similar to the one, without any possible truth in it, that he made to the Times reporter that Mr. Dubinsky was a Bolshevist and a Communist. I think he knew that wasn't true when he said it.

[fol. 4062] One of my reasons for thinking that this witness's testimony should be deferred until the Circuit Court of Appeals' ruling is followed, is to prevent their dragging testimony out of witnesses here, with their witnesses sitting on the front row, to come on later and say, like Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, "Yes," "Yes," "Yes." "That is what happened." We had that before, when they signed everything that was stuck in front of them.

I say we should follow the procedure the court said we should follow.

(Reading from Circuit Court of Appeals order.)

"At the hearing before the Trial Examiner, the petitioners proffered the evidence of the employees of the Donnelly Company, some 1200 in number, to show how and why they formed the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, . . ."

The Examiner said it wasn't material, and the Circuit Court of Appeals said it was material, and this case should come back and that evidence should be accepted.

(Continuing reading) ". . . to show that no influence was brought to bear upon them by the employer either in the formation or administration of the union, to show what the President of the Company had said to them at the mass meeting in the spring of 1937, to show that their freedom to organize and to choose their own representatives for the purposes of collective bargaining had not been inter-

[fol. 4063] fered with by their employer, and to show that their union, both in its formation and administration, was exclusively controlled and supported by them. The Trial Examiner refused to receive this evidence. He permitted the petitioners to make formal offers of proof.

"The Trial Examiner seems to have confused the admissibility of this proffered testimony with his estimate of its weight and sufficiency and of the probable credibility of the witnesses who were to be called upon to give it."

That is what the court said, that the Examiner should not confuse the weight of the evidence with its admissibility, but nowhere in this opinion has the Circuit Court of Appeals said the Examiner should take anything but the testimony of the 1,200 proffered witnesses.

I say they know that is the rule of the court, and I say again that this Examiner should not permit them to put on this witness to prove the ultimate fact of these strikes. That isn't the issue. The issue is, did these employees believe that there were strikes out there, which caused them to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

They want to prove the ultimate facts, in the presence of these witnesses that they have lined up here to testify when Miss Tobin gets off the stand, and certainly, if for no other reason, the Examiner should exercise his discretion and govern the offer of proof.

Mr. Reed: I am not going to reply at length to that. [fol. 4064] There is a class of gentlemen who say things in court they don't dare say outside of court.

Mr. Langsdale: Senator, you don't think I would be afraid to say anything to you anywhere, do you?

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, now, will you not interrupt?

Mr. Reed: Very definitely I think so. But I am not going to pursue an unpleasant thing of that kind.

These witnesses who are here are called here because we have not known at what moment they might have to take the stand. What I have said here is no new information to these witnesses, I take it.

The only question is, here is a lady who knows the facts, and Mr. Langsdale knows very well that if she answers this question which has been asked her, she would have to say that she was in charge of the strike, or at least a part of the strike.

Now, I have said all I want to say on the point.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would like to say this, Senator: As far as the witnesses who are here are concerned, they are here because I refused to sustain a motion to exclude them. I didn't see any reason for it at that time, and I don't see any now.

I am only interested in whether or not there is anything further counsel want to say with respect to their view as to [fol. 4065] what the Circuit Court intended.

Mr. Tyler, do you have anything to say?

Mr. Tyler: I would like to suggest two thoughts to Your Honor in that connection.

I take it that all of us agree that in any kind of a lawsuit or prosecution the facts charged, whether civil, criminal, or prosecution before the Labor Board, we are to try what was alleged in the complaint. Therefore, we are trying what was alleged in the complaint, which refers to what happened in 1937. And when the Court of Appeals said certain evidence was wrongfully excluded, it referred to events as to 1937. Why did these people form their union in 1937, and not in 1942? I think it is obvious, and I do not believe there would be dispute that that is what the Court of Appeals directed us to try: What were the facts in 1937?

However, I think it is true, and I think Miss Weyand very generously suggested it was true to Your Honor the other day, that the law is that the successful, efficient, aggressive operation of a plant union over a period of years is evidence that it was founded by the true wish of those who founded it at the time it was founded. And events which happened after the time charged may throw light on the events at the time the charge refers to. That we do not intend to waive.

[fol. 4066] Trial Examiner Batten: It is your position that the matter should be brought down to date?

Mr. Tyler: On certain things that throw light—

Trial Examiner Batten: I mean, as far as the issues are concerned, we should take testimony from the time of July 1939 down to today?

Mr. Tyler: Only where the events today or at July 1939 throw light on the facts in July 1937—not as to whether the labor abuses covered this year, or last year, or 1939, but as to facts that throw light on what happened in 1937, I think it is admissible. Of course, we cannot try questions of whether labor abuses occurred with Johnny Jones, or in some other connection that is not alleged in 1937 at all. There is no need for that. But I think that where Your Honor finds that an event now a fact does throw light, under reasonable interpretation, on the facts existing in 1937, then in that case such evidence should be admitted. And the particular kind that I respectfully insist does do that is the successful, vigorous operation of a plant union for a period of five years, since the time the charges were made.

Trial Examiner Batten: Anything further?

Miss Weyand: I would like to make a couple of further remarks directed to the violence issue.

I feel that under the court remand there is no issue of violence before the Trial Examiner at present.

[fol. 4067] As I understand the arguments of counsel for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and counsel for the company, they suggest three bases on which they think violence evidence is material. The first of those bases was suggested by Mr. Tyler this morning in his statement, that whether or not violence did exist would be material to a determination of whether or not the employees reasonably acted because of a knowledge of violence.

I do not believe that issue is at present before the Trial Examiner or before the Board. That issue will arise only in the event the employees come in here and make a statement that they acted by reason of the knowledge of certain violence and the Board states it doubts that they really felt that way.

Until the Board raises an issue as to the credibility and weight of the employees' statements of the violence which they understood to exist, that issue does not exist in the case.

I cannot state, until I hear the evidence of these employees, whether or not I shall be glad to say we are willing to take their statements that they knew this violence was occurring as a statement of their state of mind and not challenge it; that is, if they describe their state of mind as one believing that the I. L. G. W. U. tore clothes off of any nonunion girl at any time they met her on the [fol. 4068] street, I am not saying at this time I am willing to accept that that was the state of mind of all of these girls. Possibly after hearing the evidence I might concede they did believe that actually about the I. L. G. W. U., but until that evidence is in and until I state the position that I am willing to take a girl's statement on their state of mind as a true statement of their state of mind, no issue of violence exists, for that reason.

That is under Mr. Tyler's theory this morning as to the materiality of violence.

The second reason set forth as to why evidence of violence might be material at the present time was stated by the Senator. He said he wished this evidence for the purpose of disclosing the interest of the witness on the stand.

I do not believe that that is a proper method of disclosing the interest of the witness. He could show the interest of the witness through her prior employment. He put her on the stand, and if he now wishes to state he doesn't want the testimony she gave as to the supervisory capacities or practices of the I. L. G. W. U. given much weight in this hearing, we will be glad to hear that he doesn't care to have the witness he put on for that purpose believed to any large extent. However, he should not be allowed to drag into the record in this case an issue which has been ruled out of the case, purely on the basis of showing the interest of a witness. I am certain the law will [fol. 4069] sustain me that that is not a proper method of showing the interest of a witness produced by counsel for the company himself, if counsel wishes to impeach the witness's testimony or the credibility of the witness.

The third reason which has been advanced as to why evidence of violence should be taken is that the fact of the existence of the violence would show why the employees wished to organize the union. That is just a backhanded way of getting to Mr. Tyler's point, a method of trying to avoid delaying the introduction of violence evidence until the issue arises. He says the issue has already arisen, because if there was violence the employees must have understood there was violence and, therefore, must have acted from that reason.

Now, that does not follow. The fact that it existed does not mean they must have understood or that they must have acted from that reason.

The issue of violence does not arise until you show they acted from that reason and understood it; then, if I challenge the understanding they had, the issue might arise as to whether that violence actually existed.

The remarks I directed to Mr. Tyler's theory dispose of the reason I think that is not a valid ground for presenting the evidence of violence at this time.

I do not think it is a matter of order of proof. I think the Trial Examiner, within certain limited discretion, can [fol. 4070] direct the order of proof, but I think this is a much broader matter. It is the matter of the issue of violence not being in the case at this time. Therefore, there is no question of order of proof involved. I, therefore, submit, at the present time no evidence of violence should be taken. If the issue I have mentioned or any other issue later arises in the case that would make evidence of violence material, I will be glad to state my position at that time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, let me ask you this: You say you do not think it is a matter of order of proof. I said this morning I think we are all agreed on one thing the circuit court did say, that the evidence of the 1,200 employees should have been received, and then it says later on, "If it becomes cumulative," but we certainly are all agreed that the circuit court said I should have received the offer of testimony of the 1,200 employees. Now, I assume we are all agreed on that. How much farther we may agree is a different thing, and that was my reason for saying, if I direct an order of proof that we take the testimony of the 1,200 employees, or the offer of it, at least, we have the one thing out of the way, have we not, which the Court of Appeals said should have been received?

Miss Weyand: I think there is nothing wrong with the Trial Examiner's reasoning that way. However, I think there is a broader basis for excluding the taking of testi- [fol. 4071] mony of violence at the present time, and that is the absence of any issue that necessitates the taking of any evidence of violence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I did not want to limit it to just the matter of violence. There undoubtedly will be many other subject matters besides violence.

Miss Weyand: Did you wish us to discuss those other subject matters at the present time?

Trial Examiner Batten: No. But I wanted you to know I wasn't placing it entirely on the matter of violence.

Miss Weyand: I was directing my remarks solely to the violence matter.

Mr. Tyler: If the Trial Examiner please, I cannot agree with Miss Weyand. She suggests that the question of "why?" does not arise unless the Board disputes it. The Court of Appeals said the question of why they formed this union is sent back to be received by the evidence of the respondent and the intervener, not wait to see whether the Board disputes it or not, but the burden is on them to proceed. Now, why they formed the union involves the fact of violence and reasonable evidence that they had occasion to actually be frightened by the violence. That evidence the Circuit Court of Appeals said we should present.

Trial Examiner Batten: I agree with you, Mr. Tyler, because I think you have the thing first in your remark [fol. 4072] that I think should come first, and that is the testimony of these employees and the question of the reasonableness of it.

Mr. Tyler: I don't think the court said the testimony of the employees is first, before other evidence that shows they so believed.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think they said that.

Mr. Tyler: But I think it is up to the Board to either admit that these employees did have that belief, or to allow them to go ahead and present the evidence showing that it is true, because the court sent this back to the Board to hear that evidence of why they formed the union.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: I think we are ready to proceed. In line with my suggestion when we adjourned I went into the matter of the order of proof in the hearing, and with respect to the procedure which we will follow.

First, I am going to receive the testimony of the employees referred to in the Circuit Court's decision, and on that basis we are ready to proceed.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4078] Mr. Reed: I confess I am not sure that I comprehend the ruling. Your Honor states that you will receive testimony of the employees on the matters that were referred to in the offers of proof. Do we understand that is all the testimony you are going to permit?

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I think I stated that is the testimony which I intend to receive first, Senator. In other words, I believe the Circuit Court, in that one matter at least, was specific, and they said I should receive the testimony of the 1200 employees in accordance with the offers of proof. Now, that much of the decision is definite, and I think in line with the Court's decision, that is the testimony which I should receive first, and accordingly I am directing that order of proof.

* * * * * *

Mr. Reed: We are in the middle of the examination of Wave Tobin. We insist respectfully that we are entitled to proceed with that witness, and I call attention to the Examiner's ruling, which, as I understand it, is that he proposes now to regulate the order of proof, and to direct the Respondent how they shall put in their case. That, we [fol. 4079] think, deprives us of our right under the law, and that it is bad practice in any event.

Now, I call attention to this clause in the opinion —

. . . . . .

Mr. Reed: (Reading) "The attitude of this Court toward the conduct of hearings by a trial examiner, we think, has been entirely consistent. In Cupples Co. Manufacturers v. National Labor Relations Board, 8 Cir., 106 F. 2d 100, 113, we made the suggestion that if a trial examiner would 'within reasonable limits, permit each of the parties to the proceeding before him to prove his own case, in his own way, by his own counsel,' charges of lack of due process for failure to accord a full and fair hearing could readily be avoided." Citing the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company vs. National Labor Relations Board, "—we expressed the opinion that the practice which should be followed by a trial examiner in taking evidence and ruling upon objections to evidence is that which applies to special masters in equity proceedings, and 'that the record should contain all evidence offered by any party in interest, except such as is palpably incompetent .' We think that [fol. 4080] experience has demonstrated that in a trial or hearing where no jury is present, more time is ordinarily lost in listening to arguments as to the admissibility of evidence and in considering offers of proof than would be consumed in taking the evidence proffered, and that, even if the trier of facts, by making close rulings upon the admissibility of evidence, does save himself some time, that saving will be more than offset by the time consumed by the reviewing court in considering the propriety of his rulings and by the consequent delay in the final determination of the controversy. One who is capable of ruling accurately upon the admissibility of evidence is equally capable of sifting it accurately after it has been received, and, since he will base his findings upon the evidence which he regards as competent, material and convincing, he cannot be injured by the presence in the record of testimony which he does not consider competent or material.

Lawyers and judges frequently differ as to the admissibility of the evidence, and it occasionally happens that a reviewing court regards as admissible evidence which was rejected by the judge, special master, or trial examiner. If the record on review contains not only all evidence which was clearly admissible, but also all evidence of doubtful admissibility, the court which is called upon to review the case can usually make an end of it, whereas if evidence was [fol. 4081] excluded which that court regards as having been admissible, a new trial or rehearing cannot be avoided. We say this in the hope of preventing a repetition of what occurred in the case now before us, and to obviate any misunderstanding as to what the attitude of this Court is with respect to the taking of evidence in a hearing before a special master or a trial examiner."

"One of the most important safeguards of the rights of litigants and the minimal constitutional requirement, in proceedings before an administrative agency vested with discretion, is that it cannot rightly exclude from consideration facts and circumstances relevant to its inquiry which upon due consideration may be of persuasive weight in the exercise of its discretion."

Now, going back to the first clause, or nearly the first that I read, with regard to the Cupples Company Manufacturers' case, "we made the suggestion that if a trial examiner would 'within reasonable limits, permit each of the parties to the proceeding before him to prove his own case, in his own way, by his own counsel,'" now, we insist that in the orderly procedure, we have a witness on the stand, testifying to matters that are pertinent to the issues in this case, and that to deprive us of the right to finish that examination and to go on and put our case in, in our own way, is a denial of our rights under the law, [fol. 4082] and so we ask we be permitted to proceed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Anything further? Well, of course, we understood Mr. Ingraham wanted to postpone the finishing of Mrs. Reed's testimony. I notice she is not here this morning.

Mr. Ingraham: No, Miss Tobin was on the stand.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I know, but you said, Mr. Ingraham, that the following morning you would be ready to proceed with Mrs. Reed, and on that basis I permitted Miss Tobin to take the stand for the balance of that day.

Mr. Ingraham: At the time that I said that, I didn't know that you were going to adjourn in the middle of Miss Tobin's testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, irrespective of whether I did or didn't, you intended to be ready the next morning with Mrs. Reed, and finish with her, did you not?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I didn't expect Miss Tobin would get off the stand. I thought we would finish with Miss Tobin.

Trial Examiner Batten: What made you think that when I told you, Mr. Ingraham, I wanted to continue at 2 o'clock with Mrs. Reed, and you asked until the following morning and I gave it to you. What made you think we would continue with Miss Tobin?

[fol. 4083] Mr. Ingraham: I didn't suppose Miss Tobin's testimony would be interrupted. When you have a witness on the stand, you usually complete the testimony. In regard to Mrs. Reed, I want to have my redirect examination when counsel for the Board and counsel for the Union state they have finished their cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I stated that they had completed, and the record will indicate that; unless, of course, counsel wants to recall witness, which privilege you all have.

. . . . . .

Mr. Tyler: My objection, Your Honor, to interrupting the cross-examination of Miss Tobin is already in the record as of the last day. It seems to me that it is improper to interrupt the presentation of the case by a party to the case, and arbitrarily say, "We will not proceed as you propose to proceed, but we will now proceed on certain evidence that the Court of Appeals requires to be taken, but which that Court does not say will be taken first."

It seems to me improper to break off any orderly procedure of presentation and say, "From now on we will proceed to take this kind of evidence first." I think that objection is in the record as of the last day of our hearing.

[fol. 4085] Miss Weyand: I think it is proper for the Trial Examiner at this time to rule that we do not proceed with Miss Tobin unless counsel for the company would indicate where her testimony or any questions they might ask would be within the terms of the remand. As [fol. 4086] I recall, I objected from the very first questions which were directed to Miss Tobin, on the ground they were neither within the terms of the remand nor material to any issue in this case.

The excerpt which Senator Reed read from the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals must be read in the light of the later statement of the Circuit Court of Appeals, that the Trial Examiner did not err in confining the issues to those which were tendered by the complaint filed by the Board.

Therefore, the statement that counsel for the company should be allowed to try their case in their own way, and put on whatever evidence they chose clearly was not intended as the broad statement it first appears to be. The Court does uphold the Board and the Trial Examiner in certain exclusions, the exclusion of the testimony of Miss Wave Tobin which has been offered here; that is within the ruling of the Court, upholding such exclusions.

I therefore respectfully submit that the Trial Examiner is entirely proper in refusing to allow the counsel for the company to continue questioning Miss Tobin, unless counsel for the company should indicate that he will not follow the two lines of questioning opened up on Friday, but wishes to put her on the stand or continue with her on the stand for the purpose which is related to the issues of the case.

[fol. 4087] Mr. Reed: First, as to the point the Examiner raises that Mrs. Reed's testimony was to be taken up the next morning, I think if you will give that a little consideration you will arrive at a different conclusion. Mrs. Reed was cross-examined at great length and finally the Board's attorney and the I. L. G. W. U. attorney said they had no more questions to ask at that time, but clearly indicated that they might have other questions to ask. They did not close their cross-examination absolutely. There was some colloquy about it, and we insisted that they should either close their examination definitely or that we would not go into redirect examination, that we were entitled before going into redirect examination to know that the cross-examination was ended.

Now, it was at that point, with the witness excused as far as the cross-examiners were concerned, that Mrs. Reed left the stand.

We say now we do not want to put Mrs. Reed on the stand for redirect examination and then have the whole matter opened up again by further questions on cross-examination.

We then put Miss Tobin on the stand, summarily, stating I believe, that it probably would be a brief examination. We could not tell definitely, of course. And as the examination proceeded it became evident that other questions were pertinent.

Now, we insist and we propose, on our part—of course, [fol. 4088] we cannot do it if the Examiner refuses to go on with the examination of Miss Tobin, and when we ask questions that are outside the issues of this case, the proper objections can be made, but we are not required to tell counsel what we intend to prove by this witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I stated the last day we met, Senator, that I did not intend to require it, as far as Miss Tobin was concerned.

We are ready to proceed in accordance with my ruling. We will proceed with the employees, in line with the offers of proof which were made and in line with the circuit court's opinion.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent excepts to your ruling. We will have to get the employees up here.

* * * * * * *

(Thereupon, pursuant to adjournment, the hearing was resumed at 2 p. m. and the following proceedings were had:)

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

Mr. Ingraham: I would like to call Wave Tobin to the stand.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I ruled on that this [fol. 4089] morning, Mr. Ingraham.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Do I understand the ruling this morning is limiting the testimony to the testimony of Donnelly employees?

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think that was the ruling, Mr. Ingraham. You may read the record in the morning. I said I would receive first the testimony of the employees referred to by the circuit court in the offers of proof which I rejected.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, we have made other offers of proof besides the offers of proof of the employees. There are other offers of proof that were made at the last hearing besides those made on behalf of the employees.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I think that is right.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, are we to be limited to the evidence that is covered in the offers of proof of employees?

Trial Examiner Batten: You are to be limited now to the 1,200 employees referred to by the court—why and how—the offers of proof made on behalf of those 1,200 em- [fol. 4090] ployees. That is the matter which I will hear first.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: I want to call the Examiner's attention to the last paragraph in respondent's last answer. It is Board's exhibit No. 1-LLLL.

Mr. Langsdale: What exhibit is that?

Mr. Ingraham: Board's exhibit No. 1-LLLL. Page 3441 of the record.

"Respondent further states"—I am reading from the answer—"that during all of the times mentioned in paragraph 11 of the Board's complaint the International Union, [fol. 4091] its officers, agents, and members were engaged in the said unlawful conspiracy against respondent set forth in section (B) of this answer and the matters set forth in said section (B) of this answer are by reference made a part specifically of respondent's answer to Paragraph 11 as though set out in haec verbae."

Now, section (B) of respondent's answer was stricken out. Paragraph 11 of the Board's complaint remained in the complaint, and our answer to it remained in our answer; it wasn't stricken out.

Now, respondent offered to prove those facts which are in answer to paragraph 11 by the following witnesses: Nell Quinlan Reed, Elizabeth Reeves, R. J. Ingraham, John Bachofer, Marguerite Keyes, Inez Warren, Pauline Shartzer, Mary Sprofera, Nelly Stites, Ruby Rickett, Lyle Jeter, Raymond Smith, Effie Hall, George Couthen, Flora Ruden, W. D. Rosenfield, Gordon I. Gordon, Velma Dowdy, Meyer Perlstein, David Dubinsky, Wave Tobin, Sylvia Hull, and Ellen Fry.

That offer was rejected.

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean subdivision B of your answer?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes. Now, in order to proceed we feel that Wave Tobin's testimony is essential and that under [fol. 4092] the offers of proof we have a right at this time to examine her.

I would like to file an offer of proof.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4093] Trial Examiner Batten: This will be Board's exhibit No. 1-SSSSS.

(Thereupon the offer of proof above referred to was marked "Board's exhibit No. 1-SSSSS" for identification.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Is there any objection to the receipt of Board's exhibit No. 1-SSSSS, an offer of proof and protest against the ruling the Examiner made this morning?

If not, it will be received.

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: I will reserve my decision and ruling on it.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4095] Mr. Reed: I want to call attention to this situation which has arisen:

We are contending that Wave Tobin continue on the witness stand and that her testimony should be heard before other testimony is called for. That is the situation.

Now, the Examiner rules that he will not rule at this time and directs us to go forward with other witnesses; he is going to reserve his decision. If the decision is not made at this time, then the effect of it will be that we will go on and hear these other witnesses and we don't have a ruling. I think we are entitled to a ruling now, so that we will know how to proceed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, I ruled this morning that I was first going to hear the 1,200 witnesses which the court referred to and which offers of proof I rejected, and I have not changed that ruling.

Mr. Reed: You have not changed that ruling, but we have now filed a paper here and we ask a ruling on it, and you say you will reserve that ruling. Of course, if you make the ruling after the damage, as we think, is done, that will do us no good if you then decide it in our favor.

Now, I don't think I will be able to change your mind, but I want to make this observation, that in the orderly procedure in courts of justice—and I have been there a [fol. 4096] good many years—and as said by the Court of Appeals here in its quotation from another eminent authority, it is the right of a litigant, through its counsel, to put its evidence in in the order it sees fit, and the only question is whether the evidence is competent. The order of proof rests with the person proffering the proof.

Now, this proceeding that we are now talking about I have never seen in any court, at any time, where a judge undertook to say in what order you shall put on your testimony.

We offer it, and if it is incompetent, of course you can rule it out, but you cannot tell us, under any rule of law that I ever heard of, the order in which we shall proceed with our defense in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, the only difference I see is that this is a remand, and I am making an effort to comply with the desire of the circuit court, and for that reason I made the ruling.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4099] Oma Lee Cooper, a witness called by and on behalf of the Respondent, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

Mr. Ingraham: Will you please state your name?

A. Oma Lee Cooper.

Mr. Langsdale: Spell the first name.

[fol. 4100] A. O-m-a (Spelling).

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Are you employed, Mrs. Cooper? A. Yes.

Q. Where? A. The Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. When did you start working for the Donnelly Garment Company? A. January 9, 1936.

Q. And in what position do you work there?

A. I am an operator.

Q. On a sewing machine? A. Yes.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4101] A. My married name was Holloway.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4102] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Cooper, were you employed at the Donnelly Garment Company in the month of April, 1937?

A. I was.

Q. Do you recall attending a meeting the latter part of that month, a meeting of Donnelly employees?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was that meeting on or about April 27th, 1937?

A. Well, it was along the last of April, I don't remember the date.

Q. What occurred at that meeting?

A. Well, it was a meeting where Mr. Tyler came down and told us he had looked up the law, and we could form our own union if we wanted to, and a vote was taken whether or not we should form our own union.

Q. Now, prior to this time what had been occurring in Kansas City in other garment plants?

A. A lot of strikes and violence, and things like that.

Q. Where was this meeting held?

A. On the second floor of the building.

Q. When was it held?

A. Well, it was after working hours. I don't remember just the time.

Q. Were a large number of employees there?

A. Well, I believe most of them were there. I know the floor was crowded.

[fol. 4103] Q. Did any officer, executive or anyone that you thought was representing the management talk to you about the meeting?

A. No. The girls, some of them that I ate with, told me in the lunch room there was to be a meeting and to be sure I attended that night, and told me to tell the other girls that I saw, so that is what I done.

Q. Now, did you vote at that meeting?

A. Yes, I did; I voted orally and then by a card that they gave us. They said if we didn't want to make up our minds then whether or not we wanted to join the union, we could put our name on there later.

Q. What, if anything, had been discussed with reference to any union at that particular meeting?

A. I don't understand you.

Q. Well, had anybody discussed the formation of a union with you?

A. Well, yes, we all discussed it there. The girls got up and offered their opinion as to whether or not we should form our own union, and Mr. Tyler said he found out that if we wanted a union we were within the law to form our own union, but we didn't have to without we wanted to.

Q. Now, did you say you voted in favor of forming the union? A. I certainly did.

Q. What were your reasons, Mrs. Cooper, for voting in [fol. 4104] favor of forming your own union, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. One reason was I didn't want to join any union that would resort to violence to get women to join our union; I thought there would be other ways to present it to us without pulling hair.

Q. Whom were you referring to?

A. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Was there any other reason that you had for voting in favor of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, we thought since we were in the factory and knew how it was run, we thought we were more capable of running our union than some outsider. We knew then if they didn't live up to the contract it was within our own power to make them live up to it, and we wouldn't have to go to some outsider to have it done.

Q. Now, prior to that meeting, had anyone, any officer, executive, or anyone representing the management suggested to you or suggested to anybody else in your presence that the employees form a union?

A. No, no executive of the company ever talked to me or ever said anything in my hearing about any union at all, whether we should or should not join any union.

Q. Did anybody that you thought was representing the management say anything to you?

[fol. 4105] A. No, they didn't.

Q. Now, was this a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, it was not. We weren't discussing any dances or parties, or anything.

Q. Did anybody ask you to come to the meeting because it was a Loyalty League meeting?

A. They certainly did not.

Q. Was anything connected with the Loyalty League discussed at the meeting? A. There was not.

Q. You referred to certain strikes going on at other plants. I hand you Respondent's Exhibit No. 16 and ask you if you read or saw the pictures in the March 18, 1937, edition of the Kansas City Times, and read the article on the following page that was in that edition of the Times?

A. I certainly did.

Q. What effect did that article have upon you, Mrs. Cooper?

A. Well, it made me mad to think that things like that could happen in this city. We hadn't been used to seeing things like that at all. We just didn't like it, that was all, and we were afraid maybe every night we went home from work, or every night we would go out, they would be standing around in front of our building ready to tear our clothes off, or something.

Q. Did you say threats were made against the Donnelly [fol. 4106] employees?

A. Yes, we heard them every day.

Q. What was the nature of the threats?

A. They said we were going to be next, and it wasn't anything to what we were going to get.

Q. I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit No. 18, which is the front page of the March 17, 1937, edition of the Kansas City Journal-Post and ask you if you noticed that article in the paper? I am referring to the article in regard to the garment strikes.

. . . . . .

A. I read the article.

Mr. Ingraham: What was going on at the time of those other strikes?

. . . . . .

[fol. 4107] A. They were having strikes and hair pulling and refusing to let women that wanted to go to work, refusing to let them go to work.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did they have any sit-down strikes?

A. I think the papers said there were some sitting in the halls; I don't remember of any incidents where they sat down in the factories; I don't remember everything I read.

Q. Now, this article that you just referred to was dated March 17. I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit 19, which is the second page, part of the second page of the Journal-Post for March 18, 1937, and ask you if you saw and read that article.

A. I think I read this one.

Q. That was dated March 18, 1937?

A. I am sure I read that one.

Q. Now, was there any meeting of employees held on or about that date?

A. Yes, we had a meeting.

Mr. Langsdale: What date is that?

A. The employees were all worried and everything; I believe they did call a meeting about the 18th of March. I know it was one of the first weeks in March, the first part of March.

Q. What caused the employees to call a meeting?

A. Well, they were worried and nervous and they wanted to talk it over with someone to see what they [fol. 4108] could do about this.

Q. Had these newspaper articles come to the attention of the employees?

A. Yes; several of them brought them to work with them and when we hadn't read them, of course, they showed them to each other, and they talked about it, and they were all really upset and nervous.

Q. Was there anything else reported besides what was in the newspapers?

A. Yes, some of the girls said the union had been out to their house and had been threatening them, trying to make them join the union, and they had heard a lot of other people come from up there say that they were making threats against our company.

Q. Had any of the employees said they had seen any violence at these other strikes?

A. Yes, several of them had, you know, had come on past there to come to work, quite a few of them, in fact, I think.

Q. Now, do you recall where this meeting of March 18th was held?

A. It was held on the second floor in the building.

Q. Do you recall what time of day?

A. Well, it was after working hours. I don't remember just what time the working hours were. It was after four or five, anyway, I know, it was after we quit work.

[fol. 4109] Q. How did you happen to go to that meeting?

A. Well, we had been talking about it all week, and we all decided on that special date to have the meeting.

Q. Did any of the employees at that meeting talk about what might be done to protect the employees?

A. Yes, there were several discussions about that, and some of them went out and got Mrs. Reed to come in and speak to the girls to see what the company was going to do; they demanded that we find someone to seek legal counsel to see what we could do to protect ourselves.

Q. Do you recall who was requested to seek legal counsel?

A. Miss Todd was one of them. I don't remember any of the others, but I know there were several more that went with her.

Q. Well, do you recall whether Mrs. Reed came to the meeting?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What did Mrs. Reed do after she got to the meeting?

A. Well, she went up on the platform, they cleared a space for her, and she went up on the platform and made a speech.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed say that she was going to close her plant if it was unionized?

A. No, she didn't.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed say that she was not going to allow Dubinsky tell her how to run her business?

A. No, she didn't. She said she wasn't going to let [fol. 4110] Dubinsky force her into any union that they didn't want to belong to.

Q. Was Mrs. Reed at the meeting very long?

A. Oh, about 10 minutes, I judge, or 15, not any longer than that.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed read a letter at that meeting?

A. She did not.

Q. Was that meeting a Loyalty League meeting?

A. It was not.

Q. Did you go to that meeting because you were a member of the Loyalty League?

A. I did not.

Q. Why did you go to the meeting?

A. I went for the same reasons the others did, that I was anxious to find out what we were going to do, what we could do to protect ourselves.

Q. To protect yourselves against what?

A. The violence that was occurring at these other plants in Kansas City.

Q. Who was committing that violence?

A. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was.

Q. Now, was anything discussed at that meeting with regard to the employees forming a union of their own?

A. No, the union was not discussed at all at that meeting. The only thing that was discussed in regard to anything [fol. 4111] legal was getting a lawyer or going to see someone about what we could do legally to protect ourselves, and get advice on what we should do.

Q. Did someone suggest that lawyers might be able to bring an injunction suit?

A. Yes, I believe it was suggested.

Q. Now, did anyone representing the management suggest to you that you go to those meetings?

A. No, they didn't. It was just the girls themselves, the operators; my section was the one that told me.

Q. Did you have any discussion or hear any discussion between an official or executive or anyone representing the management that the employees should hold such a meeting?

A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. Now, was anything said about buses bringing the employees to work?

A. Well, Mrs. Reed said she would see if she could arrange for some kind of buses or something, to take the girls a part of the way home, and bring them to work, and that was later done. It was not elaborated on, but, you know, she said that she would try to have something done to bring the girls to work.

Mr. Reed: Was that done?

A. Yes, it was.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. And that was later done, was it not?

[fol. 4112] A. Yes, sometime the following week or within the next day or two, I think it was.

Mr. Langsdale: What was later done?

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Did they get the buses?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you know whether Rose Todd or any other employees did consult lawyers?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. When next did you hear anything about that?

A. Well, another meeting was called, I believe it was called by Miss Todd, to tell us she had seen a lawyer, and that they wanted a $500.00 retainer fee, before they would have anything to do with the case, and the amount of money was taken up there, and what was not, they took it up the next day, 50c each for all the employees; part of it was taken up there that night and the ones that had it gave it then and the rest of it was given the next day.

Q. Did you attend that meeting as a member of the Loyalty League?

A. I did not.

Q. Was it a Loyalty League meeting?

A. It was not.

Q. Did you make the contribution of 50c to the Loyalty League?

A. I did not. I made that to pay the lawyer.

[fol. 4113] Q. Was the lawyer to represent the Loyalty League or the employees?

A. The employees.

Q. Now, at any of these meetings that you have described did your instructors request you to attend the meetings?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Did they discuss with you about the meetings?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did your instructors herd all the girls in your section down to any of those meetings and tell them to stay together so they could go back to work?

A. They did not, because it was after working hours. We didn't have to go back to work. Most of us were dressed. Some of the girls that got off later came down in their aprons, but I know most of the girls in my section were dressed.

Q. I hand you Respondent's Exhibit 19 — no, I have shown you that exhibit — I hand you Respondent's Exhibit No. 20, which is the front page of the Journal-Post for March 22, 1937, and ask you if you recall seeing that article.

A. I read the article.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit No. 21 and ask [fol. 4114] you if you read the article in that edition of the Kansas City Journal-Post?

A. I think I read this one, I am not sure. The girls always brought them up to work. I didn't take the Post myself, but most of the articles that run in the Post the girls that do take it, they brought them down to work and we read and discussed the articles.

Q. Why did you read them?

A. We were interested, after all, we worked in a garment factory too, we were very much interested, because we never knew what would happen in our place.

Q. I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit 22 and ask you if you read the article that appears on the front page of the Journal-Post for March 25, 1937.

A. I read that one.

[fol. 4115] Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 23 and ask you if you read that article, appearing in the Kansas City Journal-Post, March 27, 1937?

. . . . . .

A. I read that one, too.

Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit No. 24 and ask you if you read that article that appeared in the March 31 edition of the Journal-Post?

. . . . . .

A. I read that one.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit 25 and ask you if you recall reading that article, dated March 19, 1937, of the Kansas City Times.

* * * * * * *

A. I read this article.

[fol. 4116] Q. I will ask you if you read respondent's exhibit 26, which is an article in the Kansas City Times of March 23, 1937.

* * * * * *

A. I read this one, too.

Q. I will ask you if you read respondent's exhibit 27, which is the front page of the Kansas City Star for March 17, 1937.

* * * * * *

A. I read the article.

Q. I will ask you if you read respondent's exhibit 28, which is an article appearing in the Kansas City Star for March 22, 1937.

* * * * * *

A. I read this one.

Q. I will ask you if you read respondent's exhibit 29, which is an article in the Kansas City Star of March 25, 1937.

* * * * * *

A. I read the article.

Q. What was your interest in reading these articles, Mrs. Cooper?

A. I think it is only natural that we would be interested in them, since we were working in a garment fac-
[fol. 4117] tory. We were afraid they were going to come down and do the same thing to us. They had made threats against the company and us, and naturally we were interested.

Q. Were these articles the subject of conversation at the plant among the employees?

A. They certainly were. They were all brought down to work and the ones who hadn't read them would read them before they went to work or at their lunch hour. The girls were so upset they wanted to—you know—talk it over with each other.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit 30, which is an article in the Kansas City Star of March 30, 1937, and ask you if you read that article.

* * * * * * *

A. I read this one.

Q. I will ask you if you read respondent's exhibit No. 31, which is an article appearing in the Journal-Post for April 5, 1937.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4118] A. I read that one, too.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will ask you if you recall reading the article in the Journal-Post for April 6, 1937, which is respondent's exhibit No. 32.

* * * * * * *

A. I read it.

Q. I will ask you if you recall reading respondent's exhibit 33, which is an article in the Kansas City Journal-Post for April 7, 1937.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4119] A. I think I read that one.

Trial Examiner Batten: You say you think you did?

A. I think I did, I am not sure; I read most of them.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What effect did the reading of these articles have on your state of mind with reference to the I.L.G.W.U.?

A. Well, it made me absolutely sure I didn't want any part of it, and I didn't want to have anything to do with anybody that had such ideas about organization as that, coming out and tearing hair and tearing women's clothes off of them, and I didn't think that was the right way to organize anything; I thought if you wanted to join the union that was your privilege, but I didn't think someone had to beat it into you that you had to join. I thought this was a free country, and that you were supposed to be allowed to do things you wanted to, and not let some other company come in and tell you what you had to do, and get your clothes torn off, or something like that.

Q. What was the effect of the reading of these articles on other employees at the time, so far as you could observe?

A. Well, they all felt the same way I did. They thought it was absolutely ridiculous. It was talked of over the plant what we would do in case they came down to our place, and, you know, they all felt—they all knew they didn't want any part of it.

[fol. 4120] Q. I hand you Respondent's Exhibit No. 34 and ask you if you recall reading this article that appeared in the Kansas City Journal-Post on April 10, 1937, which is entitled, "Garment Unions Get Closed Shop in Three More Plants".

* * * * * *

A. I read this article.

Mr. Ingraham: What effect did that article have on you?

A. Well, we just compared what they were asking for and what we already had. They were asking for—they signed their agreement for $13.00 a week minimum for 40 hours a week, and the lowest price paid in our factory was already $15 for 40 hours a week.

* * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit 35, which is an article in the Kansas City Journal-Post for April 22, 1937, and ask you if you read that article.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4121] A. Well, I read this article.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, what effect did that have on you?

A. Well, I was surprised, because we hadn't even elected a delegate at all for any convention, let alone one for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, because to our knowledge we didn't have any members in there, at least I hadn't heard of any at that time.

Mr. Reed: She said she didn't have any members in there: What was that?

A. In our plant, in the Donnelly Garment Company.

Mr. Reed: Didn't have any members in what?

A. In the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Mr. Ingraham: Did that have anything to do with your deciding to vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

[fol. 4122] A. Well, yes, it did. I decided for myself it would be a good thing if we had our own union, then somebody couldn't get up and say they were elected as our delegate to conventions. We knew that if we had our own union, we would have something to say about who should be our delegates and who shouldn't be.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4123] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Cooper, had you or any other employees, to your knowledge, selected Sylvia Hull as your representative to go to the International convention and ask for a strike in the Donnelly plant?

A. I know I didn't, and I didn't hear of any other girls in the plant that did. I didn't even know her.

Q. What was the effect on other employees, so far as you could observe, of that article?

A. They were indignant, that anyone would take it on themselves to say that they were our representative when there hadn't been anyone at all chosen.

Q. Did you want a strike in the Donnelly plant?

A. I certainly did not. We have never had any reason to strike.

Q. Were your wages higher than those paid in garment plants that had contracts with the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. They certainly were. We had a $15 minimum, and most of us doubled that most every week—sometimes a lot more than that.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 36, which is an article in the Kansas City Star of April 7, 1937, and ask you if you read that article.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4124] A. I read this article.

Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit 37, which is an article in the Kansas City Star, April 8, 1937, and ask you if you read that article.

A. I read this article, too.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. State whether or not there were discussions among the employees of the Donnelly plant at that time that the violence engaged in by the International forced the Gernes, Missouri, and Gordon companies to sign up with the International.

A. Yes. We discussed it very freely in the plant.

Q. Was that the opinion of the employees, that those companies were forced to sign up?

A. That is right, it was. Some of the girls knew the other girls and they said they didn't join it because they wanted to but because they had to in order to hold their jobs.

[fol. 4125] Mr. Ingraham: I will hand you respondent's exhibit 38, which is an article appearing in the Kansas City Star, April 12, 1937, and ask you if you recall reading that article.

A. I read the article.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did Mr. Tyler, at the meeting where the union was formed, discuss the Wagner Act?

A. He did. He said he had studied the Wagner Act and we could form our own union if we wanted to—select our own representatives, and all the rest of it.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit 6 in the Circuit Court of Appeals record, page 4864, and ask you if you remember reading this article, which appeared in the Kan-
[fol. 4126] sas City Press on February 26, 1937.

A. I read the article.

[fol. 4127] Mr. Ingraham: Did you read the next page? It is on two pages.

* * * * * * *

A. I read it.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. After this article appeared in the Kansas City Press on February 26, 1937, announcing—the heading of the article was "Reopen A Garment Feud, Union plans to seek Donnelly Company's Recognition." What, if anything, did the employees do several days after that?

A. Well, one thing they done was to get up a petition to present to Mrs. Reed to tell her that we didn't want her to sign with the union, that we didn't want anything to do with it; we knew those things they were saying about the company were not true and we were loyal to her.

Q. Do you know who circulated the petition?

A. Mary Sprofera and Inez Warren brought it up on the eighth floor where I was working. They brought it up there and it was passed among the girls in the section. Then, the girl on the end of the section got up and took it over to the next section. That is the way it got over the eighth floor.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4130] Q. Did the petition that you signed on March 2, 1937, have the same language that appears at the top of the first page of I. L. G. W. U.'s exhibit No. 10?

A. Yes; to my recollection, that is the exact words.

Q. Where did you sign this petition?

A. At my machine.

Q. Did any official, executive, or representative of the management request you to sign the petition?

[fol. 4131] A. No, they didn't. I don't think they even knew it was in there. If they did, they didn't say anything. It was brought up on the floor by those two girls, Inez Warren and Mary Sprofera, and when it got to the end of the section the girl at the end of the section got up and took it over to the other section, and it went over the floor that way. And I think someone took it down to another floor.

Q. Did the instructor ask you to sign the petition?

A. No, she didn't.

Q. Why did you sign the petition?

A. Because we wanted her to know that we were contented with our working conditions and the way she treated us, and we also appreciated the fact that we had higher wages than any other garment factory in Kansas City, and we didn't want her to sign with any outside union—International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Q. You, as I understand, stated that the petition was handed from girl to girl in your section?

A. It was.

Q. Will you state whether or not it is a common practice for employees to pass papers through the section from girl to girl?

A. It certainly is.

Q. What is generally the purpose of sending anything through the section?

[fol. 4132] A. It could be most anything, from a house to rent, riders wanted, eggs for sale,— A certain girl has chickens she sells every week up there, and if she has any extra ones she sends a note through that she has so many chickens, at so much a pound, and sends it through the plant. Another girl might have a room to rent. And at Christmas time some of the girls have cards to sell. One girl, every Christmas, sells shelled walnuts by the quart up there. There is always those notices sent through the factory and no one ever says anything about it.

Q. Has that been the case during the entire period since you worked for the Donnelly Company?

A. It has.

Q. When notes are sent through, do the instructors necessarily know that they are going through?

A. There's a lot of them goes through that they don't know about.

Q. Have you noticed notices on the bulletin board that referred to some private interest of an employee?

A. Just the other day I saw one on there that said someone wanted five passengers from a certain point to the factory at a certain time in the morning. And I saw one the other day where a girl had a house for rent. You can see them on there any time you want to look at the bulletin board—all kinds of messages on there—someone lost their glasses, and one day I saw one where they had a Boy Scout [fol. 4133] belt for sale.

Q. Do you know whether or not notes have been sent by individual employees to some other employee on a different floor by a bundle boy?

A. I send them all of the time down to my sister. She works on two.

Q. Did you ever send any notes that had any reference to any union activities?

A. I never did.

Q. These notices on the bulletin board, have they had any reference to—I mean the individual notice that some employee puts up on the bulletin board, do they generally refer to any union activity?

A. No. I don't believe I ever saw one at all that did. They used to post notices on there of the union meetings, but I think they usually have those in the elevator now, or down the hall.

Q. Did you gain the impression from anyone at the Donnelly plant that this March 2 petition was being circulated at the request of or on behalf of the management?

A. No, I didn't. It was a voluntary movement by the girls themselves.

Q. Did you ever hear anybody say that Mrs. Reed wanted the petition circulated?

A. No. I always understood she didn't know anything about it.

[fol. 4134] Q. That is, prior to the time it was delivered to her?

A. That is what I mean.

Q. Did you feel that if you failed to sign the March 2 petition that you would be in any way discriminated against or penalized by the company?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you sign it of your own free will?

A. I certainly did, because that was my feeling about the matter.

Q. Did any instructor or any representative of the management ask you to sign it?

A. They did not.

Q. Was there any coercion, suggestion, or influence of any kind brought to bear on you by the management or any body that you felt was speaking for the management to cause or induce you to sign the petition?

A. Why, no.

Q. Did the statement express your sentiment?

A. It certainly did.

Q. Did you understand or hear from any source that the petition was being circulated by the Loyalty League?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Was there anything said about the Loyalty League when the petition was handed to you?

A. There wasn't anything said at all. The girl just [fol. 4135] handed it to me, and I read it and signed it.

Q. And what did you do with it?

A. Passed it to the girl sitting next to me, or probably across the board from me.

Q. Now, did you belong to the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 40 and ask you to state what that is.

A. That is a Nelly Don Loyalty pin.

* * * * * *

Q. Is the word "Loyalty" written at any place on that pin?

A. No, but that is what the "L" stands for.

Q. But the word itself is not written on it?

A. No.

Mr. Langsdale: May I see it?

(Thereupon respondent's exhibit No. 40 was handed to Mr. Langsdale by Mr. Ingraham.)

Mr. Ingraham: I offer in evidence respondent's exhibit No. 40.

Trial Examiner Batten: No objection? It will be received.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4136] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I believe you stated you were a member of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. What were the activities of the Loyalty League?

A. It was a social organization. We organized dances, some few plays, and things like that, and picnics.

Q. Did you pay any dues?

A. No. When they had a dance they sold tickets; or for any social activities they had, they sold tickets in the factory to take care of the cost.

Q. Did you ever hear that the Loyalty League was a union organization?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever know or hear that the Loyalty League represented the employees, concerning their terms and conditions of employment?

A. No. That wasn't the understanding they gave me when I joined.

Q. Did you ever hear of the Loyalty League doing anything like that?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever know of its having any dealings at all [fol. 4137] with the management?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you gain the impression from any source or did you understand that the Loyalty League had anything to do with the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I didn't. It was never mentioned.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd was president of the Loyalty League and presided at the March 18 meeting make you feel that the March 18 meeting was a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, it didn't. The girls asked Miss Todd to seek this legal advice for us.

[fol. 4138] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. With reference to Mrs. Reed's speech at the March 18 meeting, did she make any statement as to the employees joining or not joining any union?

* * * * * * *

A. She said they could join if they wanted to, she didn't have anything to say about whether or not they joined a union.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you feel that the March 18 meeting was an anti-union meeting that had anything to do with whether or not you had the right to join a union or did not have the right?

A. No.

Q. Did you feel that you could not express your independent views at that meeting if you wanted to?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Now, did the fact that Rose Todd presided at the April 27 meeting, when the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, influence you into believing it was a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, we knew if was not a Loyalty League meeting.

[fol. 4139] Q. What kind of a meeting was it?

A. It was just a mass meeting of the employees.

Q. And you weren't there because you were a member of the Loyalty League?

A. No, we were not.

Q. Was there any coercion or pressure brought on you by the Loyalty League or its officers to cause you to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, there was not.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4140] Q. Did you regard Rose Todd as a boss or a supervisory employee?

A. No, Rose didn't have any supervisory position as far as I know; none of the girls even thought she did.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Of course, the question was what you thought.

A. No, I didn't think she did.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you have the feeling that she was representing the management in any activities that she was engaged in, with regard to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you consider that whatever she said about the unions was the views of the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you feel any compulsion or coercion in your choice of a union as a result of anything that Rose Todd [fol. 4141] did or said?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you feel free to differ with Rose Todd any time you wanted to?

A. Why, certainly; that is what the Wagner Act says, that we could make our own choice.

Q. What time did you state you went to work for the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. January 9, 1936.

Q. Who was in charge of the factory at that time?

A. Lee Baty.

Q. Is he still in charge of the factory?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the instructors, any instructor under whom you worked ever exercise any authority of hiring or firing or disciplining girls?

Miss Weyand: I object to the question as not within the scope of the offer of proof upon which we have the remand.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, is it, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, I think it is.

Trial Examiner Batten: Which offer of proof?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I'll get the offer out.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think we had better keep them out where they will be handy. Do you have that, [fol. 4142] Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: I have all the offers here. There are a number of offers. You can look over the ones I have, if you have that in mind, what you want to see.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Miss Weyand: This is the main one.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I am not so sure that this does not cover it, Miss Weyand. For instance, there are several places in here which state that these people would testify that neither directly nor indirectly did anyone representing the management have anything to do with the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union calculated or intended to influence the membership of the company employees.

Miss Weyand: Does that raise the question as to whether these persons can give their opinion of the status of anyone in the plant including the instructors?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I wouldn't say an employee who is in a sewing section can give her opinion about the general manager or Mrs. Reed or the office manager, but I do think that an operator who works in a section under an instructor, a specific instructor, that she certainly is in a position to say what she thinks her relationship to that instructor is.

Miss Weyand: Well, I don't think the offer opens any question of the opinion of the witness as to the instructors' [fol. 4143] supervisory authority. I think the record has already been made on that and I did not understand the terms of the offer to be directed towards whether or not the instructor was a supervisor. As I understand the offer, it is worded that neither anyone representing the management nor any instructor did this, that or the other thing, only the instructor doing the thing was in question. It is my view the offer does not open up the question as to whether or not the instructor was or was not a person who spoke on behalf of the management, within the terms of the Wagner Act.

Trial Examiner Batten: If they offer to prove no one connected with the management, directly or indirectly, had anything to do with the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union —

Miss Weyand: (Interrupting) They also offer to prove no instructor did it, in both sentences there, so I don't think the offer is opened up as to whether the instructor was, in the opinion of this witness, a representative of the management.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you are assuming, then, that question is a closed matter, is that it?

Miss Weyand: I am assuming that is not to be covered by the remand, that this offer was not directed at it, and that the Court did not intend to open that up by this remand.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, then, my question to you [fol. 4144] is, if that is the case, doesn't that put the Respondent in a position where the Respondent, in questioning the employees, then, could only say, "Did that instructor belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or did your instructor have anything to do with its organization"?

Miss Weyand: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: And the question as to whether or not the instructor is a supervisor, that is a closed issue, is that your position?

Miss Weyand: That is my position.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, what have you to say, if anything?

Mr. Ingraham: Of course, we have the right to go into the matters that come within these offers of proof, and repeatedly in the offers of proof, we recite that instructors, not supervisory employees, did not influence these people.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't find that. Where is that in the offer of proof?

Mr. Ingraham: Look at page 3460.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't have that page, but I happen to see it on page 3466. What page did you say it was?

Mr. Ingraham: 3460 in my record.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4150] Trial Examiner Batten: I think last night when we adjourned you had asked this witness a question, "Did any instructor under whom you worked ever exercise any authority of hiring or firing or disciplining girls?" I presume you meant by that question as far as this witness knows, her experience in that regard.

Mr. Ingraham: That's right.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You may tell us.

A. No, I never saw them exercise any authority over any girl at any time.

Q. Well, you mean —

A. (Interrupting) Or hire or fire.

Q. You mean from the time you started to work down to today, is that what you mean?

A. Yes, down to today.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4151] By Mr. Ingraham: —

Q. Mrs. Cooper, from the time that you became employed with the Donnelly Company until August of 1939, did you at any time consider an instructor your boss?

A. No, I understood when I went there — I was told that the instructor was not the boss, that their job was to instruct, and that is all I ever saw any of them do.

Q. By "instruct" what do you mean?

A. They sit down at the machine and show the girl how to work, and if the girl does not understand it, why, she explains to them just how the work is done, and sees that it is done right, and also she brings them their work and their samples, and things like that.

. . . . . .

Q. Have the telephones been used, to your knowledge, by the employees?

A. They are always used by the employees, they always have been since I have been in the employ of the company.

Q. And the company has placed no limitation on the use of the telephones?

[fol. 4152] A. No, they haven't.

Q. Now, do you know whether or not it is a fact that employees have at times used sewing machines to sew on their own dresses?

A. I know that they have, because I have [saw] them do it, they have even used company trims and thread and buttons to go on them.

Q. That was true before the union, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, was formed?

A. It was.

Q. And the use of the telephones?

A. It was.

Q. That occurred prior to the time the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

A. It was.

Q. Will you state whether or not you joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will?

A. I did.

Miss Weyand: I would like to make a statement in connection with that question. While we are here to take such evidence under the remand of the Court, it is my position that the question is one which should not properly be directed to the witness. I am, of course, acquiescing in the Circuit Court of Appeals ruling we do take such evidence, but I would like to make a statement for the record, of my position on that question.

[fol. 4153] I think such questions are improper in a Labor Board hearing, in the first place because they violate the principle of a secret election stated in Section 9 of the Act. The Congressional intent there expressed was clearly that employees should not be required to disclose in the presence of their employers or any representatives of the employers or in the presence of anyone else, if they did not so desire, whether or not they favored one union over another union.

To ask an employee who is still employed by the employer, in the presence of employer's representatives, whether or not she favors a given union, violates the principles of secret elections. I think the question is improper for a second reason, that is because the Board's inquiry in a Labor Board case is whether or not the employer interfered, restrained or coerced employees. The Congressional intent is clear that that inquiry is directed to whether or not the employer did certain acts, which normally and reasonably have the effect of interfering with, restraining or coercing.

It is not the Board's job to inquire whether or not the restraint, interference or coercion actually had that effect on any given employee. The Board is not required to look into the minds of the employees and see if any one or more employees are actually interfered with, restrained or coerced.

The Courts have repeatedly held that espionage, even [fol. 4154] though unknown to any of the employees, constituted interference within the meaning of the Act and has held immaterial that no employee knew he was being spied upon, and it was held immaterial that the employer had not used the information that he received through the espionage for the purpose of depriving the employees of other rights in the Act.

There is a third reason why I think the question is improper in a Labor Board hearing, and that is that the proof, if we can assume it is proof, that any employee was not interfered with, restrained or coerced, has no weight or bearing upon whether or not any other employee was restrained, interfered with or coerced. That is a general proposition, that negative evidence does not establish the absence of affirmative evidence in other instances.

It is the Labor Board's duty only to show the acts of the employer are the type that interfered with, restrained or coerced; that if in this case, where the prior evidence shows the employer has interfered with, restrained and coerced certain employees, the fact they may provide many witnesses who think they were not interfered with, restrained or coerced has no bearing on whether other employees were interfered with, restrained or coerced.

For a fourth reason, I think the question is improper because of the unreliability of introspective inquiries. By reason of the very nature of the subject matter, the [fol. 4155] employees who have been the subject of unfair labor practices really become so interfered with or dominated that they do not know their own minds, even assuming they were able to speak in the presence of the employer freely. It is our position they cannot speak freely in the presence of their employer, and if they have been, for long years, under the interference, restraint and coercion of their employer, their state of mind is one which they cannot provide a fair introspective account of their own state of mind, because the domination, interference and restraint which the Act presupposes goes to the coloring of the employee's point of view, so he cannot look into his own mind and state what his position would have been if he hadn't been subject to this economic power which has been exercised over him unfairly by the employer.

For those four reasons it is my position that the line of inquiry here directed to whether or not an employee believes that he joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of his own free will isn't a proper line of inquiry.

I am aware that the Court has directed us to take that testimony, and I will not object further in this hearing, but I do wish the record to show my position on this line of questions.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection to this type of question. Mr. Tyler.

[fol. 4156] Mr. Tyler: I think it proper at this time for the Intervenor to state its position on that line of testimony.

Miss Weyand has suggested that it displaces and takes the place of the proper method of inquiry, which is a secret election. I wish to call the Examiner's attention to the fact that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union has appealed and still appeals for a secret election, and that they have been denied this right for a period of five years, and that we submit we should have a secret election as the proper method of determining the will of the employees, which is just as capable, being really secret, of determining any other issues now, as it would be after this case had ended, no matter when it is in the future.

We are being denied the right of secret election, and now the Board says a secret election is the way to determine, but "you are denied that method and we now deny you the method of proper testimony," thereby completely eliminating the possibility of these employees making known what their desire is, which refers to the matter of testimony being in the presence of representatives of the employers, which I need not comment on, because it has been specifically covered by the Court of Appeals' opinion.

She then suggests what seems to me to be a remarkable idea, that introspective evidence is not of great value, because the employees do not know their own minds, and that [fol. 4157] the Board presupposes that they were dominated.

Now, the law is not, if the Court please, that these employees reach a correct conclusion or not that they reach a conclusion, even though using arguments which are wrong and incorrect. The only requirement of the Act is they reach their own conclusion.

Now, to say they didn't know their own minds is to say that the Board knows what is good for them better than they do themselves, and the law is they should reach the Board's conclusion and not their own.

I submit that the highest possible evidence of a man's motive or his state of mind is what he says himself; he does know what conclusion he reaches, even though he may have used incorrect arguments in reaching them; and that the attitude of the Board is clearly indicated in this case that "we will decide for these people, and they don't have enough brains to decide for themselves and that they don't know their own minds," which is a flat violation of this Act.

Not only is the testimony of these employees' intent admissible, but it is the highest evidence of what that motive, that influence and that choice is.

Trial Examiner Batten: Anything further?

Mr. Reed: I just want to ask — I tried to ask it before Mr. Tyler reached the floor — now, if you will give [fol. 4158] us a secret election, since you say these people are afraid to testify in the presence of their employers or their associates, will you now give us a secret election? And I challenge the Board to that.

Miss Weyand: I would like to state the Board's position with reference to a secret election for the record.

The Board's position has consistently been, and was upheld by the Courts in this regard, that a secret election cannot be fairly conducted if an employer's unfair labor practices have not been corrected or dissipated.

Mr. Reed: Well, you assume there are unfair labor practices, therefore you assume you can't have an election; therefore you get an election if the Board wants it and not as a matter of right, and the Board's position is, "We have prejudged you, you are guilty of unfair labor practices, and therefore we won't give you a chance to have an election or give the employees a chance to have an election to determine what their wishes are."

That is the fine logic we have in this case, and it runs throughout it.

[fol. 4160] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Cooper, do you feel free to testify in this hearing?

A. I asked to testify in this hearing.

Q. Just a moment. Do you feel free to testify to your honest views in open court?

A. Of course I do.

Q. Do you feel any restraint because representatives of the Management are present in court?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Has their presence in any way influenced you in any testimony that you have given?

[fol. 4161] A. They certainly have not.

* * * * * *

Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Cooper, would you mind turning your chair a little way? I have a few questions.

Mrs. Cooper, I believe you stated that you started to work with the Donnelly Garment Company in January 1936?

A. I did.

Q. How soon after you started work there did you become acquainted with Rose Todd?

A. Oh, I don't exactly remember. She used to come into the section all the time and bring thread and stuff to match up the material so she could order it. I knew who she was, but I never was really well acquainted with Rose, not as a personal friend, she was not a personal friend of mine.

Q. Have you talked with her on occasions?

A. I did after she became president of our union.

Q. Did you know what her job was?

A. I never knew what they called Rose, but I knew the kind of work she done.

Q. What did she do?

A. She came in the section and she looked up thread and things to match, thread and trims to match the work that they had in the section so it could be ordered, so that when the cuts of work went through that the thread and [fol. 4162] notions would be there for them to use.

Q. Did you ever regard her as one of the executives or bosses of the company?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did she ever tell you that she had authority to speak for the company about labor relations of the employees?

A. She did not.

Q. Did you ever hear her tell anyone else that?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever hear anybody in the factory say that Rose Todd represents the employers about labor matters?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever hear any rumor through the factory that Rose Todd was either the open or the secret representative of the employers?

A. I did not.

Q. Do you know Hobart Atherton?

A. I knew who he was but I never knew him.

Q. Did you ever hear he had authority to represent the employers about labor policies?

A. I did not.

Q. Now, to shorten it, Mrs. Cooper, was there any member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or any person who became a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, that you understood represented the employer or had authority to speak for the employer on [fol. 4163] labor relations?

A. There was not.

Q. Did you know, in 1937, girls or women who worked in other garment plants in Kansas City outside of the Donnelly plant?

A. I didn't know the names of some; some I used to ride to work with on the street cars, and I have talked to several of those.

Q. Did you ever hear from them what wages they were getting in their plants?

A. Well, I had several of them tell me that if the Donnelly girls joined the I.L.G.W.U. union they were crazy, because the I.L.G.W.U. were not living up to their contracts; their contracts called for one wage while they were being paid another.

Q. Did these conversations—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Mr. Tyler, do you think that testimony, without any identification at all, is of any great weight?

Mr. Tyler: I certainly do, Your Honor. I submit that information, regardless of where it comes from, reaches these employees about other conditions, may tend to show why they preferred to have their own union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I agree with you on that. I am asking you whether you think it is of great weight as [fol. 4164] compared with the identification of the source of information.

Mr. Tyler: I think it is of greater weight than the source of information. I think what these employees believed, as I believe Your Honor stated the other day, is really more important than where it came from.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I still think that, I still agree with you on that, Mr. Tyler.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4166] Q. Did these conversations have any effect on your choice of labor union at all?

A. It certainly did.

[fol. 4167] Q. Mrs. Cooper, have you ever been a member of the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, I haven't.

Q. Have you voted for members of that committee?

A. I have.

Q. In spite of the fact that you have never been on the committee, do you have any knowledge of any complaints handled by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union with the employers?

A. I do. I went up with a bunch of girls one day.

Q. State what was done.

A. The price of the work we thought wasn't as good as it should be. It didn't compare with the prices the girls in the tucking section were getting. We were on the embroidery machine and the embroidery machine was a harder machine to run that the tuckers were, and we didn't think it was fair that the prices on the embroidery should be lower than the prices on the tucking, so we called Lorraine Smith, our president, and had her make an appointment with Mr. Baty, and we went up to Mr. Baty's office and presented our views, and the prices were adjusted on some and on others it was not.

Miss Weyand: I object to the question and ask to have the answer stricken because, at least the latter part of it, as to Lorraine Smith as president of the union, referred to a date subsequent to the last hearing. I believe we are confined, under the offer, to events occurring prior to August, 1939.

[fol. 4168] As I recall, Rose Todd was president of the union continuously prior to that date.

The witness' answer would show she is referring to matters occurring thereafter, and I would like to have the answer stricken for that reason.

Mr. Tyler: I do not understand Your Honor's ruling to be that absolutely nothing occurring since the last hearing will be permitted in evidence. I understand that is the general rule, but where some event since 1935 reasonably throws light on the condition before that time, Your Honor will consider whether it is admissible.

I submit that the law is that the effective operation of a plant union down to the present day is admissible evidence on the matter of whether it has been since its inception an actual bona fide labor union. I submit that the evidence as to the actions of this group of people as a labor union down to today is admissible in this hearing on the question of whether they actually formed or operated that union themselves in 1937.

[fol. 4169] Mr. Tyler: The International is saying, suppose you did form it of your own free will and accord; it became subject to domination thereafter. We intend to show it was operated for the benefit of the employees thereafter.

Trial Examiner Batten: Doesn't that mean the Board [fol. 4170] would then have to show, in rebuttal of that testimony, that since the last hearing down to today it is still a dominated organization?

Mr. Tyler: I take it, it is on the Board to introduce evidence, if they have it, to show that the union is under domination, to show that its formation was dominated. If they show the union is dominated today, that is some evidence that it was created under domination. I think those things connect.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is the position of respondent on this matter?

Mr. Langsdale: The I. L. G. W. U. would be happy to accept that challenge and show it is dominated down to today and has been from the beginning.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, what is the respondent's position on that matter?

Mr. Ingraham: We have requested that the Examiner determine the scope of the hearing. I think that is a matter for the Examiner to decide, whether it is going to take in matters that occurred after the trial in 1939. Our position is that the complaint that is filed here and the answers make up the issues in the case, and that the evidence should be confined to the issues.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will all agree on that. But are the matters which have occurred since the last hearing [fol. 4171] down to today—is it necessary to receive those to determine the issues?

Mr. Ingraham: I really don't think that it is necessary. The Board has made certain specific charges, and I don't think that matters down to the present date are material to those charges.

However, so far as the International's challenge is concerned, we can meet that evidence. We are merely waiting for Your Honor to rule.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think, as far as that challenge is concerned, if the International feels that way about it, there is a perfectly proper way of bringing that to issue, and that is by filing some more charges.

I am going to rule now, as far as the testimony with respect to the offers of proof is concerned, we are not going into matters which occurred subsequent to the last hearing. The remand certainly could not possibly have contemplated those matters, and the offers of proof certainly could not have contemplated those matters.

On the basis of that ruling I, naturally, would strike this answer, with respect to this witness.

Mr. Reed: Are we, then, to understand that the case here is to be tried solely on the conditions existing at the time the charges were filed, before the time of the last hearing?

[fol. 4172] Trial Examiner Batten: That is correct.

Mr. Reed: That goes for everything in the case?

Trial Examiner Batten: That is correct. In other words, we are not going to try the issue from the time of the last hearing down to today. The circuit court would not have and could not have had that situation in mind, and certainly the offers of proof could not have contemplated it.

Now, that means, of course, that I shall have to go over the testimony thus far. If I recall correctly, there is some testimony covering matters subsequent to the last hearing.

Mr. Tyler: I desire to call Your Honor's attention to the fact that the offer of proof of intervener's states that not only did they organize this union of their own free will, but that they have operated it since. That is a continuing thing. And I think that the Court of Appeals did not mean in the remand to limit this hearing to the exact words or the exact incidents set forth before, but to a kind of evidence, and that this is within the kind of evidence.

[fol. 4173] Mr. Tyler: Very well. I do not know that this particular question has arisen before in this hearing and I ask that we be given a continuing exception to this line of testimony, if that is not already in the record.

Trial Examiner Batten: You will be allowed a continuing objection, Mr. Tyler.

[fol. 4174] Mr. Tyler. Please insert ". . . to the Master's ruling on this line of testimony."

. . . . . .

Mr. Langsdale: I want to state the position of the I. L. G. W. U., to make it clear on this. We are ready now to go ahead down to date with our evidence, if the Examiner thinks we should. I believe the Examiner's ruling is correct, under the remand, but I would like to see the Examiner let the bars down, because we are thoroughly prepared to show acts of domination right up to yesterday, if necessary. That is our position.

[fol. 4175] I say that, however, with the further statement that I think the Examiner's ruling is a correct one.

I made that objection during the testimony of Mrs. Reed. She testified to things down to date. Now, will we have to go through that testimony and ask that certain portions of it be stricken, or will it be taken as stricken where it violates the ruling just made?

Trial Examiner Batten: I intended to go through the testimony. I might say that I have no apologies to make for permitting Mrs. Reed the latitude I did. If I were doing it all over again, I think I would do the same thing. And I think I said at the time that if there were any other person of, I would say, comparative importance who was unable to testify in the prior hearing, I would, I think, follow the same procedure. But I think I stated when I made my ruling that I intended to go over the testimony thus far.

Mr. Langsdale: I am not in any way infimating a criticism of the Examiner for permitting Mrs. Reed to so testify, but I think under this ruling a large part of her testimony should be stricken.

Trial Examiner Batten: I intend to go over it, and I will advise with all counsel after I have.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4176] Mr. Tyler: Mrs. Cooper, did you happen to know of any complaints handled through the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or its committees before 1939; that is, within a year and a half after the union was formed—within two years after the union was formed?

Mr. Langsdale: What is the date upon which we will close the evidence, the last day of the hearing?

Trial Examiner Batten: That is correct. I believe it was July 15. Do you have it, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: Yes. July 15 is the correct date.

Trial Examiner Batten: From April 27, 1937, to July 15, 1939—a little over two years.

A. I can't think of any specific instance where any of the girls I work with actually went up with a complaint prior to that time. I heard of several of them, but I didn't know the actual details of it.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You did not have personal knowledge of it?

A. No.

[fol. 4177] Q. But you heard that numerous complaints were handled through the union; is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you ever see Mrs. Reed or Mr. Baty or Mrs. Reeves at a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union between and including the date of its formation up until July, 1939?

A. I don't remember ever seeing them there.

Q. Did you ever see anyone at the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union who you understood had authority from the employer in connection with labor relations or was in any way a supervisor or boss?

A. I did not.

Q. In the meeting of April 27, 1937, was or was not a statement made that the employees had the right to do exactly as they pleased about forming a labor union or not forming one?

A. It was made by you, yourself, Mr. Tyler.

Q. By anybody else?

A. By Rose Todd, too.

Q. Did you see any evidence of any coercion or threat or oppression about forming a labor union there?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you see any evidence of denying anyone present the right to speak his or her own mind without any punishment being threatened for it?

A. I did not.

[fol. 4178] Q. Will you state, as far as your memory goes, just what happened in that meeting of April 27—what you remember of it?

A. I don't remember all of the details, but I remember that you came down and told us we could form our own union, under the law, if we wanted to, and that the vote was taken and the girls voted to form their own union, and the committee was voted on to go out and bring back some names of the chairmen, and things, for the first union committee, and then they were voted on. Then, they passed out cards for the girls to sign if they wanted to join the union.

Q. Do you remember whether there was or was not any offer made to let anyone who didn't want to make up their mind then and there take further time and decide whether they wanted to join or not?

A. They said they could sign or not, whichever they chose; the cards would not have to be in until the next evening.

Q. How long did the meeting last?

A. It was several hours. I don't remember. I know I was awfully late getting home.

Q. What is the fact, Mrs. Cooper, according to your best knowledge, as to whether these employees acted of their own free will or whether they were coerced into forming the union?

. . . . . .

[fol. 4180] A. I never heard any of them make any complaints about being coerced, or anything. They all seemed to be acting from an urge within themselves to form this union. They all seemed very anxious, all of them I talked to. Of course, what they really thought, I can't say, but that was my opinion.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you ever work in another garment factory before you began working at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I did.

Q. When did you start working in garment factories?

A. Sixteen years ago.

Q. What garment factory did you start working in?

A. The Kansas City Embroidery Works.

Q. How long did you work at the Kansas City Embroidery Works?

A. About 7 months, I believe.

Q. Where did you go from the Kansas City Embroidery Works?

A. Brooke Curtain & Embroidery Company, 2609 Walnut.

Q. How long did you work for the Brooke Curtain & Embroidery Company?

A. I worked there about two years before I was married; then, I went back after my first son was born and worked there for approximately a year.

Q. Could you fix the date on which you went back?

[fol. 4181] A. No, I couldn't. It was in 1931.

Q. And where did you go after working there?

A. To the Liberty Garment Company.

Q. How long did you work at the Liberty Garment Company?

A. It wasn't very long. I believe it was about 6 or 8 months, something like that.

Q. That was in 1933, was it, or 1932?

A. I don't remember. It was just a few months. I went over there when we were out of work at Brooke's; I went over there and worked a few months. I don't remember how long it was.

Q. Did you return to Brooke's after that?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did you continue to work at Brooke's?

. . . . . .

[fol. 4182] A. I can't remember. I know my second son was born in 1932. I went over to Donnelly's and worked there a few months before he was born, and then I [fol. 4183] went back over to Donnelly's and worked when he was 8 months old. That would have been the latter part of 1932. No. It was the first of 1933. I worked there a few months, and then I quit and went back to Brooke's.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was that the first occasion upon which you had ever worked at Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Then did you continue to work at Brooke's continuously until you went to Donnelly's in January of 1936 or—

A. At one time I was laid off and I went over to the Liberty and worked over there until they got some more work, and then I went back to Brooke's and worked there until I went to Donnelly's in 1936.

. . . . . .

Q. Thank you. How did you come to get your job at Donnelly's in January 1936?

A. I was laid off at Brooke's and I came over there and asked for work.

[fol. 4184] Q. Whom did you speak to at Donnelly's?

A. Mrs. Hyde.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4186] Q. Do you remember the conversation which occurred when you asked Mrs. Hyde for a job at the Donnelly Garment Company in January 1936?

A. Most of it.

Q. Will you please state it?

A. I had asked—I had put in my application first and she came and told me to come in.

Q. When did you put in your application?

A. About two days before I was hired.

Q. And that was in January 1936, was it?

A. Yes. She called me and left word with my brother-in-law to have me come over and see her, and I went over to see her, and she understood that I was an embroidery girl, and I told her that I was; and she wanted to know who I worked for, and I told her I worked for Mrs. Dorsey.

[fol. 4187] Q. When you mentioned Mrs. Dorsey, is that the instructor at Donnelly's whom you had worked for previously?

A. Yes, I worked for her two weeks in December—now, wait a minute and I'll tell you—in the last part of November or December, 1931.

Q. I interrupted your statement of the conversation with Mrs. Hyde; would you continue it?

A. She said the work wouldn't be steady, that she only had a few weeks' work, that it was on the embroidery machine. She wouldn't promise me it would be steady; so when I ran out of work they gave me another machine, so I started working there on different machines outside of the embroidery machine.

Q. Had you worked on other machines than the embroidery machine prior to January, 1936?

A. Yes, when I worked at the Liberty Garment, I ran a straight needle machine.

Q. Did you receive higher pay for operating the embroidery machine than for the other machines on which you worked at Liberty?

A. At the Liberty?

Q. Is it generally higher pay on embroidery machines?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And the embroidery machine is your specialty, is that correct?

[fol. 4188] A. Yes.

Q. And was down to August 1939, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was there more to the conversation with Mrs. Hyde than you have stated?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Did she then hire you?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. When did you start work?

A. The same day.

Q. What section did you get into?

A. Etta Dorsey's section, No. 415 I believe it was.

Q. What floor was that on?

A. I believe it was on 8, where it is now.

Q. Have you been on the 8th floor continuously?

A. No, I worked all over the factory since I been there.

Q. What machines did you operate in Etta Dorsey's section in January 1936?

A. The embroidery machine.

Q. Was Etta Dorsey's section composed entirely of embroidery machines?

A. No; it was a special section; we had tuckers, arm tuckers, and a few air line tuckers, and I believe she had a few double stitchers at that time.

[fol. 4189] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was an instructor regarded as a boss at any of the plants at which you had worked prior to coming to the Donnelly Garment Company in January, 1936?

A. Well, I know when I went to work at the Liberty, I went and seen Lena Cross. She put me to work at the Liberty; she told me to come in, and she was my floorlady and instructor at the time I went to work there.

Q. She hired you, did she?

A. She did. Whether she spoke to the management about that, I don't know; but she told me to come in and I [fol. 4190] went in and went to work, I went directly to her for the job.

Q. She was regarded as a boss at the Liberty Garment Company?

A. She was floorlady and instructor, so I suppose she would be the boss.

Q. Was she usually called "instructor" at the Liberty?

A. I don't remember, Miss Weyand, whether they called her the instructor or not.

Q. Did they have instructors at the Liberty, other persons who were called instructors?

A. They had one or two women, but I didn't know them. You see, I knew Lena personally.

Q. Did you have sections at the Liberty?

A. No, they didn't have the special work we do at Donnelly's, and it was not near as large a place, and all of them who worked there—some of the women brought bundles and others done different things.

Q. Did you have instructors at any of the other plants at which you worked other than Donnelly's?

A. Yes, we had an instructor at Brooks—it was later changed to W. H. Beaumont and Son; I worked there when it was under that name.

Q. Who was the instructor you were referring to at Brooks?

A. Martha—I know her name as well as I do mine—Martha—she worked on the machine with me for years be-

[fol. 4191] fore she was instructor—Lauber, L-a-u-b-e-r (Spelling)

Q. Did you regard Martha Lauber as a boss at Brooks?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was there a thread girl at Brooks? A. No.

Q. Were there thread girls at any of the other plants at which you worked prior to Donnelly?

A. Not in the same way we have them at Donnelly's. There was girls that wound thread at Brooks, it had to be wound off of the comb onto the spools, and they called them thread girls, but their sole job was to take care of the needs of the operators.

[fol. 4193] Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When you went to work at the Donnelly Garment Company in January of 1936, were you given any instructions, written or oral, as to the authority of the supervisors, what rules you were expected to follow, or your duties as an operator? A. I don't believe I was.

Q. How did you start to work; do you remember? Did Mrs. Hyde take you down to a section? A. She did.

Q. Did she introduce you to Mrs. Dorsey?

A. I already knew Mrs. Dorsey, and when I went up there she said, "Yes, I remember her. She has already worked for me."

Q. And then you started to work? A. Yes.

Q. And no one told you what rules you were to follow or whose directions you had to follow, or anything?

A. One or the other, either Mrs. Dorsey or Mrs. Hyde, told me Mr. Baty was in charge of the factory, but I can't remember now which one of them it was.

Q. And that was in January of 1936, when you went to work there? A. Yes.

Q. Did they tell you anything further about your duties?

A. No. They just showed me how to do the work—Mrs. [fol. 4194] Dorsey did, and she came around and looked at it, and that was all there was to it.

Q. Did they introduce you to Mr. Baty? A. No.

Q. When did you meet Mr. Baty?

A. Oh, I saw him there all of the time. They told me who he was, but I never was introduced to him.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4196] Q. Were you given any instructions, oral or written, or any rules of conduct, which stated what your duties as an operator were between January, 1936 and July, 1937?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4198] A. Miss Weyand, I can't remember ever working in a place where they did, when you went to work, give you any instructions along that line.

* * * * * *

Q. Were you ever told what the duties of the instructors were?

A. One of the instructors told me one time, what they told her.

Q. Who was that instructor? A. Grace Davis.

Q. Was she an instructor? A. She is now.

Q. Was she at the time she told you? A. Yes.

Q. When did she tell you?

A. It has been around a year and a half.

Mr. Reed: That is after—

Miss Weyand: That is correct, and I am abandoning that line of questioning.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I will ask you if you ever received any such information prior to July 15, 1939. A. No.

Q. So you never, prior to July 15, 1939, were told by [fol. 4199] anybody at Donnelly's what the authority and duties of an instructor were?

A. No. I never asked anybody anything about that, and no one ever told me.

Q. Were you ever told what the duties or authority of Lena Tyhurst were prior to July 15, 1939?

A. Nobody ever told me what she was supposed to do, but I know what she done in relation to the work I do.

Q. What did she do?

A. She comes around and inspects your work, especially on new work which is going through, to see that the work is going through all right; and if she doesn't think it is all right, she will take the part you have and the parts all over the factory and have one dress made up to see if there is any doubt about whether it is all right or not. If some girl changes her work, Lena inspects it to see whether or not it comes up to qualifications.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4200] Q. What section were you working in in March and April of 1937?

A. I was working in 415, on the embroidery machine.

Q. Who was the instructor?

A. I don't remember now. They change those around. [fol. 4201] Sometimes Grace Davis, sometimes Kathryn Rosen, and sometimes Etta Dorsey. I don't remember at that time which one of them had that section.

Q. Do you remember any instructor under which you worked during the months of March or April of 1937?

A. I believe Mrs. Dorsey still had the section at that time.

Q. Did you work under Mrs. Dorsey throughout the months of March and April, 1937?

A. I would say that I did.

Q. Who was the thread girl in that section at that time?

A. I don't believe we had one. I don't remember that we did.

Q. When did you join the Loyalty League?

A. The first part of 1936.

Q. Do you remember the occasion upon which you joined?

A. The president of the Loyalty League sent me a notice that I was eligible for membership if I wanted to join the Loyalty League.

Q. Who was the president of the Loyalty League?

A. I don't remember now who it was.

Q. Where did you receive the notice?

A. It was brought to my machine.

Q. Was that during working hours? A. Yes.

Q. What did the notice state?

A. That I was— It said, "You are now eligible for [fol. 4202] membership in the Nelly Don Loyalty League."

Q. Was it a printed notice?

A. I don't remember, Miss Weyand, whether it was or not.

Q. Who brought it to your machine?

A. I think the instructor did.

Q. Who was the instructor at that time?

A. I believe, Mrs. Dorsey.

Q. What did you do after you received the notice?

A. I went to the desk of the president. But I still can't remember who it was.

Q. Where was the desk located?

A. I don't remember, Miss Weyand. I wasn't very interested. I had two small children, and I didn't go in much for social affairs, dances, and such things. I wasn't very much interested.

Q. The president did have a desk in the plant somewhere?

A. Either they had one or they were using someone else's.

Q. What occurred when you got to the desk?

A. I told whoever it was that I wanted to join the Loyalty League.

Q. And what did she say?

A. I couldn't remember the exact words, Miss Weyand, but I know I got a Loyalty pin.

Q. Was it a man or woman who was president?

A. I think it was Herbert Mutchler, but I won't swear [fol. 4203] that it was.

Q. Did you get the pin on the first occasion on which you called at the desk?

A. No. I ordered the pin and it was later brought to me—sent up through the section. I suppose the instructor brought it to me.

Q. Did you sign any card or pledge when you went to the desk? A. I don't remember that I did.

Q. Do you remember signing anything on that occasion?

A. I might have, but at this time I don't remember.

Q. Did you receive any membership card?

A. I don't think they issued membership cards.

Q. Could you tell me what the number that appears at the bottom of the Loyalty League pin stands for? There is a number on the pin you produced yesterday—12 hundred and something, I believe.

A. That is your number. The pin as it is issued—each one is given a number. My particular number was 1022.

Q. Did that represent you were the ten hundred twenty-second member who had joined the Loyalty League?

A. I believe that is right.

Q. Do employees keep their pins when they cease to work for the company?

A. I imagine they do. They pay for them.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4207] Q. Could you give me the names of the girls who were working near you in March, 1937?

A. I know a lot of girls that worked in the same section with me at that time.

Q. Will you please name the ones you know—you knew at that time or were friendly with, the names of those you knew?

A. Emma Davis, Ann Perry, Mary Maifreda, Elsie Holloway, Beulah Green—Those were the ones I knew the best.

Q. Do you know the names of the girls who worked on either side of you the first part of March, 1937?

A. No, I couldn't remember that far back who worked any certain places.

Q. Do you remember the names of any other girls in that section in the early part of March, 1937, other than Perry, Maifreda, Davis, Elsie Holloway, Beulah Green?

A. Yes, Dorothy Osshier, Mable Spielbusch, Claris Martin, Catherine Pflumm—I believe that is most of them.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4208] Q. Do you remember what time of day the Loyalty petition which you were looking at yesterday was circulated through the 8th floor?

A. I believe it was in the morning.

[fol. 4209] Q. Had you heard about such a petition before it was brought to your attention?

A. No, I didn't. Some of the other girls in my section had heard about it, and talked it over, but I hadn't heard anything at all about it until it was brought to my machine.

Q. How did you know they had talked it over?

A. They told me they had discussed it with some of the other girls.

Q. But they had not mentioned it to you until the petition came?

A. That's right.

Q. Where were you working in your section? Were you at the end of the row or in the middle of the row?

A. I was in the middle of the row on the northwest side of the building on the 8th floor.

Q. What section was immediately adjoining your section?

A. Well, ours was No. 415—it must have been 414.

Q. Who was the instructor in 414 at that time?

A. I believe Mary Copowycz was.

Q. Do you remember whether the petition was passed through your section before it was passed through the other section, or the other way around?

A. I don't remember but—

Q. (Interrupting) You do remember it was passed?

Mr. Reed: Let the witness finish the answer.

[fol. 4210] Miss Weyand: I am sorry.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Had you completed your answer?

A. I am trying to remember—I believe it started in the east end of 415; I am sure it did, because it was next to the door, and I remember seeing one of the girls at the end of the other—you see, there are two rows of machines in our section, and I remember one of the girls at the end of that row took it to the other section so it must have come to ours first.

Q. And then one of the girls in your section took it over to 414, is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. Do you remember who that girl was?

A. No, I can't. They were doing different work than what I did; there were tuckers and double stitchers over on that row and I didn't know all those girls well that was in the other section.

Q. Who was the thread girl in Mary Copowycz's section?

A. I don't remember whether she even had one or not.

Q. Do you know what section the petition went through before it came to your section?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you remember how many sheets were in the petition when it was passed to you?

A. No, I don't.

[fol. 4211] Q. Was it more than one sheet that came to your hands?

A. I don't think it was, Miss Weyand.

Q. Do you remember whether there were other sheets passed around at the same time you were signing on the sheet which you signed on?

A. I wouldn't know that either, but I don't believe there was on the 8th floor, because I know that several different sections signed on this same petition that I had.

Q. Did the girl on the right of you sign, and then you sign and then the girl on the left of you, on the same sheet, and the same sheet pass down the row?

A. It did.

Q. You mentioned that Mary Sprofera and some other girl came on the 8th floor with the petition. Do you remember what they did, specifically?

A. They took it to one of the girls in the other end of 415—I don't remember how come I was up there, but I saw them bringing the thing up, and they gave it to the girls, but what they said I don't know; they didn't give it to me first, they just brought it up to the section and then left it. I can't tell you what they said, because I wasn't over there, but I saw the two girls up there.

Q. The two girls you saw up there were whom?

A. Inez Warren and Mary Sprofera.

Q. And do you know the name of the girl to whom they [fol. 4212] gave it?

A. No, I don't; she was on the other end of the row.

Q. Were there any men in your section at that time?

A. No.

Q. Do you know Ada Wolfe?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you know what her job was in 1937?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Was she ever a thread girl or an instructor?

A. Oh, she is an instructor now, and I believe she has always been. I don't know for sure because I never worked for her.

Q. You think she was always an instructor?

A. I believe she was.

Q. During the whole time you worked at the plant?

A. I won't say for sure she was, because I never actually worked for Ada, and I don't know.

Q. Did she work on the 8th floor?

A. No, I believe she was either on the 6th or 7th.

Q. Was she an ordinary operator during the entire time which you were employed by the company?

A. I don't know, Miss Weyand; I don't think she was.

Q. Was she ever a thread girl?

A. I don't know that either. I would know if I had worked close to her, you know, in her section, I would have [fol. 4213] known, but if she was anything but an instructor I don't know.

Q. Do you know Lillian Lubben?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know Gertrude Martin?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know Lillian Scott?

A. Lillian Scott? I don't know; I knew a girl, I believe —I believe her name was Lillian Scott, she isn't there any more.

Q. Was she in your section in 1937?

A. No; I believe she worked for Ada; she was a snap girl or something.

Q. Do you know Etta Mae McCurry?

A. Yes.

Mr. Ingraham: I want to ask Miss Weyand if these people are instructors or any persons named in the offers of proof.

Miss Weyand: Most of the people whose names I have read were named in the offers of proof.

Mr. Ingraham: As making the offers of proof?

Miss Weyand: As witnesses whom you offered.

A. I know Etta Mae McCurry.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was she in your section?

A. No, she was in Mollie Smith's section.

Q. Where was Mollie Smith's section in 1937?

[fol. 4214] A. I believe it was on 6.

Q. Do you know Elmer Jones?

A. I do know Elmer Jones,—I did know Elmer Jones when he worked there.

Q. What was his job?

A. Making buttons and buckles.

Q. Was he in your section?

A. When I worked for Mollie he was.

Q. And what floor was that?

A. That was still on 6.

Q. Did he ever work on the 8th floor with you?

A. Not when I was there he didn't.

Q. Do you know Myrtle Cox?

A. Yes; not personally, I know who she is.

Q. Did she work in your section?

A. No.

Q. Where did she work?

A. She worked part time for Mollie too.

Q. Do you know where she worked in March 1937?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know whether she was working on the 8th floor?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know Ronald Morrell?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did he work?

[fol. 4215] A. For Mollie Smith.

Q. Did he ever work in your section?

A. No, only when I worked for Mollie.

Q. Did he work on the 8th floor?

A. No, that was 6.

Q. Do you know William Hawks?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he do?

A. He made buckles and buttons too.

Q. That was on the 6th floor, in Mollie Smith's section?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it possible you were working in Mollie Smith's section in 1937 when the petition was circulated through the plant?

A. No, it is not, because I clearly remember I was on 8.

Q. Do you know Agnes Hollyday?

A. Yes, but she isn't there now.

Q. What section did she work in?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean at that time?

Miss Weyand: When she knew her.

A. Agnes Holliday worked out of the notions department, I believe; I know she came into Mollie's and brought stuff there for the girls to work on, you know, the parts of buckles and things; I believe she worked out of the notions department.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did she work in your section at any time?

[fol. 4216] A. No.

Q. Did she ever work on the 8th floor?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Do you know where she was working in April '37?

A. No, I don't. The only time I ever knew her she was working in the notions department.

Q. Do you know Elsie Feiser?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was she?

A. She worked for Mollie Smith.

Q. Did she ever work in your section on the 8th floor?

A. No.

Q. Do you know Sue Nell Huston?

A. No.

Q. Do you know Avis Mowry?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know Ruth Holdman?

A. No, I don't.

Mr. Reed: I would like to ask the object of this examination, where it is leading to, what issue in this trial it affects, whether this young lady knew these various parties.

Miss Weyand: I will state at this time those are the names which appear preceding and following what seems to [fol. 4217] me to be this young lady's signature on the Loyalty pledge. I will ask her to identify her signature.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Is that your signature, the 1, 2, 3, 5th, signature from the bottom in the 3rd column of the Loyalty pledge, is that your signature?

A. It certainly is.

Q. Do you know how those people came to sign before and after your name when it was passed through your section, which you said it was?

Miss Weyand: That is page 5961 of the exhibit which was admitted in the record, if she cares to look at this exhibit, a photostat of the same document.

A. Sure.

Miss Weyand: Only this has the Labor Board Exhibit on it before it was photostated.

Mr. Stottle: What was that page number?

Miss Weyand: 5961. I would like to have this pause shown in the record, in time, if it could be indicated.

Mr. Ingraham: Don't you want the witness to consider her answer?

Miss Weyand: Sure, I want her to consider as long as she desires before she answers the question.

A. I still can't remember being in that section when I signed it.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. And you remember that you were on the 8th floor [fol. 4218] when you signed it?

A. I still think I was on the 8th floor when I signed it.

Q. It was passed from one girl to another on the 8th floor, and you saw Mary Sprofera and the other girl bring it to the 8th floor section?

A. I certainly did, I saw them bring it to the 8th floor.

Q. Do you need to study that further?

A. Is this the document that was photographed for Mrs. Reed, that was taken out and presented to Mrs. Reed?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

A. I still can't remember being in Mary Sprofera's section — I must have been working down there, but I am positive — I still don't know how come those names on each side of mine, because I am positive I was working on the 8th floor.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Were you working on the 8th floor at the time of the meeting of March 18th, at which Mrs. Reed spoke?

A. I think I was.

Q. You stated that prior to that meeting you heard a discussion in the lunch room that there was going to be a meeting, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you remember whom you heard discussing that in the lunch room?

A. That was the girls I ate with, but I don't remember [fol. 4219] now who they were.

Q. Whom did you usually eat lunch with, any given girl?

A. No, it depended on where I was working.

Q. Were they girls from the section in which you were working?

A. Yes, they were girls from the section in which I was working.

Q. Do you remember whether they were girls from the 8th floor section that you discussed this with prior to the March 18th meeting?

A. No, I don't.

Q. I believe you stated that for some time prior to the March 18th meeting you had been discussing the newspaper articles and bringing clippings down; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you bring clippings down?

A. No, I didn't. I didn't take the Post; I read them in the Star, but some of the other girls did bring the clippings down.

Q. Did you subscribe to the Star?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember any girl who brought any clipping down?

A. Well, I remember Elsie Holloway used to bring the Post clippings down.

Q. Do you remember she brought any clippings down from the Post prior to the meeting at which Mrs. Reed spoke?

[fol. 4220] A. That has been so long ago I can't give you any given time on it, but it was during the time of that publicity that was in the papers during those weeks.

Q. And was that before the time Mrs. Reed spoke?

A. Part of it was.

Q. How much of it was?

Mr. Reed: Well, the dates are on the papers in evidence, and would be the best way to fix the dates.

Miss Weyand: This young lady testified she had been discussing them a week before the articles appeared. I would like to have her be more specific. The answers she gave to the questions that counsel for company asked are so vague I don't believe they were worth anything. I asked her how much discussion, who it was with and what about, and I would like to have her state that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you recall the question?

A. Yes, you asked — read the question again, please.

Miss Weyand: Read the question again, please.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you please read the question?

(Last question read by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed: How much of what?

Trial Examiner Batten: How many of those clippings were brought down and discussed prior to the meeting of March 18th?

A. Well, all of them that came out in the Post were brought down by these girls about that time; I think there [fol. 4221] was a week or two, something like that, maybe longer than that; I can't remember that long.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. But you had been discussing the strikes, you think, for several weeks before Mrs. Reed's speech?

A. Oh, it wasn't a great number of weeks.

Q. Could you give us the best recollection you have of how many weeks it was?

A. During the first part of March.

Q. Do you think it was from early March until March 18th?

A. Well, I know we discussed all that came out in the papers at all times, before Mrs. Reed spoke and after.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4223] Q. How many girls were excited or upset before the March 18th speech, in your opinion?

A. All of them I talked to were.

Q. How many days before had they been excited or upset?

A. Ever since the articles started appearing in the papers.

Q. Was that a week, in your estimation, or ten days?

Mr. Reed: I submit this has been gone over two or three times in the last few minutes.

Miss Weyand: She hasn't given me a definite answer as to how much time this had been going on prior to the March 18th speech, and I would like a definite estimate from her as to how long this had been going on.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think she has testified ever since the articles, and she testified they were from the [fol. 4224] first part of March to the date of the meeting.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Is that correct, is it your recollection that it was from those articles down to the date of the meeting?

A. Yes, that is my recollection; I could be wrong.

Q. It is your definite recollection that for a considerable number of days prior to the March 18th meeting, the girls were agitated, excited, and upset?

A. That's right.

Q. Are you certain it was as long as a week before?

A. I am certain it was, yes.

Q. When did you first hear that there was going to be a meeting of the employees on March 18th?

A. Did you say when or where?

Q. When?

A. It was that day. That was the first day it had been discussed in my hearing.

Q. It was at lunch that it was first discussed?
A. Yes, that was the first I heard of it.
Q. What did you hear at lunch about the meeting?
A. I heard the employees wanted a meeting, and that they had agreed to meet on the second floor after work.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4240] Q. Now, for the meeting of April 27—that is the date the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed—isn't it a fact that the employees went down in sections so as to stagger the use of the elevators?
A. They went down when they got off from work, and they get off at different times, so they probably didn't all go down at once.
Q. They went down in sections, didn't they? Didn't your section all go down at one time?
A. No. Some of the girls dressed and some of them didn't; it just depended on whether they wanted to get out in a hurry after the meeting.
Q. Some of them did what?
A. Some of them dressed, and some of them went down in their aprons. It was past working hours, and some of them dressed and some didn't.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4241] Q. Now, isn't it your recollection that the employees did go in sections, so that they wouldn't crowd these two elevators, to the meeting of April 27?
A. That isn't my recollection.
Q. It is your recollection—
A. —that they just went on down like they do in going home. The meeting was late enough that the sections that got off later than we did, or later than other parts of the building, could attend, too.
Q. Have you any definite recollection as to when that meeting was held?
[fol. 4242] A. No. After working hours.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4243] By Mr. Langsdale:
Q. At any rate, you knew that Miss Todd was president of the Loyalty League, didn't you?
A. Yes.

Q. And you knew that she presided at this meeting of April 27th, didn't you?

[fol. 4244] A. Yes, I did.

Q. I believe you stated Mrs. Reed did not read a letter from the I.L.G.W.U. at the meeting of March 18, is that your recollection?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. Did you hear the letter read at that meeting?

A. I believe one of the girls read part of one of the pamphlets that the girls had handed her out in front of the building.

Q. Do you know who that was that read the letter?

A. No, I don't.

Q. When you speak of "one of the pamphlets," the pamphlet contained the letter, didn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. But you know it was not Mrs. Reed that read the letter?

A. I know Mrs. Reed didn't read the letter; she was not there over 15 minutes, and I believe it was less than 15 minutes.

Q. And did you attend most of the meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I wouldn't say that I did most of them.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4245] Q. I believe you stated that you never heard Mrs. Reed make a speech at any meeting of the employees, except that meeting of March 18?

A. That's right, that is the only time I have ever heard her speak.

Q. Mrs. Cooper, do you know how many days you have been here in the courtroom when testimony was going on, before you went on the witness stand?

Mr. Reed: Do you know how many days the case has been running, off-hand?

Mr. Langsdale: I am just asking her. I can tell you.

Mr. Reed: You can beat me.

A. I couldn't say exactly, because I was up here some parts of days.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You were here during Mrs. Reed's testimony, or part of it?

A. Part of it.

Q. How many days were you here while Mrs. Reed was testifying?

* * * * * *

[fol. 4246] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Were you here all the time she was testifying?

A. No, I was not; just part of the time.

Q. Have any executives of the Donnelly Garment Company been back in the audience with you while you have been here listening to Mrs. Reed's testimony?

A. Mrs. Reeves has been here.

Q. Mrs. Reeves has been here during all your testimony, hasn't she?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what her position is with the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. She is the merchandising manager, something along that line, anyway.

Q. Do you know of any occasion at all, from the time you went to work for the Donnelly Garment Company up to July, 1937, when anybody passed any paper around through the machines in the factory, except on March 17, 1937?

A. I couldn't recall any special papers; it has always been the practice since I have been there.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4247] Q. Now, how many telephones did they have down at the Donnelly Garment Company, if you know?

A. Well, they have one in the lobby on the first floor, one on the 7th floor, and there is one on the 2nd floor, there is now; the 2nd floor was vacant at that time.

Q. Well, at that time they had one where? On the first floor in the lobby?

A. Yes.

Q. And one on the 7th floor?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, was it the practice for any of the employees, any time they wanted to, to go and use those phones?

A. It certainly was.

Q. Did you ever see a line waiting?

A. Yes, every day.

Q. A long line of employees waiting to use the telephones?

A. Yes, every day.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4248] Q. Now, you stated that you understood Mrs. Reed didn't know anything about the March 2nd petition. What was the basis of your understanding to that effect?

A. Well, if someone was going to sign a petition like that and hand it to someone else, they certainly wouldn't go to that person, and tell them before that, that they were going to do that.

Q. Is that all you base your understanding on?

A. Well, yes, I guess it is.

Q. Now, you say that the Loyalty League was purely a social organization. Did it have anything at all to do with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, it didn't.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4252] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you remember reading in the Kansas City Times, [fol. 4253] on May 11, 1937, an interview by Senator Reed, and particularly this part of the interview, "The employees of this company aren't only satisfied, but on their own motion some months ago organized a Loyalty League to resist the activities of Mr. Dubinsky and his crowd." Do you remember reading that?

A. I remember that.

Q. Then you did have some information the Loyalty League was organized to resist Dubinsky and his crowd, didn't you?

A. After all, Mrs. Reed does run the Donnelly Garment Company.

* * * * * *

A. That was all the information, the only thing I had ever heard to that effect was in the paper.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4271] HAZEL SAUCKE, a witness called by and on behalf of respondent Donnelly Garment Company, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

Mr. Ingraham: Will you please state your name?

A. Hazel Saucke.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4272] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Where do you reside, Mrs. Saucke?

A. Turner, Kans.

Q. Where are you employed?

A. At the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. How long have you been employed at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Well, I started there in January of 1928, and then I moved away for a short period, and then came back. I am in my fifteenth year there.

Q. When you first went to work at the Donnelly Garment Company what kind of work did you do?

A. On a needle machine; just an operator.

Q. Just a straight sewing operator?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4273] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Have you ever worked on any special machine?

A. No, sir.

Q. You have always done straight sewing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, were you employed by the Donnelly Garment Company in March and April 1937?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall attending a meeting of employees on April 27, 1937?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall when that meeting was held?

A. After working hours.

Q. Do you recall where it was held?

A. On the second floor of the building, I think.

Q. How did you learn that there was going to be such a meeting?

A. Well, it was just passed on to me from the other operators. They were all talking about wanting a meeting, or something, and it was just passed to me.

Q. When you went to the meeting was anyone presiding or did anyone act as chairman, if you recall?

A. Yes. I think Rose Todd was. No. Let's see. Yes, [fol. 4274] she was the one.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you see Mr. Tyler at the meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to that meeting had you read in the papers reports of strikes that were going on in other garment plants in Kansas City?

A. I had.

Q. Now, did Mr. Tyler make any remarks at that meeting? Did he make a speech or say anything?

A. Yes. He told us that we had a right to form our own union if we wanted to, under, as I understood, the Wagner Act—that we had a perfect right to form our own independent union, if we wished, or we could join any union, that we had that right of our own.

Q. Was a vote taken on forming a union or not?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the vote in favor of forming a union?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Were any cards passed out for the people that wanted to sign to do so?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Mrs. Saucke, did you vote in favor of forming a union?

A. Yes.

[fol. 4275] Q. Was that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. It was.

Q. Why did you vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, just recently there had been strikes called here in Kansas City, and they were rioting and fighting and trying to force people to join the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, whether they wanted to or not; they were being beaten into submission and made join, and I didn't see why we should do such a thing. I didn't see any reason for joining that union, it had nothing to offer us, and it was a class of people—the way they were acting, I didn't care to be classed as one of them.

Q. Now, did you know of your personal knowledge of any of the rioting and violence that was going on at the Missouri, Gernes, and Gordon plants?

A. Yes, sir. I passed there every morning during that trouble and I saw the trouble.

Q. What did you see?

A. Fighting and running and screaming and arms flying. I saw the police wagon backed up there, too—twice I saw that, two different mornings when I came to work. And it certainly changed my mind, if I had ever had it made up to any other thing, that I didn't want to join that kind of a union.

Q. Did any other employees tell you that they had seen [fol. 4276] the violence in these strikes? A. Yes.

Q. Did you hear any reports at the plant that the International intended to use the same violence against the Donnelly employees? A. I did.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you hear any reports about what the International was going to do at the Donnelly plant?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What were the reports?

A. Well, that our place was to be the next place attacked, and that what they were giving those girls up there wasn't anything to what they were going to give us, that they were going to use worse tactics of some kind, if possible, to make us join them.

Q. Were there articles in the newspapers at the time about the violence at those strikes?

[fol. 4277] A. There was.

Q. Did you read those articles?

A. I think I read everything that came out in the paper; I tried to.

Q. I will hand you Respondent's exhibit No. 18 and ask you if you recall reading the article in the Journal-Post of March 18, 1937.

* * * * * *

A. Yes, I read that.

Mr. Ingraham: I hand you Respondent's exhibit No. 19 and ask you if you read that article that appeared in the Journal-Post on March 18, 1937.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4278] A. Yes, I read it.

Q. I hand you Respondent's Exhibit 27, and ask you if you recall reading the article in the Kansas City Star of March 17, 1937, entitled "The Sitters Block Their Door."

. . . . . .

A. Yes, I read that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Miss Saucke, what effect did these articles have on you?

A. Well, it put fear in me for one thing, when I saw what we were headed for, if they weren't stopped some way. There was just going to be a fight and I never had taken part in anything like that, and I certainly didn't want to, and I was disgusted to think that American people would get so low as to fight that way and try to prevent honest working people from making a living, and compel you to join something you didn't want to; even though those people weren't paid good, they were going to be compelled to join a union that they couldn't pay dues in, perhaps, and I certainly didn't think we needed any union like that at that time.

Q. What, if anything, did the employees do on or about March 18?

A. Well, we were all just talking and worrying about what was going to take place and wondering what we could do.

Q. Did you hold a meeting?

[fol. 4279] A. Yes. We kept talking about why couldn't we hold a meeting and do something and see what we could do, because we didn't want trouble like that, we never had had any trouble.

Q. So that a meeting—or did you hold a meeting?

A. Yes, about that time.

Q. Where was the meeting held?

A. I think on the second floor, second or third. It was an empty floor.

Q. And what time during the day?

A. After working hours in the evening.

Q. Now, do you recall what was discussed at the meeting?

A. Well, we just wanted to know what we could do to protect ourselves, and someone suggested that we would like to hear from Mrs. Reed, to see what her views on it were. We just didn't know where we were at or anything, so someone suggested that we get her, and she came finally and talked to us a short time.

Q. Do you recall whether or not Mrs. Reed made a statement that she would close the shop if it was unionized?

A. I never heard her make that statement.

Q. Did you hear her make a statement that she wouldn't permit Dubinsky to tell her how to run her business?

A. I did not.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed say anything with reference to whether or not the employees could join or could not join a union?

* * * * * *

[fol. 4280] A. She said they were free to join any union they wished.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you know whether or not any action was taken by the employees at that meeting with regard to consulting attorneys? A. Yes, there was.

Q. What was that?

A. Well, we chose a committee to interview some lawyer, to see what we could do; we appointed a committee, rather we voted on it.

Q. Do you recall who was on the committee?

A. Rose Todd was one, and I believe Sallie Ormsby—there were three. I don't remember the third.

Q. Did you observe that other employees were excited and wrought up about the strikes at the other plants?

A. Very much so, I did.

Q. Now, Mrs. Saucke, did any representative of the Management, or any officer or official of the company request you or suggest to you that you go to that meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you go to that meeting of your own free will?

A. I did.

Q. Did you have any feeling that if you didn't go to the [fol. 4281] meeting you might be fired? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you hear that any representative of the Management had ever suggested to any other employee that he or she go to that meeting? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, did the strikes continue on after this March 18 meeting, the strikes at the other plants? A. Yes.

Q. I hand you Respondent's Exhibit 20, which is the front page of the Journal-Post for March 26, 1937, and ask you if you read the article that is entitled, "Violence Marks the Garment Strikes"?

A. Yes, I read that.

Q. Did you read the continuation of that article that is in Respondent's Exhibit No. 20? A. Yes, I read that.

Q. I hand you Respondent's Exhibit 21, which is the front page of the Journal-Post for March 23, 1937, and ask you if you read that article that is entitled, "New Disturbance Nets Arrests in Garment Strike"?

A. Yes, I read it.

Q. Now, during this time were there conversations around the plant with regard to these strikes?

A. There was.

[fol. 4282] Q. What effect did the strikes have on the employees?

A. Well, in fact, it cut down on our production quite a bit, we never knew from day to day whether we would be attacked as we went out of the building, or whether we would be able to get to work the next day without being attacked. We were being threatened all the time.

Q. Were these articles in the paper discussed by the employees? A. They were.

Q. I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit 22, which is the front page of the Journal-Post for March 25, 1937, entitled, "Battle Royal is Resumed at Door of Plant," and ask you if you read that article.

A. I couldn't swear that I read that one. I just don't recall it.

Q. I hand you Respondent's Exhibit 24, and ask you if you recall reading the article that appears in the Journal-Post for March 31st, 1937, entitled, "Injunction Stops Hair Pulling in Garment Strike".

A. Yes, I have read that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Does that article refer to an injunction of Gernes, Gordon and Missouri Garment Companies, that they were trying to get?

[fol. 4283] A. It does.

Q. I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit 26, which is an article appearing in the Kansas City Times of March 23, 1937, and ask you if you recall reading that article?

A. Yes, I think I read that.

Q. Well, I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit 28, which is an article appearing in the Kansas City Star of March 22, 1937, and ask you if you recall reading that article.

A. I read that.

Q. I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit 29, article appearing in the Kansas City Star for March 25, 1937, entitled, "The Hair Pulling Grows", do you recall reading that article? A. Yes, I do.

Q. I hand you Respondent's Exhibit 30, article appearing in the Kansas City Star for March 30, 1937, and ask you if you read this article; it is entitled, "A Curb on Pickets".

. . . . . .

A. Yes, I read that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit 31, which is the front page of the Kansas City Journal-Post for April 5, 1937, and ask you if you read the article which has [fol. 4284] a banner at the top of the page, entitled, "Twenty Women Strikers are Cited"?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. I will ask you if you read the article appearing in the Kansas City Journal-Post for April 6, 1937, entitled, "Strikers Again Bar Three Garment Plants"? This was Respondent's Exhibit 32.

. . . . . .

A. I did.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit 33, and ask you if you read the article appearing in the Kansas City

Journal-Post of April 7, 1937, entitled, "Higgins Clears Non-Strikers Way to Plant".

A. Yes, I have read that.

Q. I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit 34, which is an article in the Journal-Post of April 10, 1937, entitled, "Garment Unions Get Closed Shops in Three more Plants," and ask you if you read that article.

A. I think I read that.

Q. Were these articles widely read by the employees of the Donnelly plant? A. I think they were.

[fol. 4285] Q. Did you hear a discussion of the articles by other employees? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What effect did these articles have on the employees at the Donnelly plant?

A. Well, it made them nervous, and it made them angry and disgusted, and it made them—well, determined not to be whipped into submission of doing something we didn't want to do; the longer it went the more determined we were not to be one of them.

Q. Going back to the meeting of March 18, where Mrs. Reed spoke, did you understand that that was a Loyalty League meeting? A. No, sir.

Q. State whether or not you heard any discussion at the plant by any employees that that was a Loyalty League meeting? A. I did not.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd was active in arranging for the meeting lead you to believe it was a Loyalty League meeting? A. No.

Q. Did the fact that Rose presided or spoke at the meeting lead you to believe it was a Loyalty League meeting? A. No, sir.

Q. Did any representative of the Management ever dis-

[fol. 4286] cuss with you or discuss with any other employee in your presence the calling of any such a meeting? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear it said that the management wanted the meeting held? A. No, sir.

[fol. 4287] Q. Did you feel free to express your views at the March 18 meeting, if you wanted to say anything?

A. I did.

. . . . . .

Q. Now, after that meeting of March 18 were lawyers employed? A. They were.

Q. Did you know how the employees arranged for the payment of a retainer fee for the lawyers?

A. Someone mentioned at the meeting for each one to contribute 50 cents to get the money.

Q. Did they hold a meeting for that purpose?

A. Yes.

[fol. 4288] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Which meeting did you mean?

A. The meeting we held—the meeting after the one at which Mrs. Reed spoke. The other meeting was held—

Q. When was the other meeting?

A. Sometime after March 18, about a week or—I don't know just when.

[fol. 4290-4291] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall how much was contributed by the employees at this meeting to pay the lawyers?

A. I don't know how much was contributed at that meeting. There was some contributed. But we voted to each contribute 50 cents.

Q. Some was contributed right at the time?

A. At that meeting.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You are referring to what you call "the second meeting"?

A. That is right.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did any representative of the management request or suggest that you go to the meeting of April 27?

[fol. 4292] A. No, sir.

Q. Had any representative of the management prior to that meeting ever suggested in your presence, to you or to any other employees, that the Donnelly employees form a union?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you feel any pressure was being brought to bear by the management to force you or cause you to vote in favor of forming a union?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you feel that if you didn't go to that meeting you would be penalized by the management?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd presided at that meeting influence you in believing that the company was back of the meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. The fact that Rose Todd was active at this meeting, did that make you believe that it was a Loyalty League meeting?

A. It did not.

Q. Did you believe that the meeting of March 18 or the meeting some 10 days later or this April 27 meeting was a Loyalty meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. State whether or not you voted in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will.

[fol. 4293] A. I did.

Q. Were you a member of the Loyalty League?

A. I was.

Q. Will you state what the activities of that organization were?

A. As far as I knew, it was just social, just for having dances and getting up good times.

Q. Did you ever hear that the Loyalty League was a labor organization?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever know that the Loyalty League had represented the employees in connection with terms and conditions of employment?

A. No.

Q. Did you pay any dues in the Loyalty League?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did anybody representing the management suggest that you join the Loyalty League?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you feel that if you didn't join the Loyalty League you would be penalized by the company?

A. No, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4294] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. State whether or not you consider the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as the successor to the Loyalty League.

A. Repeat that question, please.

Q. State whether or not you consider the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union the successor of the Loyalty League.

A. I do not.

Q. Is the Loyalty League still in existence?

A. It is.

Q. Do you recall a petition being circulated among the employees on or about March 2, 1937?

. . . . . .

A. Yes. I remember a petition sometime that spring; I couldn't say just what date.

. . . . . .

Miss Weyand. Mr. Trial Examiner, I would like to have Mr. Ingraham point out where the Loyalty petition comes within the terms of the offer.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4295] Mr. Lane. The Board urges that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed with domination by the company. The circuit court says we have a right to show by the employees that they were not dominated.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4297] Mr. Reed: I just want to remark, witnesses here have been cross-examined with respect to the circulation of this petition—I call it—that was handed to Mrs. Reed afterward. They have been examined here, and cross-examined about it at length—

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: Who was cross-examined? I thought you mentioned a name.

Mr. Ingraham: Mrs. Cooper.

Trial Examiner Batten: But that was not for any purpose except credibility. That was obvious to everybody,

I think, because afterwards she was simply asked about the names on there and whether it passed through, and then Miss Weyand examined her very carefully about the names preceding and following. It must have been obvious to everybody that that was merely a matter of credibility.

Mr. Reed: It is obvious to me the other way, that what they were trying to show, to susfain their charge, was that this paper was circulated by the instructors and that the people signed under some species of duress which they charge or imagine.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4302] Trial Examiner Batten: The hearing will be in order. I think we are ready to proceed. Let's see, we have a witness, Mrs. Saucke. I think last evening, when we adjourned, there was a matter pending — just be seated, please — concerning the petition which had been circulated. Let's see, that was I.L.G.W.U. Exhibit No. 1 — what was the number of that?

Mr. Langsdale: Ten.

Mr. Ingraham: Ten.

Trial Examiner Batten: Ten. The question is whether or not the examination on that comes within the offers of proof. Mr. Ingraham, have you checked that matter?

Mr. Ingraham: I think that it comes within the offers of proof. It comes within the general language of the offers, the purport of the offers. I know that it is within the issues. The complaint charges that the document was circulated, as I recall it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, have you looked over those offers of proof?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I couldn't find any definite place where the specific — where the document is mentioned.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, did you get over those?

Mr. Tyler: Mr. Lane did.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4303] Mr. Lane: Well, there was not in our offers of proof any specific reference to the March 2nd document, but certainly in the language of our offer there is room for the introduction of any testimony which tends to show whether or not, on March 27 there had been created an atmosphere of domination by the employer.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4304] Now, it is claimed by the Board here the circulation of this March 2nd document was an evidence of interference. We desire to show, by the testimony of these employees that it was not, and within the scope of the remand I think it is proper to be able to show that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, is that correct, the Board takes the position it was an act of interference and dominance which carried forward into the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Miss Weyand: Yes, I think that is correct, but taking Mr. Lane's argument would mean that we retry every act of interference, restraint and coercion. Their offer was directed to merely showing that certain acts alleged by the Board hadn't interfered with these employees they listed and the nature of the March 18th meeting and the April 27th meeting, to show what the nature of the meetings were; and having regard to the language of this offer and its specificity, I do not believe it was the intent of the Court to let each of these witnesses retry each issue of interference, restraint or coercion which has been raised in the case. I think we are limited to trying here the — [fol. 4305] I probably shouldn't say trying — to listen to the evidence offered for the specific facts for which the witness is offered, and not for any other facts which happened to be in the case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, don't the offers include matters with relation to the Loyalty League?

Miss Weyand: They do contain matters with relation to the Loyalty League, however it has been the company's contention that the circulation of this petition was not an act of the Loyalty League, and —

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Doesn't the Board take the position it was?

Miss Weyand: No, the Board, as far as I know, hasn't taken the position it was. They do take the position that it was a part of the whole stream of activities, of which the Loyalty League was one and the Loyalty petition was another, which were instituted by the employer for the purpose of interfering, restraining and coercing its employees, but the Board, as far as I am aware, hasn't taken the position the Loyalty petition itself was a Loyalty League activity.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4308] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may proceed with your questioning, Mr. Ingraham.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4309] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Saucke, I was inquiring about a petition that was circulated among the Donnelly employees on March 2, 1937. (Handing petition to witness.) I will ask you if you recall whether or not you read that petition and signed it.

This petition is I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 10.

Trial Examiner Batten: Page 5961, circuit court record; isn't that right?

Mr. Ingraham: That is right.

A. Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You remember that?

A. I do.

Q. Do you remember reading an article in the Kansas City paper on February 26, 1937, that was entitled "Reopen a Garment Feud," respondent's exhibit No. 6?

Trial Examiner Batten: What page?

Mr. Ingraham: Circuit court page 4864.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I hand you the exhibit and ask you if you will read it and state whether or not you recall having read it before.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4310] A. I read that.

Q. Did that article have anything to do with your signing the March 2 petition?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. Did anybody representing the management of the company suggest or request that you sign the March 2 petition?

[fol. 4311] A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear any discussion among the employees that the management wanted the employees to sign the petition?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you feel that you would be fired if you didn't sign the petition?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you hear any talk at the plant that an employee would be penalized in any way if he or she did not sign the petition?

A. I did not.

Q. Did your instructor ask you to sign the petition?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who presented the petition to you, if you recall?

A. I wouldn't know which one of the two girls that brought the petition onto the floor handed it to me, but one of them handed it to me. Personally, I didn't know those two girls, only by their face. I knew they were employees.

Q. Were they employed in your section?

A. No, sir.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Did you since find out who the two girls were, Mrs. Saucke?

A. Why, yes.

Q. Who were they?

A. One's first name was Inez, and the other one was Mary Sprofera.

[fol. 4312] Q. But you don't recall which one brought it to you?

A. No, I don't.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall anything they said when they presented the petition to you?

A. I do.

Q. In substance, what was said?

A. She asked me to read it carefully and, if I felt that way, to sign it and hand it back. So, I did. I read it carefully and signed it and handed it back to her.

Q. Where were you when you signed it?

A. At my machine, working.

Q. Did the Loyalty League, to your knowledge, have anything to do with the circulation of that petition?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you think that the Loyalty League was circulating the petition?

A. No.

Q. I hand you Board's exhibit No. 27, which is an article that appeared in the Kansas City Times for May 11, 1937, and ask you to read that article and—

Trial Examiner Batten: Circuit court record?

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. (Continuing)—and ask you to state whether or not you recall reading that.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4313] A. I read that.

Q. Did the remarks attributed to Senator Reed in that article cause you or influence you in any way in remaining a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. He was only stating what I had already made up my mind to from previous articles and things I had known of that Mr. Dubinsky had been doing. My mind was already made up that I didn't want to be run by his tribe.

Q. What things are you referring to, Mrs. Saucke?

A. Their violence and the way they had of getting members into their union, and their lies that they told on us—called us a sweatshop and said we were underpaid. It absolutely wasn't so, and I resented it and resented it very much. That was the way they went at the public, was by telling these lies, and it certainly made a big impression on me that it wasn't the kind of people I wanted to associate with.

I saw with my own eyes and from the articles I read in every day's paper for a few weeks in Kansas City about how they were beating and whipping and intimidating the workers at these plants at Twenty-sixth and Grand to get them to join.

I am sure I can absolutely say there never was a Donnelly operator injured at our plant or intimidated in any [fol. 4314] way to make them join our union; not a one ever had their clothes tore or their hair pulled, or scratched and hurt. We were all glad to join our own union, while the other people were whipped into submission by brutality.

Q. The March 2 petition that you signed, did you sign that of your own free will?

A. I did.

Q. What caused you to sign that?

A. Well, they had been circulating lies about us having such a sweatshop. They even said we girls went out of there with our heads hanging on our chests, that we were so overworked. I knew that wasn't true, I had been there too long, and it certainly made me mad, and I wanted Mrs. Reed or the company to know that we were satisfied with our working conditions, because these lies were being circulated everywhere.

Q. Do you recall an N. R. A. hearing in 1935?

A. I think I remember something about that.

Q. Do you recall at that time what the International was—what charges they were making about the working conditions at the Donnelly plant?

A. I think I do.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, is that in the offer of proof, the N. R. A. hearing?

Mr. Ingraham: No. But the Examiner and the Labor Board laid great stress on the events that occurred prior [fol. 4315] to the effective date—

Trial Examiner Batten: I do not intend to go into that on these offers of proof.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I will have to except to Your Honor's ruling.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may do so.

Mr. Ingraham: That is all.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I stated pretty clearly, Mr. Ingraham, on these employees, I want to confine it first to these offers of proof. That is the thing that the circuit court clearly indicated I should have taken. Now, I am not making a ruling, as I said before, at this time that I will not take anything else, but I am going to take first the things the circuit court clearly indicated I should have received, and that is my reason for it.

Mr. Ingraham: At this time do you want me to make an offer of proof on these matters that I was going into?

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I don't know that it is necessary to make an offer of proof. If you want to, you can. I haven't excluded it.

Mr. Ingraham: You have not excluded that testimony?

Trial Examiner Batten: No.

Mr. Reed: How, then, are we to try this case if—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, you are going to proceed, I hope, as I indicated yesterday, and I thought [fol. 4316] everybody understood, and take first the employees, in accordance with the offer of proof, which the court said I should have accepted.

Now, that is the plan we are going to follow.

Mr. Reed: I seem to be unfortunate. Every time I try to make a statement you interrupt me. I would like to make a statement for the record.

How are we to try this case if the Examiner undertakes to direct us as to what testimony we shall offer first and not tell us what other testimony will be received, but withholds his decision until we have put our witnesses upon the stand and examined them, within the limitations that he has fixed; then, after that is all done, he may open up the case and try many other things.

Now, I simply protest that that method is unfair and I except to the ruling of the Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: I understood, Senator, you excepted to it yesterday. You stated, however, that if I intended to pursue that policy, you would comply with it.

Mr. Reed: We are forced to comply with it. I didn't state I would voluntarily comply with it.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Saucke, I'll hand you Board's Exhibit No. 38 in this case, which is a portion of the Kansas City Star for Monday, April 12, 1937, containing the headline, "Wagner Act is Upheld", and I will ask you to look at that article and state whether or not you read that in the paper on that date or about that time.

A. I did.

Q. What effect did this article have on your mind, with reference to the question of forming a union of employees of the Donnelly Company?

A. Well, it gave me confidence that we had the right to go ahead and form a union of our own liking rather than have to join the International Union.

Q. In direct examination you stated you attended the meeting of March 18?

A. I did.

Q. And at that meeting there was some discussion about the matter of the employees employing counsel?

A. There was.

Q. What was said at that meeting with reference to [fol. 4319] employing counsel?

A. Well, we didn't know what we could do for ourselves, and we had to have a lawyer to see what the law was, to see what steps could be taken for protection.

Q. Was anything said at that meeting about employing counsel to form a union?

A. No.

Q. When was the first time you gave any consideration to the matter of forming a union of your own?

A. Well, April 27. That day was the day we formed our union.

Q. Had you, prior to that time, come to any conclusion yourself, as to the matter of forming a union?

A. Yes, I had been thinking for several days we should do something like that.

Q. When, with respect to this article of April 12, did you begin to consider the matter of forming a union; was it after or before?

A. After.

Q. Did you discuss the matter of the formation of a union with any other employees in the plant prior to the meeting of April 27, 1937?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was that a matter that, from your own knowledge, was generally discussed around the plant among the employees?

[fol. 4320] A. Well, around the little clique that I was with, we were discussing it.

Q. Can you name any persons with whom you discussed that matter?

A. Yes, I think I can.

Q. Will you name them, please?

A. Pearl Fields was one.

Q. What position did Pearl Fields have?

A. She was an operator.

Q. Was there anybody else?

A. Pearl Black, and there was another one I was talking to at the same time—well, I can give her first name, Inez; I don't know her last name.

Q. Did you have any information prior to the time you went to the meeting of April 27, as to what was going to be discussed or taken up at that meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. How was it that you got notice of the meeting of April 27?

A. Well, it was just talked around through the factory that we were to hold a meeting, and that our lawyer would speak to us.

Q. Yes. Did you have in mind taking up, yourself, at that meeting, the matter of the formation of a union?

[fol. 4321] A. No. I wanted to listen to see what the lawyer could tell us.

Q. Where were you when you got notice of that meeting?

A. Well, at my machine.

Q. And what time of day was it the meeting was held?

A. After work.

Q. Did you go there to that meeting in your uniform, or did you dress before you went to the meeting?

A. I was in my uniform.

Q. What time of day was the meeting held; can you fix the hour?

A. I think about 4:30 or a quarter of 5, something like that; I think about 4:30.

Q. Were you ordered by your instructor to attend that meeting?

A. I was not.

Q. So far as you know were any girls ordered by instructors to attend that meeting of April 27?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear Mrs. Reed or Mrs. Reeves or Mr. Green or Mr. Baty or anyone of the executives of the company, suggest to you or to anybody else in your presence, that the union of Donnelly employees should be formed?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear any of those persons offer any inducements or make any threats if the union of the Don-

[fol. 4322] nelly employees was not formed?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did any of those persons ever say to you or suggest to you that you should stay out of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you vote at that meeting of April 27 to form the union?

A. I did.

Q. When you voted did you do so, in your own opinion, acting on your own free will and without any coercion or suggestion or domination on the part of the management or anybody representing the management?

A. I did.

Q. Were you acquainted with Rose Todd?

A. Just slightly.

Q. How long had you known Miss Todd?

A. Well, I can't really say when I began to notice her going around with work, a year or more.

Q. Prior to April, 1937?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you describe what you observed Miss Todd doing in the plant?

A. Well, she was just a kind of a handy woman, as I looked at her, seeing about thread, and if a bundle was lost I have known her hunting certain bundles for a fast [fol. 4323] order, or something; I don't know what you would call her.

Q. Did Rose Todd ever say to you that she represented the management of the company in connection with its relations to its employees?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever get the impression that Rose Todd represented the management in any capacity?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did she ever hold herself out as speaking for the management in connection with the formation of a union, or anything having to do with the union?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know Hobart Atherton?

A. Who?

Q. Hobart Atherton.

A. I just knew him when I saw him was all.

Q. Do you know what position he occupied?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he ever say anything to you that indicated to you that he was a boss or that he was a supervisor or that he was speaking for the management in connection with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir.

Q. Miss Baucke, I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit No. 35 in this case, which has an item from the Kansas [fol. 4324] City Journal-Post on April 22, 1937, and ask you to read that, please. It is entitled, "Donnelly Worker will be sent to Union Convention."

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you read that article at the time it appeared, or about that time, Mrs. Saucke?

A. I did.

Q. What effect did that article have on your mind with respect to the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, it made me all the more determined that we needed some kind of an organization to make our own rules.

She put herself up, this Sylvia Hull, as a representative of our company, to go to this Dubinsky convention that they were holding back at Atlanta, and I didn't know anything [fol. 4325] about the convention; I didn't suppose the rest did. She took it upon herself to represent us, I suppose. We didn't know anything about anyone wanting to be elected.

Q. So far as you know, the Donnelly employees hadn't elected Sylvia Hull to represent them at the convention?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. And state what influence that had on you with respect to whether or not you would form your own union?

A. Well, I made up my mind it was time we formed one.

Q. Were there any officers of the company or any executives or anybody you regarded as a supervisory employee present at the meeting of April 27, 1937?

. . . . . .

A. No, there was not.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you ever hear of any influence being brought to bear or any inducements being offered by anybody representing the management, upon any employees, to either form or join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I did not.

Q. Mrs. Saucke, were you in the Donnelly plant on the morning of April 23, 1937, as far as you remember?

[fol. 4326] A. I was.

Q. That is the day following the announcement in the Kansas City Journal that Sylvia Hull was to attend the convention? A. I was.

Q. Did you see anything occur in the plant that morning? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where were you? A. When?

Q. Early in the morning.

A. Well, I went straight to my machine after timing in.

Q. What did you observe?

A. Well, I turned first to see if the girl, whom I thought was Sylvia Hull, was at her machine in the next section, and she was. That is about the first thing I did.

Q. Did you hear any conversation occurring at her machine? A. I did.

Q. Did you hear anybody make any threats to Sylvia Hull? A. No.

Q. How long did that occurrence last?

A. About 40 minutes, I think.

Trial Examiner Batten: Didn't that matter come up with the prior witness? I think you, Miss Weyand, on cross-examination brought up that matter, did you not?

Miss Weyand: I did.

Trial Examiner Batten: Was that upon the basis of it [fol. 4327] being in the offer of proof?

Miss Weyand: My cross-examination was on the basis of the company having introduced the newspaper article, having the witness read it and state the effect of that newspaper article upon her mind. I then cross-examined her as to what effect she noticed in the plant.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do I take it by your position that you are agreeing at least to some degree with Mr. Tyler's position, that it is not only what they thought but whether or not the incidents actually occurred, and whether it was reasonable for a person to be excited, and so forth?

* * * * * * *

Now, if you go into the question of cross-examination of what actually did occur and whether or not the thing which occurred reasonably would cause these people to take the action they did, then aren't you following out Mr. Tyler's original position, and that is that not only what their frame [fol. 4328] of mind was, but whether or not their frame of mind was based upon a reasonable assumption.

Miss Weyand: On direct, Mrs. Cooper had testified that after reading this article the girls generally and she also reacted in a certain way.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Miss Weyand: I was cross-examining her to find out what specific indications of that reaction there was, if she saw the girls do things which would warrant her to testify to that description of them, that is, if she saw they were upset, or said or did anything that would show they were upset or influenced.

[fol. 4329] Trial Examiner Batten: If that is the case, how did this Sylvia Hull incident arise? You could have conducted that without reference to this incident.

Miss Weyand: She said on direct examination that she read the newspaper article about Sylvia Hull, and that the next day, in the plant, she discovered other employees had read the same article, and that they felt that the girl and the union were usurping authority which the Donnelly Garment workers had never given, in announcing Sylvia Hull was a representative of the Donnelly Garment Workers. So I asked her, what did the girls say the next morning, that showed that they felt Sylvia Hull was usurping authority.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, but didn't you also say, didn't you use the incident the next day with respect to Sylvia Hull? Didn't you ask that?

Miss Weyand: Yes, I did, but she began denying, on cross-examination, she had seen anything happen, but on direct examination she had characterized the way all the girls felt, and what they did.

[fol. 4330] Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Miss Weyand, I can't help but feel your cross-examination with regard to that incident certainly raises the question as to whether or not these individuals are justified in the generalization which they make, and there is only one way to determine that and that is by exactly what happened, whether it is true or untrue.

Miss Weyand: I wasn't going into that.

Trial Examiner Batten: I know you weren't, but my point is, you opened that up. Now, how far you go with it, of course, is a matter of degree.

Miss Weyand: On cross-examination I am entitled to impeach the source of the knowledge of the reaction; that was what I was doing in that cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, if that was your only purpose, you didn't indicate it. Well, we will recess until 25 minutes until 12.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4331] Trial Examiner Batten: Another question that arose in my mind is this, Miss Weyand: I think you took the position that unless the Board questioned the mental reactions of these employees, which it did not intend to do, the issue would not arise as to whether or not it, in fact, was true.

I think I ought to have you clarify again the Board's position. Maybe I misunderstood it. In other words, if your first position with respect to these matters, these newspaper articles and the reaction which these employees had to it, was that you felt it wasn't material to the issues in this case but that the circuit court had indicated that it felt we should receive the testimony?

Now, it seems to me that you went on to explain that. When Mr. Tyler raised the point he did, about the truth of it, you said the only time that would become an issue would be if the Board questioned the attitude of these employees and went into that matter; then it would become an issue, whether or not it, in fact, was true, and whether there was a substantial basis for their opinion.

Now, it seems to me that we had better get this thing [fol. 4332] straightened out before we go any farther, because it certainly is not clear in my mind.

Miss Weyand: I made the statement that you referred to, in connection with my answer to certain remarks by Mr. Tyler in regard solely to the violence issue and the contract issue.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, as it affected the employees.

Miss Weyand: I said that the Board so far found no reason to question the employees' statements of the state of their understanding about violence which occurred at other garment plants or their state of mind about the terms which were included in contracts which the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union entered into with other garment companies.

I did not intend by that statement to mean that I might not later, after hearing testimony more exaggerated than any in the record, raise a question as to their state of mind in respect to the violence or the contracts. I have not yet done it, at the present time.

Trial Examiner Batten: At that point let me ask you this question: It seems to me that you did with the prior witness—

Miss Weyand: No. That was not violence—

Trial Examiner Batten:

* * * * * *

It seems to me you did—irrespective of your purpose, it seems to me you did, because you examined the witness as to whether or not there was a proper foundation for her general statement of all of the people being excited; and [fol. 4333] so forth. Now, if you do that, you do it, irrespective of the statement of your purpose—unless the purpose is stated—for the purpose of either discrediting the testimony or generalization of it or to show that there was, in fact, no basis for her opinion.

Miss Weyand: I think you have misunderstood the remarks I was directing. I was trying to limit my statement to the fact that I did not as yet question certain states of mind, states of mind pertaining to the terms of other contracts or pertaining to the violence.

I have never indicated in this record, and I have no intention of indicating at this time that I do not intend to go into the state of mind of the employees' with respect to whether or not the Donnelly Garment Company did acts which led the employees to believe they were not free to join the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union or were required to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

I believe, in the Sylvia Hull connection, that it is entirely proper cross-examination for me to inquire, when on direct the company inquired of the witness as they did of Mrs. Cooper, what the effect of hearing that Sylvia Hull was going to a convention—

Trial Examiner Batten: You don't understand me, Miss Weyand. I am not taking the position that you had no right to. That is not my position. All I am saying is that it does appear to me to be inconsistent with some of your [fol. 4334] prior statements and that it does bring up the question as to whether or not we are going to go behind the beliefs and opinions of these employees. That is my point; not that you didn't have a perfect right to. But isn't it in line with Mr. Tyler's statement at the beginning? I think at the time I, in substance, agreed with him that the first matter is, What is the opinion of the employees? And that is the thing we should determine first, before we get to the question of whether or not there was a basis for that opinion.

Now, I don't know whether I make myself clear, but— And maybe we are getting into metaphysics here.

Miss Weyand: My remarks as to the beliefs I did not find it necessary then to challenge went to the beliefs of violence and contracts; not to beliefs of interference by the company.

Trial Examiner Batten: How was this interference by the company: I mean, the fact that these people were very excited, and so forth? Only upon your assumption that the Sylvia Hull matter was company-inspired.

Miss Weyand: That has been the Board's position, that if it wasn't company-inspired, at least the company failed to take the steps it should have to protect the girls in their right to belong to an outside union. The courts have repeatedly dealt with eviction of employees and said that it is the duty of an employer to afford a girl protection so that she may work in the plant and at the same time be a [fol. 4335] member of any union she wishes to be a member of.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is true. But you are proceeding on the assumption that it was. Now, that is one of the things that will have to be determined as a result of the evidence in the hearing, as to whether it was or was.

not. And when you cross-examined this witness with respect to the Sylvia Hull incident, you were not cross-examining her, were you, to prove or disprove the company's connection with the incident?

Miss Weyand: My cross-examination of Mrs. Cooper was directed solely to a remark she made on direct—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. I want my question answered. Your cross-examination with respect to the Sylvia Hull matter was not for the purpose of proving or disproving the company's connection with the incident, was it, as far as Mrs. Cooper was concerned?

Miss Weyand: I should say that if my cross-examination had brought out a connection of the company with the incident, the Board would be entitled to rely on it in its decision.

Trial Examiner Batten: My question was, it was not your purpose in the examination, was it— That wasn't your purpose?— As I understood your purpose you stated a few moments ago.

Miss Weyand: My purpose was directed at credibility, but I don't believe that when I direct a question at credibility which is a proper question to direct at credi- [fol. 4336] bility I am to be barred from taking the answer and saying I wish to use it for something else if the answer developed into a statement of a connection of the company with the incident.

Trial Examiner Batten: But, Miss Weyand, there is the very thing that gets us into some of our difficulties. Now, I asked you yesterday if certain questioning was directed to credibility, and you said, "Yes." Now, I believe that in line with your statement you, then, would be barred from using that for any other purpose except credibility.

It is impossible for me as the Examiner in the hearing to use any sort of a yardstick by which I will accept or reject testimony except upon the basis of what counsel tell me. Now, if I accept it for one purpose, I do not believe it is accepted for all purposes, particularly on credibility, biased interest, and so forth, because you have a much larger leeway under those purposes than you otherwise would, that I would not be willing to accept it for those purposes.

To get back to my question of a moment ago, your examination of this witness yesterday on cross with respect to the Sylvia Hull incident, as I gathered, was not for the purpose of proving or disproving that the company had anything to do with it.

Miss Weyand: That is correct. And I do not intend to make any claim that it should be used for any other purpose.

Trial Examiner Batten: But if it was not for that [fol. 4337] purpose but was for the purpose of showing that the witness lacked knowledge on the facts upon which she relied to generalize about the situation in the plant, then are you not questioning her opinion by showing there was no basis for it?

Miss Weyand: I am questioning her opinion and I was yesterday questioning her opinion. I do not mean to state, if I ask that question in the future I may not have a broader purpose—

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not asking you as to the future. If you were not questioning the factual basis of her opinion, then don't you bring up the very point that Mr. Tyler stated, that in addition to the opinion of these employees you want to determine whether or not, in fact, there was a basis for their opinion?

Miss Weyand: Just a minute. I think you are mistaken as to the basis of what opinion I was examining on. I was examining as to the basis of her opinion that the other girls were indignant. You will find her characterization of that on pages 4121 to 4123; that is the transcript of the present record.

Trial Examiner Batten: Whether it was her opinion or her opinion of the opinion of 1,200 other people, you questioned it, didn't you?

Miss Weyand: I questioned her opinion of the opinion of other people as she gave it. I have a right to ask her what the basis of her opinion of the opinion of other people is.

[fol. 4338] Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, don't misunderstand me. I say you have the right. I am simply trying to clarify this matter so that I may at least attempt to apply the same yardstick to all of the evidence which I receive here. If you believe that that generalization of what all of the other employees thought had, in fact, no basis, I am not saying you do not have a perfect right to determine it by cross-examination. But if you do take that position, then it seems to me that does raise the whole general question as to whether or not any of this testimony about opinion and what they thought—whether there was, in fact, a basis for it. If not, where would you draw the line?

Miss Weyand: I would draw the line at the questions which I think are outside the issues in this case; that is, the contracts and the violence, which are outside the issues of this case as long as the Board says it is willing to take the employees' statements as to these matters at their face value. I do not say I would be willing as to every employee that comes in, but I have had no occasion up to this time to question the witnesses as to the violence or contracts. I do feel that the basis of their opinions, when the basis they are talking about is the opinion of other employees, must be inquired into.

[fol. 4339] Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Examiner, it seems to me there is an objection to this line of testimony being indulged in by Mr. Lane as to what actually happened in the Sylvia Hull demonstration. That was all gone into by witnesses, pro and con, at the last hearing, and no question was excluded.

Now, the only thing that is pertinent under the remand, in my opinion, is, "Did the Sylvia Hull demonstration affect your mind in any way that had anything to do with your joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?" I don't see how it could have, but— My point is, they haven't any right now to retry the incident of the Sylvia Hull demonstration, because that was gone into without objection and without any exclusion whatever, and they cannot come along now and by a raft of witnesses bolster up their version of what happened in that demonstration. If they do, why, we will come along with a few witnesses.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean by your statement, then, the only question to this witness is, Did this witness see it or participate in it—

Mr. Langsdale: —or hear about it—

Trial Examiner Batten: —and if so, what effect did it have upon her?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes. But not what happened, because that was gone into.

[fol. 4340] Mr. Tyler: Mr. Examiner, I want to submit that this subject of examination is proper wholly without regard to the purpose and intent of Miss Weyand's cross-examina-
[fol. 4341] tion, because Your Honor is going to have to weigh whether this witness is telling the truth when she says the incident affected her. If her mere answer were sufficient, this lawsuit would be over, because it is in the record, the statement and the proffer of statements of 1,200 employees as to what the fact was as to their choice, against which is only the statement of one discharged employee that she had a general feeling to the contrary, and another, that she was discharged.

If the answers themselves were sufficient—and I think they are—this case is determined, because it is inconceivable that a majority of 1,200 witnesses are either perjurers or don't know what they are talking about. But I realize that that viewpoint is overruled. Therefore, it becomes necessary for these witnesses to go farther than saying, "My belief was so and so." They must show facts making it reasonably probable that that is true.

Now, Your Honor is going to decide whether those facts are reasonably probable. If this witness said, "I believed the International was going to force us all to move to a plant in St. Joseph, Mo.", Your Honor would say, "That reason is absurd. They couldn't have had that reason." So Your Honor must weigh these reasons.

[fol. 4348]. Mr. Langsdale: Now, if the Examiner please, I am not clear in my mind whether I think you should admit or not the details of the Sylvia Hulf demonstration, but the fallacy in the Senator's argument and all of the reading of questions and answers that he did is shown in his last statement, where he stated if she had said she saw the incident, then what would the next question have been. But Miss Weyand never got that far. Now, my thought is that she had a right to find out whether she saw it or not or heard about it or not, before she could claim whether it had any impression on her whatever. But to go into all of the details is something she didn't do, although the Senator says that would have been the next question.

[fol. 4349] Trial Examiner Batten: There is no claim, Mr. Langsdale, that the incident had any effect on the witness.

Mr. Langsdale: Then, it isn't material from any angle, is it?

Trial Examiner Batten: That is what I had in mind a while ago when I said to Mr. Tyler, supposing this witness saw this incident, what effect would that incident have upon her. She read the newspaper article, it is true. She has testified that did have an effect upon her. And I asked Mr. Tyler, assuming she saw this incident, what effect did it have upon her?

Mr. Langsdale: I can't possibly see how it could have affected her one way or the other as to joining or not joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or staying out of the I. L. G. W. U.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed with your next question.

Mr. Lane: Now, Mr. Examiner, that matter is broader than Mr. Langsdale seeks to make it. Mr. Langsdale said awhile ago in his opinion we were foreclosed from inquiring into the facts of the incident, because the Board has made its finding on that and it was inquired into at the other hearing.

Trial Examiner Batten: I can clarify that by saying [fol. 4350] the Board has not made any findings and the Trial Examiner has not made any findings. The Board's order and decision was set aside, so there isn't any Board's order and decision.

Mr. Lane: In our offer of proof we offered to show that the employees had no knowledge of any instance where the employer or any representative of the employer intimidated, coerced, or influenced any employee in the matter of joining one union or staying out of any other labor union. It is, therefore, pertinent to inquire as to whether or not in connection with this incident there was any pressure exerted on these employees.

Trial Examiner Batten: For what?

Mr. Lane: To join one union or stay out of another.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I will go along with you on that. But whether or not the employer exerted any pressure to exclude these people from the plant I don't think is material under these offers. Yes, whether the employer in this incident exerted any pressure on the employees to join or not join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Mr. Langsdale: Or to stay out of any other union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Or to stay out of any other union, yes. I think I could agree with you on that.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. When you got into the plant on the morning of April 23, what was your state of mind, after having read this account in the newspaper the preceeding day, as to whether [fol. 4351] you were upset or disturbed by that article or by Fern Sigler's presence there or not?

A. I was very much upset.

Q. Did you talk to Fern Sigler?

A. No.

Q. I do not mean Fern Sigler. I mean Sylvia Hull.

A. I did.

Q. What did you say to her?

A. As I remember it, the first thing I said to her—I asked her if she really had gone and put herself up as a representative of our company. I couldn't believe that she had done it.

Q. Did you get any answer from her?

A. I did not.

Q. I will ask you to state what you observed as to the attitude and reactions of the other employees who were in the vicinity of Sylvia Hull when you were there.

A. Well, they were just like myself, they were greatly upset and astonished at her.

Q. What did you observe that gave you that opinion?

A. Well, there was none of us felt like working; we were in such a state of mind. And we kept asking her questions and she wouldn't answer but a very few.

Q. Did you go anywhere when Sylvia Hull left the floor you were then on?

A. I did.

[fol. 4352] Q. Where did you go?

A. I went down on the seventh floor, to Mrs. Hyde's desk.

Q. Did Mrs. Hyde say anything to you?

A. She did.

Q. What did she say?

A. She asked me to please go back to my machine.

Q. And what did you do?

A. Well, I still wanted to go down and see who the other girl was. I didn't know the other girl. But she asked me repeatedly to go back to my machine and go to work, and I went.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, you see, Mr. Lane, what this leads into. You are leading into trying out the whole issue.

Mr. Lane: I think I am entitled to.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, as to the—

Mr. Lane: I am entitled to show whether or not there was anything in connection with that incident that showed whether the company was endeavoring to influence these employees.

Trial Examiner Batten: Influence them in what, to join or not join the union?

Mr. Lane: To join one union or stay out of any other union.

Trial Examiner Batten: How could it influence this [fol. 4353] employee, the fact that Mrs. Hyde tried to get her to go back to work?

Mr. Lane: It has been stated here that the company did nothing whatsoever about it and condoned the action of these employees. Therefore, it is proper—

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you show me where there is any such contention as that, as far as Mrs. Hyde's or any other person's direction to this woman to go back to work is concerned?

Mr. Lane: I am saying it was the Board's contention in the previous hearing.

Trial Examiner Batten: Where in the previous hearing?

Mr. Stottle: The Board made that finding, Your Honor.

Trial Examiner Batten: Where is the finding? Made the finding that the company condoned this for the purpose of encouraging membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Mr. Stottle: That is right. Or against joining the International.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's have it, if that is the case.

[fol. 4354] Trial Examiner Batten: The question here is how and why the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized under the offers of proof.

Mr. Lane: It is more than that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute, until I finish. It is more than that. In accordance with the offers of proof, they cover those matters rather specifically. My point is, how is the fact Mrs. Hyde told this employee to go back to work — has it influenced her in joining or not joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Mr. Lane: Now, Your Honor makes repeated reference to the offers of proof and the Board's offers of proof. I find nothing in the opinion which confines the Intervener or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the respondent to specific offers of proof. The opinion says the evidence of the employees was to be taken, whether they were dominated or coerced.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Mr. Lane, I am referring to my ruling that we are first going to take the testimony of the employees, in line with the offers of proof. Of course, if you concede this is in accordance with the offers of proof, it is not in accordance with my ruling.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4355] Mr. Reed: The difficulty is we are trying to do the impossible, we are trying to separate evidence which bears upon the whole case and limit it to bear upon one feature of the case, and that feature of the case is an essential part of the case itself, so that our difficulty arises from that attempt to first try one particular question.

Now, you can't try that question, you can't try the very question here, without introducing evidence as to what took place. This lady saw it, and everything that took place there was dragged into this case by both sides before.

Now, this witness is asked how she felt, what her state of mind was; she saw this difficulty. What took place at that time would affect her mind, and what took place at that time would do something else; it would be a factor in arriving at any other conclusion whether the company was guilty of unfair labor practice by not going in and protecting these people.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, Senator, that is not because of the order of proof, and it is not because of the issues in the case. The difficulties that we are running into is that we are trying to explore the minds of people.

[fol. 4356] Mr. Reed: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I don't care whether it is a Labor Board hearing or what kind of a lawsuit it is, when you attempt to do as we are doing here, explore peoples' mental reactions and their opinions —

Mr. Reed: That is shown by what they do, isn't it?

Trial Examiner Batten: But you get into serious difficulty. I feel that is what the Circuit Court wanted done; within the limits of our ability, I am going to comply with the Circuit Court's decision. I have made my ruling we are going to proceed in that manner. If I am wrong, Senator, we probably will be back here again.

Mr. Reed: I think we will.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I hope I live to be here; I have enjoyed it very much thus far, but I made the ruling, and that is the ruling which we are going to follow.

* * * * * *

Mr. Lane: In connection with this, on page 18, the Board says: "Without deciding whether the Respondent was responsible for originating and inciting these anti-[fol. 4357] ILGWU demonstrations, we are convinced that the Respondent condoned, approved, and encouraged them. In the first place, the Respondent made no sincere efforts to check the demonstrators. During the demonstrations, instructors and some other supervisory officials stood by and made no effort to take steps which might have been effective in terminating the demonstrations," and so forth in that paragraph.

* * * * * *

Mr. Lane: And to get our offer of proof, as we have read here, and I will read it again, "That they (the employees) have not been influenced by any threats, coercion or pressure of their employers, or any representative of said employers, and that they have no knowledge of any instance in which the employer or any representatives of the employer have exerted pressure, intimidation, coercion or any other influence upon the undersigned or any other [fol. 4358] employees to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or to stay out of any other labor union."

Now, I say, therefore, it is competent for us to show in this whole instance there was no condoning on the part of the company, and as far as the attitude of the employees of the company was concerned, the company ordered them to go back to work.

Trial Examiner Batten: I agree with you. The first part you read, it might be interference and coercion. Whether or not it would have any effect on this employee's mind or attitude, I think, is an entirely different question. I still don't believe that answers my question, Mr. Lane.

Mr. Lane: Well, the Board has taken the position, apparently —

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) The Board hasn't taken any position. The Board has set aside its decision and order, there is no decision and order in existence, so that can't be used as stating what the Board's decision is.

Mr. Reed: Well, is there a record in existence that is a part of this hearing?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I would assume so, Senator. At least we started with page 3000 and something, so I assume something precedes it.

Mr. Reed: Well, the record is here, whether the Board did or didn't make a finding — we know it did make a finding. [fol. 4359] We know this point adverse to us was in the minds of the Court, and this case has been sent back here, and the Board is ordered to set aside its judgment and decisio and we are here now, prepared to try the issues in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is the very point I am glad you mentioned, Senator. I have felt that way for some time, that the position of the Respondent is that on every point I passed, the Board made an adverse finding in its prior decision and order; that means the Respondent can now come in here in a further hearing for a specific hearing, and attempt to disprove all the adverse findings brought.

Mr. Reed: And that, not because of the adverse finding, but because we are entitled to put in this evidence, and the adverse findings simply go to this fact, that it is apparent that the Board has in its mind the importance of this question, and that their opinion was that we were guilty under this particular phase of the charge. Now, we come back to try it. We have the old record here and we have the right to meet every contention that is made. That contention is made by the Board today, although it set aside its findings, and the record is there, and it is here now, undertaking to say that on that record made, which is now, as I understand, a part of this hearing, certain deductions we have drawn, and it drew them. Now, we come in and want to show the facts in this case; and to shut us off from that —

[fol. 4360] Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Of course, Senator, I can't agree with you that you are coming in here to show the facts; you are coming in here to show the facts on the basis of the remand of the Circuit Court.

Mr. Reed: I understand that, and you and I differ on that radically, on what the remand is, and we object to the ruling that has been made, to the effect that we are confined here to our offers of proof, and then we make the further point that our offers of proof are broad enough to cover every contention that we have thus far made in this case; and that we have the right now, under the offers of proof, to meet every issue in this case; and we object and except to any rulings to the contrary.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I think the record is pretty clear, Senator, that you have excepted to all of these rulings.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4361] Miss Weyand: I wanted to make a statement in connection with the discussion we were having, pertaining to the Sylvia Hull incident. There were some statements made here with reference to the Board's position that I don't acquiesce in.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, is it necessary to continue it?

Miss Weyand: I wanted to make a statement in the record to clear up the Board's position, if I may. The complaint, of course, alleged that the Respondent discouraged membership in the I.L.G.W.U. by discharging Sylvia Hull, and it also alleged the incident in regard to Fern Sigler. It is my position that any of the matters alleged in the complaint are matters which the Board maintains as its position for the purpose of trying this case. I agree with the Trial Examiner, of course, that the Board's orders have been set aside, and we look to the complaint to see what the matters are that the Board is [fol. 4362] trying the Respondent for. That is all I wanted to say, except to indicate we do feel the Sylvia Hull and Fern Sigler incidents were very, very responsible and closely connected incidents in making the employees feel that when the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, they were not free to join a union of their own which, as I say, is very, very closely connected to restraint, interference and coercion in the circumstances under which the employees joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think I told you to proceed, Mr. Lane.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Saucke, I think you said in your direct examination that your resentment of Sylvia Hull claiming that she was to represent the Donnelly employees was such that you did not want to go on working while she was there in your section.

A. That's right.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4364] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Saucke, was anything said by other employees in your hearing in the section in which Sylvia Hull was, with respect to working while she was there, and if so, state what was said.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4365] A. Yes, they did, a lot of them.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Will you state, Mrs. Saucke, what was said by anybody in the section?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll object to that question and sustain my own objection. If this questioning indicates this witness can't identify what anybody said — I mean the names of anybody — then I would say the proper foundation is laid for your last question.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Was anything said by any person whom you recognized as being one of the Donnelly employees, in that section?

. . . . . .

[fol. 4366] A. Well, this girl that I have in mind that was talking to me, she didn't belong in that section.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, was she an employee of the Company, do you know?

A. She was an operator.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Are you able to state the names of any persons you talked with?

A. I can name this girl.

Q. What was her name?

A. Christine Ereth.

Q. Are you able to name any others?

A. Ethel Riegel, Gertrude Dauben.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Are there any others you can name?

A. There were lots of others, but those were the main ones I remember distinctly of talking to.

Q. Well, did you talk with others in that vicinity that morning?

A. Yes.

Q. Now state what was said by these other employees, as to their continuing work while Sylvia Hull was in that section.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4367] By Mr. Lane:

Q. All right. Mrs. Saucke, tell us everything you can remember that was said by any employees in that section.

A. Well, they were all so upset about it, and several of them said, "Well, we just can't work, we can't set ourselves to work."

. . . . . .

A. Ethel Riegel told me as long as Sylvia was staying, she couldn't and wouldn't go back to work, I remember that; and I said the same thing.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Can you think of any other remarks that were made that morning?

A. Yes, I was talking to her, and I asked her as long as she had joined the International, why she didn't go over to their sweat shops and work, and she didn't answer. She did [fol. 4368] later on, when we were standing talking to her, make the statement that had she known we girls had felt toward her as we were showing how we felt, that she would not have done it. We asked her what right she had to appoint herself to represent we operators, when we had had no vote whatsoever as to sending anybody. In fact, we didn't even know there was a convention; we weren't interested. She didn't answer that.

Q. Well now, will you describe what you observed take place around Sylvia Hull's section?

A. She was sitting on the south side of her row with her back to the windows, and the girls came in between those two rows in the aisle, and we were talking to her; some of them sang a song or two, and others just kept firing one question after another, asking her why she did it. That was the main demonstration.

Q. Did you hear any threats made to her?

A. No.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4369] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Well, will you describe the conduct of the employees?

A. Well, they were all excited and wrought up and disgusted with her.

Q. Did you see any violence there?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. Did anybody push her or shove her?

A. She was not touched.

Q. How long were you down on the 7th floor?

A. At what time?

Q. When you went down to the 7th floor after this incident?

A. Oh, just a few minutes. I wouldn't say over three or four minutes.

* * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. You work on the 8th floor, don't you, Mrs. Saucke?

A. I do.

Q. You are a pocket girl, aren't you, Mrs. Saucke?

A. Most of the time.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4374] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Were you working at the Donnelly Company when the Loyalty League was organized?

A. I was.

Q. Did you participate in the formation of the Loyalty League?

A. I was one of their first members—one of their charter members.

Q. When did you join?

A. I believe it was in 1935.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4375] Q. Did you know of any activity or arrangements for the formation of the Loyalty League that were taken preceding the time you signed the card?

A. Yes. We had a mass meeting, as I remember it.

Q. Did you attend that mass meeting?

A. I did.

Q. Where was that mass meeting held?

A. I couldn't say what floor, but it was an empty floor.

Q. It was in the Corrigan Building, was it?

A. It was.

Q. At what time of day was that meeting held?

A. I can't say.

. . . . . .

[fol 4378] Q. When was the next meeting that you recall?

A. I don't know how soon, but the next meeting that I remember of, we held a meeting to decide on a pin.

Q. Was that a mass meeting of the employees?

A. Yes.

Q. Where was that held?

A. On one of the empty floors, I don't know which.

Q. You are referring to the Corrigan Building?

A. I am.

Q. What time of day was that meeting held?

A. I couldn't say.

Q. Who presided at that meeting?

A. I believe, Mrs. Gray, but I'm not positive.

Q. Was anything else taken up at that meeting other than choosing a pin?

A. The design of the pin.

Q. Were there any other subjects discussed at that meeting?

A. I don't remember.

. . . . . .

[4383] Q. Did you regard the meeting of March 18 as a Loyalty League meeting?

A. What year are you talking about?

Q. 1937. The meeting at which Mrs. Reed spoke.

A. I do not.

Q. How did you distinguish it from a Loyalty League meeting?

A. Well, it wasn't called any kind of a particular meeting, only just a mass meeting, to all go down to this empty room and talk and discuss what action we were going to take to protect ourselves from this violence outside.

. . . . . .

Q. Did the Loyalty League continue to exist after the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes.

[4384] Q. How long did the Loyalty League continue to exist after the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. It still is in existence.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4385] Q. Are you certain that the Loyalty League has held any affair since April 27, 1937?

A. No, I'm not certain.

Q. Have you ever attended a meeting of the Loyalty League since April 27, 1937?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Who have been the officers of the Loyalty League since April 27, 1937?

A. Well, the president that we appointed after our union—our first president of the Loyalty League after that was Thelma Huffaker.

Q. Are you certain that she was not elected until the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union had been formed?

A. What was that?

Q. Are you certain that Thelma Huffaker was not chosen as president of the Loyalty League prior to April 27, 1937?

A. Well, it was after, as I remember.

Q. Do you remember how long after it was?

A. No.

Q. Was it a month?

A. I don't remember.

[fol. 4390] Q. Will you state the first meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union at which you recall speaking?

A. I can't do that.

Q. Did you take any part in making a speech, a motion, or other statements, at the first meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I can't say whether it was at the first one or not.

Q. What is the first time you recall making a motion at a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting?

A. I can't say. I have made suggestions lots of times.

Q. Yesterday in answer to a question by Mr. Ingraham with reference to the March 18 meeting, you started to say that you spoke at a meeting and then said, "No, it wasn't the March 18 meeting." Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you have reference to on that occasion?

A. I had reference to the meeting we were discussing, how to raise the money for our lawyer; and, if I remember right, I suggested that we all contribute a dollar, but it was talked over and others suggested 50 cents would be enough. That is what I was referring to.

Q. Was that the first meeting at which you discussed the matter of raising the lawyer's fee?

A. As I remember it, it was. That was the second meeting we held.

[fol. 4391] Q. What was the date of that meeting?

A. It was sometime after that meeting of March 18. I couldn't say what date.

Q. Did you at any subsequent meeting also make a similar motion?

A. I couldn't say.

Q. Did you ever get up at any other meeting and discuss what size the contributions for the lawyer's fee should be?

A. I have no idea what a lawyer should be paid.

Q. Did you ever get up at any other meeting and make a suggestion as to the amount the employees of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union should each contribute to Mr. Tyler's fee?

A. I did that once.

Q. Only once?

A. That I remember.

Q. You are not certain that it wasn't more than once?

A. I am not certain.

Q. But you are certain it was at the second meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Mr. Stottle. Now, if Your Honor please, that is embodying something the witness did not testify to.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Stottle. She says it occurred shortly after March [fol. 4392] 18, and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was not organized until in April.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean the meeting—

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When you speak of the second meeting, what do you mean by the word "second"?

A. That was the meeting we held to see about raising $500 fo. a retainer's fee for our lawyer.

Q. Was there a third meeting?

A. The next meeting that I remember of was the meeting when Mr. Tyler spoke to us, the first time I ever saw him.

Q. What was the next meeting after that?

A. After the one where Mr. Tyler spoke?

Q. Yes.

A. I couldn't say.

Q. Did you nominate any of the officers at the meeting at which Mr. Tyler spoke?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you make a motion at that meeting as to how the voting on the officers should be conducted?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you ever inquire at any meeting how many members the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union had?

A. I may have, but I don't remember.

[fol. 4393] Q. Did you ever run for office in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. My name, at one election, was put on the board. We had two groups of names to vote on. I think it was for vice-president or something. I don't remember.

Q. Were you elected?

A. No.

Q. Do you remember what the vote was against you?

A. No.

* * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember what year you ran for this office?

A. No, I couldn't say.

Q. Do you know who nominated you?

A. No.

Q. Was it an individual who stood up in the meeting and nominated you?

[fol. 4394] A. We had a nominating committee.

Q. Do you know how that nominating committee was chosen?

A. By a vote of the union members.

Q. How many members of the nominating committee which nominated you did you nominate?

A. I don't remember nominating any.

Q. How many did you second the nomination of?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did your second the nomination of any?

A. I don't remember.

Q. You can't tell us whether you did or didn't?

A. No.

Q. Did you have any part in choosing the nominating committee that nominated you?

A. We all have a part.

Q. What part did you have?

A. A voting p t.

Q. Did you have any part other than the voting part?

A. We all have the right to nominate anyone we want for that committee.

Q. Did you nominate anyone?

A. I don't remember.

Q. You may have done it and you may not, you don't remember one way or the other?

A. That is quite a while back, and I have attended [fol. 4395] quite a few meetings, and I don't remember.

Q. Had you known you were going to be nominated before your name was placed on the blackboard?

A. I had not.

Q. How was the vote conducted on your election?

A. A standing vote.

Q. Were the people who stood up counted?

A. Approximately they were.

Q. Who did the counting?

A. I presume Rose Todd, she was in charge of the meeting.

Q. Was there a dispute after Rose Todd announced the result?

A. Not that I ever heard.

Q. Did they have to ask someone at the meeting their opinion as to whether the majority voted for one side or the other?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Didn't an instructor announce the side on which you weren't running had the most votes?

A. How was that?

Q. Did an instructor announce at the meeting that in her opinion the side on which your name did not appear had the most votes?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Was the vote close?

A. No, I don't think it was.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4396] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Your recollection is they did not have to call on any of the instructors present to tell which side had the most votes?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. You don't remember that Stella Willis got up and said that in her opinion the other side had more votes than you had?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Were you interested in being elected?

A. Not particularly.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4397] Q. How many nominating committees were there?

A. There were two, if I remember right.

Q. And what did each nominating committee do?

A. As I remember it, they chose the rows of officers; we had two rows; each committee chose one side, and then it was put on a board and we were to see it and vote on it, which side we wanted. That is the way I remember it at that time.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4399] Q. Do you know Mildred Mattox?

A. I know her when I see her.

Q. Where does she work?

A. Well, I haven't seen her for several years, so I can't say; I don't think she works for us, but I wouldn't say for sure.

Q. Do you know where she worked during the first two years of the existence of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I couldn't say.

Q. Did you know her personally?

A. No.

Q. Had you ever visited in her home?

A. Never have.

Q. Did you know what her character was?

A. No.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4416] Q. Are you certain that the meeting at which you made a suggestion as to the amount which you thought each employee should contribute to Mr. Tyler's fee occurred in March of 1937 rather than March of 1938?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you also make a suggestion in March of 1938?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you ever make a suggestion that you thought a dollar would be an appropriate amount for each employee to contribute?

A. I think I did that at that second meeting, when we were talking about raising the $500.

Q. And you are certain that occurred in 1937?

A. I am pretty sure it was.

Q. There is no chance that it could have been a year later?

A. We were raising the $500 that year, 1937.

Q. Didn't you raise a similar amount in 1938?

A. I don't remember.

Q. And you didn't make a suggestion about raising the amount in March of 1938? A. I don't remember.

Q. Is it possible that you could be mistaken about the year? A. I don't think so.

Q. Is there anything that fixes it in your mind as 1937 rather than 1938?

A. We had to raise our first $500. We didn't have any money.

[fol. 4417] Q. You did raise amounts subsequent to the first $500, didn't you?

A. Along about—at that second meeting of 1937.

Q. But you also at later meetings raised $500 or $1,000 at different times, didn't you?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. You had no part in figuring out how those could be raised, as far as you can recall? A. How's that?

Q. You had no part in figuring out how any subsequent sums other than this first $500 could be raised?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is it possible that it could have occurred and you do not recall it?

A. Anything could have occurred, I guess, but I don't remember it.

* * * * * * *

Q. What time of day did this second meeting occur?

A. After work, in the evening.

Q. Do you recall any meeting subsequent to the second [fol. 4418] meeting of which you speak at which the manner of raising fees for Mr. Tyler was discussed? A. No.

Q. Did you ever contribute anything other than the original 50 cents to Mr. Tyler's fees; that is, other than your regular dues? Did you ever make any other special contribution. A. I may have, but I don't remember.

Q. I am going to ask you to look at the minutes of the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for Tuesday, March 8, 1938, being Board's exhibit No. 8-69, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 4463, and ask that you direct your attention specifically to page 4464, which is Board's exhibit No. 8-70.

A. What year was that?

Q. 1938.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4420] Q. The question was, did you attend that meeting? A. I think I did.

Q. Is that the incident you were referring to?

A. It is not.

Q. You made it on the second occasion, did you?

A. I evidently did. That refreshes my memory to that incident.

Q. And this was not the matter you were referring to before?

A. No, but this does refresh my memory, and I did that.

* * * * * *

Miss Weyand: I would like to have the witness examine Board's Exhibit No. 8-75, being the minutes of a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for Tuesday, April 5th, 1938, which appears in the record of the Circuit Court of Appeals, at page 4469, and I ask that the witness direct her attention particularly to page 4473 and tell me if she was present at that meeting, and if the events which she is listed as participating in occurred as there recorded.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4421] A. I was there.

Miss Weyand: And did you participate in the nomination of Mildred Mattox? A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Lane: If the Examiner please, the Intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union objects to that question; whether this witness, Mrs. Saucke, participated in the nomination of Mildred Mattox in April, 1938, as a member of a nominating committee, whether this witness acted wisely or unwisely in so participating, or whether this witness was casually or intimately acquainted with Mildred Mattox doesn't throw any light whatever on the issues of this proceeding, it is entirely irrelevant and immaterial, doesn't even approach the issue we are here to try out, and I object to it for that reason.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

[fol. 4422] By Miss Weyand:

Q. And you participated as shown in these minutes, is that correct? A. I guess I did.

Q. Will you look at the minutes of the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for Tuesday, April 26, 1938, being Board's Exhibit 8-82, which appears at page 4476 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, directing your particular attention to pages 4479 to 4481, and tell me whether you attended that meeting.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4424] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you attend that meeting? A. I did.

Q. Is that the meeting at which they voted on whether you should be a member of the committee?

A. It is. I wouldn't swear to that date, though. I don't remember what date that happened.

[fol. 4425] By Miss Weyand:

Q. This is the meeting at which that occurred? The matters you read portray the events which occurred in that connection? A. It looks familiar to me.

Q. I notice the name of Stella Willis appearing here as making several statements. Could you tell me who Stella Willis is? A. I don't know her.

Q. You don't know Stella Willis?

A. I don't remember knowing her.

Q. You have not known anyone by the name of Stella Willis? A. The name sounds familiar.

Q. Who is the instructor of the button and buttonhole section?

Mr. Reed: When?

Miss Weyand: At the present time.

Mr. Reed: That is immaterial. It is outside the issues as they have been drawn here. A. I don't know.

Miss Weyand: You state you don't know.

Mr. Reed: Wait a minute.

Miss Weyand: Well, it is my understanding that Stella Willis is now the instructor of the button and buttonhole section, and I am asking this witness—

Trial Examiner Batten: She doesn't have to answer [fol. 4426] what position she has now, because it wouldn't make any difference as far as the issues in this case are concerned, as to 1939.

Miss Weyand: She said she didn't know who Stella Willis was and I just wanted the record to show how completely ignorant she was on what goes on there at the Donnelly Garment Company.

Mr. Lane: I object to the comment and move that it be stricken.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute. I have said it wouldn't make any difference here, and she doesn't have to answer.

By Miss Weyand.

Q. Do you know who was the instructor of the button and buttonhole section in 1937, 1938, and 1939?

A. I do not, because that was on another floor and I never worked in that section. I wasn't interested in it.

Q. I notice here (referring to minutes) that Rose Todd called on a person by the name of Lola Skeens for her opinion. Do you know who Lola Skeens was? A. Yes.

Q. Who was Lola Skeens at the time of this meeting in April, 1938? A. She was an instructor.

Q. Was she your instructor at that time? A. 1938?

Q. Yes.

[fol. 4427] A. In 1937 and 1938 there were several changes in the instructors in the sections that I was in. Sometime during that time Lola Skeens was my instructor, but I couldn't say that it was at this time. She was my instructor for about six months.

Q. Has this refreshed your recollection as to whether Rose Todd called upon Lola Skeens for her opinion as to which of the tickets had the majority vote?

A. No. I don't remember that part of it at all.

Mr. Langsdale: That was April 25, 1938, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: The April 26, 1938, meeting.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is 8-82, if you have them marked, Mr. Langsdale.

Miss Weyand: I am going to ask the witness to read the notes of the meeting held April 27, 1937, being Board's exhibit No. 8-1, appearing in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 4395, asking her to direct her attention particularly to page 4404.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4433] Miss Weyand: The question which was pending when we recessed on Friday was whether or not the witness attended the meeting on April 27, 1937. I was asking her to read Board's Exhibit No. 8-1, appearing in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 4395, asking her to direct her attention particularly to page 4404. Do you care to look at it further this morning?

. . . . . .

A. What was the question?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. You attended that meeting, did you? A. I did.

Q. Did you make the motion that the officers be voted on [fol. 4434] as a group?

. . . . . .

A. I don't just remember; according to that report, I did, and I suppose I did; but I don't just recall doing so.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you know the meeting was going to be held for the purpose of electing officers prior to the time you got to the meeting? A. No.

Q. You notice on page 4395, which is the first page of that minutes, that the second sentence there appearing, by Rose Todd, was, "I sincerely hope this meeting is going to be as enthusiastic as our last one was." Do you know what meeting she referred to by "our last one"?

A. I imagine it was that meeting we held where we were discussing the money to be raised for our lawyer.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4435] Q. Who presided at the meeting described there as enthusiastic? A. The one previous to this?

Q. Yes. A. I imagine Rose Todd.

Q. Do you remember who presided? A. Yes.

Q. Was it Rose Todd?

A. As I remember, it was Rose Todd.

Q. What else occurred at that meeting?

A. I don't remember.

Q. You will notice on the same page of the same minutes, that the next sentence Rose Todd begins, "As Chairman of Committee of Employees". Do you know what Committee of Employees she was speaking of?

A. Yes, I think I do.

Q. What committee is that?

A. Well, March 18 we held a meeting and appointed a committee to see about getting a lawyer.

[fol. 4436] Q. And you think that was the one?

A. I think that was it.

Q. That is your understanding of it?

A. That is my remembering.

Q. How was that committee appointed at the March 18 meeting?

A. As I remember it, different people suggested names; now, that is my recollection.

Q. Do you remember what names were suggested?

A. Rose was one, I think; Sallie Ormsby—I am not positive about that.

Q. Were those names voted on, or how were they made the committee?

A. I think they were just—a motion was made and their names suggested, and it was seconded—I am not positive.

Q. Was there anyone named who was not appointed on that committee? A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember what the size of the sum was you were going to raise at the second meeting? A. $500.

Q. How many employees attended that meeting, do you know? A. What was the question?

Q. How many employees attended that meeting?

A. I didn't count them.

Q. Was it a mass meeting of all the employees of the [fol. 4437] Donnelly Garment Company?

A. It was supposed to be.

Q. Where was it held?

A. I think on the second floor.

Q. How many employees did the company have at that time?

A. I don't know, but I think around 12 or 13 hundred.

Q. Were you raising money for anything besides the $500 for a fee for a lawyer?

A. That was the main thing.

Q. What was the other thing?

A. I didn't say there was any other thing.

Q. Well, was there? A. I don't remember.

Q. That is the only thing you remember?

A. That was the main thing that we were discussing, to raise that money.

Q. Did you expect to raise money for something other than the $500 for the lawyer?

A. I don't remember, but it stands to reason we would need other money for incidentals; I don't remember anything else was discussed.

Q. Did you contemplate that each employee would contribute his share? A. I certainly did.

Q. Then, if you had made the suggestion that each em- [fol. 4438] ployee contribute $1, you would have raised $1200, wouldn't you? A. Yes.

Q. What did you expect to do with the other $700?

A. Well, I expected we would have expenses; the lawyer certainly wouldn't go on representing us for that $500.

Q. What did you expect the lawyer to continue doing for you?

A. Watching the law and advising us what we should do and explaining the law to us that we couldn't understand.

Q. I would like to have you look at the minutes of a meeting I showed you the other day, for April 15, 1938, which is Board's Exhibit 8-75, directing your attention particularly to page 4473 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, and I would like to have you look at the names which appear at the bottom of that page and the top of page 4474 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, and tell me which of those names you recognize as persons who were instructors or thread girls in 1937 and 1938.

A. Shall I read them out as I recognize them?

Q. Yes, and state what their position was.

A. A motion was made by Fred Ellis that we elect two committees of 5 members each. I remember Fred Ellis.

Q. I want the names of the instructors and thread girls.

A. Jessie Mudd was a thread girl, I think, at that time. Nellie Biggs, Claris Martin.

[fol. 4439] Q. Was she an instructor or thread girl?

A. I don't know. I never worked under her.

Q. But she was one or the other?

A. She wasn't on my floor, so I couldn't say, but I think she was. I don't know for sure. Edna Rawlings.

Mr. Ingraham: Excuse me. Didn't she mention two names?

Mr. Langsdale: She didn't say what Nellie Biggs was.

Mr. Ingraham: You read out Nellie Biggs? A. Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you say who she was?

A. She was a thread girl. Edna Rawlings has been a thread girl, but whether she was at that time or not, I do not know. Here is Rose Todd, she wasn't in a section as a thread girl, but she had something to do about matching thread, but she isn't what an operator would call a thread girl, she didn't have anything to do with the operators. Now, on that list I have named, do you want me—

By Miss Weyand:

Q. (Interrupting) As you look back there, you did not name Rose Hendricks.

A. I did not see that name. It isn't here, or I didn't read—I was just reading the names underscored. Rose Hendricks was a thread girl in 1937, the spring of 1937. She was in 412.

Trial Examiner Batten: She was what, Mrs. Saucke?

A. In Section 412. That is all I recognize as thread girls.

[fol. 4440] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know Hilda Richmond? A. Who?

Q. Hilda Richmond; her name appears there as one of the names. A. I don't remember the name.

Q. That is the name I am referring to, the fourth line from the bottom of the page on 4473.

A. Oh, let's see, I do.

Mr. Reed: Are those the minutes of the 1938 meeting?

Miss Weyand: Yes, they are.

Mr. Reed: This is not 1937 meeting, this is 1938 meeting?

Miss Weyand: That is correct.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you start to say something about—

A. (Interrupting) There is a Hilda who was an operator, there was a year or two ago, that I know, but whether that is her last name or not, I don't know. I know many operators only by their first names.

Q. This girl appears on the pay roll for 1937 under the title of "Buying Records". A. Of what?

Q. Of "Buying Records", it is a pay roll budget arrangement. You wouldn't know that person? A. No.

Q. Do you know who Veda Hoyland was? Her name [fol. 4441] appears on the second line from the bottom on page 4473 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record. A. No.

Q. You told us, I believe, on Friday, you attended meetings regularly, of the Donnelly Union, through 1939. Is that correct? A. Pretty regularly.

Q. Were there a great many people that got up and made motions and statements whose position with the company you did not know? A. I don't think so.

Q. You think you know what position most everyone held who made a motion?

A. Not every one, but a good many.

Q. That would be especially true of those who made motions at repeated meetings, would it be?

A. Not always.

Q. And if you heard someone make a motion or a statement at five or six meetings, would you find out who she was?

A. Had she made a motion that I questioned or didn't understand, I might have whispered to the next girl and asked who she was, but I don't think I did.

Q. You didn't find out, then, who people were that got up and made statements and motions repeatedly at meetings?

Mr. Reed: Now, she hasn't said that, and it isn't shown they made them repeatedly at the meetings. That is an assumption. The witness has very candidly answered the [fol. 4442] questions.

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume the question is those whom she did not know, did she make inquiries about.

Mr. Reed: That is not the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I am changing the question, Senator.

A. I wish she would repeat it again.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, here is the question. Those whom you did not know, who regularly made motions or talks at the meetings, did you inquire as to who they were or what they did?

A. Had there been anyone I didn't know that made regular talks and motions and kept it up meeting after meeting, I certainly would have, but that never happened, to my knowledge.

Miss Weyand: I would like to have you look at the following pages on this record: first, the meeting of December 7, 1937, which is Board's Exhibit 8-50, and begin at record page 4444 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, directing your attention particularly to page 4447 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Record.

Mr. Reed: That is a meeting of what date, please?

Miss Weyand: December 7, 1937.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, you have a copy of that which you can be reading while the witness is reading.

[fol. 4443] Mr. Ingraham: I want, if necessary, to make an objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Saucke, after looking at it, and before you give an answer, permit Mr. Ingraham or Mr. Lane, or any of counsel who desires, to make an objection.

A. What page was it you called my particular attention to?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. 4447.

Mr. Ingraham: Better read all that exhibit.

A. Yes, I am going to.

Mr. Langsdale: What exhibit is it?

Miss Weyand: It is Board's Exhibit 8-50, that is where it begins.

[fol. 4444] By Miss Weyand:

Q. You have read those minutes, have you, Mrs. Saucke?

A. I have.

Q. Do your remember attending that meeting?

(No answer.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Unless there is an objection, Mrs. Saucke, you may answer.

The Witness: I didn't understand you.

Trial Examiner Batten: I say, there is apparently no objection, so you may answer.

The Witness: What year was that?

Miss Weyand: December 7, 1937. Examine the minutes as much as you want to, to determine whether you recollect being present at that meeting.

A. I remember the first part of this meeting but I don't remember the latter part.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How far do you remember?

A. Well, I remember about stating that the bill might be 35 hundred or 4 thousand. I remember her saying that.

Q. That is Rose Todd's statement on page 4445 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record?

A. Yes.

Q. How much further do you remember?

Mr. Reed: The question was, whether she remembered being at the meeting.

[fol. 4445] Miss Weyand: Correct. And she said she remembered being at part of the meeting, and I wondered how much she remembered.

A. I remembered that much, and it's possible that I got up and left the meeting before it was over. Sometimes I did that, if it was necessary to get home sooner.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. You do not recall hearing Stella Willis make the suggestion which appears at Circuit Court of Appeals record page 4447?

A. No, I do not.

Q. You do not know who Stella Willis is?

A. Yes, I do know who she is, and I could have described her looks to you the other day, after you told me what she did. I knew her by face, but I didn't recognize the name.

Q. Was she quite active at meetings in getting up and making suggestions and motions?

A. I can't say she was.

Q. She would get up about every other meeting and make a statement of some sort.

A. I wouldn't say that.

Q. What is her position now, since you remember who Stella Willis is?

A. She has something to do with the buttonhole and button section downstairs. I don't even know what floor it is on.

Q. Do you know at this time she was the highest paid instructor the company had, making over $200 a month?

[fol. 4446] A. I never inquired as to the salary of my instructors or any other instructor. I didn't know how much they made.

Q. Do you know how long Stella Willis had been with the company as an instructor?

A. I do not.

Q. You just knew she had something to do with the button and buttonhole section; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. I want to direct your attention to Board's exhibit 8-69, being the minutes for March 8, 1938, which begins at page 4463 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, directing your attention particularly to page 4467 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record.

A. 4467?

Q. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, that is the one you previously read, Mrs. Saucke. I presume you recognize that.

The Witness: Yes, I recognize the date of it.

(Thereupon the specified portion of Board's exhibit 8-69 was read by the witness.)

The Witness: What was your question?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you attend that meeting?

A. I think I did.

Q. Do you recall Stella Willis getting up and making the suggestion which appears in the minutes at page 4467 [fol. 4447] of the Circuit Court of Appeals record?

A. I don't just recall that.

Q. Will you look at the minutes of the meeting of April 26, 1938, being Board's exhibit 8-82, beginning at page 4476 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, directing your attention particularly to pages 4477 and 4481?

Mr. Reed: What is the date of this meeting?

Miss Weyand: April 26, 1938.

Trial Examiner Batten: I believe that is the one you read Friday, is it not, Mrs. Saucke?

Miss Weyand: Yes, she examined that Friday, but I would like for her to examine it further.

Trial Examiner Batten: I have no objection to her taking all of the time she wants.

Mr. Reed: Will you please read me the pending question?

Miss Weyand: I just asked her to examine—

Mr. Reed: I am asking the reporter to please read the pending question. I didn't understand you.

Miss Weyand: I just asked her to examine the minutes of that date. I will state a question first, if you prefer.

Mr. Reed: No. I just wanted it straight for the record.

(Thereupon the specified portion of Board's exhibit 8-82 was read by the witness.)

The Witness: Now, what was your question?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Were you present at that meeting?

[fol. 4448] A. I was.

Q. Do you remember Stella Willis making the suggestion which is recorded on page 4477?

Mr. Reed: That is the sentence, if I understand this—:

"Stella Willis: I think it would be very nice and it wouldn't take very long."

Miss Weyand: Yes.

A. No, I do not.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Directing your attention now to page 4481, do you now recall her having stated her opinion as to which ticket won?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Will you please look at the minutes of the meeting of January 16, 1939, being Board's exhibit 8-138, which starts in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 4532, directing your attention particularly to pages 4536 and 4537?

A. Now, what were the numbers you directed my attention to?

Q. 4536 and 4537.

(Thereupon the specified portion of Board's exhibit 8-138 was read by the witness.)

A. I have read it.

Q. Do you recall attending that meeting?

A. I think I was there.

Q. Do you remember Stella Willis making the suggestions which appear on 4536 and 4537?

[fol. 4449] A. I remember there were suggestions like that made, but I don't remember who made them.

Q. Will you please look at the minutes of the meeting of February 10, 1939, being Board's exhibit 8-145, which begins at page 4538 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, directing your attention particularly to page 4541 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record?

Trial Examiner Batten: 4539?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

Mr. Reed: What is the date of the meeting?

Miss Weyand: February 10, 1939.

Mr. Ingraham: It is February 7.

Miss Weyand: That may be correct.

Mr. Langsdale: It is February 10 here (indicating). Written up on February 10, I guess.

Miss Weyand: Yes. February 7 is the date. And it should be the meeting of January 10 before— The meeting which I described as a meeting of January 16, 1939, the minutes were written up on January 16, 1939, but the meeting occurred on January 10.

Trial Examiner Batten: This is 8-145?

Miss Weyand: I was speaking of the preceding exhibit.

Now, coming to Board's exhibit 8-145, that is the minutes of the meeting of February 7, 1939, which were written up on February 10, 1939.

[fol. 4450] Trial Examiner Batten: The one you want the witness to look at is 8-145?

Miss Weyand: That is correct. I have mentioned the dates on which the minutes were written up rather than the date on which the meeting occurred. I have been correct all of the way through on the Board's exhibit number.

(Thereupon the specified portion of Board's exhibit No. 8-145 was read by the witness.)

[fol. 4451] Q. Do you recall what—had you finished?

A. Yes:

Q. Do you recall attending that meeting?

A. I think I do.

Q. Do you recall that Stella Willis asked the question which appears on page 4541?

A. I can't say that I remember that.

Q. Does reading over this series of minutes refresh your recollection that Stella Willis was present at most of the meetings and usually got up and said something?

A. Well, it is there in black and white that she did.

Q. Do you recall now?

A. I wasn't paying much attention as to who—how many times any one person got up. We were free to get up and say what we pleased at any time.

Q. And you did not regard Stella Willis as a person who had a very high salary and who had been in a supervisory position with the company for a very long time?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4453] A. I didn't know her salary but now you have told me, I don't consider it as a very big salary; we operators make that much during rush time, but I don't consider that an extra high salary.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. And as regards her occupying a supervisory position?

A. I don't know that she ever held a supervisory position. She is connected in that section in some way; I never was on the floor in that section where she works.

Q. You never investigated the exact status of those persons who got up in those meetings and made suggestions?

A. No. She was an employee of the company in a white uniform. She was one of us.

Q. Did Rose Todd wear a uniform in 1937 and 1938?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Did you notice at the time of the nominations, April 5th, 1938, which is the nomination which you identified five persons who participated in the nomination as thread girls; did you notice that five thread girls got up and participated in that nomination at the time?

Mr. Reed: What meeting is that?

Miss Weyand: April 5, 1938.

Mr. Reed: That is the one the witness was examined about a minute ago?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

[fol. 4454] Mr. Reed: And said she didn't know?

Trial Examiner Batten: That is the one where she identified certain people listed in the minutes, Senator.

Miss Weyand: I will be glad to have her look at these minutes again, if it will help her to answer the question.

Miss Weyand: Those were the minutes introduced as Board's Exhibit 8-75, and the nomination to which I refer appears as pages 4473 and 4474 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record. The question is whether, at the time it occurred, you noticed there were five thread girls in succession got up and either made or seconded nominations.

Mr. Reed: That is assuming they were thread girls.

Miss Weyand: She has already testified they were.

Mr. Reed: Five?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

Mr. Reed: I didn't hear her. All right.

A. Now, what was your question?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you at the time the meeting occurred notice that five thread girls got up in succession and either nominated or seconded nominations?

A. I never considered it in that way. I never noticed it. It wouldn't have made any difference if I had. They were all employees; I expect they had the same fear of being beat up as we did, by the International.

Q. Do you know anything about the way it happened [fol. 4455] at this election? A. What year?

Q. 1938, that the two tickets brought in each had Rose Todd for president on each ticket, Jack McConaughey for treasurer on each ticket, and Margaret Green for secretary on each ticket?

Mr. Reed: I object to that as immaterial; whether the witness noticed it, or didn't notice it, is purely immaterial in this case.

Miss Weyand: She was a candidate on one of the tickets for vice president, and I think she would be a good person to explain.

Mr. Ingraham: I didn't know there was a vice presidential candidate.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you know anything about it?

A. I had nothing to do in making up those tickets, didn't know who was on those tickets until they were placed on the board in front of me.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. And you didn't later learn how that happened?

A. I didn't even inquire.

Q. You don't to this day know how that happened?

A. You mean how those names—

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting), She has already said she was not present, that she didn't know how the lists were [fol. 4456] made up. Now she is asked if she didn't know how that happened; I object to it.

Miss Weyand: She indicated at that time—

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is whether she ever found out it occurred.

Mr. Reed: Then it would be hearsay.

Mr. Langsdale: That is not a question from the testimony in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you ever find out, Mrs. Saucke?

A. I never tried to find out.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Then, you didn't find out? A. I didn't ask.

Q. Then, if you didn't ask, you didn't find out, did you? A. No, I guess I didn't.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. No one ever told you? A. Told me what?

Q. How it happened? A. How what happened?

Q. That the same officers, with the exception of your name for vice president, appeared on each of the two tickets? A. Nobody told me, because I didn't ask.

Q. Are you aware that the same thing happened the next year, that the president on each ticket was the same, and the treasurer on each ticket was the same, and the sec-[fol. 4457] retary on each ticket was the same, the only difference was in the name of the vice president?

A. Yes, I am aware of that.

Q. Do you know how it happened that that was true the next year?

A. Well, now, this was 1939 you are talking about, isn't it?

A. 1939 would have been the next year.

A. 1938?

Q. 1938 was the year you ran for vice president and the tickets were the same, and in April, 1939, the same thing happened again. It is 1939 I am asking you about now.

A. I am not aware why it was, unless everybody seemed to be perfectly satisfied with the way Rose Todd was conducting our union. I know I was.

Q. Do you know why they nominated two nominating tickets if they were entirely satisfied?

Mr. Reed: Give us the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question, please.

(Last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Restate your question.

Miss Weyand: Do you know why, if they were entirely satisfied with Rose Todd and the other officers, the union selected two nominating committees and directed they bring in two tickets?

[fol. 4458] Mr. Lane: I object to the question for the reason it deals entirely in the realm of speculation.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, she is asking this witness if she knows why.

Mr. Lane: Well, that is speculative and it is immaterial in any event.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us, if you know.

A. Well, as I remember it, we had these two committees to form two lists for these elections, in case the majority of the operators, the employees, wanted a change, they had a right to go to those committees that was on their floor and representing them, and tell them that they would like a change. Well, everybody, to my knowledge, wanted to keep Rose Todd, and whatever officers, the main ones; they understood our union, they had been with it when it first started, they understood it better than I would, and why not keep her? She was successful. We had those two groups to choose those two lists, to give the employees a chance to make a change if they so wished.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Were the instructors present at the meeting of April 27, 1937? A. I believe they were.

Q. Do you remember seeing any of the instructors present at that meeting?

A. No, I do not, so I say I just think they were there, I [fol. 4459] think we all went down; but I am not positive.

Q. Did some of the girls wear their uniforms to that meeting or only part of them?

A. Everybody that was around me had their uniforms on; there were some that were dressed.

Q. Returning now to the Sylvia Hull incident on the morning of April 23, 1937, did you tell Sylvia Hull she would have to leave before you would go to work?

A. I don't believe that I directed it to her.

Q. Do you remember making that statement?

A. I remember saying that I couldn't work while she was sitting over there among us.

Q. Whom did you make that statement to?

A. I think I made that to Ethel Riegel and Christine Eretz, I believe. I am pretty sure I did.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4460] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Still referring to the same incident pertaining to Sylvia Hull, did you hear any other girl tell Sylvia Hull that she could not work until Sylvia Hull left?

A. Repeat that, please.

Q. Did you hear any other girl tell Sylvia Hull that she, the other girl, could not work until Sylvia Hull left?

A. That was the general talk, that they couldn't work until she left.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you hear any other girl say that to Sylvia Hull?

A. Yes. That was the talk between us.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did they direct any such remarks to Sylvia Hull? [fol. 4461] A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how many girls went to Sylvia Hull and expressed that idea to her? A. Several.

Q. Did girls come from other floors of the plant to the eighth floor to speak or to look at Sylvia Hull?

A. I couldn't say.

Q. Did girls from your floor go down to the sixth floor to see Fern Sigler?

A. I didn't. I don't know about the rest.

Q. How did you happen to go to the seventh floor to ask Mrs. Hyde if you could go to the sixth floor?

A. When Sylvia got up to leave her machine I followed right behind her—three or four feet behind her, to see where she went. That's how I come to go to the seventh floor.

Q. How did you know there was a girl on the sixth floor wearing a pin?

A. It was generally discussed up there that there was another one just like Sylvia's.

Q. How did you come to ask Mrs. Hyde if you could go to the sixth floor.

A. I didn't ask her. I said I was going.

Q. What songs did the girls sing?

A. The only one I remember was, "Hail, hail, the gang's all here."

[fol. 4462] Q. Did Sylvia Hull try to keep on working while the girls were gathered around her?

A. A little while.

Q. Was the power shut off so Sylvia Hull could not continue working?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you lose pay for the time you spent at Sylvia Hull's machine?

A. I certainly did.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4466] Cross-Examination
(By Mr. Langsdale)

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. How close were you to Sylvia Hull on the 23rd of April when this demonstration occurred?

A. Well, I believe our table would be about the width of this (indicating). She sat on the south side and most of the time I was on this aisle (indicating); I imagine that's about 4 feet.

Q. Did you demand that Sylvia Hull turn over her Loyalty League pin?

A. I was one that said something about it.

Q. Why?

A. I didn't feel she was a fit person to wear it.

Q. Why?

A. For the stand she had taken against our company.

Q. What stand?

A. Putting herself up as an appointed representative of our employees to represent us at the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, at the convention at Atlantic City.

Q. What did you think that had to do with the Loyalty League pin?

A. Well, it had a lot, in my estimation.

Q. Well, what?

A. I felt that she was very disloyal to we operators.

Q. And you didn't think she had any right to belong to [fol. 4467] the Loyalty League and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' at the same time; was that it?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Now, were you one of those who demanded that she make a speech?

A. No. To my recollection, I don't remember that.

Q. Did you hear anyone demand that she make a speech?

A. If I remember right, there was someone asked her to get up and explain her actions. I couldn't say who did it, though.

Q. Did she give her Loyalty League pin to you?

A. She laid it on the table.

Q. And what was said about it by her, by you, or anyone else that you heard?

A. When someone demanded it she said she paid 35 cents for it, and I said—someone said—I don't know who said—"Give her her money."

Q. Did they do that?

A. Someone did.

Q. How did they tender it to her, if you know?

A. Just handed it across the table to her.

Q. Wrapped up?

A. I don't remember.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4470] Q. You said something about the meeting of March 30—the time hasn't been fixed definitely, but some people said it was March 30—at which a motion was made for everybody to contribute 50 cents to Mr. Tyler's fee. Who made that motion; do you know?

A. Since reading these reports, I see that motion was made more than once. I hadn't remembered it.

Q. Could you be mistaken about that motion being made at all at any meeting after March 18 and before the organization—.

A. I made a motion at the meeting following March 18 to raise money. I couldn't say I made the motion; I suggested we take up a dollar collection. And then the motion was made—I don't know whether I made it or someone else made it—to cut it to 50 cents for each person to contribute.

Q. Did you give 50 cents on that occasion, at the meeting after March 18?

A. I did.

Q. To whom did you give that money?

A. Some girl in our section.

Q. What girl?

A. I said "some girl." I don't recall her name.

Q. How did you happen to pick on the girl to give it to as the one to give it to?

[fol. 4471] A. I don't know, unless it was just someone who was capable of going ahead.

Q. Just one of these spontaneous sort of girls?

A. Well, in an organization you will have people who are more capable than others.

Q. Who was the capable girl you gave the money to in your section?

A. I said I didn't remember.

Q. Was she also the Loyalty League representative in your section?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you know whether she was or not?

A. I do not.

Q. Where was she when you gave her your 50 cents?

A. In the section.

Q. The next day?

A. The next day.

Q. You didn't contribute any money, then, that night, the night of the meeting?

A. I didn't. Some did, but I did not.

Q. Did Rose Todd say that you could give the 50 cents to your representative the next day?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Do you say she didn't say that?

A. I don't remember hearing it.

[fol. 4472] Q. Did you have anyone who was described as the representative except a representative of the Loyalty League at that time?

Mr. Reed: She hasn't said it was a representative of the Loyalty League she was giving this money to.

Mr. Langsdale: I am asking the question, Senator.

Mr. Reed: I am objecting because it is a misquotation of the evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is quoting the evidence. The question is, was there anyone in the section as a representative other than a representative of the Loyalty League?

Mr. Reed: What date is this?

Mr. Langsdale: This is that meeting that they say was held the latter part of March, 1937.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, will you answer the question?

A. I don't remember that we had any other representative, because our union was not formed at that time.

Q. No. But you did have an officer in your section, of the Loyalty League, known as the representative, didn't you?

A. I presume we did.

Q. Do you know who the representative in your section [fol. 4473] was at the time you say you had this meeting to collect the money?

A. I do not.

Q. Did the same girl collect money from others in your section?

A. I don't think this girl I paid to, whoever she was, collected the money. We just went down to the end of the section and were just giving our money over.

Q. Why did you go down to her?

A. Well, whoever it was, someone just started her taking the money.

Q. So you all just spontaneously went down to the same girl?

A. We were glad to.

[fol. 4474] Q. What did Rose Todd say on the night of the 30th of March, or whenever it was, about the $500 for Mr. Tyler?

A. I don't get the meaning of your question.

Q. Well, do you remember what she said about needing $500 to pay Mr. Tyler?

A. Well, she said that that was what it would take; we [fol. 4475] had to raise that much money as a retaining fee.

Q. Where did she say she got that information?

A. What?

Q. Where did she say she got the information?

A. Where did she get it?

Q. Yes.

A. I couldn't say.

Q. When did she say Mr. Tyler wanted his money?

A. Well, I don't just remember, but I took it that we had to have that money before he would be bothered looking up the law and take our case.

Q. So Rose Todd told you, to get the money for Mr. Tyler, you would have to take up some money that night to raise $500, or make arrangements to take it up; is that right?

A. No. The meeting was open for suggestions. We had to have the money right away, because the quicker we got our lawyer, the quicker we could get to doing something to protect ourselves from this violence that was going on and that we were being threatened with, and we talked about how we could raise the money and we came to the conclusion to raise 50 cents each. Some of the girls threw the money upon the platform. And as I remember, it was said—I don't know whether she said it but I think she did—that we could pay it the next day, bring it down to her.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4476] Q. Did Rose Todd mention any other method she had of getting the $500?

A. No, to my recollection she didn't.

Q. She said it had to be raised among you girls or Mr. Tyler couldn't be paid; is that it?

A. I don't say it was just in those words, but that was the general supposition, that he wanted $500 before he would start.

Q. And you didn't learn of any other method she had of getting the money, on that night?

A. We thought that was the quickest and easiest.

Q. Did you learn of any other method she had?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you learn that that very day, before that meeting, she had been to the First National Bank and borrowed $1,000 in the name of the Loyalty League to pay Mr. Tyler?

A. I don't know about that.

Q. Rose Todd didn't tell you at that meeting at which you say you raised 50 cents per person that she already had the money in the bank?

A. I don't remember.

[fol. 4478] Did Rose Todd or anyone else tell you they paid Mr. Tyler $500 to organize a union, to write up the working agreement?

A. Will you state that question again?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed: I object to that as calling for hearsay evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. I don't remember.

Mr. Langsdale: You mean she didn't tell you that, or [fol. 4479] you just don't remember?

A. I don't remember that she told us.

[fol. 4480] Mr. Langsdale: Let me ask you if you ever heard of this question and answer given by Rose Todd at that meeting:

"Question: I understand people are saying we paid Mr. Tyler $500 to organize our union."

and Rose Todd answered: "As you know, and as we have explained quite thoroughly, we paid Mr. Tyler $500 retainer fee, he helped us write up our by-laws and working agreement and advises and helps when we need it."

Did you hear that in that meeting?

[fol. 4481] A. It was generally discussed that our lawyer had been paid.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. $500 for writing up the by-laws?

A. As a retainer fee.

Q. And writing up the agreement and the by-laws?

A. I couldn't say that was what he was paid for, he was paid to represent us, and let us proceed the way we wanted to do.

Q. When did you think he had been paid some money?

A. I couldn't say, but evidently I thought he was paid [fol. 4482] or he wouldn't have come down.

Q. Did you think the 50¢ you gave him on March 30 was to be given him, as Miss Todd said, $500?

A. That is the way I understood it.

Q. And you understood that from what occurred at a meeting about March 30, the first meeting after March 18?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4484] Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Saucke did you understand the question, or do you want it read again.

Mr. Reed: I submit no one can understand it.

A. I didn't.

Trial Examiner Batten: Would you like to have it read?

A. I would.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4486] A. I think I answered that that was rather mixed up, it seemed to me, it is not clear.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you mean by that you don't understand it clearly?

Mr. Langsdale: May I withdraw it and approach it in a different way?

Trial Examiner Batten: You may restate it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You testified sometime near March 30 that you, with other employees, voted to raise the sum of $500 by contributing 50¢ each, did you not? A. I did.

Q. Were you told there that $500 was to be spent for a lawyer for drawing up a contract and by-laws, the night you raised it? A. As I remember, we were not.

Q. What were you told?

A. As a retainer fee for our lawyer.

Q. And what was he to do? A. Represent us.

Q. Now, I'll ask you if Miss Todd explained at the meeting of March 30, or anyone else explained at the meeting of March 30, or the meeting you talked about as being the first meeting after March 18, that the money was to be spent this way: "As you know and as we have explained quite thoroughly, we paid Mr. Tyler $500 retainer fee; he [fol. 4487] helped us write up our by-laws and working agreement, and will advise us and help us when we need it"? A. Now, what was your question to that?

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, that is objectionable, because it refers to by-laws that didn't exist on March 30th, it couldn't possibly have happened.

Trial Examiner Batten: The only question, it seems to me, is whether Rose Todd at the meeting at which they raised the money, whether she had explained it was to be paid as an attorney fee for drawing up the by-laws and working agreement. Now, that is the question.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did she?

A. To my recollection, I didn't hear it.

Q. Did she tell you what Mr. Tyler was to do for the $500?

Mr. Reed: I submit that has been answered a half a dozen times. The witness said Mr. Tyler was to represent them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Was there anything further said by Rose Todd, except that Mr. Tyler was to represent you? A. That is all I can remember.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did anyone else say what he was to do in representing you? A. When?

[fol. 4488] Q. At the meeting when you voted the 50¢?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you ever learn from Rose Todd that she had paid $500 retainer fee, and for that $500 he had written up the by-laws and working agreement?

A. I did not. State that question again.

Mr. Ingraham: She answered it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, did you ever learn from Miss Todd or the treasurer or from anyone else what Mr. Tyler did for the $500?

A. As I understood it, it was his retainer fee, that he took that money in payment, that he would represent us and see what could be done.

Q. Whom do you mean, "us"? A. We employees.

Q. And you learned he had been paid $500 for—

A. (Interrupting) With his presence coming there I supposed he had received it.

Q. When he came where?

A. To the factory, to our first meeting that he spoke, the day we organized our union.

Q. Now then, I understand you to say, then, that when he came to the meeting of April 27 and organized your union, you assumed he had been paid the $500 or he wouldn't be there? A. I did.

[fol. 4489] Q. To whom did you talk before you took the witness stand about a meeting of March 18 at which a committee was appointed to visit attorneys?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that.

Mr. Langsdale: I'll reframe the question. I withdraw the question as you have it, and will restate it.

Mr. Langsdale: To whom did you talk, if anybody, about a motion at the meeting of March 18, creating a committee of three to call on attorneys, before you took the witness stand in this trial?

A. Nobody that I know of.

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that as immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she said nobody.

Mr. Langsdale: You didn't talk to anybody?

A. Not that I remember of.

Q. Before you took the witness stand, did you talk to any counsel here about what your testimony was going to be?

Mr. Ingraham: I make the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may state whether you did or not.

A. Well, may I have the question just before this last one? Read that again. I am not quite clear on it.

(Question asked for was read by the reporter.)

A. Nobody.

Mr. Langsdale: Didn't you talk to any of the attorneys?

[fol. 4490] A. You had a question just following that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, read the next question, please.

(Question asked for was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, I submit after reading his question it is not understandable, did she at March 18th or preceding that meeting talk about any such a motion, or has she since that time talked about a motion having been made. I can't understand the question.

Mr. Langsdale: You haven't been listening, then. The question was, did she talk about anyone having made such a motion on March 18th, at that meeting, before she took the witness stand in this trial.

Mr. Lane: All right.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, she said nobody.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, I am asking you if you talked to any of the attorneys.

A. Now, this next question, please.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, did you talk to any of the attorneys.

Mr. Langsdale: About that matter.

Mr. Stottle: Is that confined to a time prior to July 15, 1939.

Trial Examiner Batten: Would you consider it objec-[fol. 4491] tionable if it was subsequent, on a question of this kind?

Mr. Stottle: I thought Your Honor was ruling out everything.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am asking you, would you consider it objectionable to ask the witness whether she talked to an attorney about this matter without any reference as to time? Would you consider it objectionable in the light of my ruling?

Mr. Stottle: I would, if you are ruling out everything after July 15th, 1939.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I wouldn't on a question of this kind, if the question is the type of question I consider it to be.

A. Repeat the question, now, again.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you talk to any attorneys about the matters you are testifying about here, that is, the meeting of March 18th, prior to getting on the stand?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You were here the day this hearing opened, were you not, Mrs. Saucke?

A. I don't know whether it was the day it opened or not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Which day do you consider it opened, Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: The day Mrs. Reed commenced to testify.

A. I don't know whether it was the first of her testi-[fol. 4492] mony when I came in or not.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, you heard her testify, at least in part, didn't you?

A. I did.

Q. Did you attend this trial every day it has been held since you first appeared here?

A. No.

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that line of questioning, it is immaterial to any issue in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, in view of my ruling refusing to exclude them, I don't think we need to spend any time on it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, you heard Mrs. Reed's testimony, a part of it, didn't you?

A. I couldn't hear three-fourths of what she said.

Q. You did hear some of it?

A. A little of it.

Q. Now, what I am trying to ask you, is whether or not, since this trial started, you have talked to your attorneys about what your testimony was going to be.

Mr. Reed: She hasn't got any attorneys.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, have you talked to the husband of the president of the company since this trial started?

A. Not about this trial.

Q. Did you talk to him about other matters?

[fol. 4493] A. Well, this morning I mentioned the weather.

Q. Have you talked to Mr. Ingraham about what your testimony was going to be in this trial?

A. I couldn't put it just that way. I talked to Mr. Ingraham.

Q. Well, did he ask you about anything that occurred down there at the Donnelly plant during March and April of '37?

A. He asked me what I could remember.

Q. And you told him?

A. I told him all I could remember.

Q. Now then, did you tell him about this motion that you say was passed in the March 18 meeting, creating a committee to call on the attorneys?

A. What was that?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Last question was read by the reporter.)

A. I don't remember.

Trial Examiner Batten: I might say I hope all the witnesses talked to their attorneys before they testify. It might expedite this hearing.

Mr. Langsdale: Of course she should, and she has a perfect right to.

Trial Examiner Batten: I understand. Mr. Langsdale, I made that remark with the thought it would help the hearing.

[fol. 4494] Mr. Ingraham: I would have asked the witnesses about the newspaper articles and showed them the photostatic copies, but in view of Mr. Langsdale's remarks the other day, I just let the witness take the stand, and showed the exhibits in the case.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. These exhibits you had, when they were handed to you by Mr. Ingraham, did you have any of those in your scrap book?

A. I don't believe I have. You can check those this afternoon, when I bring my book.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, I'll say now, if you want to have any other witnesses that you intend to call, to look at those before they do take the stand, I'll appreciate it, and certainly I'll indicate in the record clearly that it is proper for you to do so.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, it was the typical objection Mr. Langsdale has made in this case, so I would rather let the witness take the stand and read the exhibit.

Trial Examiner Batten: Very well. It is entirely proper for you to have them go over those.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, there will be no objection from me, and I told Mr. Ingraham this morning if he wants to conduct a school, and say, "Have you all read them," I will not even open my mouth.

Mr. Ingraham: I wouldn't have to conduct a school.

[fol. 4495] Mr. Langsdale: I didn't mean there was anything improper here. I meant to let them all read the articles.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Had you ever heard of Mr. Gossett and Mr. Tyler, before Mr. Tyler appeared at the meeting on April 27, 1937?

A. I don't believe I had.

Q. Now, you said that you personally saw some violence at these three places, at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes factories, did you not, in your testimony?

A. I did.

Q. Where were those factories located?

A. At 26th and Grand.

Q. And how did you happen to see this violence?

A. Coming on the street car down the Main Street cut, you look down that 27th Street cut, that is where the trouble was, the front of the building. The papers stated most of the trouble was in the back of the building, it was bad enough in front.

Q. What did you see in front?

A. Milling around and fighting, and I saw the police wagon.

Q. And you are telling the Examiner you saw milling and fighting out in front of that building?

A. I did.

Q. Coming down on the street car?

A. I did.

[fol. 4496] Q. You didn't ride the buses then, did you?

A. Well, maybe it was a bus at that time; I was in a car or bus, coming to work down Main.

Q. I mean, did the Donnelly Garment Company provide buses for some of the employees to come to the factory in the mornings while these strikes were going on?

A. They did.

Q. And did you ride in any bus so provided by the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I did.

Q. Now, was that while you were on those buses that you passed the scene of this strike?

A. I think I was on a street car.

Q. Well, you said you saw them every day?

A. No, I didn't say every day.

Q. Well, how many days did you see the things you claimed to have seen?

A. I don't remember how many days.

Q. Was it more than one?

A. Yes.

Q. How many days did you ride in a bus provided by the company?

A. About six weeks.

Q. And did they drive right along where you could see these fights?

[fol. 4497] A. I am not positive, but I think I was on a street car when I saw it.

Q. When you say you go down the Main Street cut, you mean you went down Main Street to the Union Station?

A. I got on the bus at 31st and Main, rode right down Main Street past the Union Station.

Q. Where were these strikes going on?

A. On that 27th Street cut in front of this building.

Q. How far was that from the street car tracks?

A. Oh, I expect about a half of a small block. Those blocks aren't true blocks in there, but they are cut in angles, if I remember right.

Q. Do you know where the Gordon-Gernes building was at that time?

A. I think I do.

Q. Where?

A. Well, the address, I think, gives it 26 something Grand.

Q. Yes. Now then, you were going down Main Street, weren't you?

A. I was.

Q. Between Main and Grand is another street, Walnut, isn't it?

A. It isn't cut through.

Q. But Grand is 300 — or 200 east of Main, isn't it?

A. First is Main, then Walnut, then Grand. Walnut [fol. 4498] isn't cut through out there, it comes on an angle, those streets aren't straight.

Q. How far would you say the Gernes Building was from the street car tracks?

A. I couldn't say in feet, but I was close enough to see what was going on.

Q. You don't mean it was half a block away, do you?

A. As I said, those blocks there are cut in angles, they are not true blocks, and Walnut isn't cut through there. If I remember right, they are peculiar, those streets, even Main doesn't run straight.

Q. Isn't there a building on the corner of 27th and Main — 26th and Main, on the southwest corner?

A. The southwest corner on Main?

Q. The southeast corner.

A. Yes, there is a building there.

Q. Well, you didn't see through that building, did you, as you rode along on the street car?

A. No. I seen right down that street.

Q. You had to get past that building before you could see down that street?

A. Here (indicating) comes Main Street; right here is an automobile building (indicating), I had to look past that; right here (indicating) is the front entrance, if I remember right, of those garment workers' building, and [fol. 4499] there is where this trouble was, and I was told it wasn't anything to what was going on at the back.

Q. What route did the buses, the Donnelly Garment Company provided for your transportation, take downtown?

A. I got on it at 31st and Main, rode right down Main Street to 19th and Main, then we turned on Walnut into our alley.

Q. Then you took the same route the street car takes, didn't you?

A. There are two street cars there, one goes down past that Gordon building where the garment companies are.

Q. One went down through the cut on Main Street?

A. That's right.

Q. The other street car goes around northeast and goes down Grand Avenue? A. It does.

Q. Is that the route you took in the street car?

A. I said we come down to 19th and Main.

Q. Then, you had an opportunity to see this trouble from the bus, the same as you would from the street car?

A. That's right.

Q. And did the bus stop long enough to let you see what was going on over there?

A. It never did when I was on it, so I think yet I was on the street car when it happened.

Q. How many times did you see it?

A. I couldn't say definitely.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4515] MARY WARTH, a witness called by and on behalf of the Respondent, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Mary Warth.

Q. Where do you reside?

A. At 126 West 82nd Terrace, in Jackson County, Missouri.

Q. Where are you employed?

A. At the Donnelly Garment Company, 1828 Walnut Street.

Mr. Langsdale: I am sorry, what is her name?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4516] A. W-a-r-t-h (Spelling).

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. How long have you been employed at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I went there on the first day of April, 1935.

Q. In what capacity are you employed?

A. I am a machine operator.

Q. Do you do any special kind of work, on special machines?

A. Yes, I have worked mostly on special machines.

Q. What kind of machines?

A. Hemstitching, double stitching, air line tucking, scalloping, I don't remember the others.

Q. You were employed at the Donnelly plant during the months of March and April, 1937? A. I was.

Q. Are you a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. Yes, I am a charter member.

Q. What do you mean, "charter member"?

A. Well, I was there at the organization of the union.

Q. Do you recall when that occurred?

A. On April 27th, 1937.

Q. Do you recall where that meeting took place?

A. Well, it was either on the second or third floor of [fol. 4517] the building, I couldn't be sure which; they were both unoccupied at that time, and I don't remember which floor it was on.

Q. Do you remember the time of day that the meeting occurred?

A. It was after working hours in the afternoon.

Q. Did anybody representing the management ask you to attend that meeting? A. No, they didn't.

Q. Had any officer, executive, or anyone representing the management ever discussed with you the holding of such a meeting? A. No.

Q. How did you happen to go to the meeting?

A. Well, there was some girl in the section, we had been talking about it, naturally, for several days, some girl in the section said we were going to have a meeting after working hours that evening, to decide what should be done about protecting ourselves against the violence that was going on at some of the other garment factories at that time.

Q. Now, what had been going on at the plants you referred to?

A. Well, they were having a strike out there, and quite a lot of violence.

Q. Had you personally seen any violence?

[fol. 4518] A. Yes, I had.

Q. What did you see?

A. Well, at that time I was riding the Main Street cars, and I came by there every morning on my way to work on Main Street, on the Country Club car, and I saw the fighting, hair pulling, kicking and so on, and I knew a girl personally who was in it, and she had told me she had the sleeve of her coat torn out one morning going to work. She wore her hair tightly wrapped around, with a little beret to keep from having it pulled out.

Q. What effect did that violence at that strike have upon you?

A. Well, I was just about afraid to try to go to work or go home.

Q. Was there a general discussion at the plant of the violence that was going on at this strike?

A. Well, I think that was just about the only thing that was talked about in those days amongst the operators.

Q. So far as you could observe, what was the effect upon the operators and other employees, of that violence?

A. Well, they were all afraid of bodily harm, I think; and a great many of them were really afraid to come to work.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute. Will you try to keep your voice up, so everyone here can hear you, please?

A. I'll try to.

[fol. 4519] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What do you mean by your last answer, that they were afraid of bodily harm?

A. Well, we had read in the paper a lot about the violence at the other plants, and how they had had their clothes torn and hair pulled, and we naturally didn't want that to happen to us.

Q. Will you state whether or not—or state why you thought that might happen to you?

A. Well, we had heard by word of mouth and also had read in the paper, where we were really the main objective in their trying to organize the garment workers in Kansas City, and that these other factories were merely a stepping-stone to get to us, to increase their membership to the extent they thought they could organize the Donnelly plant.

Q. State whether or not any threats had been made against the Donnelly employees.

A. Yes, we heard there had been, and this girl that I knew told us that they were going to try to organize us after they had organized those other places, and after they had been organized she told us she hoped we would never be foolish enough to sign up with them; that was after she had become a member herself, not through her own choice, but she had to, to hold her job.

Q. You said that there had been articles in the papers about the strikes at the other plants. I'll hand you Re- [fol. 4520] spondent's Exhibit 16, and ask you if you recall seeing the pictures that appeared in the edition of the Kansas City Times for March 18, 1937.

A. Yes, I remember seeing those pictures.

Q. I hand you Respondent's Exhibit 18, and ask you if you recall reading the article that appeared in the Kansas City Journal-Post for March 17, 1937, entitled "Kansas City Garment Union Crews Sit in Lobby"?

A. I don't think I read that article; we didn't subscribe to the Journal-Post, and I didn't read all the articles that were in those papers.

Q. Do you recall whether or not other employees at the plant had these articles, and they were generally discussed?

A. Yes, they were; I read some of them, but I didn't read them all.

Q. I will hand you Respondent's Exhibit 27 and ask you if you recall reading the article that appeared in the Kansas City Star on March 17, 1937, entitled "Sitters Block a Door".

* * * * * *

{fol. 4522} A. I remember it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What effect did that article have on you and on other employees, so far as you could observe?

A. Well, of course, we were all very much upset about the reading of the article, because we were afraid that the same indignities would be practiced on us. No one contemplates with any very great joy having their clothes torn from them on the street and their hair pulled.

Q. State whether or not about that time any action was taken by the employees.

A. Yes. We had talked for a day or two very seriously about what could be done in respect to something to protect ourselves, and on, I believe it was the day following that article, there was a mass meeting called of the employees in the building.

Q. This article is dated March 17. Was the mass meeting the following day, on the 18th?

A. As I remember, it was.

{fol. 4523} Q. Do you recall who called the mass meeting?

A. I don't remember that it was any one person. It seemed to be just sort of spontaneous. I know that in our particular section we were talking about it, and one of the girls at noon made the remark that, I believe, there were some girls—I don't remember what section she said they were from—told her to pass the word along that there was going to be a meeting of all of the employees that evening on either the second or third floor, I don't recall which.

Q. Did you understand that that was to be a meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. No. I did not. I don't believe there was anything said about the Loyalty League in connection with the meeting; I don't remember it, if there was.

Q. Did Rose Todd preside at the meeting, if you recall?

A. Yes, I think she did; not altogether, but she was on the platform, I know.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd took part in presiding at the meeting or the activities of the meeting indicate to you that it was a meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. No, it did not. Rose Todd was a person who was all over the factory, more or less, at different times. She was very well acquainted with most of the employees, I think, and she was a sort of a natural leader, everyone liked her, and I think perhaps they just sort of chose her [fol. 4524] as a temporary chairman. That would be my idea.

Q. Do you recall what did occur at that meeting?

A. Not everything. I remember that Miss Todd spoke—

* * * * * * *

A. (Continuing)—and I believe Hobart Atherton made a talk, and later someone brought Mrs. Reed in and she talked to us for a few minutes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall how it happened that Mrs. Reed came to the meeting?

A. I think someone went for her, as near as I can remember.

Q. Will you state whether or not there had been any suggestion made by any employee at the meeting that Mrs. Reed be requested to come to the meeting?

A. I don't remember about that.

Q. Now, when Mrs. Reed came to the meeting did she make a talk? A. Yes, she did, a short talk.

Q. Now, a witness—possibly two witnesses for the Board testified in this case that Mrs. Reed stated that she would close her plant if it was unionized. I will ask you to state whether or not you heard Mrs. Reed make such a statement.

[fol. 4525] A. I did not.

Q. It has also been testified by one or the other of the Board's witnesses who testified about this meeting that Mrs. Reed stated that she would not let Dubinsky tell her how to run her business. I will ask you to state whether or not you heard Mrs. Reed make any remark like that.

A. Well, if I remember right, she said she wouldn't let Dubinsky force her to enter into a contract that was distasteful to her employees, or something to that effect. In other words, she wouldn't—I understood it that she wouldn't force us to join a union against our wishes—she wouldn't let anyone force her to do that.

Q. Now, do you recall any action taken by the employees at that meeting with respect to obtaining protection?

A. Yes. I don't remember who made the suggestion, but it was suggested that we seek legal aid to see what could be done to protect us from the violence that was being practiced on employees of other garment factories, and I think there was a committee appointed to attend to that, but I don't remember who was on the committee.

Q. Mrs. Warth, did any officer, executive, or anybody that was representing the management request you or suggest to you that you attend this meeting?

A. No, they did not. In fact, I didn't discuss the meeting with anyone except the operators in my section, and in [fol. 4526] the lunchroom at the lunch hour we discussed it. But as far as I know, anyone whom I knew to be an executive of the company never mentioned it to me.

Q. Did your instructor at that time request you or order you to go to the meeting?

A. No, she did not.

Q. Did you ever hear discussed at the plant that the instructors or the employees that had authority to represent the management were directing and ordering employees to go to that meeting?

A. No, I never heard anything about that.

* * * * * * *

Q. State whether or not the violence continued at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants after the meeting of March 18.

A. Well, I think it did, as near as I can remember.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 20 and ask you if you recall reading the article that appeared in the [fol. 4527] Kansas City Journal-Post on March 22, 1937.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, I understood the witness to say they didn't take the Journal-Post. Of course, you may show it to her, but—

The Witness: We didn't take it, but some of the girls brought some of the copies down there and I read some of them, but not in their entirety.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you look at this exhibit and see if you recall reading the article that has the heading across the top of the paper, "Violence Marks Garment Strike."

* * * * * *

A. I don't believe I read that.

Q. Do you recall reading the article that appeared in the Kansas City Times on March 23, 1937, which is respondent's exhibit No. 26? It is entitled "Sue To Quiet Strikers."

A. Yes, I read that article.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 28, which is an article that appeared in the Kansas City Star on March 22, 1937, and ask you if you read that article. It is entitled "Fail To Stop Workers."

A. Yes, I read that article.

Q. What was the effect of that article and the previous article I have called your attention to on you?

A. Well, it made me very determined that something [fol. 4528] should be done about the violence. I just wondered when I would pass there on the streetcar where our law was, that they would allow such things to go on—such practices as that against women and girls who were going out and trying to make a living.

Q. State whether or not you observed that the other employees at the Donnelly plant were reading these same articles and that the articles were the subject of conversation at the plant? A. Yes, they were.

Q. What was the effect of these articles, so far as you could observe, on the other employees?

A. Well, they all felt about the same as I did. They were very much afraid. In fact, some of them were so scared they asked for a leave of absence to stay away from work for a time.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 29 and ask you if you recall reading this article that appeared in the Kansas City Star on March 25, 1937. It is entitled "The Hair Pulling Grows."

* * * * * *

[fol. 4529] A. Yes, I read that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

A. Did you read most of the articles that appeared in the Star and Times?

A. I think I read all of them, yes.

Q. Why did you read them?

A. Well, I was very much concerned about what was going on.

Q. I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit 30, which is an article that appeared in the Kansas City Star for March 30, 1937, and ask you if you read that article.

A. Yes, I read the article.

Q. Now, I believe you stated a few minutes ago that at the meeting of March 18 a committee was designated to see what could be done to protect the employees; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you state what occurred in connection with that designation of the committee? Did you ever hear of anything the committee did?

* * * * * * *

A. They consulted with Mr. Tyler, I believe, had a talk [fol. 4530] with him to find out what we could do, legally, take legal steps to protect us from the strikers and violence.

Q. Did anything occur later that resulted in a meeting being held?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you explain about that?

A. We had another meeting, a mass meeting, of all the employees, in the latter part of March, as I remember, at which meeting we were informed that the committee had consulted with Mr. Tyler and he requested a retainer fee, and I believe someone asked for a suggestion as to how we should raise the money, as I remember it. The suggestion was made by subscription, I think, of 50c, which was taken; some of the employees paid it at the meeting, and some paid the following day.

Q. Now, did any officer, executive, or any person that you thought was representing the management ask you to attend this meeting that you have just referred to?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did anybody suggest to you, representing the management, that you contribute 50c?

A. No, no one representing the management.

Q. At what time of day was this meeting held?

A. It was held after work in the afternoon.

Q. And do you know where it was held?

[fol. 4531] A. Either on the second or third floor of the building.

Q. Did your instructor suggest or request that you go to that meeting?

A. No, she did not.

Q. Did you go to that meeting thinking it was a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Was it a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, there was nothing said about the Loyalty League at that meeting, as I remember; I don't think the word was mentioned.

Q. Was the fact that Rose Todd took part in the meeting any indication to you that it was a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, it was not.

Q. Did you contribute 50c?

A. I think I gave mine the next morning.

Q. Well, do you know who you gave that to the next morning?

A. Some girl in the next section, I don't recall who it was.

Q. Did you make this contribution to that girl as a contribution to the Loyalty League?

A. Definitely not.

Q. Are you a member of the Loyalty League?

A. I am.

Q. Will you state, so far as you know, what the activities of the Loyalty League were?

[fol. 4532] A. Well, I think the main thing, my understanding was that it was to promote good fellowship among the employees, a sort of a social organization to have little get-togethers and dances, and card parties and such things, a sort of entertainment organization.

Q. Did anybody tell you that you had to join the Loyalty League?

A. Oh, No.

Q. Did you hear anything at any time said at the plant, that unless you joined the Loyalty League and took part in the Loyalty League activities, that you would be penalized by the company?

A. I never heard of any such a thing.

Q. Now, did Mrs. Reed, at the meeting of March 18, say anything that indicated to you that you weren't free to join any labor organization you wanted to join?

A. I think, if I remember right, she said we were at liberty to join any organization that we wanted to join, if it was our desire.

Q. Have you heard any expression on the part of any official, executive or any person that you thought represented the management, to the effect that you would be penalized by the company if you joined any labor organization that you chose?

A. No, I did not.

Q. I will ask you if you recall reading in the paper, in [fol. 4533] the Kansas City Star for April 12, 1937, the article entitled "Wagner Act Upheld," which is Respondent's Exhibit 38?

A. Yes, I read the article.

Q. I will ask you if you read an article in the paper stating that Sylvia Hull had been selected to represent the Donnelly employees, at the International Convention, and that they called a strike?

A. Yes, I read the article.

Q. Do you recall whether that was in the Kansas City Star, Times, or the Journal-Post?

A. It was in the Kansas City Star — in the Times.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4534] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will hand you Respondent's Exhibit 35, and ask [fol. 4535] you if you recall reading the article that appears in the Journal-Post for April 22, 1937, entitled, "Donnelly Worker will be Sent to Union Convention."

* * * * * *

A. I don't believe this is the article I read. I read an article about Sylvia Hull going to a convention, but I still think it was in either the Star or Times.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Well, I'll ask you to state whether or not —

A. (Interrupting) That was practically the same wording though, I think.

Q. I'll ask you to state whether or not the articles that did appear in the papers at that time were generally discussed by the employees of the Donnelly plant.

A. Very generally.

Q. What was the effect of those articles on the employees?

A. Well, it just kept them all so upset that they could hardly work. They were afraid that those strikers would come down there and start on us any morning; every morning, when we would get there, we looked around anxiously to see if they were there.

Q. I am referring now to the articles that referred to Sylvia Hull. What effect did those articles have on the employees and on you?

A. I know what effect it had on me. It made me very [fol. 4536] indignant, because, to my knowledge, no one had ever been selected to attend the convention from the Donnelly plant. While I didn't know Sylvia Hull, I was sure we hadn't selected anybody to represent us at any labor convention.

Q. State whether or not, to your knowledge, the employees had selected anybody to go to the International Convention, and ask support for the strike at the Donnelly plant?

A. No, not to my knowledge.

Q. Were you in favor of a strike being called at the Donnelly plant?

A. No, I was not.

Q. At that time, April 22 or 23, 1937, on what floor were you working?

A. I was on the 6th floor.

Q. On the 6th floor?

A. Yes.

Q. Did anything occur the morning of April 23, 1937, that you recall, any disturbance of any kind?

A. That was the morning after this article was in the paper, I believe. I think I read that in the Star the night before; and there was some girl on our floor that the girls gathered around at her machine, and I know that I started over there, several girls from our section started over there to her section and our instructor told us to go back to our machines, that she believed if she were in our place

[fol. 4537] she would go back to her machine. We left the scene and about the time we left there, Mr. Baty arrived, and he requested us to go back to the machines, to continue with our work. I never did get very close to the girl. I didn't know the girl at that time, but I understood it was Fern Sigler; I knew her by sight but not by name.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Baty say anything to Fern Sigler?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did she leave the floor?

A. I think she did later, later in the morning. I wouldn't say for sure, but I am under the impression that she did.

Q. In your section, was the power turned off?

A. No, it was not.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What was the number of your section?

A. 524.

Q. 524?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall whether or not May Fike worked in that section?

A. No, she didn't.

Q. Did you hear any girls threatening Fern Sigler?

A. No, I didn't hear anything that was said to her. I know there were girls talking with her, but I don't know what they said.

[fol. 4538] Q. Do you know whether or not the power was left on in the various sections on the 6th floor at that time?

A. Well, it was on in our section, and I couldn't say about the others.

Q. Well, when the power is on in your section, can you hear people talking in other sections, hear what they say?

A. Well, I couldn't, no.

Q. Does the power make considerable noise?

A. No, the power itself doesn't make much noise, but as I recall it, some girls didn't stop their machines.

Q. With the machines on there is noise?

A. Yes.

Q. With that noise going on, is it difficult to hear anything that is said in any section?

A. Very difficult.

Q. Will you state what effect the articles that had reference to violence, and the article that had reference to Sylvia Hull and Fern Sigler had on you?

A. Well, about Sylvia Hull representing us at the convention, it sort of outraged me. I thought it was very presumptious on her part to go there and represent us, when she hadn't been selected to do so.

Q. Did you hear any girls in your section say they did not want to work as long as Sylvia or Fern remained at work?

A. I don't believe I did, she was over several sec-
[for. 4539] tions from us.

Q. What caused you to vote in favor of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, I felt it was the best thing to protect ourselves, if we could form our own union; we had been led to believe that would stop the trouble.

Q. But who led you to believe that, what do you mean by that?

A. Well, the newspaper articles about the Wagner Act, first Mr. Tyler told us about that, and then I read in the paper where the Supreme Court had held it constitutional; he told us under the Wagner Act we had the right to organize our own union, and we felt that was the best way to protect ourselves against the violence of the other union.

[fol. 4540] Q. Now, the Board in its decision and order found that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was caused to be organized by acts of the company. Can you state anything that any official, executive, or anybody you thought represented the company, did that led you or led any employees to believe that the company had anything to do with the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No. I think they would have had a pretty hard time stopping us from organizing it, had they tried.

Q. Did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will?

A. I did.

Q. Do you know of any pressure or any suggestion that was made by any official or any executive or anybody representing the management to cause you or cause any other employees to believe that you would be discriminated against or penalized if you did not join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union when it was formed?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Did the Loyalty League have anything to do with the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, to your knowledge?

* * * * * *

[fol. 4541] A. It wasn't mentioned, to my knowledge.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Is it a fact that the Loyalty League had anything to do with the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

* * * * * *

A. Not to my knowledge. They had nothing to do with it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. State whether or not you considered Rose Todd a representative of the management.

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you consider Rose Todd any sort of a boss or supervisor at the plant?

A. No, I didn't consider her so.

Q. Did you ever know of any joint meetings being held by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Loyalty League?

[fol. 4542] A. No, I didn't know of any.

Q. Do you recall any meetings being held where the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union would have a meeting and it would be immediately followed by a Loyalty League meeting?

A. I don't remember any.

Q. Did you consider that whatever Rose Todd said about unions represented the company's views?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you consider that Rose Todd was representing the company in any activities that she may have engaged in in connection with the Loyalty League?

A. I did not.

Q. Will you state whether or not the presence of or activities of Rose Todd in connection with the March 18 meeting or the meeting the latter part of March or the meeting of April 27 caused you to feel any compulsion to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. It did not.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4543] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you state whether or not you signed a petition on or about March 2, 1937? A. I did.

Q. How did you happen to sign that petition?

A. You mean how was it presented to me?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, in the section, it was brought to me at my machine in the section.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4544] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Was that the language—I'll hand you I.L.G.W.U. Exhibit No. 10, which appears at 5961 of the Circuit Court record, and ask you if the language at the top of that page was on the petition that you signed.

A. To the nearest of my recollection that is exactly what I signed.

Q. Now, what occurred when you signed that petition?

A. There were, as well as I can remember, there were two girls that came through our section with those petitions, I know that there was at least one, that came to my machine and asked me to read that, which I did, and after I had read it, she said, "Do you want to sign it," and I said, "I certainly do."

Q. Do you know who that girl was?

A. I didn't know who it was at the time, but I asked some of the girls sitting near me, and they told me it was Mary Sprofera.

Q. Did anybody representing the management ask you to sign that petition?

[fol. 4545] A. Nobody said anything to me about it, except this one girl that brought it to me and asked me if I wanted to sign it.

Q. Did you believe that this petition was circulated by the Loyalty League? A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you feel that if you did not sign this petition you would be penalized in some way by the company?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Why did you want to sign it?

A. I wanted to sign it because it expressed my opinion as to how I felt toward Mrs. Reed and the company at that time, and I wanted her to know how I felt toward her.

Q. Going back to the—after you signed the petition, do you recall what was done with it?

A. I handed it back to the girl who handed it to me.

Q. Now, who was that girl? A. Mary Sprofera.

Q. And do you recall what she did?

A. I believe that the girl right across from me signed it, and we were on the end of our row in our section, and then I think she went over to the next section with the petition, and went through that section with it. To the nearest of my recollection that is what happened.

Q. Now, I want to direct your attention to a meeting on [fol. 4546] March 18th. Will you state whether or not Mrs. Reed read a letter from the I. L. G. W. U. to the company?

A. No, I didn't think Mrs. Reed read any letter.

Q. Do you recall whether or not circulars had been handed out by the I. L. G. W. U.? A. Yes, they had.

Q. About that time? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall whether or not there were some of those circulars at the meeting?

A. I imagine there were several. I think I had one.

(Thereupon the document above referred to was marked for identification as "Respondent's Exhibit No. 41, Witness Warth," for identification.)

Mr. Ingraham: I will hand you Respondent's Exhibit 41, and ask you if that is the kind of a circular that was circulated by the I. L. G. W. U. at that time.

. . . . . .

A. Yes, I read that, that is the same we had handed to us down there at the door.

Trial Examiner Batten: What was that last remark?

A. The same circular that was handed us down there in front of the building.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4547] Mr. Ingraham: Do you recall anyone reading from the circulars at that meeting?

A. No, I don't recall that letter being read, however, it had just been given us the evening before, I think, and it might have been read, but I know it is very familiar to me.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers in evidence its exhibit No. 41.

Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no objection, it will be received.

[fol. 4548] Cross-Examination

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Warth, what did you observe Rose Todd doing around the Donnelly plant?

A. Well, I really didn't pay a whole lot of attention to what she did. You know, she was all over the building at various times.

Q. Did she come to your section occasionally?

A. Yes, she came to our section.

Q. What did she do when she was in your section?

A. Well, I think she was usually looking up a lost bundle of work, or trying to match up some kind of thread, and things of that sort.

Q. Was there anything Rose Todd did in her employment with the company, that led you to believe that she was a supervisor or a boss over any other employees?

A. No, there was not.

Q. Was there anything she ever did that gave you the impression that she was entitled to speak for the company on the matter of labor relations between the company and the employees? A. No, there was not.

Q. Did you know Hobart Atherton in 1937?

A. I knew him when I saw him, yes.

Q. What was his position with the company, so far as you observed his activities?

[fol. 4549] A. Well, I really didn't know. I wasn't in a position to know what his position was.

Q. Did you know Sallie Ormsby? A. No, I did not.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed or any of the other executives of the company ever say anything in your presence about Rose Todd, or Hobart Atherton, or Sallie Ormsby, that gave you the impression that they represented the management in connection with labor matters?

A. No, nobody ever gave me that impression.

Q. Did you get the idea when those three persons were appointed a committee to consult the lawyers, at this meeting of March 18th, that in doing so, they were to speak for the employer or the management, or were they to represent the employees?

A. Well, they were to represent the employees, I distinctly understood that.

Q. Had anybody, so far as you know, ever suggested to you or in your presence, or any other employees, that the employees hire lawyers to consult with about protecting themselves?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4550] A. No, they did not.

Q. How long have you been a member of the Loyalty League?

A. I think I joined it after I had been an employee about three or four months.

Q. Did the Loyalty League, so far as you know, ever consult with the management about wages or hours or conditional terms of employment?

A. Not so far as I know.

Q. Did you ever get the idea that the Loyalty League was in any sense a labor union?

A. No, I did not.

Q. You may now state what the Loyalty League did so far as your observation of it was concerned during the time you have been a member.

A. Well, during the time I have been a member, all the Loyalty League has ever done is to promote good fellowship among the employees and sponsor dances and card parties and social functions.

[fol. 4551] Q. I think you stated on direct examination that you read the article appearing in the Kansas City paper on April 12, stating that the Wagner Act had been declared constitutional by the Supreme Court?

A. Yes, I read that article.

Q. Had you prior to that date ever given consideration, yourself, to the question of whether the employees should form a union of their own?

A. No, I had never thought anything about it prior to that date.

Q. Was anything said at the meeting of March 18 or the meeting held about March 30 about the formation by the employees of their own labor union?

A. I don't recollect that there was anything said about forming a union at either of those meetings.

Q. Were any instructions given at the meeting of March 18 to this committee that was appointed to consult with a lawyer about consulting with that lawyer with respect to forming a union? A. No, there was not.

Q. What was discussed at that meeting as to the purpose of consulting a lawyer?

* * * * * * *

A. We wanted to see what we could do about protecting [fol. 4552] ourselves. I think there was something said about we might be able to get an injunction, or something of the sort, but we felt that we should have legal advice so that we would know what could be done.

Q. At the meeting at the end of March was anything said in connection with raising this $500 attorney's fee, about that fee applying upon services in the formation of a union? A. There was not, to my knowledge.

Q. Did you personally give any thought to the matter of forming a union of the Donnelly employees prior to April 27?

A. I personally had thought something about it after I had read this article about the Wagner Act, but it hadn't been generally discussed. In fact, I don't remember hearing anyone say anything about forming a union prior to that meeting.

Q. How did you get notice of that April 27 meeting?

A. I think some girl in the section told us that we were going to have another meeting.

Q. Was anything said by any of the other employees as to what was to be discussed at that meeting?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you attend that meeting of April 27 in your uniform, or did you dress before you went to the meeting?

A. I don't remember that. Some were in their uniforms and some were in their street clothes. It just depended on what time they were dismissed.

[fol. 4553] Q. Were you ordered or instructed by your instructor to go to that meeting?

A. I was not.

Q. Were the girls in your section supposed to go in a body together to that meeting?

A. No.

Q. Was there anything said by the girls in your section that they should stay together because they were supposed to come back to the section and go to work after the meeting was over?

A. No, there wasn't.

Q. What is your best recollection as to the time of day when that meeting was held?

A. To the best of my knowledge, I would say around 5 o'clock or 5:15, somewhere in there; anywhere from 4:45 to 5:15, but I wouldn't say the exact minute.

Q. What is your best recollection as to the time consumed in holding that meeting?

A. I don't remember that exactly, but I should say around an hour and a half.

Q. Now, will you state what was done at that meeting?

A. Miss Todd opened the meeting and talked to us for a while and told us that Mr. Tyler was there and wanted to talk to us.

Q. Did she tell you who Mr. Tyler was?

[fol. 4554] A. Well, I suppose she did. I think she told us he was our attorney; I knew he was, and I suppose everyone else did.

Mr. Tyler told us it was perfectly within the law, if we wanted to organize our own union, to do so. And he sort of interpreted the Wagner Act for us. And I believe somebody made a motion about it—I'm not sure; but, anyway, I know we all voted on forming our own union.

Q. Did you cast a vote in that connection?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you vote to form the union of the Donnelly employees?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Will you state now what reasons you had in your own mind for voting affirmatively to form an employees' union?

A. Well, I didn't feel it was necessary that we have a union at the Donnelly plant, but I thought if we were forced to have one, which seemed to be the only solution, that we were just as capable of taking care of our own affairs as outsiders. And I still think so. In fact, I think we know better what we want than any outsider. And I think everyone else felt pretty much the same as I did about it.

Q. Had Mrs. Reed ever intimated or suggested to you or to any other employee, as far as you know, that the employees should form a union of their own?

A. Mrs. Reeves?

Q. Mrs. Reed.

[fol. 4555] A. No, sir. Mrs. Reed was never mentioned in connection with the union, to my knowledge.

Q. I say, did she ever mention to you, or, as far as you know, any other employee, that the employees should form a union of their own?

A. No.

Q. Did Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Green, Mr. Baty, or anybody else representing the management, ever make any such suggestion?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Did you understand in your own mind at this meeting of April 27 and did you have the feeling yourself that whatever action you were taking was the action of the employees themselves?

A. I did.

Q. Did you feel under any restraint created by the management to vote one way or the other at that meeting?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you feel that your were being dominated or controlled or persuaded by the company to take the action that was taken there?

A. I knew I wasn't.

Q. Did you regard yourself as acting in that meeting in the formation of this union of your own free will and making your own deliberate choice?

A. Absolutely.

[fol. 4556] Q. I wish you would state what else occurred at that organization meeting.

A. Well, after we voted to form the union Miss Todd appointed a committee to leave the floor and nominate who were to be our first officers—I believe it was nine people, if I remember correctly—which they did. I don't remember how long it took them. When they returned and presented the names, we voted on them. Then I believe Mr. Tyler told us that he would or had drafted some bylaws that we could either accept or reject—that if they were acceptable, all right, and if they were not, he would change them.

Q. Have you ever served on any of the executive committees of the union, Mrs. Warth, since its formation?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Have you attended union meetings since its formation?

A. I think, most of them.

Q. In April of 1937 state what the instructors did, so far as the operators in your section were concerned.

A. They just showed us how to do the work. They brought the work to us and took it away when it was completed.

Q. Did you regard an instructor as a supervisor or as a boss?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you regard the instructor as a person who was entitled to speak for the management in connection with labor matters?

A. Oh, no.

[fol. 4557] Q. Did you think the instructor had authority to hire or fire the operators in the section?

A. I didn't think so.

Q. Is the Loyalty League still in existence?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Are you still a member of it?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. What are the activities of the Loyalty League since April 1937 as compared to what they were before?

A. Just the same, so far as I know.

Q. Did you ever regard the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as being a successor to or a continuation or outgrowth of the Loyalty League?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. In the meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union from April 1937 down to July 15, 1939, will you state generally how frequently those meetings were held?

A. I think we had one meeting each month.

Q. Will you state in general what the attendance of the employees was at those meetings?

A. We usually had a pretty good crowd.

Q. And by that you mean how many, approximately?

A. I would say a majority, at least.

Q. State what matters in general were discussed and taken up at the union meetings following the organization meeting.

[fol. 4558] A. Well, they took up any complaints that any of the operators or anyone had to make in those meetings.

Q. Was that a fairly frequent occurrence?

A. Fairly so, I would say.

Q. What other matters were discussed at your union meetings?

A. Well, we discussed dances and carnivals.

Q. Did you discuss in any of your union meetings the matter of contracts between the union and the company?

A. Well, I think our contracts are made for a two-year period and of course prior to that annual renewal of the contract there is quite a little bit of discussion in the meetings preceding that.

Q. Did you from the time of the formation of the union down to July 15, 1939, feel that in the handling of the affairs of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union you and the other employees were acting of your own volition, without any control or domination on the part of the company?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Or without any pressure or persuasion to take any particular action?

A. Yes, sir, absolutely.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4560] Q. Who was your next instructor?

A. I believe, Vera Marshall. I was then in hand sewing, for a short time.

Q. What date did you go into hand sewing?

A. I believe it was in December, 1935.

Q. What were you doing in Etta Dorsey's section?
A. Hemstitching.
Q. Who was the thread girl in Vera Marshall's section?
A. I don't remember whether there was one.
Q. How long did you continue in that section?
A. Just for a short time.
Q. Who was your next instructor?
A. I believe, Kathryn Rosen.
Q. Who was her thread girl?
A. I don't remember who was her thread girl at that time.
Q. What were you doing in that section?
A. Hemstitching.
Q. What floor was that on?
A. That was on the seventh floor, I believe, for a short time.
Q. Do you remember the dates on which you were in those sections?
A. No, I do not.
Q. Who was your next instructor?
A. I think, Carrie Abrams.
[fol. 4561] Q. Who was the thread girl in that section?
A. I think, Kathryn— I'm not sure about that. I'm not sure who was Carrie's thread girl at that time.
Q. Do you have any idea of the dates on which you were in Carrie Abrams' section?
A. No, I don't.
Q. Who was your next instructor?
A. Kathryn Rosen.
Q. Do you know who the thread girl there was?
A. I believe, Grace Davis.
Q. Does this bring us down to March or April of 1937?
A. Yes. That was in the early spring of 1937.
Q. Were you in Kathryn Rosen's section throughout March and April of 1937?
A. Yes, I was.
Q. Was Grace Davis the thread girl in that section throughout those two months?
A. I couldn't say as to that. She was there part of the time and Claris Martin was there part of the time, but I don't remember which girl was there in that period.
Q. What was that section number at that time?

A. 524.

Q. How did you come to join the Loyalty League?

A. Some girl came to my machine and asked me if I would like to join.

[fol. 4562] Q. Did she have a membership card for you?

A. Yes, she did. I signed the card and purchased a button from her.

Q. Did she have the pin with her?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. What was the number of your pin; do you know?

A. 1042.

Q. And that was sometime in the spring of 1935, was it?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Did you attend any meetings of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4563] Q. Do you know any of the officers of the Loyalty League during that period?

A. What period was that?

Q. From the time you went to work; up until March 18, 1937.

A. Rose Todd was president of the Loyalty League in the early part of 1937.

Q. Do you know of any other officers at any time during that period?

A. No, I don't.

* * * * * * *

Q. If an instructor was absent from work for an hour or a day, who would take her place?

A. Well, if they were absent for a day there was usually another instructor sent in to the section. If she was absent for a few hours, as a general rule, nobody replaced [here]. She usually saw to it that each girl had enough work to last until she returned.

[fol. 4564] Q. Who gives out your checks, since you have been receiving checks? A. Our pay checks?

Q. Yes. A. Our instructor.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4565] Q. Who was the girl that you mentioned as a special friend of yours who had her sleeve torn out?

A. No, I didn't say she was a special friend of mine. I said she was an acquaintance of mine.

Q. Do you know her name? A. Yes.

Q. Will you please state it?

A. Well, for very obvious reasons, Miss Weyand, I don't want to tell the girl's name.

Q. I would like to have you state it.

Mr. Reed: I didn't hear the last question.

Trial Examiner Batten: She said she would like to have her state the girl's name.

Mr. Reed: If this girl is working for another union and made these remarks to the witness, manifestly it would be unfair to that girl to have this fact made known, so that she might be thoroughly disciplined by the union she belongs to, if they saw fit to discipline her.

My understanding of the attitude here throughout is that those matters which would cause trouble to anyone and are not necessary in this case would not be gone into.

Trial Examiner Batten: Don't you consider this necessary, Senator?

Mr. Reed: I do not. Necessary for her to tell the [fol. 4566] name of a girl whose sleeve was torn?

Mr. Langsdale: How are we going to meet the testimony, then?

Mr. Reed: We are in a position where we cannot bring these people in who belong to the other union. The fact about the matter is, it has been claimed throughout this whole litigation at various times that the I. L. G. W. U. had members working for the company; and as often as that has come up, there has been a flat refusal to tell their names. There is a flat refusal to disclose to us the names of the persons who filed these charges against us, and all of this—

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, it is very obvious who filed the charges. They had to sign the charge, and that is a part of the complaint.

Mr. Ingraham: Jane Palmer signed them.

Mr. Reed: Jane Palmer signed them as attorney.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, that brings up the question again of these witnesses testifying about matters they saw or heard or in their own minds thought, going to attempt to verify or prove or disprove all of those matters. Of course, if we are going into those matters, it is perfectly proper for this lady to tell us who it was. In other words, I see no reason of any kind why she should not disclose it.

Mr. Reed: I have tried to give you the reason, and I [fol. 4567] again call attention to the fact that throughout, in court or any other place—in any hearing, there has been a flat refusal to tell the names of the persons who worked for the Donnelly Garment Company who belonged to the I. L. G. W. U.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't know of any instance in this hearing so far, Senator, where there has been any such refusal.

Mr. Reed. Didn't it occur earlier in this hearing?

Trial Examiner Batten: Not that I recall, because it has not been an issue in this hearing, as to who belonged or who didn't belong, that I recall.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Warth, what is your reason for not wanting to disclose it?

A. This girl still works in the same factory where she was working at that time and she is a member of the I. L. G. W. U., and for that reason I do not want to give her name. I have known her over a period of years and I have no reason to doubt her honesty and integrity.

Q. You say, because she belongs to that union. That does not appear to me to be a reason why you should not want to disclose it.

A. It does to me. Don't you think she might be discriminated against?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think that is a matter for you to determine, whether she would be discriminated against or not.

[fol. 4572] Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, do you agree with Mr. Langsdale that the witness having testified about what was told her, it now raises the issue about whether or not, in fact, the girl did tell her that?

Miss Weyand: I think it does. That is always a matter raised in credibility.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is this for the purpose of credibility?

Mr. Langsdale: It couldn't be for anything else.

Miss Weyand: I don't see how it could.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am asking you if it is.

[fol. 4573] Miss Weyand: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: If it is for the purpose of credibility, I will ask the witness to disclose the name.

Mr. Reed: Do the counsel on the other side now say that they are going to test this lady's credibility by bringing in the witness, and do they vouch for the fact that that witness will contradict this witness?

Trial Examiner Batten: That is not what I asked them. I asked Miss Weyand if it was a matter of credibility, and she said it was. I asked her, entirely so? And she said yes. Upon her statement, the witness may disclose the name of the person.

Mr. Reed: Then, I want to get my position clear here. When a witness testifies that some person told them something, and you are laying the foundation for a contradiction, you must show or state that you propose to produce a witness who will testify that, at substantially that time and place which has been asked about of the witness who is to be impeached, that you expect to prove by that witness that she did not make the statement, then you have qualified to impeach the witness; otherwise, you have not.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't believe I agree with you at all, Senator, because, supposing you were testing a matter of credibility and the witness agreed with you; after you had made your offer of proof to bring someone in to show that what you expected the witness to say was [fol. 4574] untrue—I don't think that precedes a question on a matter of credibility.

Mr. Reed: Are we, then, to understand that this question is to be asked, although limited to impeachment purposes, and that we can follow and show that this young lady, if she should come in and deny this, the fact back of it, or show, if she didn't deny it, that she spoke the truth?

Trial Examiner Batten: I am making no ruling of any kind, Senator, except to this witness, that she may disclose the name of the person.

Mr. Reed: That's the trouble.

Trial Examiner Batten: That isn't the trouble. If you believe you have the right to present such testimony, Senator, you present it, and at the time it is presented I will rule upon it.

Mr. Reed: I am going to say to the witness that she has the right to withhold this name, if she wants to.

The Witness: I think I will stand on that right, then.

Trial Examiner Batten: All right. You may do so, and I shall strike your testimony with respect to this incident which was given on direct examination—

Mr. Lane: Intervener excepts to the ruling of the Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: —in accordance with the Board's rules.

* * * * * * *

{fol. 4575} Mr. Lane: I think, further, Mr. Examiner, it is obviously improper for the Examiner to permit counsel to go into evidence on the mere assertion that the purpose is to attack the credibility of the witness on things the Examiner excludes on direct approach. If it is going in at all, it should go in so that it can be verified properly. But to go in the back door—

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Lane, that is the very thing I told the Senator I wasn't ruling upon. I am not going to anticipate a matter. You know as well as I do that the attorney who wants to attack the credibility or bias or interest of the witness, it gives them almost unlimited latitude.

Mr. Lane: It doesn't permit testimony to be introduced through one door that cannot go through another door.

Trial Examiner Batten: When I limit it to that purpose only, as I discussed with Miss Weyand the other day—and I think I made myself clear at that time—when I accept testimony for credibility, interest, or bias, it is not to be used for any other purpose. I think the record is clear on what I stated at that time.

[fol. 4580] Q. I am going to ask the witness to look at I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 10, directing her attention to the Circuit Court of Appeals page 5970, and I'll ask her if the eighth name there appearing is her signature.

[fol. 4581] A. Yes, it is.

Q. Will you just continue to hold that a minute? I want to ask you about some of those names. Do you know the name that appears at the head of that column? It seems to be Mary Robeson.

A. Mary Robeson, R-o-b-e-s-o-n (Spelling)?

Q. Yes. Do you know her? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did she work in your section at that time?

A. Yes, she did work in my section at that time.

Q. And the next girl, Vivian Laughman, is that the way it would be pronounced?

A. I don't know that girl.

Q. The next is Audrey Hoyle?

A. I don't know her either.

Q. The next name, Elizabeth Lawson?

A. No, I don't know her.

Q. The next name, Anna Farmer?

A. Yes, I know Anna Farmer.

Q. And she worked in your section at that time, did she? A. Yes.

Q. Ruth Ellen Baldwin?

A. Yes, I know her.

Q. And she worked in your section?

A. Yes, she did.

[fol. 4582] Q. And the next name is Ruth Davidson, of whom you have spoken? A. That's right.

Q. Then appears your name, then Catherine Lasister?

A. Yes, she sat right across the board.

Q. In your same section? A. Yes.

Q. And then Lorraine Smith?

A. Lorraine Smith was in the next section over. Lorraine and I were on the end of our rows in our sections.

Q. And then Carrie Scott?

A. Well, there is a lady in that section that they call Scottie, I don't know her name.

Q. And then Gladys Riner?

A. I don't know her, I wasn't familiar with the girls in the next row; I knew a few of them.

Q. Did you know Lena Hicks? A. No.

Q. Alta Stevenson? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Maude Fisher? A. I knew her when I see her.

Q. And she was in the next section?

A. She was in the next section, yes.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4583] Q. When did you learn that the committee which had been appointed at the March 18 meeting had consulted Mr. Tyler?

A. I think at the following meeting, I believe, was the first I knew of it.

Q. And by the following meeting, which meeting do you refer to?

A. The meeting during the last of March.

Q. What was stated at that time about the committee seeing Mr. Tyler?

A. Why, Miss Todd said the committee had called upon this law firm, and talked with Mr. Tyler about our case, and reported what he had said about he would be glad to handle the case for us, for a certain fee.

Q. Did you wear your uniform to that meeting?

A. I don't remember; I probably did, because I think, as I remember, we were working 9 hours then, and that would make us get off rather late, and I imagine I went right down with my uniform on.

Q. Did you have chairs at that meeting?

A. Which one?

[fol. 4584] Q. The meeting you are now referring to?

A. The meeting the last of March?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't remember that. I know that I stood; I think there were chairs there, but I stood.

Q. Do you remember how many others stood up?

A. Well, there were a great many standing all around the floor, I remember; I can't say how many.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4590] Q. Do you know what the system of the union was in passing on piece rates?

A. You mean in what way they handled it?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, in our section, if we weren't satisfied with the price of piece work, we took it up with our section representative, and she went to the general chairman.

Q. Who was your section representative?

A. Or sometimes she went directly to Mr. Baty.

Q. Who was your section representative?

A. At what time?

Q. Prior to July 15, 1939?

A. Well, I don't remember. We had a different one each year, as I remember, and I don't remember who they were.

Q. Did you have any section representatives prior to July 15, 1939?

A. Yes, we have had them, I think, ever since we have had our union.

Q. How were they chosen?

A. They were chosen by the girls of the section.

Q. Was that done at a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, it was done at a meeting of the girls in the section.

Q. Do you know whether that was provided for in the [fol. 4591] constitution and by-laws of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. I don't remember.

Q. But you are certain that practice has continued since the very beginning of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I am not certain; I think it has, but I can't say for sure.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4595] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you know that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union during 1937 and 1938 had a committee which [fol. 4596] was composed of Rose Todd, Lula Nichols, Josephine Spalito, which adjusted the piece rates on behalf of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I did not.

Q. You never heard of such a committee?

A. No, I didn't.

Miss Weyand: That is all the questions I have.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale?

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you know Mrs. Nichols?

A. I do know a Mrs. Nichols.

Q. Did you know her in the year prior to July 15, 1939?

A. Yes, I knew who she was.

Q. Do you know what she was doing there?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you have any idea what her duties were for the Donnelly Garment Company? A. No, I don't.

Q. You never did hear nor understand that she was fixing piece rate prices?

A. I have heard that she did, yes.

Q. From the time you went to work there down to July 15, 1939? A. What was the question?

(Last question was read by the reporter.)

A. Yes.

[fol. 4597] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. But you never did know that she was on a committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for that purpose? A. No, I did not.

Q. For whom did you assume she was fixing piece prices?

A. I didn't assume because I didn't know.

Q. You hadn't any thought about it at all?

A. No, I did not.

Q. I believe you have stated that the subject of the meeting, the subject of the conversation at the meeting of March 18 was with reference to what the employees could do to protect themselves against the violence from the I. L. G. W. U., as you understood it to be, up at 26th and Grand, is that correct? A. That's right.

Q. That meeting was on the afternoon of March 18, was it? A. That's right.

Q. Did you know that that strike had only started the day before?

A. As I remember it, that strike started on the 14th.

Q. What did you say?

A. As I remembered it, the strike started on the 14th.

Q. Well, what do you base your recollection on?

A. Well, the 14th of March happens to be my birthday.

Q. Yes.

[fol. 4598] A. And that is the reason I remembered it.

Q. But these newspaper articles shown you by Mr. Ingraham, have you noted they start on the 17th?

A. Yes, I noticed it.

Q. You hadn't seen any newspaper articles prior to March 17th?

A. No, I had only seen the actions down at the place.

Q. Now, have you any other facts or circumstances in your memory which tell you that strike started before the 17th of March, 1937?

A. Only what I saw as I was passing there.

Q. Now, you are stating that you saw crowds and pickets in front of the Gordon, Gernes and Missouri, as early as the 14th of March? A. No, I didn't say that.

Q. Well, what did you say?

A. Well, I said that the strikes started on that day, as I remember.

Q. Well, what do you mean by that? What was done that you know of?

A. Well, they were being picketed on that date, I think.

Q. Did you see any crowds or masses or violence, or anything of that sort?

A. I saw those crowds out there for several days.

Q. But how long before the meeting of March 18th, is [fol. 4599] what I am trying to get you to testify to.

A. I wouldn t say just how many days, but I know it was several days before that.

Q. It started before the 17th of March, is that your recollection?

A. I think I remembered it started around the 14th.

Q. Well, are you sure of that?

A. I am not absolutely sure, no.

Q. Now, did you say that Mrs. Reed didn't read the letter that had been sent by the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. No, she did not.

Q. Who did read it?

A. I don't believe that it was even read.

Q. You don't believe that it was read? A. No.

Q. You say it was not read?

A. I didn't say it was not read; I said I didn't believe that it was read. I know that I had read the letter myself, but whether anyone read it at that meeting or not, I could not state positively whether they did or they did not.

* * * * * * *

Q. You testified nobody called the meeting of March 18th and it was just a spontaneous outpouring of em-
[fol. 4600] ployees into the second floor?

* * * * * * *

A. I don't remember how I testified about that, but I do know that the word was just passed around in the section that there was going to be a mass meeting of employees.

Mr. Langsdale: Who gave you the word?

A. Some of the girls in the section, I don't remember who it was.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4603] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Can you tell us definitely the date upon which employees voted to raise 50c apiece to take care of Mr. Tyler's fee?

A. No, I cannot.

Q. It has been five years, hasn't it, and more? It was in 1937, wasn't it?

A. As I remember it, it was.

Q. Have you had anything or anyone to refresh your [fol. 4604] memory about the date of that meeting, prior to the time you took the witness stand at this hearing?

A. Well, it was being talked around, yes, it was, the date; the girls were all discussing those dates.

Q. No, I am not talking about that. Now, before you took the witness stand in this hearing, 5 years having elapsed since that meeting, and more, hasn't it? Before you took the witness stand, what, if anything, or who, if anyone, has refreshed your memory before you got on the witness stand here? You said the meeting was the latter part of March, 1937?

A. Well, I think we were talking about those dates when we were talking with Mr. Ingraham.

Q. When?

A. A few days ago, I don't remember just what date it was.

Q. Well, did anyone suggest to you the meeting in the latter part of March, 1937?

A. I remembered that.

Q. That is what I am trying to get at. How do you remember?

A. I remember very distinctly all those things happening, and I know our meetings were along about that time.

Q. Well, is there any milestone in your memory that tells you whether that meeting was March, April or May, 1937?

A. Why, yes, I know it was in March.

[fol. 4605] Q. Well, what is it?

A. Either the last of March or the first of April.

Q. Well, why do you know that?

A. Because I remember the date of the first meeting, and that was some time after that.

Q. Well, what is there in the whole picture that tells you it was not April or May instead of March?

A. I didn't say, it could have been the first of April.

Q. Well, could it have been in May?

A. No, it could not.

Q. Why?

A. Well, because our union was formed on the 27th of April, and it was before that.

Q. Now, you say it was before that meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you paid your 50c to someone in your section?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. To whom did you pay it?

A. I do not know.

Q. Well, where did you pay it?

A. In the section.

Q. Well, where was this person?

A. She was in the section.

Q. Well, did you have to leave your machine to do it?

A. No.

[fol. 4606] Q. Did she come around your machine and collect it?

A. I think she collected it during lunch hour.

Q. Where?

A. In the section.

Q. Well, do you know where? Where is that section, where was it then?

A. 524 on the sixth floor, right in front of the door.

Q. And how many square feet would you say a section covers?

A. Well, I haven't the slightest idea.

Q. How long was the section? Maybe you can tell us that. Was it 20 feet long?

A. Well, it goes practically half-way through the building, east and west.

Q. What part of that section was this person in, that you paid your money to?

A. I don't know, because I don't know who it was.

Q. Do you know what that person did for the Donnelly Garment Company at that time?

A. She was a machine operator, an operator in our section.

Q. How do you remember that?

A. Because we always paid those things to one of the operators in the section.

Q. What do you mean, "always"?

A. Well, any kind of a collection, we had someone in the section so designated to make it to.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4607] Q. Was the person to whom you gave this 50c known as the Loyalty League representative at that time?

A. I don't know that, I don't remember who it was. I don't even know whether we had a Loyalty League representative at that time in the section.

Q. Did you know who the officers of the Loyalty League were? I don't mean their names, but what officers they had, by title?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Did you know that each section had some person known as their representative in the Loyalty League?

A. Well, I think most of the sections did, yes.

Q. Yes, and your section did also, didn't it?

A. I imagine we did.

Q. And was this girl that person?

A. I do not know.

Q. Now, in answer to Mr. Ingraham's question, you [fol. 4608] said your instructor didn't suggest that you go to the March 30 meeting, is that correct, or this meeting the latter part of March?

A. Our instructor didn't suggest we go to any meeting.

Q. Well, why do you say that?

A. Because I know she didn't.

[fol. 4610] Q. Your thought was that the Loyalty League was just a social organization?

A. That's right.

Q. Did you ever think that it was organized for the purpose of in any way impeding the activities of the I. L. G. W. U. or officers of the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. No, I did not.

[fol. 4621] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Let me ask you if at the meeting at which the 50 cents was collected you heard Miss Todd say this:

"I think that is a grand spirit to show. May I hear a motion, then, to the effect that each member of the Loyalty League donate 50 cents to take care of any indebtedness we have."?

A. No, I don't remember her saying it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You testified you signed what has been called here "the Loyalty petition" on March 2, when it was brought to your machine by some one of the employees?

A. Yes, I did.

[fol. 4622] Q. You recall that testimony?

A. Yes.

Q. And that you signed this petition which was written as follows:

"We, the undersigned, as members of the Donnelly Garment Company, wish to make it known we are positively happy and contented with the position which we hold with this organization and refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization. We are thankful for the real humanitarian interest extended by our employer Mrs. Reed."

Now, I think you said you signed that because that was the way you felt about it?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you feel that way about the statement "refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization"?

A. That is right.

Q. You felt that way, did you, on April 27, 1937?

A. Well, I think that was said because of the statement that we had read in the paper.

Q. What statement? This was March 2.

A. Yes.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4623] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. On March 2, 1937, were you opposed to all labor unions?

A. Not necessarily, no.

Q. Then, did you feel that you would refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization?

. . . . . .

[fol. 4624] A. Well, I don't remember how I felt about that. I don't think I felt I would refuse to acknowledge any union organization.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. What did you mean, then, when you answered Mr. Ingraham's question that that petition expressed your opinion as to how you felt?

A. Well, I don't think it is right to force anybody to join a union or anything else against their will.

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mr. Langsdale.

The question to you was, What did you mean when you said in answer to Mr. Ingraham's question that that expressed your opinion and how you felt?

A. Well, I think I had reference to the way I felt [fol. 4625] toward Mrs. Reed and the company in general. I appreciated my position there and I appreciated the way I was being treated, and I appreciated the way the plant was running, and the sanitary conditions, and everything about the working conditions there. That was what I meant in that answer.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you also mean that this petition expressed your opinion as to how you felt, in these words of the petition, "refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization"?

A. Well, refuse to acknowledge any one that was purported to be in there at that time.

• • • • • • •

[fol. 4626] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. At the time you signed this petition on March 2, 1937, did you have any reservation in your own mind about signing it that wasn't expressed in the petition?

A. I don't remember whether I did or not.

Q. And you don't know whether you at that time wanted to say that you "refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization" or not?

[fol. 4627] A. I said that I wanted to refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization that was rumored to be existing in part in the plant at that time.

Q. Of course, this was long before the violence that you testified to?

A. Yes, I know.

Q. But that is what you meant when you signed this petition?

A. That is right.

• • • • • • •

[fol. 4631) Redirect Examination.

Q. (By Mr. Ingraham): I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 6, appearing in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 4864 and page 4865, and ask you if you recall reading this article that appeared in the Kansas City Times for February 2, 1937.

* * * * * * *

A. Yes, I read the article.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you read in that article the statement, "The union—meaning the I. L. G. W. U.—claims only 25 mem- [fol. 4632) bers among the Donnelly workers but officials said hundreds of others are related to union members." Do you recall that in that article? A. Yes.

Q. Then, do you recall this statement:

"'Within a year we will have it completely organized,' Perlstein said. 'As soon as we have enough members we will call a strike. This will be in addition to carrying our side to the customs.'"

A. I read that.

Q. Now, you have been asked by Mr. Langsdale what you meant by the statement in the March 2 petition that you would not "acknowledge any union labor organization." What did you refer to when you signed that petition as to a labor organization?

A. The assertion that they were "in there" made in this statement by Mr. Perlstein.

Q. Who do you mean by "they"? A. Mr. Perlstein.

Q. The I. L. G. W. U. union? A. Yes.

Q Now, did that article have anything to do with causing you to sign the petition of March 2? A. Yes, it did.

Q. Why did you want Mrs. Reed to know how you felt [fol. 4633] about the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. Well, I felt like she was being accused of a lot of things that were not so, and I felt rather outraged at those accusations, and then I thought maybe she might think her employees might think some of those things, and I didn't want her to feel that I felt that way.

Q. Did you want Mrs. Reed to know that you did not want to acknowledge the I. L. G. W. U.? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was this article that appeared on February 26, 1937, discussed among the employees at the plant?

A. Very much.

Q. Will you state whether or not the employees wanted Mrs. Reed to understand that they did not want to acknowledge the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. That was my understanding.

Q. Was that from what you heard other employees say? A. Yes.

Q. I will ask you if you recall reading in that article this paragraph:

"'Part of the union's campaign directed against the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union will be to send six women to cities and towns where its garments are sold, advising retailers and labor organizations,' Mr. Perlstein said. 'Miss Palmer will have charge of this squad of fellow workers.'"

[fol. 4634] A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. Now, what did you understand was meant by "advising retailers and labor organizations"?

* * * * * * * *

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What interpretation did you place upon it, Mrs. Warth?

A. Well, I thought it meant a sort of a boycott to the business.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. And what reaction did you have to that statement [fol. 4635] in the paper?

A. I was very indignant about it, because I had always regarded Mrs. Reed as a fair employer, and I didn't think it was right that she should be persecuted that way?

Q. Did you think it might affect your job?

A. Well, naturally it would affect our jobs, if they ruined her business. That was the natural conclusion.

Q. Did you hear a discussion among other employees of that part of the article? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And what was the effect on the other employees with respect to the sending out of these emissaries?

A. I think they all felt very much as I did.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4638] Q. Now, you stated, I believe, on direct examination that at the meeting of March 18 a committee was named to see what could be done to give protection to the employees, is that correct? A. That's right.

Q. And did you testify that this committee was instructed to consult attorneys? A. Yes.

Q. I believe in answer to a question on cross-examination, you stated that Mr. Tyler—that you learned that Mr. Tyler had been consulted to represent the employees. Now, will you state what Mr. Tyler was to do in representing the employees?

A. I think I stated that he was to advise us as to what we could do, what could be done to protect us from the violence being practiced at the other plants, in the way of an injunction, or something of the sort, a restraining order.

Q. And when you stated on cross-examination that Mr. Tyler was to handle your case, that was what you referred to? A. That's right.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4639) Recross-Examination.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Warth, I hand you Board's Exhibit No. 8-21, which appears at page 4415 of the Circuit Court record, being the minutes of the meeting of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on May 25, 1937, and ask you to please read those. A. Yes, I went to the meeting.

Q. What time of day was that meeting held?

A. I imagine around five o'clock, not over 5:15.

Q. Was there ever any time when a union meeting, a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was held during working hours? A. No, there was not.

Q. Was there ever a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that was immediately followed by a meeting of the Loyalty League? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Or was there ever any time when the Donnelly Union meeting was preceded by a meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. Not to my knowledge.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4640] Q. (By Mr. Lane): Now, I'll hand you Board's Exhibit No. 18-A, appearing at page 4709 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, and ask you to read that, please.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4643] A. I don't remember any such meeting as that.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you ever attend a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that began at 3:45 in the afternoon?

A. No, I did not. I didn't know they ever had one that started at that time in the afternoon.

Q. Did you know Elsie Graham Greenhaw? A. No.

Q. Did you know Marjorie Green? A. Yes.

Q. Did Marjorie Green have an office in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in May 1937?

A. She was secretary.

Q. Did you see Marjorie Green at substantially all of the meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that you attended?

A. I don't remember of any where she wasn't present.

Q. Did you see her taking minutes of the meetings?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you know Elsie Graham Greenhaw by sight?

A. No, I didn't.

[fol. 4644] Q. Was the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on May 25, 1937, followed by a meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. I never heard of it, if it was.

Q. So far as you know, did any meeting of the Loyalty League ever occur such as purported to be recorded in these purported minutes which I have shown you which are claimed to have been kept by Elsie Graham Greenhaw?

A. I never heard of it.

Q. Was anything said at the meeting of May 25 of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union about raising money for the Loyalty League?

A. There never was anything said at any union meeting that I attended about the Loyalty League.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4645] Q. Now, when the strike started in March at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants, did you understand at that time from your discussion with other employees that that was part of a campaign of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

. . . . . .

[fol. 4649] A. Yes, that was my understanding.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4653] Q. (By Miss Weyand): I believe you testified in answer to questions on redirect, that you heard discussed at the plant that the I. L. G. W. U. was going to send out emissaries to start a boycott. Do you remember who you heard discuss that matter?

A. The girls in the section, I think.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4656] Q. Before lunch you read the minutes of a meeting in which Rose Todd made a statement about renewing the contract, which was the minutes of the meeting of February 7, 1939. Do you remember anything else that was discussed at that meeting? A. No, I don't right now.

Q. Do you remember whether very much of that meeting was given over to the discussion of the renewal of the contract? A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember Rose Todd saying at that meeting, "I think our chief concern at the present time in the way of any activity is our carnival"?

A. I don't remember that she said it in just those words.

Q. Do you remember that was the chief subject of conversation there at that meeting? A. No, I don't.

Q. In looking over the minutes and reading them this morning, did you discover that that was, as recorded in the minutes, the chief topic of conversation at that meeting?

A. I noticed there was quite a lot of discussion about it, yes.

Q. Did you notice how the question of contract renewal happened to come up in that meeting?

[fol. 4657] A. No, I didn't.

Q. And you didn't notice in reading over the minutes how the question of the contract to be renewed was raised at that meeting? A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember whether there was any more in the minutes about the renewal of the contract in the section Mr. Ingraham read to you when you said you recalled it?

A. I don't believe there was.

[fol. 4660] Q. I would like to have you look over these minutes again and state for me, after reading them, if you recall the method in which the question of contract renewal was raised.

Mr. Ingraham: What is the date of those minutes?

A. February 10th.

Trial Examiner Batten: What page is it?

Miss Weyand: February 7, 1939, they are written up on February 10th.

Trial Examiner Batten: What page, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: This is Board's Exhibit No. 8-145, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 4539.

Mr. Ingraham: I didn't hear the question. What was the question?

Miss Weyand: If that refreshed her recollection, and if she could, after reading it, state how the contract renewal question came about. A. What was the question?

[fol. 4661] Miss Weyand: Do you want the question read to you? A. Yes.

Miss Weyand: Mr. Reporter, will you please read the question?

(Last question was read by the reporter.)

A. Well, I recall it from these minutes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. But you have no independent recollection?

A. I don't remember that, no.

Q. Even after reading the minutes it doesn't refresh your recollection? A. No, it does not.

Q. All you know is what appears on the minutes?

A. I know I was at the meeting because evidently I heard it.

Q. When Mr. Ingraham read you two paragraphs from those minutes, the ones immediately following Stella Willis' name there, did you have an independent recollection of hearing those statements made by Rose Todd at that meeting? A. What statement was that?

Q. This morning, Mr. Ingraham read you this paragraph on record page 4541, and you stated you remembered that occurring. Now, I wanted to get it clear whether your recollection was an independent recollection which had been refreshed by reading those minutes, or whether you just saw it there and it must have happened because that is what it says. Can you tell us which it was?

[fol. 4662] A. I didn't remember just how she worded that, but I knew she did say that our contract expired.

Q. You knew she said it had at a meeting in February, 1939? A. What was that?

Q. You knew she made that statement in a meeting in February, 1939?

A. Well, I remember being at the meeting where she made this statement.

Q. Do you remember what date that meeting was?

A. Well, I suppose according to this it must have been on this date.

Q. Do you remember at how many meetings she made such a statement? A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you think she made it more than once or just once? A. Well, I couldn't answer that.

Q. You just recall at some meeting you did hear her make that statement, but you have no idea whether it was once or more than once, you have no idea when that meeting occurred?

A. Of course, our contract has expired more than once.

Q. And have you renewed it more than once?

A. I think we have renewed it each time it expired.

Q. Do you remember that coming up in that meeting?

A. Not specifically, no.

[fol. 4663] Q. You are just saying that by what you know of the course of events, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Do you have an independent recollection she did make a statement about the renewal at some meeting, or do you just state that because it happened in the course of events?

A. Yes, I have an independent recollection she did say something about the renewal of the contract at some meeting.

Q. Do you notice from reading the minutes the subject matter discussed at this meeting other than the renewal of the contract? A. The carnival.

Q. Was there anything else discussed at the meeting until Stella Willis raised the question of the renewal of the contract? A. I believe not.

Q. And she raised that at the end of the meeting, did she?

A. Well, I don't remember what part of the meeting.

Q. Do you remember this statement being made by Rose Todd at any meeting, "As you will remember, we organized our union on April 27, 1937, and on May 27, 1937, our working agreement was signed. This agreement was to run for two years; also our wage agreement comes up for renewal on June 22nd, so please keep these things in mind. No doubt during the last two years we have all learned a great deal [fol. 4664] about unions, I know I have, there must have been a few things you have thought of, something that might be well to have changed in our agreement with the company, so bear that in mind, so if you have any suggestions or you hear anyone commenting on it, and they have any suggestions to make, please make them to me or to some member of the committee. On the whole I think it has worked out very well, but I have a few minor changes in mind that should be made, and I know some of you have, and different people have mentioned them to me from time to time."

Do you recall that statement occurring?

A. I remember of her making remarks about having some changes in the contract.

Q. Do you remember that statement as I read it to you?

A. Well, I wouldn't say that I did, until my memory was refreshed.

Q. Did you recognize that as the same statement Mr. Ingraham read to you this morning and you said you remembered that being made?

A. Well, I suppose it is the same statement.

Q. When Mr. Ingraham asked you if you remembered it being made, did you know what he was reading had been made? A. I don't get the question.

Q. When Mr. Ingraham read this statement to you this morning and asked you if you remembered that statement [fol. 4665] having been made, did you remember that it had been made?

A. I did, after I read the minutes of that meeting.

Q. But you wouldn't know it aside from reading the minutes and seeing it was there?

A. I wouldn't remember it specifically, no.

Q. You have no independent recollection of any such statements, aside from the fact you read them in these minutes? A. No, not positively.

Q. When you say "not positively," what recollection do you have?

A. Well, I mean I know those things transpired, but I don't remember at just what meeting or just in what wording they were put.

Q. Do you know whether there was any further discussion of a renewal of the contract up until the time the contract was renewed? A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you have any idea about what date the contract was renewed? A. No, I have not.

Q. You wouldn't know whether it was March, April, May or June of 1939?

A. Well, I suppose it was on the date when it expired.

Q. But you don't know one way or the other?

A. No, I don't.

[fol. 4666] Q. You have nothing that would make you recall?

A. Well, I never was on any of those committees, and the committees were the ones who negotiated the contracts. Of course, it was always up to a vote of the union for them to be accepted, but the committees were the ones who attended to all of those things, the board of chairmen.

Q. Are you certain you voted on that renewal?

A. I really am not very certain of anything right now, but I think I did.

Q. But you don't have a recollection one way or the other on it?

A. Well, we voted on various things at different times, and I think we always voted on those contracts, but I am not sure. Of course, I did miss a few meetings too.

Q. How many contracts did you have to vote on, do you have any idea? A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you think it was more than one?

A. I don't know whether it was changed the second year—I mean the first contract—was changed or not. I imagine it was some, it might not have been; it may stand as it was to start with.

Q. You don't know at all? A. No, I don't.

Q. I am going to ask the witness to look at Board's [fol. 4667] Exhibit No. 10, which appears in the record of the Circuit Court of Appeals at pages 4695 to 4696 and ask her if, after looking at that document, her recollection is refreshed as to what changes were made in the contract.

Mr. Ingraham: May I see that?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

[fol. 4668] The Witness: What was the question, please?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. If after reading that you have your memory refreshed and now know what the extent of the changes were which were made in the contract?

A. No; I still don't remember that.

Q. You don't remember anything about that?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you remember how the nominating committees were chosen in 1939?

Mr. Reed. Now, if Your Honor please, I am going to renew my objection that this is not recross-examination.

Miss Weyand: This all appears in the minutes that Mr. Ingraham read excerpts from, and I want to see what her recollection of those meetings is.

Mr. Reed: All right. There's no use trying to stop you, anyway.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, isn't that true, Senator, that if that is part of the minutes which Mr. Ingraham had the witness read, it is a matter which is subject to cross-examination?

Mr. Reed: Yes, if he read those particular articles.

The Witness: May I have the question read, please?

Miss Weyand: Miss Reporter, will you read the question to the witness, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter [fol. 4669] as follows:

"Do you remember how the nominating committees were chosen in 1939?")

Mr. Langsdale: That is 8-154.

A. I don't remember, but I believe they were—I just don't remember what they were.

Mr. Reed: What is the exhibit you are referring to, please?

Trial Examiner Batten: What page is that on?

Miss Weyand: It is on page 4544. It occurs at page 4545, which is in the minutes of the meeting of March 14, 1939, from which the respondent read the witness excerpts after having her read through the entire minutes and state that she was present at the meeting.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you have any recollection at all as to how the nominating committees were chosen in 1939?

A. I don't remember.

Q. You don't remember at all?

A. No.

Q. Do you remember reading about that this morning?

A. Yes, I remember reading about it.

Q. But you don't remember what it said at all? You don't remember the names of the persons who made the motions, or what they suggested?

(No answer.)

[fol. 4670] Q. You have no recollection of that?

A. No, I haven't.

Q. You have no recollection of whether they were going to elect the nominating committees or have Rose Todd appoint the nominating committees?

A. I think they were going to be elected.

Q. Are you at all certain of that?

A. No, I am not.

Q. You wouldn't know one way or the other?

A. I don't think Rose Todd appointed those nominating committees.

Q. But you don't remember whether it appeared in the minutes that they decided to elect them or have them appointed?

A. Are you talking about the committee or the chairmen?

Q. It was the nominating committee I was talking about, preparatory to your annual election you held in April of each year; and I am inquiring about 1939.

A. To my recollection, Rose Todd did not appoint the nominating committees.

Q. Did someone else appoint them?

A. I think they were appointed in open meeting. They were named and voted on, if I remember correctly.

Q. And you think that occurred in 1939?

A. I think it did.

Q. But you do not have any recollection of whether it [fol. 4671] did or not?

A. No, I don't.

Q. And you don't know whether it appeared in the minutes you read this morning of March 14 how they decided to select the nominating committees?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you have any independent recollection of the meeting of May 25, 1937?

A. I read those minutes this morning but I don't believe I have any independent recollection of that meeting, except that I know the meeting was called after working hours, in the afternoon.

Q. Why do you say that—

Mr. Reed: Please let her finish.

A. They all were.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. That is the reason you say that one was, because they all were?

A. Yes. I attended the meeting, and I know I never attended one unless it was held after working hours.

Q. What time did you get through work?

A. Either at 4:10 or 5:10. At that time of the year I imagine we were working 9 hours in our section, and that would make it 5:10.

Q. When you say you imagine— Do you have any independent recollection on it?

[fol. 4672] A. No.

• • • • • •

[fol. 4674] Q. Do you remember at how many meetings you raised money for Mr. Tyler's fee?

A. The original fee?

Q. For any fees for Mr. Tyler at any time prior to July 15, 1939.

A. The only meeting I recall where we raised funds was the meeting at the last of March.

Q. That is the only time you recall ever raising any money for Mr. Tyler's fees?

A. Of raising money at the meeting, yes. I know we voted once on a special assessment.

Q. At another time?

A. Yes. I don't know whether it was more than once or not, but I do remember one time we voted on a special assessment.

Q. Do you remember at how many meetings you discussed the question of raising money for Mr. Tyler's fee?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Did it occur quite regularly at meetings?

A. I don't think so. It might have.

Q. How many meetings can you now place where [—] [fol. 4675] was discussed?

A. I couldn't say, Miss Weyand.

Q. You have no idea?

A. No.

Q. Do you remember the one the last part of March, 1937?

A. Where we took the money at the meeting, yes; I remember that because that was the only one where there was a collection taken, to my knowledge.

• • • • • •

[fol. 4676] By Miss Weyand:

Q. How many times do you remember assessments being made to raise funds for Mr. Tyler's fee?

A. Special assessments?

Q. Yes.

A. I remember one.

Q. And what was that amount?

[fol. 4677] A. It was $1.00.

Q. That is the only one you remember?

A. That is the only one I remember.

Q. If I told you there was an assessment of $2.00 a member in 1939, would you know whether that statement was accurate or inaccurate?

A. I wouldn't want to say. To my knowledge, I would say it was inaccurate.

Q. You do not have a recollection that in 1937 there was 50 cents apiece raised, and in 1938 there was $1.00 apiece raised, and in 1939 there was $2.00 apiece raised?

A. No. I remember the dollar, but I have forgotten the others, if they were raised.

Mr. Ingraham: Are you referring to what the union raised?

Miss Weyand: What the employees raised for Mr. Tyler's fees.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How do you happen to recall the dollar assessment? Is there anything special that fixes that in your mind?

A. Yes, there is. I collected it in our section.

Q. Where did you collect that, at the machines?

A. I don't remember. I think I collected it on the lunch hour.

Q. Did you give each girl a receipt?

A. Yes, I did.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4678] Miss Weyand: I would like to have the witness read the minutes of the meeting of April 4, 1939, being Board's exhibit 8-153, beginning in the Circuit Court of Appeals' record at page 4546, directing her attention particularly to page 4553.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4680] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you attend that meeting?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection about the assessment of $2.00 a person?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. And you now remember this was $2.00 assessed?

A. I remember, yes.

Q. Do you know who this Harry Grogan is who participated in the motion to assess $2.00 a member?

A. No, I don't know.

Q. You don't know who he was?

A. No.

Q. You have an independent recollection now, after reading this, that $2.00 was assessed at that meeting?

A. Yes, I do remember it. I remember now the girl in our section that collected the money for that, too.

Q. Do you know her name?

A. Alpha Elsten.

Q. Do you happen to remember that occurred in April, 1939, or do you just remember the $2.00 collection?

A. I just remember the $2.00 collection, I don't remember the date.

Q. She gave you receipts?

A. Yes.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4684] Q. You stated on redirect examination by Mr. Ingraham that you understood that at the meeting at which each agreed to contribute 50c, that the money was to be paid to Mr. Tyler as a fee to prosecute an injunction suit?

A. Something to that effect.

Q. And did you ever give Rose Todd or anyone else your consent that it be paid to him for anything else?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever hear that it had been paid to him to get up the by-laws and write the working agreement and give other advice to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I did not.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4685] Q. Now, you stated that never, at any Donnelly Garment Workers' meeting did you ever hear the Loyalty League mentioned, did you?

A. Will you please recite that again?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Last question was read by the reporter.)

A. Well, I don't remember. It probably was mentioned, because a lot of times if the Loyalty League was giving a dance or card party or any kind of entertainment, it would only be natural that we should have it announced at our union meeting, that they were giving it, they would expect all of us to do our part.

[fol. 4686] Q. Then, your recollection on whether or not it was ever mentioned is not clear, is that right?

A. No, it is not.

Q. It may have been mentioned?

A. It may have been mentioned, but I don't remember.

Q. Yes, and it may have been mentioned at the meeting of May 25, 1937?

A. It might have been.

Q. Now, you said that you saw Marjorie Green taking notes at meetings, did you?

A. I did.

Q. Well, you don't mean to tell the Examiner that she was present at every meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and took the notes?

A. Well, to my knowledge she was present at every meeting the first two years; I think she was secretary, and I don't remember of any meetings where she was absent.

Q. Well, did you know of her going on a vacation at any time and letting someone else take the minutes?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Well, you say that didn't happen?

A. No, I wouldn't say that it didn't happen, but I don't remember of being at any meeting where Marjorie Green was absent.

Q. It could be that you did get away from your work on [fol. 4687] May 25, 1937, at 4:10, could it?

A. Yes, it could be.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. And it could be that the meeting was going on when you got there?

A. I don't believe that a meeting was ever going on at that particular time of day.

Q. Well, I am not asking you that. Do you know whether you arrived at the meeting of May 25, before the meeting started?

A. I don't know but I was usually there before they started.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4689] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Very well; you recall Miss Weyand inquiring if the employees had raised $1, sometime?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Now, I wish you would state whether or not, when you answered that they did, that you meant to say that the $1 was raised at the meeting of the employees in the latter part of March 1937?

[fol. 4690] A. No, I didn't mean that.

Mr. Ingraham: I wanted to clear that up.

Trial Examiner Batten: As a matter of fact, I don't think the record indicates that at all.

. . . . . .

Mr. Langsdale: The $2 that Miss Weyand inquired about, that was raised at the meeting of April 4, 1939.

Miss Weyand: There was $1 in 1938 and $2 in 1939.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think the record is very clear.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4691] Recross-Examination

By Mr. Lane:

Q. The $1 collected, mentioned by Miss Weyand, in 1938, and the $2 mentioned by Miss Weyand in 1939, were assessments made by the union on its members and paid by the members of the union to the union for union purposes, was it?

A. That's right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, certainly if it was not clear, it ought to be now. As a matter of fact, I think it was before. Miss Weyand even started to ask her questions about the 50c, the $1 and $2; it is not only here by witnesses but it is a matter of record in minutes and written documents.

Mr. Lane: It was intimated that it referred to the employees and did not refer to the union.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4692] Trial Examiner Batten. Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: I would like the record to show that Wave Tobin is present in court and has been present at every session since she was on the stand, and respondent again asks the right to continue its examination of her.

Trial Examiner Batten: Has Mrs. Reed been in court since we started up again, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: No, she has not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think I can verify the fact for you that, as far as I recall, Miss Tobin has been here every day.

We will proceed.

Mr. Ingraham: And my request to be permitted to continue my examination of her will be denied?

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed in line with the ruling which I have previously made, Mr. Ingraham.

. . . . . .

Lois Barnes, a witness called by and on behalf of respondent Donnelly Garment Company, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you give us your name?

The Witness: Lois Barnes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Where do you live, Mrs. Barnes?

[fol. 4693] A. 3752 Wabash.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Where are you employed?

A. Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. How long have you been employed at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Ten and a half years.

Q. In what capacity are you employed?

A. Operator.

Q. Do you do any special kind of sewing?

A. I do straight needle and binding.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were you employed and working at the Donnelly Garment Company in the spring of 1937?

A. I was.

Q. Are you a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Do you recall when you became a member?

[fol. 4694] A. I became a member when the union was formed.

Q. Were you at the meeting at which the union was formed?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Will you state approximately when that meeting was held? Do you recall?

A. The last of April.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What year, Mrs. Barnes?

A. 1937.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, prior to that time had there been any violence going on in Kansas City at other garment plants?

A. Yes, there had.

Q. Had you read articles in the paper about that violence?

A. Yes, I read quite a number of articles about it.

Q. I have shown you respondent's exhibits Nos. 18 through 34, and respondent's exhibits 36 and 37—

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Have you read all of those articles?

A. I read all of them in the Star but not all in the Journal-Post.

Q. Will you pick out the articles that you did read and state what exhibit it is?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4695] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. As you go through call off the ones that you have read.

A. The ones I did read?

Q. Yes.

A. (Looking through exhibits.) Exhibit 19, exhibit 20, exhibit 21, exhibit 24,— You mean, just in the Journal-Post?

Q. No. In the Star and Times, too.

A. Exhibit 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 33, 34, 35—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. 35?

Mr. Ingraham: Omit 35. I think I asked you about 18 to 34, inclusive.

Trial Examiner Batten: And 36 and 37.

Mr. Ingraham: That is right.

A. (Continuing) —36, and 37.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. State what effect these articles had on you.

A. They worried me very much.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4696] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Had you any personal knowledge of the violence going on at Twenty-sixth and Grand at this time?

A. I didn't see it.

Q. You did not see it?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Was the violence discussed generally among the employees at the Donnelly plant?

A. It was. It was discussed very generally, and there was a lot of excitement at the time.

Q. And were these newspaper articles read by the employees, so far as you could observe?

A. Yes, they were.

Q. And what, in your opinion, was the effect on the [fol. 4697] other employees at the plant of the violence going on at the other strikes?

A. They were afraid the same thing would happen to them, and they didn't want any of that sort of violence down in front of our plant.

Q. Had any threats been made?

A. I think some had been made along in January.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Of what year?

A. That same year.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you understand that the International was going to use the same sort of violence against the Donnelly employees?

A. That was what we understood. In fact, I think they stated that that wasn't anything to what we would get when they got around to us.

Q. Did you consider that the strikes at the other plants were preliminary to the violence that was going to be used against the Donnelly employees?

* * * * * *

[fol. 4698] A. Yes, I did. We had heard they were going to organize us, but I don't believe anyone was excited until they really started on those other places, and then we began to realize what they meant.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, will you please state what caused you to vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I didn't want to be a party to that sort of an organization. That was my main reason.

Q. What sort of an organization are you referring to?

A. The I. L. G. W. U. I didn't want to be identified with people that had no more principle about them than to go out and cause disturbances and riots and molest people who were trying to work, and force them to join something they had no interest in whatever and didn't need.

Q. Did that cause you to vote in favor of joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. It did. Also I had never had any trouble at the Donnelly Garment Company. I was completely satisfied [fol. 4699] with the working conditions there and I didn't think we needed any interference.

Q. What time of day did the meeting take place in which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

A. I can't say exactly. I think it was around 5 o'clock.

Q. Was it after your working hours? A. It was.

Q. Do you know where the meeting was held?

A. I believe, on the second floor. It was a vacant floor at that time.

Q. Did any executive or officer of the company or anybody you thought represented the company discuss with you about holding such a meeting?

A. I never discussed it with anyone except the girls I worked with.

Q. Did any officer or executive of the company or anybody you thought represented the company ask or suggest that you attend that meeting? A. No, they did not.

Q. Did any officer, executive, or any person you thought represented the management ever suggest to you that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or any other union be organized? A. No.

Q. Did you hear any discussion among the employees that the company wanted the employees to organize the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

[fol. 4700] A. No, I never heard anything about what the company wanted.

Q. Do you recall who presided at that meeting?

A. The April 27 meeting?

Q. Yes.

A. I think it was Rose Todd.

Q. Do you recall whether or not Mr. Tyler was present at that meeting? A. Yes, Mr. Tyler was present.

Q. Did the employees take a vote on whether or not they would organize a union? A. They did.

Q. Will you state briefly what took place at the meeting?

A. Rose Todd told us there had been a committee—No, that wasn't that meeting. She said Mr. Tyler was there, that they had consulted with him, and—

* * * * * *

A. (Continuing) —Mr. Tyler was there to talk to us and tell us what our rights were within the law and to advise us as to what we could do.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were cards passed out to be signed by employees if they wanted to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

[fol. 4701] A. Yes, they were passed out. I think most of the boys, the basket boys, and different employees there handed out the cards, and they said—or Rose Todd said we could sign the cards then or we could turn them in later; she wanted us to think it over before we signed them.

Q. Did you sign a card? A. Yes.

Q. Did you vote in favor of organizing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will? A. I did.

Q. Have you continued to belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will? A. I have.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will ask you if you felt that if you did not join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union the company would penalize you? A. No, I did not.

[fol. 4702] Q. Was there any suggestion or pressure brought to bear on you or any other employee by anybody representing the company in order that you would join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit 16 and ask you if you recall seeing the pictures that are at the bottom of the front page of the Kansas City Times on March 18, 1937.

* * * * * *

A. Yes, I saw that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I believe you stated that you did read the article that is contained in respondent's exhibit No. 27, which appeared in the Kansas City Star on March 17, 1937? The article is entitled "Sitters Block the Door." A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you see the picture that appears on that exhibit? A. Yes, I saw the picture.

Q. Now, at the time referred to in these two exhibits, March 17 and 18, 1937, what effect did the sit-down strike [fol. 4703] at Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri have on you?

A. It made me frightened, for one thing. I know I watched every morning for them to be down in front of our door, and my husband drove me to work every day.

Q. Now, state whether or not a meeting of employees was held about that time.

A. About the time of this violence?

Q. This sit-down strike on March 17 and 18.

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Where was that meeting held?

A. On the second floor, I believe.

Q. Was that meeting held after working hours?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you learn that there was to be such a meeting?

A. It was a matter of general knowledge. It was passed around like word is when everybody is supposed to know something. It was passed from one floor to another and from one girl to another. Of course, everybody was expecting something, because they wanted to do something to protect themselves.

Q. Had there been a general discussion among the employees prior to the time of this meeting that they wanted to do something to protect themselves?

A. Yes, it was generally discussed, and I imagine, from the time—oh, from the first of the year there was a little [fol. 4704] discussion about it.

Q. Will you state who presided at that meeting of employees on March 18?

A. I think Rose Todd was asked to preside at that meeting.

Q. Did you consider that meeting a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No. I knew it wasn't a Loyalty League meeting.

Q. How did you know it wasn't a Loyalty League meeting?

A. Because we were going to see what could be done to protect ourselves from the I. L. G. W. U.

Q. Was anything said with respect to Mrs. Reed coming to the meeting?

A. Well, after we were at the meeting someone wanted her to come down and speak to us.

Q. Did she come down? A. Yes, she did.

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Reed make the statement that if the plant was unionized she would close it, or something to that effect? A. I don't remember that.

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Reed say that she would not let Dubinsky tell her how to run her business?

A. No, I don't remember it.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed make any statement with respect to whether or not employees could join or not join a labor organization?

A. She said that they had a right to make up their own [fol. 4705] mind whether they would or would not join any labor organization.

Q. Did she say anything with respect to forcing employees to join or not join a union?

A. She didn't say anything about forcing anyone to do anything.

Q. Did she make any statement with respect to Dubinsky that you recall?

A. Well, it seems to me I read that in the paper, but whether she said it, I don't know.

Q. Now, did your instructor tell you to go to that meeting? A. No, she did not.

Q. Did anybody representing the management request or suggest that you attend that meeting? A. No.

Q. Did anybody representing the management discuss with you that meeting prior to the time it was held?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Did you go to that meeting of your own free will?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you feel any pressure on the part of the company that if you did not attend that meeting you would be penalized? A. No, indeed.

[fol. 4706] Q. Now, was there anything said at that meeting about appointing a committee?

A. Which meeting?

Q. March 18.

A. Yes, there was a committee appointed to see a lawyer and find out what steps we could take to protect ourselves against violence.

Q. Will you state whether or not there was any discussion about bringing an injunction suit?

A. I don't know whether it was discussed at that meeting or not.

Q. Do you know who was on the committee?

A. That went—

Q. (Interrupting) That went to employ lawyers?

A. No; I believe there were three, but I don't remember who they were.

Q. Did you know whether or not the committee ever reported back to the employees?

A. I don't remember any certain word, but the outcome of that was the meeting the last of March, to hear what they had found out from the attorneys.

Q. Was that a meeting of employees? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what time of day that meeting took place? A. I imagine it was around 5.

[fol. 4707] Q. Was it during working hours?

A. No, it was not.

Q. Do you know what place in the building the meeting was held?

A. On the second floor, I believe.

Q. Now, will you state what was done at that meeting?

A. I think some of us expected that the attorney would be there, but Miss Todd told us that before anyone would take a case like that, that they required a retainer fee, which is customary, I think, and that after we had raised money enough to retain an attorney, then we would get definite information; so, I think there was a motion made — well, there was a discussion on how to raise the money, for it, and they even discussed candy sales, but they overruled that, and decided a donation would be simpler and easier, and everybody would share equally in the expenses.

Q. Do you know the amount of the contribution that was agreed upon?

A. Yes, it was 50c.

Q. Did you give 50c?

A. I did.

Q. When did you give it?

A. I think I gave it the next day. Some of the girls were so enthusiastic they threw their money on the platform, but Miss Todd said not to do that because there was [fol. 4708] no way of checking who had given, and that they wanted to be sure that the girls who paid would have their names down and wouldn't be asked again.

Q. Did anybody representing the company discuss that meeting with you?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Did anybody representing the company suggest or ask you to attend that meeting?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did your instructor direct you to attend the meeting?

A. No, she didn't.

Q. Did anything occur that led you to believe that the company would penalize you if you did not attend the meeting and make a contribution?

A. No, there was no fear of that, no fear of anything down there, and there never has been.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4709] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Have you had any fear that the company would penalize you for anything you did in connection with any labor matters?

A. No.

Mr. Langsdale: Wait a minute. Are you confining that up to July 15, 1939?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, up to the middle of July, 1939.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I presume I should say again that perhaps I am assuming too much; but I am assuming that the attorneys are complying with that —

Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) Unless otherwise —

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Unless otherwise. Of course, I am not recommending that you go along too long in asking questions of the witnesses without referring to it.

Mr. Langsdale: Just so long as it is understood we don't have to meet any time after that, then I won't have any objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, as far as I am concerned, that is understood.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, that is my intention.

Mr. Langsdale: I thought it was what you said.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Mr. Reed: For the sake of clarity, we want it understood, we must stop at July, 1939, that we are not afraid [fol. 4710] to go beyond that. We are stopping at that point because that is the ruling of the commissioner.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: But my understanding is that the position of the Respondent is that we should not try out the issues from July 15, 1939, down to today.

Mr. Reed: That is perhaps true because, by Your [fol. 4711] Honor's ruling, which I think was a correct ruling, the issues that are to be tried here are to be confined to the charges which were made.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Barnes, did you consider the meeting the last of March, when the money was raised to pay the lawyer, a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you consider the meeting where the Donnelly Garment Union was organized a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you consider the meeting of March 18 a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd took an active part in those various meetings lead you to believe that they were Loyalty League meetings?

A. No, that never entered my mind.

Q. Are you a member of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Will you state what activities the Loyalty League has had, to your knowledge?

A. They have sponsored dances and card parties, and we have had carnivals — I don't know whether the Athletic [fol. 4712] Association sponsored those or whether it was the Loyalty League, but they were purely social, we just had a good time.

Q. Did you feel that the company would penalize you if you did not belong to a Loyalty League?

A. No.

Q. Was the Loyalty League a social organization?

A. Yes, that was my understanding.

Q. Did you have any dues?

A. I didn't pay any dues.

Q. Did you ever hear of anybody paying any dues in this Loyalty League?

A. I never heard of anyone paying dues.

Q. Did you ever hear of the Loyalty League helping you or any other employees in connection with labor matters?

A. No, I never did.

Q. Did you ever authorize anyone connected with the Loyalty League to have the Loyalty League act for you in labor matters?

A. No, I never did.

Q. Did you understand that the Loyalty League was sponsored by the company?

A. I don't think it was sponsored by the company.

Q. Who was it sponsored by?

A. I think it was an organization of employees.

Q. Are there other organizations down at the plant that [fol. 4713] employees have besides the Loyalty League?

A. The Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Well, aside from the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, are there social organizations at the plant, and athletic organizations?

A. There is an athletic organization, although I don't know much about it. It is run by the employees, and they also, in some sections, have clubs that they have organized themselves.

Q. Are the sectional clubs social organizations?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you ever understand or question the impression in any way that the Loyalty League was promoting the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I never had that impression.

Q. Did you ever understand or question the impression that the Loyalty League — no, that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was a successor to the Loyalty League?

A. No, that is a different organization altogether.

Q. Is there any connection, except that employees belong to both organizations? Is there any connection between the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Loyalty League?

A. No, not to my knowledge.

Q. Did any instructor order you to go or attend the meeting of March 18?

[fol. 4714] A. No, she didn't.

Q. Did any instructor order you to attend the meeting in the latter part of March, when a contribution was made for lawyers?

A. She did not.

Q. Did any instructor order you to go to the meeting of April 27?

A. She did not.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I'll hand you Respondent's Exhibit No. 6, and ask you if you recall reading this article that appeared in the Kansas City Times, as of February 26, 1937.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4714a] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. There is a second page to that. Did you read that article?

A. Yes, I read it.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4715] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What effect, if any, did this article have on your joining the I. L. G. W. U. or not joining the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. Well, I didn't like their practices as far as their organizational activities were concerned, and them going out and trying to knock another person's business in order to get members for themselves.

Q. Do you recall reading the part of the article that states, "Part of the union's campaign directed against the Donnelly Garment Company will be to send six women to cities and towns where its garments are sold, advising retailers and labor organizations, Mr. Perlstein said. Miss Palmer will have charge of this squad of field workers."

A. Yes, we discussed it.

Q. Did you also read this sentence, this paragraph, "The union claims only 25 members in the Donnelly workers, but officials expect hundreds of others are related to union members. Within a year we will have it completely organized, Mr. Perlstein said, and as soon as we have enough members, we will call a strike. This will be in addition to carrying our side to the consumers." Do you remember reading that particular article?

A. Yes, we were afraid of — we knew that would be the first thing they would do, call a strike, since they thought [fol. 4716] they could.

Q. Now, do you recall shortly after that article appeared in the paper that a petition was circulated among the employees of the Donnelly Company.

A. Yes.

Q. Directed to Mrs. Reed?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. I will hand you I. L. G. W. U. Exhibit No. 10, and ask you if you recall the writing that appears at the top of the page as the same writing that was on the page that you signed.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you sign such a petition?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did the article that you have just testified about, that appeared on February 26, 1937, have anything to do with your desire to sign this petition?

A. Yes, I think that was what motivated me in signing it.

Q. Do you recall in this petition it stated that, "You refused to acknowledge any union labor organization"?

A. I do.

[fol. 4717] Q. What organization were you referring to?

. . . . . .

A. I knew what I was signing. Of course, I think it was uppermost in everyone's mind, it was in mine, the idea of joining the I. L. G. W. U. didn't appeal to us, but I don't think we cared about any organization coming in and telling us what we should do.

Q. Now, did you want Mrs. Reed to know that at that time? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was the I. L. G. W. U. the only organization that was trying to organize you at that time?

A. As far as I know.

Q. Now, who asked you to sign this petition, if you recall?

A. There were two girls came up with it, Mary Sprofera, I believe it is, and Inez Warren, and I don't remember which one asked me, but they were together, and they handed it to me.

Trial Examiner Batten: What section were you in then, Mrs. Barnes?

[fol. 4718] A. In 414.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is on what floor?

A. Eighth floor.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall what they said to you, when they handed you the petition?

A. They asked me if I would read that and sign it if I cared to.

[fol. 4719] Q. Did you want Mrs. Reed to know how you felt about refusing to acknowledge the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. Well, I wanted— I suppose I might say I wanted her to know, and I think we all wanted each other to know, too.

Q. Did anybody representing the management discuss with you the signing of this petition?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Did you understand or believe that you would be penalized by the company if you did not sign the petition?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did your instructor ask you to sign the petition?

A. She did not.

Q. Did you discuss the signing of this petition with your instructor? A. No, I [did].

Q. Did you hear your instructor tell anybody to sign the petition?

A. No, I didn't. I don't think they knew that it was going around.

Q. Who do you mean, "they"?

A. Any of the instructors or— A lot of people didn't know it was going around until it was handed to them.

Q. Did you sign the petition of your own free will?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did it express your sentiment uninfluenced by any- [fol. 4720] thing that the management did?

A. It expressed my sentiments very deeply.

Q. Did you ever hear that the petition was circulated by the Loyalty League? A. No.

Q. Was anything said to you about the Loyalty League when the petition was presented to you?

A. The Loyalty League was never mentioned.

Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit No. 7 and ask you if you recall reading this article that appeared in the Kansas City Journal-Post for March 6, 1937.

(Thereupon the article referred to in the last question was read by the witness.)

Q. Do you recall reading that article?

A. I believe I did.

Q. Have you ever heard Senator Reed make a speech?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you hear Senator Reed make a speech in 1936; do you recall?

A. I don't recall what year it was.

Q. Did you ever hear Senator Reed say in any political speech anything about Mr. Dubinsky?

A. No, I never did.

Q. Did you know until you saw this article on March 6, 1937, that Mr. Reed had said many harsh things about [fol. 4721] Mr. Dubinsky in the recent political campaign?

A. No, I didn't hear it.

Q. Now, the fact that Mr. Dubinksy stated in a public speech in Kansas City, which was published in the Journal-Post on March 6, 1937, Mr. Reed said many harsh things about him in the recent political campaign, did that have anything to do with influencing you to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I don't know that it did. My mind was already made up.

Q. Anything that Mr. Reed said had nothing to do with why you did not want to join the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. Nothing that he said made any difference to me.

Q. Did anything that Mr. Reed ever said have anything to do with causing you to favor forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No. He wasn't responsible in any way.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4725] Mr. Ingraham: I will hand you Board's Exhibit 27 and ask you to read that article which appeared in the Kansas City Times on May 11, 1937.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall reading that article?

A. Yes, I read that.

Q. Did anything that was attributed to Mr. Reed in that article influence you in any way in your feelings toward the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. I think my feelings were already formed at that time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, the question to you is, Mrs. Barnes, whether this had any influence upon you.

A. No, I don't believe that it did. I think I already [fol. 4726] had those ideas.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Well, when you say you "think", do you mean that you did or that you don't recall?

A. Well, it wasn't that article. My mind was made up before I read the article.

Q. Now, in this article it states that Mr. Reed said—it is in quotation marks—that the "employees of this company aren't only satisfied but on their own motion some months ago organized a Loyalty League to resist the activities of Mr. Dubinsky and his crowd, and substantially all of the employees voluntarily became members of that organization." Now, as a matter of fact, when had the Loyalty League been organized, if you recall?

A. The Loyalty League was organized in 1935.

Q. And this article was on May 11, 1937, so it was more than a few months?

A. Yes, it was several months.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit 42, which is an article that appeared in the Kansas City Times for November 10, 1936, and ask you if you recall reading that article.

* * * * * * *

A. Yes, I read that.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4727] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall this article purported to state that Mr. Dubinsky said that the organization drive would open with establishment of offices in St. Louis, Kansas City and Pennsylvania and upper New York? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall further it stated that Dubinsky asserted the St. Louis office would have sufficed for Missouri, "except that the union wants to give Jim Reed a break. He explained that the wife of James A. Reed, former Democratic candidate for Senator for Missouri, is the founder and principal stockholder of a factory in Kansas City." Do you recall reading that in the article?

A. Yes, I remember he said he was going to give Jim Reed a break.

Q. Do you further recall that he said, "the Kansas City office of the drive will concentrate on unionizing employees in the Donnelly Garment Company, which Dubinsky said is largely owned by Mrs. Reed." Do you recall reading that? A. Yes.

Q. Now, had there been strikes, to your knowledge, in garment plants in Kansas City prior to this time, November 1936?

A. There had been some in 1936, but I don't know now [fol. 4728] what time.

Q. Do you recall whether there had been any in 1935?

Mr. Langsdale: If the Examiner please, that certainly isn't within the offer of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I have my doubts myself, whether it is within the offers of proof. Is it in any offer of proof?

Mr. Ingraham: I think we made an offer of proof to show—I mean that was broad enough to cover this, to show the employees' reasons.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's find out. Of course, if you take the position that the situation in 1936 was such, and it is covered by the offer of proof, that there was no action on their part until 1937—if the offer of proof covers it I have no objections to it, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: Just a moment. Let me refer to the offers of proof.

Mr. Langsdale: I have here the specific offer with reference to strikes at Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri.

Mr. Ingraham: What page is that?

Mr. Langsdale: On the Intervener's it is on page 2 of their offer and reads as follows:

"The undersigned would also testify under oath if present in Court in this hearing that during the month of March, 1937, the disorders and violence connected with the Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri strikes then being carried on were a subject of common and frequent conversation [fol. 4728a] and comment and discussion by the employees of the Donnelly Companies; that it was commonly reported, and each of the undersigned has heard, that the I. L. G. W. U., or some of the pickets or strikers in those strikes, had committed acts of violence, and that they, or some of them, had claimed that the Donnelly plant was next on the list, or similar words, the substance of which was that the people connected with the strikes, and the violence connected therewith, planned and intended to subject the employees of the Donnelly Companies to similar violence if such employees did not join the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; that the undersigned had all seen or heard of articles in the newspapers concerning the strikes at Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri; that as a result of this information the attitude of mind of the undersigned parties, and of the employees of the companies in general, was one of apprehension, uneasiness, and so forth."

Now, that is in intervener's offer of proof. The Respondent's offer of proof, on page 18 thereof, is the following:

"That he was present at a meeting of employees held on March 18, 1937, on the second floor of the Corrigan Building; that said meeting took place after working hours; that said meeting was arranged by Rose Todd and Hobart Atherton; that Miss Rose Todd, an employee of the company, presided at the meeting; that the principal topic discussed at the meeting was the strikes which were then [fol. 4729] occurring at the Missouri, Gernes, and Gordon Garment factories, and the violence and molestation of the employees of such companies by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the threats that the Donnelly Garment Company 'would be next', and the same things would be done to the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company as were being done at the Missouri, Gernes and Gordon plants, and so forth."

That is the only thing I can find that said anything about strikes in their offer of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, did you look through the offers of proof?

Mr. Lane: I have only looked through my own. I have been following what Mr. Langsdale read from our offer.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is your position on this matter, Mr. Lane?

Mr. Lane: Why, I think it is for the continuing state of mind of the employees, and if that state of mind was induced by acts in 1935 and 1936, I think it is within the purport of the offers, and that we aren't confined to the exact wording or matters stated in the offers. The thing we are trying to find out is whether or not they were under threats and domination on the part of the employer, and if that continued until 1937.

Trial Examiner Batten: What we are trying to do in this hearing is to take the testimony which the Circuit [fol. 4730] Court said I had rejected, therefore the question arises, is it within the offer of proof?

Mr. Lane: Well, the testimony is to be how and why they formed the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. One of the reasons they did was that in 1935 the International had done certain things which created a state of mind which continued; I think that is competent.

Mr. Langsdale: Those words "how" and "why" don't hold true. Whenever a general thing is followed by a specific thing, there is an old rule that it is governed by that specific thing, and they specifically set out strikes at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants in 1937; and they went on to allege that, right at that time, these people formed their union.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: That is page 6, that is the paragraph we have discussed several times at the hearing [fol. 4731] before the Trial Examiner, when the petitions were offered. Now, the thing about the offers of proof, and so forth, is this, while I think the Circuit Court intended clearly that the employees have a right to testify what influenced them or why they formed this organization, I don't think that means that that should become the primary factor here, and not to the exclusion of the question, did the respondent have anything to do with them. That, after all, is still the principal and main matter, as far as the issues are concerned.

Now, unless the offer covers it, I don't believe that we should go beyond the offers as far as these employees are concerned, and if I were to accept your interpretation, Mr. Lane, then there would be no limit upon it, it would be all inclusive, and I don't believe that is what the Court intended.

Mr. Ingraham: I think that the offers are broad enough to include this testimony. The offers cover the situation as to whether or not the employees joined the union of their own free will.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, but here is a matter, there was not even any union in existence at this time, and it was not until months after that the union was organized. Now, on that theory, Mr. Ingraham, you might go back an indefinite period of time and say that there was some-

[fol. 4732] thing which occurred in 1935 or 1930 or 1925, they may have had a strike in 1920 in Kansas City, Missouri, and there was some violence, and therefore they acquire a distaste for unions, so when 1937 came along they still remembered that, and they then decided in 1937 for that reason they didn't want anything to do with the union unless it was their own.

I mean, in other words, where would you suggest that the line be drawn, if it be drawn at all?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I suggest that the line be drawn to those matters that occurred within a reasonable matter of time before the Union was organized, and not go back to any remote matters.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, what would you say is reasonable?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I would say certainly within, say, six months, but the Board went clear back to the N. R. A. days, to matters that occurred in 1934 and 1935.

Trial Examiner Batten: That's right.

Mr. Ingraham: And now, to shut us up and say that the matters that the International did within three or four months prior to the time the Union was organized have no bearing on the case is—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Well, we aren't trying out the N. R. A. case again, we are here for the purpose of taking certain testimony which I rejected. Now, [fol. 4733] the testimony I rejected is covered in offers of proof, and my question to you was where, in the offer of proof, is it covered?

Mr. Ingraham: I don't think the Court intended that it be limited to the offers of proof; however, if you take that view of it, I think that the general purport of the offers of proof would cover this testimony.

The offers of proof go into the factors that entered into the employees doing certain things, and certainly if this witness testifies that she knew of strikes that had occurred in garment plants, and the strikes were instigated by the

International, and that there was violence and she knew when they said there was a strike it meant there was going to be violence—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) What about this article? Where does this article say anything about violence or a strike? That is a controversy between Senator Reed and someone else in a political campaign.

Mr. Reed: Oh, no, that is not the purport of that.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Perlstein testified—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Now, irrespective of that, my question to you is how does this article say anything about a strike or violence?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I am going to ask the witness, that is my purpose, if she had known of strikes where the [fol. 4734] Union was attempting to unionize other garment plants in Kansas City, did the Union engage in strikes, was there violence, did she understand when the International said they were going to unionize the Donnelly plant that they meant there would be a strike. Mr. Perlstein, within 30 or 60 days, issued a statement in the press, and said they were going to have a strike, they were starting their campaign against the Donnelly Company, that they would call a strike as soon as they had enough members, that that was their program; there wasn't any question about that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let me ask you this. You say 6 months is a reasonable period. Do you think it is, Mr. Lane?

Mr. Lane: Our position is we objected to going into any matter which precedes the Wagner Act. The Board overruled us on that, the Board said that as a background the events might show what took place prior.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4735] Mr. Lane: We offered to show there was no pressure, control, domination, or intimidation on the part of the company.

Trial Examiner Batten: Going back to when?

Mr. Lane: At the time we formed our Union. If the Board is going to show that was created in 1934, we have a right to show why the Board was wrong, and to show that the employees were not under the intimidation, pressure, control, or domination of the company.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that in the offer of proof? If it is will you show it to me?

Mr. Lane: We offer to show there was no action of pressure, domination, intimidation, or control on the part of the company.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. Do you consider going back to 1934 is not too remote?

Mr. Lane: We are on the defensive here, we are required to meet the case which the Board presents.

Trial Examiner Batten: You are not here on the defensive, you are here to present certain testimony which the Court said I should receive; that is the purpose of this hearing.

[fol. 4736] Mr. Lane: I mean in the entire case.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is what I want to receive. I want to receive everything which the Court, in its opinion, thought we should receive. Now, I am still asking you where, in the offer of proof, it refers to any such time as 1934 or 1935.

Mr. Lane: Well, let me read this from the offer of proof, which has no limitation as to time.

Mr. Langsdale: What page and what offer of proof?

Mr. Lane: It is in Board's Exhibit No. 1, quadruple R, being the intervener's offer of proof—and I'll have to look at the record to get the Circuit Court of Appeals page.

Mr. Langsdale: I would like to know what page in that offer of proof, which is before me.

Mr. Lane: The third page.

Miss Weyand: It is 3473, I think, in the Circuit Court of Appeals record.

Mr. Lane: That is correct, page 3473: "The undersigned state they are members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and that they joined said Union and have at all times since remained members thereof solely of their own [fol. 4737] free will, choice and preference, and that they have not been influenced by any threats, coercion or pressure of their employer, or any representative of the employer, and that they have no knowledge of any instance in which the employer or any representatives of the employer have exerted pressure, intimidation, coercion or any other influence upon the undersigned or any other employees to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or to stay out of any other labor union."

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, is this young lady's name on that offer?

Mr. Lane: Yes, it is.

Mr. Langsdale: How does that cover a strike in 1935 or 1936?

Mr. Lane: I haven't finished with my statement. Under the issues which the Board claims were made in this case, the Board has claimed the right to bring forward the testimony as to the company's attitude or conduct back in the N. R. A. days, and they put in a substantial portion of that record for the purpose of showing that the company had been creating an atmosphere of domination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, and Mr. Lane, under the stipulation you also had a right to put in any of that you wanted, and so did the respondent, and I believe you did put in—at least the respondent did—the part of that record which it considered material, so you are not foreclosed on that.

[fol. 4738] Mr. Lane: But, if we are denied the right to have the employees testify in face of the showing the Board made that prior to 1936 they were dominated, controlled, intimidated in their attitude toward the I. L. G. W. U., then we are foreclosed giving evidence meeting the evidence the Board gave. In that kind of testimony we are endeavoring to meet the evidence which the Board has made here, and which the Examiner has permitted the Board to make.

We have a right to show that it was not true.

Trial Examiner Batten: What do you mean, that I permitted the Board to make?

Mr. Lane: I mean you admitted the testimony with regard to the N. R. A. over our objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mr. Lane. I don't think the record will bear you out that it was over your objection. When I make this statement about the other hearing, it is purely from remembrance, but my recollection is on that that the respondent and the intervener and the Board—and I think the Union—all stipulated that they could put into the record any of the parts of some of these other hearings which they desired to put in.

Mr. Lane: No, we, at all times, as I recall, objected to anything preceding the enactment of the Wagner Act. We were overruled on that. Now, without waiving that objec- [fol. 4739] tion, I think we did stipulate that so far as putting the matter into testimony was concerned, the former records could be used, but we did not waive our objection to the admissibility of that evidence at all, and that is still my position. It is here, and we've got to meet it, and that is one of the methods by which we proceed to meet it.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4740] Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: My position is that the evidence sought to be adduced from this witness as to the violence or the strikes of which she had knowledge prior to the Gornes, Gordon, and Missouri plant strikes is not within the terms of the offer and, therefore, not within the terms of the remand.

I do think, under the terms of the offer and the terms of the remand, counsel for the company are entitled to have the witnesses whom they named in the offer make a general denial that at any time they were the subject of interference, restraint, or coercion, but I think, having regard for the rules of evidence and offers, counsel should have named any specific facts in the offer as to which they wish to have the witnesses specifically testify, and I think their mention of the Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri strikes, [fol. 4741] their specificity with respect to the March 18 meeting, the meeting at the end of March or the first of April, and the April 27 meeting, and the Loyalty League being a social organization, excludes them from going into other matters.

Now, of course, as has been pointed out here, we are not concerned with whether a girl was influenced or not by violence. We are concerned only with whether they were influenced by what the company did. The fact that the girl may have heard of violence at remote times is not within the terms of the offer of proof and not within the issues of this case.

For that reason I do not think the question propounded to the witness is a proper question under the offer.

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator?

Mr. Reed: Now, I beg to be allowed to state my position, if possible, without interruption until I get through.

The Board found (and I read from its finding), under subheading III, "The Unfair Labor Practices:

"A. Events prior to the effective date of the Act.

"The I. L. G. W. U. made its initial efforts to organize employees of the respondent in 1934 when it established a regional office in Kansas City, Missouri, on March 15, 1934, an open meeting of the I. L. G. W. U. was held in Musicians' Hall in Kansas City, to which all employees of the respondent were invited. Few of the operators (i.e., [fol. 4742] production employees paid at piecework rates) attended, but a number of the respondent's officials, supervisors, and instructors were present. Soon after, several of the respondent's employees, including Glynn Brooks Yarnell, who had been an operator in the respondent's plant since December, 1924, made application for membership in the I. L. G. W. U. In June, 1934, Mrs. Yarnell held a dinner at her home attended by 12 or 13 of her fellow employees. At this meeting the girls discussed the advisability of joining the I. L. G. W. U. and of forming a local branch. Glynn Brooks Yarnell was discharged in July, 1934. Within a few months all except one of the girls who had attended the dinner were either laid off or discharged by the respondent.

"On December 6, 1934, the I. L. G. W. U. filed a charge against the respondent under Section 7 (a) of the National Industrial Recovery Act, alleging that 8 operators had been laid off because they had joined the I. L. G. W. U. Before proceedings were completed and a decision issued, the National Industrial Recovery Act was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States.

"The record establishes that the respondent, through its supervisory employees, openly and actively resisted the initial organizational activities of the I. L. G. W. U. In 1934 Mrs. Elizabeth Reeves, who was then production manager, had expressed the opposition of the respondent to the I. L. G. W. U. She made a practice of questioning [fol. 4743] employees concerning their relations with the I. L. G. W. U. She criticized several operators for joining or applying for membership in the I. L. G. W. U. She told various employees that they had been 'listening too much to somebody outside,' that 'Donnelly's don't belong to the union (I. L. G. W. U.) and they never will,' that she had thought they 'had better sense' than to join the I. L. G. W. U., and that they had been misled in doing so. There is abundant testimony, also, that the respondent's instructors, who were in charge of the operators and at that time admittedly had authority to recommend layoffs and dismissals, warned the operators to 'let the International (I. L. G. W. U.) alone' if they expected to keep their jobs. In a conversation with an employee during 1934 Mrs. Allison, an instructor, labeled I. L. G. W. U. leaders 'dirty foreigners,' and Grace Gnotta, also an instructor, referred to those who had joined that organization as the 'scum' of the respondent's employees.

"The dominant and often reiterated note in the respondent's anti-union campaign during this period was a plea to the employees to be loyal to Mrs. Nell Donnelly Reed, president of the respondent. For example, the record reveals that Mrs. Allison, one of the instructors, forbade a discussion of unionism in the plant, and added: 'You should have more respect for your employer than to talk unionism in here.' Mrs. Martha Gray, in charge of the respondent's outlet store, talked to Virginia Stroup, an [fol. 4744] operator in one of the sewing sections, who had joined the I. L. G. W. U., and reminded her that the firm had been good to her by continuing to employ her during the 'hard months' and that in return Mrs. Stroup owed it to the company to be fairer than to join the I. L. G. W. U. Mrs. Gray also said that she 'would hate to think that old David Dubinsky would come in here and tell Mrs. Donnelly (Reed) what to do.' The testimony of May Fike is undenied that in February, 1935, or thereabouts, while the I. L. G. W. U. drive was being pressed, employees in groups of 10 were sent by their instructors to Mrs. Reeves' office, where Mrs. Reeves talked to them about loyalty to the respondent. Also during this period employees were told that Mrs. Reed had built up the business of the respondent in order to keep them supplied with work and that an outside labor organization should not be allowed to come in to run it.'"

Now, there is more of the same character, dealing with conditions in 1934 and 1935. I think I had better read that."

"On or about December 12, 1934, Mrs. Reeves sent for Virginia Stroup, one of the respondent's employees who had obtained a charter for a local branch of the I. L. G. W. U. Mrs. Stroup told Mrs. Reeves that she was the shop chairman for the I. L. G. W. U. and that it was her duty to determine why employees who were members of the I. L. G. W. U. were laid off. Mrs. Reeves stated that she did not intend to give Mrs. Stroup any information [fol. 4745] and immediately instructed Mrs. Hyde, the respondent's employment manager who was present at the interview, not to release any such information, for 'that is none of Virginia's business.'

"A short time later, when Mrs. Stroup attempted to negotiate with the respondent in regard to a grievance of Pauline Lutz, an employee who was a member of the I. L. G. W. U., the respondent unequivocally refused to deal with Mrs. Stroup. At the conference Mrs. Reeves criticized Mrs. Stroup's production work, told her that she was wasting too much time away from her machine talking to other employees, and threatened her with dismissal unless she increased her piecework production to a point where it met the minimum wage rate set by the N. R. A. code in effect at that time. The respondent stood firm on its position not to deal with the I. L. G. W. U. and Mrs. Stroup was entirely unsuccessful in adjusting the grievance of Pauline Lutz or of any other of the respondent's employees who were members of the I. L. G. W. U.

"A few weeks later the Kansas City office of the I. L. G. W. U. attempted to open negotiations with the respondent. On January 25, 1935, Meyer Perlstein, regional director of the I. L. G. W. U., and Virginia Stroup joined in addressing a letter to the respondent, stating that the I. L. G. W. U. had granted a charter to a group of the respondent's workers who had applied therefor. The letter asserted that these employees, since joining the I. L. [fol. 4746) G. W. U., had suffered discrimination and had been threatened with discharge unless they should abandon their union affiliation.

"In conclusion, the respondent was requested to grant the I. L. G. W. U. an opportunity to present the views of labor and to adjust peaceably employer-employee differences. The record does not indicate whether or not the respondent made any reply to this letter.

"Within a week or two after the receipt of the I. L. G. W. U.'s letter, the respondent, acting through certain of its supervisory employees, commenced the formation of an organization among its employees to be known as the 'Nelly Don Loyalty League.' Mrs. Martha Gray, in charge of the respondent's outlet store, and Mrs. Strickland, an employee in the pattern-making department, took the lead in forming the League. On February 5, 1935, plans were laid at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Gray, which was attended by approximately 46 employees representing the various divisions of the respondent's factory. Memberships for the League were solicited in the plant during working hours by circulation among the employees of membership pledge cards and a statement which declared that the employees recognized the generous treatment received from Mrs. Reed, the respondent's president, and would resist the efforts of outside labor organizations to negotiate with the respondent on their behalf.

[fol. 4747] "In contrast to the hostility with which it met the advent of the I. L. G. W. U. in the plant, the respondent not only interposed no obstacles to the organization of the Loyalty League, but also by affirmative assistance facilitated its progress. In some sections of the plant the instructors in charge of the sections assisted with the circulation of these documents and told the employees to sign them. In other areas of the factory Mrs. Gray, accompanied by Mrs. Strickland, distributed the League membership cards. Virginia Stroup, who at that time was president of the local branch of the I. L. G. W. U., was told by Mrs. Strickland, in the presence of Mrs. Gray, whom we find hereinafter to be a supervisory employee of the respondent, that the cards should be signed by the employees in order to protect their jobs, because Mrs. Reed would close the plant before she would allow it to become a union shop. At the same time, Mrs. Stroup was refused a membership card because she belonged to 'another organization.'

"Virtually all of the respondent's supervisors, except Mrs. James A. Reed, president and principal owner, Lee Baty, production superintendent, and perhaps Mrs. Anna Wherry, factory manager, were members of the League. Mrs. Reeves, production manager at that time, Dewey Atchison, her assistant, and Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde, employment manager, were among the supervisory officials who testified that they were members of the League. The mem- [fol. 4748] bership included all instructors and other department heads in the plant. Its first two presidents were supervisory employees of the respondent. Herbert Mutchler, who was no longer in the employ of the respondent at the time of the hearing in this proceeding, was the first president of the League and continued in office until early in 1937. He was succeeded by Rose Todd, who held office until after she was elected General Chairman of the D. G. W. U. in April 1937.

"The League has no constitution or bylaws and no regular meeting dates; nor do its members pay dues. Since its inception it has sponsored a number of social activities, such as picnics and dances, but as will subsequently appear, its principal energies have been devoted to obstructing and interfering with the efforts of the I. L. G. W. U. to organize the respondent's employees.

"The events recited above convince us that prior to the effective date of the Act the respondent's supervisors expressed to employees the uncompromising hostility of the respondent toward all labor unions and particularly toward the I. L. G. W. U. Employees were made fully aware of their employer's attitude and those who applied for membership or joined the I. L. G. W. U. did so secretly. During this period it was made plain to the employees by their supervisors that loyalty to the respondent meant renunciation of unionism.

[fol. 4749] "In February 1935, when the I. L. G. W. U. requested a conference on behalf of those employees who had joined that organization, the respondent's agents immediately organized the Loyalty League for the purpose of preventing other employees from affiliating with the I. L. G. W. U. The membership and influence of management representatives in the Loyalty League enabled the respondent to foster and organize employee resistance to outside unions."

Now, that carries on, and the Board finds against the company, and finds it against our objection.

There was the question raised as to whether we consented to this. Here is the answer:

"The respondent contends that since the above-related activities took place prior to July 5, 1935, the effective date of the Act, they are entirely irrelevant to the issues in this proceeding and that all evidence thereof should have been excluded. This contention failed to recognize that the Loyalty League continued in existence after the effective date of the Act, and was a useful instrument in the formation of the D. G. W. U., hereinafter discussed. Furthermore, evidence of an employer's attitude and conduct with respect to labor unions for a reasonable period before the effective date of the Act has often been admitted in evidence for the purpose of evaluating the significance of events occurring after such date.

[fol. 4750] "Having been inspired by the respondent and wholly supported by its officials from its inception, we conclude and find that the League was dominated and controlled by the respondent and that prior to the effective date of the Act the respondent used it to prevent its employees from joining the I. L. G. W. U. or any other outside labor organization."

Now, I have taken the time to read that because it is a complete demonstration of one of the major findings in this case. In fact, the major finding is built upon and attempted to be supported by these findings which I have read, all of [the] relating back to the Loyalty League and carrying the activities of the Loyalty League clear down to the time of the organization of the plant union.

Now, I contend that no limitation is placed upon our right to meet those charges. The narrow construction which is sought to be given to the opinion of the court I think is entirely unwarranted.

(Reading) "What the company in the hearing before the Examiner attempted to show by its evidence was that it had not done the things that the Board charged it with doing; that it had recognized, and had accorded to its employees, the rights, guaranteed them by law, freely to organize and to choose representatives for collective bargaining; that the Donnelly Loyalty League was purely a social organization; that the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was not an outgrowth of the [fol. 4751] Loyalty League; that the union was an independent labor organization formed by the employees themselves without any suggestion, interference, or assistance from the company; that the speech made by the president of the company to a mass meeting of the employees, shortly before this organization was formed, amounted, in substance, to nothing more than a statement that the company would never compel its employees to join the International or to join any other labor organization against their will; that the employees formed the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for their own protection in the face of threats by the International to use forceful and unlawful means to compel them to join the International and to compel the company to force them to join that union; that the company recognized the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as the exclusive representative of its employees for purposes of collective bargaining and entered into agreements with it on their behalf, not for the purpose of discouraging their joining the International, but because the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union represented all of the company's employees and the company was required by law to recognize that union and to deal with it as the exclusive representative of the employees of the company.

"The petitioner Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, in the hearing before the Examiner, attempted to prove that it was an independent labor organization of all the em-[fol. 4751a] ployees of the Donnelly Company; that the union was organized by and for such employees and was under their exclusive domination and control, and that it at all times had been free from employer domination, interference and support; that the employees believed and had reasonable grounds to believe that the International was resorting to force, violence and threats to compel other employees in other garment plants in Kansas City to join the International and to force their employers to compel them to join it, and was about to attempt to force the employees of the Donnelly Company by the same methods to join the International, and that one of the motives which prompted them to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was self-protection."

Now, I say this, that to say the Board has the right to go back to 1934 and 1935 and to all of the events that happened after that, and to say that we will not be permitted to show that one of the motives or reasons for any employees —I am not limiting myself to those named in the offer of proof—any forcing of any employee or threat to any employee, or threat to the employees generally—that that is in this case, it seems to me absolutely absurd, and to say that the Board can go back 3 or 4 or 5 years and bring in against this present union the facts or the alleged facts here in this report, then we cannot show that there was a reason why these people wanted to organize to protect themselves.

Now, among other things— We trace this down and it is [fol. 4752] all one connected story. Among other things,

Mr. Dubinsky and his associates start in on the proposition to "get the Donnelly Company." It is in evidence that their preliminary step was to get the smaller companies. It is in evidence, or will be, if we are allowed to put it in, that there was violence there, that that was the method they employed, that this young lady and other employees down there expected that violence to be visited upon them, that the threat was actually made that it would be visited upon them, and, therefore, when Mr. Dubinsky comes out and gives this interview, it isn't a political interview at all; it showed his resentment and showed his malice, and showed that his motives were not honest motives, when he said he was "coming out here to give Jim Reed a break," because in the campaign I had criticized his being made a Democratic elector.

I say we are entitled to put this evidence in. We are not limited— There is no rule that limits anybody to the particular witnesses he says he is going to prove a thing by, and the Circuit Court of Appeals' opinion cannot be justly construed to place a limitation of that kind. The fact of the matter is, the last paragraph in this decision clearly shows that it had no such intent.

"We think that the least the Board can do"—the least it can do, in order to cure the defects of its procedure caused by the failure of the Trial Examiner to receive [fol. 4753] admissible evidence—not the evidence of particular individuals but admissible evidence, "is to vacate the order and findings and conclusions upon which it is based, and to accord to the petitioner an opportunity to introduce all of the competent and material evidence which was rejected by the Trial Examiner." That is not the evidence of a particular witness. We have named people we could prove our case by. They didn't limit us to those particular witnesses.

The point is: Was the evidence competent? Not, Will this particular witness testify a certain way? but, Was that character and kind of evidence competent? And I say we have the right to go into it, and I protest any ruling to the contrary.

Now, I am much obliged to the Examiner for his patience.

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, I just want to say this, that I don't think the issue that is before me now is whether or not all of the testimony should be taken. I think under the ruling I made that I was first going to take the testimony of the employees, in accordance with the offers of proof— Now, that is the question now before me.

Secondly, there is no finding of the Board's. The Board's decision and order has been set aside, so it is not in existence and we cannot operate on the basis that there is any such document before us.

Now, third, Senator, if I recall correctly, in your news [fol. 4754] article, you, yourself, agreed to some extent with the Board, that the Loyalty League was organized for the purpose of combatting the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Now, you stated that to the newspaper yourself.

Mr. Reed: Suppose I did.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am simply stating that if you believe it, Senator, the Board couldn't have gone greatly wrong on it.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4755] Mr. Reed: Will you pardon me at that point?

We are now running into the vice, I think, of— I don't say that disrespectfully of the ruling. You say at the present time we are going to hear only from the witnesses who were named and that you are going to confine the issues to the one question of offers of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is right.

Mr. Reed: But hereafter you will leave it open.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not ruling upon that matter.

Mr. Reed: So, when we undertake to present our case we are handicapped by a ruling which limits our right to put in evidence on only one phase of the case, when the same witness that we have here could testify as to the other phases, if you hereafter admit them.

Now, we ought to know what is coming into this case, Mr. Examiner. We ought to know now.

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, I would like to know, myself. If I knew, I could make a ruling, but I don't know, so I can't rule.

Mr. Reed: So we all proceed in the dark.

Trial Examiner Batten. We certainly do.

Mr. Reed: Very well, then. I object to that procedure.

Trial Examiner Batten: Except in accordance with the ruling I have made that we are first going to take the testimony which I rejected in the offers of proof. That is [fol. 4756] the order of proof and we are going to follow that.

I think I agree with Mr. Ingraham, that six months prior is a reasonable time.

Mr. Langsdale: Prior to what?

Trial Examiner Batten: Prior to the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. And this comes within that. I see no objection to that. Mr. Ingraham stated he thought six months was a reasonable time, and I am inclined to agree with him, and for that reason I am willing that we proceed with this witness.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, let me say something about what we started out to argue. I didn't object to the offer of this newspaper article at all. The question I objected to was the one propounded to the witness, Did she know of strikes in 1935 and 1936? I objected to that kind of testimony because it is not covered by the offers of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: My ruling just now— I said that I agree with Mr. Ingraham, that six months is a reasonable time, which means I have no objection to covering a period of six months prior to the organization of the Union, under these offers of proof.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, I want just two minutes to reply to some of these arguments that have been made.

The Senator spent much time reading and referring to what was known as history. You admitted in the last [fol. 4757] hearing certain testimony with reference to the old N. R. A. hearing and history under the limitation that you made at that time. We all complied with it. The Union and the Board offered testimony from the old N. R. A. hearing, and so did the respondent and the intervener. Then, they offered testimony from the Miller hearing; and so did all of the parties.

Now, they objected to going back to 1934 and the N. R. A. hearing, and you overruled the objection and admitted some of it, with limitations.

They presented that objection to the Circuit Court of Appeals, and the Circuit Court of Appeals did not criticize your procedure in that respect.

They offered certain other testimony, about strikes and newspaper articles, which you refused to receive, and you asked them to preserve their offer in a written offer of proof, which they did. They took those offers of proof to the Circuit Court of Appeals, and the Circuit Court of Appeals said you erroneously refused to admit that character of proof, and all the Circuit Court of Appeals remanded this case for was to take the testimony you had rejected.

You were careful enough to have them write it out in offers of proof, the testimony you rejected. Then the Circuit Court of Appeals carefully examined those offers of proof and said you should receive that testimony, because it was material.

[fol. 4758] Now, that is all we are here for. It doesn't cover anything else.

If we go back to 1935— We all had that opportunity. The Court didn't remand this case to go back to strikes of 1935 and 1936, because the offers of proof said the strikes at Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri plants were in 1937, and the Court of Appeals said that was material.

Now, they want to go back to 1935 and 1936. I would be happy if the order covered that, but it doesn't. They had their chance, and we had our chance, and the Circuit Court of Appeals said nothing against that procedure that was devised by this Examiner. The order said that the testimony offered, as shown in the offers of proof, was competent and material, and sent it back for that testimony to be taken.

Now, as to this witness not being on the offer of proof—No witness has been presented who is not on the offer of proof. When that is done I think we will all have something to say about it. Personally, I think I agree with the Senator, that the subject matter and not the named witness that would control that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: I didn't understand Your Honor's remarks about limiting this to six months. Does that mean that all matters that occurred prior to six months before the plant Union was organized are immaterial?

[fol. 4759] Trial Examiner Batten: I haven't ruled on any of those matters, Mr. Ingraham, and do not intend to at this time. I simply said I thought, in accordance with your statement, the offers of proof, I believe, would cover the situation as it existed on or about April 27 and March 18.

We have already gone back to February in connection with those offers of proof. I think your statement that six months is reasonable, as far as these strikes, and so forth, are concerned—I think that is reasonable, and I think they come within the offer of proof.

Mr. Ingraham: Evidently I didn't make myself clear. I think that all matters that occurred prior to six months before the plant—

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not talking about that. I am talking about the offer of proof.

Mr. Ingraham: But I wouldn't say six months is a proper limitation, if there is any other evidence in this case that goes back beyond six months. If we are going to go back into other matters, certainly I am not saying it is fair to just go back a period of six months in connection with these offers of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: But you said "a reasonable time," and I asked you, "What do you consider a reasonable time?" and you said, "six months."

. . . . . .

[fol. 4760] Mr. Ingraham: Let me explain. I meant a six-months period would be a reasonable time, and matters back of that, in my opinion, are remote to proving or disproving any issue in this case.

But if you are just going to make the limitation of six months to this particular testimony, in connection with the offers of proof, certainly I do not think that that is a fair ruling. If you are going to go back, in some other evidence, clear to 1934 and 1935, certainly then we should be permitted to go back in connection with the offers of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: We are not talking about other matters now, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I was talking about the whole case.

Trial Examiner Batten: You certainly didn't indicate that to me.

Mr. Ingraham: To make it clear,—

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you still believe that, as [fol. 4761] far as the offer of proof is concerned, without reference to other evidence in the case, that six months is a reasonable time?

Mr. Ingraham: Oh, absolutely not. If the other evidence in this case goes back into the N. R. A. matters, back to 1934 and 1935, certainly I think it is proper to go into those matters in connection with these offers of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: What do you mean, "if"?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, you say in one breath—that is why I don't understand your ruling—that you agree that six months is fair in connection with the offers of proof, and—

Trial Examiner Batten: No. I said I was inclined to agree with you.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: But, of course, now that you have changed your mind, Mr. Ingraham—

Mr. Ingraham: I have not changed my mind. I never intended that my remarks would mean that just this particular character of testimony was to be limited to six months. I meant the entire case.

Trial Examiner Batten: We were not talking about the entire case.

Mr. Ingraham: That is what I meant.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mr. Ingraham. We were talking about strikes, violence, and offers of [fol. 4762] proof. There is no other question before me now, except whether it comes within the offer of proof—the question of strikes, violence, acts of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, with respect to these employees, and the effect it had upon their mind. That is the only issue before me. There is nothing else before me and hasn't been. In all of this time we have spent, that is the only point that is before me.

Mr. Ingraham: You probably didn't recall what I said. In referring to this character of testimony and going back to the strikes, I stated that the Board went back to evidence of things that occurred during the N. R. A.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. You mean, this morning?

Mr. Ingraham: This morning; yes, indeed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, we are going to recess while the reporter finds that. We will recess for 15 minutes, and, Miss Reporter, will you go back to the beginning of this discussion when we talked about a reasonable period of time, and have that ready to read?

. . . . . .

[fol. 4763] Mr. Ingraham: Not yet. What did the reporter find with respect to my remarks?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read that statement of Mr. Ingraham's remarks, please?

(Thereupon the remarks of Mr. Ingraham, as requested, were read as follows:

"Well, I would say certainly within six months, but the Board went clear back to N. R. A. days, to matters that occurred in 1934 and 1935.")

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it is very obvious I was mistaken, in your remarks, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I felt that I did make a statement like that. It was my recollection on it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think we are ready to proceed, and I think the offers of proof contemplate the period in or about March 18, 1937, and as to any strikes or matters of that kind which occurred during that period, and I think it is reasonable to go back to — I think the offers contemplated at least a period, I would say, from November on, and any things prior to that I will now rule aren't covered by the offers of proof, and therefore [fol. 4764] shouldn't be presented at this time, in line with my ruling directing the order of proof.

Mr. Lane: Do I understand the Examiner includes the intervener's offer of proof in that ruling?

Trial Examiner Batten: That's right, all offers of proof which the Court referred to in its Circuit Court decision.

Mr. Lane: I think I have made my position plain here, that I by no means agree with anything that Mr. Langsdale said about the Circuit Court's opinion.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mr. Lane. I have made my ruling and I don't want to spend any more time on it. I think everybody has had his say, and of course if the ruling is adverse, you have your exception, Mr. Lane, and I don't believe that I want to spend any more time on it.

Mr. Lane: All I was going to say was in connection with another matter.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, is there any other matter before us, Mr. Lane? If so —

Mr. Lane: I haven't stated my view with respect to the Circuit Court's opinions. I want the record to show that in the intervener's opinion the Circuit Court of Appeals in the remand intended to limit the matters set out in the offers of proof either by witnesses who could testify on those matters or —.

[fol. 4765] Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) I think that is clear, Mr. Lane, and I am not ruling upon any matter at this time, except the offers of proof, and that is my ruling.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you testify that you had read Respondent's Exhibit 42, that appeared in the Kansas City Times, November 10, 1936?

A. Yes, I said I read that.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers in evidence exhibit No. 42.

Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no objection it will be received.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, when you read in this article that the International Union was going to open a drive in Kansas City, what effect, if any, did that have on you?

A. I read the article, but, of course, I gave it a lot of thought, but I didn't get so excited about it, because I didn't feel they could have organized us.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4766] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you state what you thought the article meant when it said the union would open a drive?

* * * * * * *

A. The article did state that they had quite a sum of money behind them to organize us, and I understood they were going to open offices and attempt to do that very thing.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do what very thing?

A. To try to organize us. I don't know whether I felt that they would start with violence or not, but I felt they were contemplating calling on members of the Garment Company workers.

Q. Now, was this article discussed, to your knowledge, among the other employees at the plant?

A. Yes, I believe it was discussed among the girls.

Q. Did you observe the effect it had upon the other girls?

A. They seemed to feel that they would never be organized by that union, that they had no interest in it whatever.

Q. Do you recall reading an article on or about April 22, 1937, which appeared in the Kansas City Journal-Post, and the article was entitled, "Donnelly Worker will be [fol. 4767] sent to Union Convention." I hand you respondent's exhibit 35 and ask you if you read that article.

* * * * * * *

A. Yes, I read that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What effect did that article have upon you?

A. I was very much surprised because we had never authorized anyone to represent us at any convention or in any organization.

Q. Do you recall reading in the article that, "Perlstein said the Donnelly Committee desired one of their members to appear at the convention, and asked the International to endorse and support a strike against their employer." Do you remember reading that?

A. I read that.

Q. What effect, if any, did that statement have on you?

A. I didn't understand her attitude at all, because we had never authorized anyone, we didn't have any group to represent us, and we had never authorized anyone to [fol. 4768] represent us.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that answer and ask it be stricken out as not responsive to the question or the article, because the article does not say the Donnelly workers has authorized any committee or Sylvia Hull to represent them; it implies she was going there to represent the employees of the I. L. G. W. U.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please, and the answer?

(Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you think that is responsive?

Mr. Ingraham: No. I wish the question would be read again.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. To make it clear, I am referring to that particular statement that referred to a strike.

A. We all knew we didn't want a strike.

Trial Examiner Batten: No; what effect did that have upon you, Mrs. Barnes, when you read that article?

A. Well, I didn't understand why any group, as they call themselves, the Donnelly Committee, how they could go and vote for a strike in our plant, I didn't understand how [fol. 4769] they could do that, they had no authority to do it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you state whether or not that article caused you to be apprehensive?

* * * * * *

A. Well, the strikes that I knew about were not by the employees themselves exactly, at these other places, and I suppose if they wanted to call a strike it would be the I. L. G. W. U. called it and hired their own strikers like they had before.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4770] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did this article have anything to do with you voting in favor of organizing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, it did. They had trouble down there and we didn't want any trouble.

Q. Do you know Rose Todd?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you consider Rose Todd a boss at the plant?

A. No.

Q. Do you know what Rose Todd did, what work she did?

A. She was a matcher of notions, and helped get the work through by seeing that the notions were at the place they should be for the certain type of work.

Q. Now, did the fact that Rose Todd took an active part in the meeting of March 18 and the meeting the latter part of March and the meeting of April 27, cause you to believe that the company wanted the employees to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, she was not a representative of the company.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4771] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, will you state whether or not after Mr. Baty took over the plant in July 1935 and up until July 1939, whether or not the instructors had any authority to hire, discipline, or discharge operators?

A. No, not to my knowledge. I wasn't hired by an instructor and I never expected to be.

Q. Did you ever consider your instructor your boss?

A. No, I haven't. She gives out our work and shows us how to do it.

Q. Were you working at the plant when Mr. Baty took over the job of production manager?

[fol. 4772] A. Yes.

Q. Well, after he took over that job whom did you understand was in authority?

A. Mr. Baty.

Q. And were grievances taken up directly with Mr. Baty?

A. Yes, they were. The girls could go to him at any time if they had any differences to settle.

Q. Was Mr. Baty present practically all of the time in the factory?

A. Yes, he was. I think he continually went through the factory.

Q. What floor did you work on in April, 1937?

A. On the eighth floor.

Q. Do you recall any demonstration on or about April 23, which was the morning after the article appeared in the paper about Sylvia Hull?

A. Yes.

Q. What section did you work in?

A. I worked in 414, and I believe Sylvia worked in 412.

Q. Will you tell what you saw in connection with the demonstration, or whatever you want to call it?

A. Well, I saw girls go over to her and stand around, and I didn't hear what they said, but I think she was humiliated to think the girls were so shocked about what she had done.

Mr. Langsdale: I ask that the last part of the answer [fol. 4773] be stricken out as a conclusion of this witness. She has no possible capacity to give that conclusion.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think obviously she was not there and didn't hear what was said.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What basis do you have to say that she was humiliated? Did you see her?

A. Yes, I saw her.

Q. How close were you to her?

A. I was in the next section.

Q. Well, how far is that?

A. Well, there was just one row of machines between us.

Q. Was a crowd of girls around there?

A. Well, at various times there would be several girls standing there talking to her.

Q. Well, could you see her?

A. Yes.

Q. You say you think she was humiliated. What did you mean by that?

A. Well, I went over there myself once, but I didn't say anything to her, and she seemed to be ashamed, I don't know, she wouldn't talk.

Q. You are speaking about the time you went over there, that she appeared that way, is that it?

A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will let it stand.

[fol. 4774] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you hear anybody threaten Sylvia Hull in any way? A. No, I didn't hear any threats.

Q. Did you hear anybody say, "Let's throw her out the window?" A. No, I didn't hear that.

Q. Did you hear anybody say, "Let's tear her clothes off?" A. No.

Q. Was the power turned on in your section?

A. The power was on.

Q. Did Sylvia remain at her machine, or did she leave after while?

A. Oh, I don't know how long she stayed. I know that she left, some of the girls said she had left; but I didn't see her when she left.

Q. When you were near Sylvia did you hear anything that she said any time?

A. No, I don't think she said anything. I was over there only a few minutes, and I didn't hear her say anything.

* * * * * *

Q. (By Mr. Ingraham): Do you recall anything said by any employees with regard to Sylvia continuing work at the plant?

[fol. 4775] A. I don't recall what they said about it. I know they were excited. Some of the girls around me went over there, and I went along with them, but I don't remember what was said.

* * * * * * *

Cross-Examination.

Q. (By Mr. Lane): I will hand you Board's Exhibit No. 1 quadruple R, appearing in Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 3471, which is intervener's offer of proof, and ask you to read the text of that offer.

* * * * * * *

Q. (By Mr. Lane): Now, I direct your attention to the third page of signatures attached to that offer, which is page 3476 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, and ask you to state if the signature in the 11th line on the [fol. 4776] right-hand column is your signature?

A. That's right, it is.

Q. Did you sign that offer of proof in 1939, when this other hearing was going on? A. I believe I did.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you read that over before you signed it?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you sign it of your own free will?

A. Yes, I did.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you attend the meeting of March 18, 1937?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. State whether or not that meeting, so far as you know, was called by the employees on their own initiative.

[fol. 4777] A. As far as I know, it was.

Q. Do you know of any action, influence or suggestion of the employer or of any representative of the employer in connection with the calling of that meeting?

A. I don't know of any.

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Reed speak at that meeting?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not she said to the employees that she would not allow members of the I. L. G. W. U. to work in the Donnelly Company.

* * * * * * *

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten): Did you hear her say that? A. No, I didn't.

Q. (By Mr. Lane): Did Mrs. Reed say at that meeting that the I. L. G. W. U. would never be allowed in her plant? A. No, she didn't.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4778] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did Mrs. Reed say at that meeting she wanted the names of anybody who joined the I. L. G. W. U. reported to her? A. I didn't hear her say it.

Q. I believe you said on direct examination that you personally didn't see any commotion or violence or disorders in connection with the strikes at the Gernes, Gordon and Missouri plants? A. No, I didn't see it.

Q. Were those matters the subject of general conversation about the Donnelly plant?

A. Around the plant?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. Did you engage in any of those conversations among the girls?

A. Yes, I did. We discussed the newspaper clippings and also about what the other girls had seen.

Q. Was it commonly reported around the plant that actual violence had been committed in connection with those strikes? A. Yes.

[fol. 4779] Q. Was there any conversation or discussion among the employees as to whether threats had been made that the Donnelly plant was the next on the list of the I. L. G. W. U.? A. That was my understanding.

Q. What was the effect of that conversation around the plant, and those discussions, upon your state of mind?

A. The effect on my state of mind?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I think I was guilty of being as excited as anyone else over those things that were going on out there.

Q. Did you personally fear those things were going to happen to you?

A. Yes, I did. They were bigger than I am and I was afraid.

. . . . . .

Q. (By Mr. Lane): Did you attend the meeting of March 18—I believe you said you did. State whether or not there was any discussion at that meeting about employing counsel?

A. Yes, I think that was the main object, it was to me the main object of the meeting, to see what we could do to protect ourselves, and naturally we would have to have legal counsel to find that out.

[fol. 4780] Trial Examiner Batten: That is with reference to March 18, Mr. Lane?

Mr. Lane: Yes.

By Mr Lane:

Q. State what, if any, connection the discussion and conversations around the plant and your belief with respect to the I. L. G. W. U. and its conduct of these strikes had in connection with your participation in the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

A. I believe the violence was the main factor that brought us all together and made us realize that organization was the only thing for us to do. No one down there wanted to have their clothes torn or have anyone outside to bargain for them, because everyone knew what they wanted, and they were already getting what they wanted; they didn't need to be told what they should have.

Q. Did you attend the meeting of April 27 at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you vote to form the Union? A. I did.

Q. Did you cast that vote because it was your own free choice? A. I did.

Q. Did you feel at the time you cast that vote that you were under the domination or control of the company [fol. 4781] in making that decision? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Had there been any act on the part of the company, so far you knew, that persuaded you to take that action or intimidated you into taking that action?

A. No. I was never persuaded to do anything.

Q. Can you think of any act on the part of the company or any supervisor or any part of the management to cause you to take that action you took on April 27?

A. No, I don't recall anything.

Q. Had you ever talked with Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Reeves, or Mr. Baty about forming a union? A. No.

Q. Had you heard anybody representing the management discuss the formation of the Union with any other employees? A. No.

Q. Had any other employees told you they had discussed that matter with the management?

A. No, they hadn't.

Q. Did you attend the meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union fairly regularly after its formation?

A. I would say fairly regularly.

Q. Had you discussed with any other employees the matter of forming the Union prior to April 27?

A. Well, I don't know whether we discussed forming [fol. 4782] a union. We had read the Wagner Act, but we were not sure about the distinction between interstate commerce and manufacturing.

Q. Was that a matter that was discussed among the employees? A. The Wagner Act was.

Q. What time of day was the meeting of April 27 held?
A. I would say it was around 5 o'clock.
Q. Did you attend that meeting in your uniform or had you dressed?
A. I don't remember. I probably dressed, because I think I was one of the first to get off from work.
Q. At the time of April 27, 1937, what was your working day?
A. If we were not working overtime, it would be about 4:20.
Q. How did you get notice that that meeting was to be held? A. I think it was just generally discussed and passed around—the word was passed around. That is the way we do when we want anything known; we just start it out.
Q. I will hand you Board's exhibit 8-21, appearing in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 4415, being the minutes of the Donnelly Garment Workers' meeting of May 25, 1937, and ask you to read those minutes.

(Thereupon the minutes referred to in the last question were read by the witness.)

Q. Did you attend that meeting?
A. Yes, I believe I did.

[fol. 4783] Mr. Langsdale: What was the answer?

The Witness: I did.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:
Q. Do you know Marjorie Green? A. Yes.
Q. Did she occupy any office in the union in 1937?
A. Yes. I believe she was secretary.
Q. Did you see her at the meetings of the union in May, 1937? A. Yes, I saw her.
Q. What was she doing?
A. She recorded the minutes. That was her job.
Q. Was there ever any time at which a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was immediately followed or immediately preceded by a meeting of the Loyalty League? A. I don't remember any.
Q. Did you at the meeting of May 25, 1937, discuss, in the union meeting, raising any money for the Loyalty League?

A. The union never raised any money for the Loyalty League, that I know of.

Q. Well, did you discuss it at that meeting? A. No.

Q. What time of day did that meeting convene?

[fol. 4784] A. I couldn't give the exact time. It depended on whether we were working 9 hours or not. It was after work.

Q. Was there ever any time in 1937, or any other time, when a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was held before the close of working hours? A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, including after July 15, 1939?

Mr. Lane: No. I will make the same agreement other counsel have made: Unless specifically stated in my question, I will limit my questions to before July 15, 1939.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you understand my questions to mean the time preceding July 15, 1939?

A. I thought all of the evidence was.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4785] Mr. Lane: Mrs. Barnes, did you sign a statement that was circulated in the plant on March 2, 1937?

A. I did.

Mr. Lane: The copy I am looking at is so faint in some places that I may have overlooked Mrs. Barnes' signature.

[fol. 4786] Do you happen to know the page where she signed, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

Mr. Lane: Perhaps it would shorten this if you would point it out to me.

Miss Weyand: Column 3, line 5, on page 5378.

Oh, you want the other?

Mr. Lane: Well, I can use that just as well.

Miss Weyand: Page 5964.

Mr. Lane: What was the line number? You said column 3—

Miss Weyand: It is column 3, line 5, on page 5964, beginning "Emma Harris, Mary Kruger, Dolly Otis, Margaret Leger, Lois Barnes,—"

Mr. Lane: Thank you.

Mr. Lane: I will hand you page 5964 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record and ask you to examine that, please.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Directing your attention particularly to the 5th name in the 3rd column, I will ask you to state whether that is your signature. A. Yes, it is.

[fol. 4787] Q. Did you on or about March 2 sign a paper in the plant bearing that material at the top of the page? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Who presented that document to you?

A. There were two girls— I understood they were from the shipping department. Mary—a Mary, and Inez Warren. I believe they handed it to each girl down the row, as I remember it, and asked them to read it.

Q. Was anything said by them, or either of them, to you before you signed it?

A. Yes. They asked us to read it and, if we cared to, to sign it.

Q. Did the statement at the head of that page express your feeling?

A. It did. I wouldn't have signed it if it hadn't.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4788] Mr. Lane: Mrs. Barnes, I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 6, which appears at page 4864 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, which is a copy of an article appearing in a Kansas City newspaper. I will ask you to read that.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you recall having read that before, Mrs. Barnes? A. Yes, I believe I did.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Do you recall reading this part of the article which was attributed to Mr. Perlstein:

"'Part of the union's campaign directed against the [fol. 4789] Donnelly Garment Workers' Union will be to send six women to cities and towns where its garments are sold, advising retailers and labor organizations,' Mr. Perlstein said. 'Miss Palmer will have charge of this squad of fellow workers. Within a year we will have it completely organized,' Perlstein said, 'As soon as we have enough members we will call a strike. This will be in addition to carrying our side to the customers.'"

Did you read that part of the article when it appeared in the paper? A. Yes, I think I did.

Q. State what effect, if any, that article had upon you in connection with signing this statement of March 2 which was circulated through the plant and which was presented to you by Mary Sprofera or Inez Warren.

A. We didn't like the idea of their sending boycotts out to boycott our goods, and we wanted to prevent that if we could. I think that was one of the reasons that we signed the petition. And also, we didn't want any strikes down there. We wanted to work.

Mr. Langsdale: I ask that the latter part of this answer be stricken out as not responsive, particularly that part of it, "we signed the petition," because she was asked what effect it had upon her.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question was, what [fol. 4790] effect it had upon you, Mrs. Barnes, not "we."

Isn't that correct, Mr. Lane?

Mr. Lane: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is responsive where she refers to "we." That part may be stricken.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Will you state what effect it had upon you?

A. I thought it was terrible that they should be allowed to boycott our goods. I wanted to work without any interference and I didn't want any strikes, because, naturally, they would be of a violent nature.

Q. Was the content of this item of February 26 discussed generally about the plant, as you observed?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. State what you noted and what was said to you by other employees in the plant in connection with that article.

A. Well, I think that—it was general talk. They didn't want any strikes either, and they thought it was very unfair for the I. L. G. W. U. to attack us in that manner. I believe that is as well as I could state it.

Q. State whether or not this article was in your mind on March 2 at the time you signed that petition.

A. Yes, I believe it was.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4791] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you happen to notice this morning when you were looking at the Loyalty petition whether the names appearing before and after yours were persons who worked in the same section with you in March and April of 1937? A. Some of them were.

Q. I wonder if you could look at this (indicating petition) and indicate just about where the names begin in your section and where they end. Would you know?

A. I don't believe I could remember the whole section.

Q. What names do you notice near your name that were in your section at that time? A. This—

Q. In the 3rd column—

* * * * * * *

[4792] A. Emma Harris, Mary Kruger, Dolly Otis, Margaret Leger, myself, Blanche Martin— I'm not sure I am familiar with these two (indicating) here, but Jane Beal—

By Miss Weyand:

Q. The two you are not familiar with are Ethel Crowther and Mary Wood; is that correct?

A. Yes. I'm not sure about that (indicating)—

Q. You are not sure about which other one?

A. I am not sure they were sitting close to me. I don't know where they were.

* * * * * * *

Q. The first names you read, preceding yours, were all in your section; is that correct?

[fol. 4793] A. Yes. Those are all familiar to me.

Q. And were in your section at that time? A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is, the names preceding yours? A. Yes.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4794] A. (Continuing) I was on the end, and it would appear to me that these names started around me there.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember who was the instructor of that section at that time?

A. I believe it was Ada Vining, but I'm not positive about it.

Q. Do you know whether you were in Ada Vining's section in March and April of 1937?

A. I was in 414. I'm not sure who was the instructor at that time.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4795] Q. What instructors do you remember having during 1936, 1937, and 1938?

A. Well, taking it in the three-year period, that would probably cover that change. We had Ada Vining, Mrs. Cooke, Mrs. White, and Lola Skeens. If there was any more, I don't remember right now.

. . . . . .

Miss Weyand: I am going to hand the witness Board's exhibit No. 2 and ask her to direct her attention to the second page thereof, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 4362, and ask her to read an article there appearing, entitled "Nine Hundred Join Loyalty League." The article runs over to page 4363 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record.

[fol. 4796] Mr. Reed: What is that?

Miss Weyand: The article appears in the N. D. A. A. (being Nelly Don Athletic Association) News for February, 1935.

Mr. Ingraham: We object to the witness being examined about what appeared in the Nelly Don Athletic Association News. There is no showing that the company had anything to do with the publication or is in any way responsible for anything that appeared in it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, there isn't any question pending yet, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, wasn't it your ruling this morning that you were going to confine the examination at this point to matters occurring within a reasonable time prior to April 27, 1937?

Trial Examiner Batten: I say, there isn't any question pending yet to rule upon.

Mr. Lane: She is directing attention to what occurred in 1935.

Mr. Reed: I think if the Examiner will search his recollection, he will remember he refused to let Mr. Lane show the witness an article which lay outside of these limits, or examine about it.

(Thereupon the above-specified article was read by the witness.)

* * * * * *

[fol. 4797] Q. (By Miss Weyand): Did you read that article when it appeared?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that question as immaterial to any issue in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

A. I don't remember whether I read that or not.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Have you ever read this article before?

A. I don't believe that I read it.

Q. Did you attend the meeting here described as a meeting at which 900 persons were present and cards were passed out for membership in the Loyalty League?

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I object to that question. It is outside the scope of the offers of proof, and the witness has stated that she did not read the article.

Mr. Reed: Outside of the scope of the ruling this morning made.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you state, Miss Barnes, that you did not read this article?

[fol. 4798] A. I don't remember reading it in that pamphlet, no.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, the question now is did she attend the meeting of 900 people, is that right?

Miss Weyand: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Lane: I would like to have a continuing objection to showing the witness any article excluded by your ruling this morning. This witness was questioned about something that happened in 1935 and 1936, and the Board has gone back to 1935, and I want to object.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. You may have a continuing objection.

Mr. Ingraham: The respondent would like to have the same continuing objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have the same continuing objection.

Miss Weyand: I would like to point out that the company's offer at page 3468 does refer to the formation of a Loyalty League and offers these witnesses to prove that they were not asked to join the Loyalty League by any official, and so forth. That is in the company's offer.

Trial Examiner Batten: I grant the continuing objection. You may proceed with your examination.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you answer why you remember attending such a meeting?

[fol. 4799] A. I remember attending one meeting where we chose our pins, and whether that is the same meeting I am not sure.

Q. Is that the first meeting of the Loyalty League you recall attending?

A. I don't know whether it was or not.

Q. Did you attend the meeting at which Herbert Mutchler read an article from the Liberty magazine?

A. I don't remember whether I was at that meeting or not.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you join the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, I joined it.

Q. Where did you join it?

A. What do you mean, where did I join?

Q. Was it at a meeting or was it at your section, or where were you when you joined?

A. Well, I don't remember. I think cards were passed [fol. 4800] out to some, if you wanted to become a member.

Q. Where were those cards passed out, at a meeting or in your section or some place else?

A. I couldn't say, I don't recall.

Q. Do you know who the officers of the Loyalty League were? A. At what time?

Q. Any time?

A. Well, I believe Herbert Mutchler was our first president.

Q. Do you know any other officers?

A. And Rose Todd was president after that.

Q. Do you know any other officers?

A. I believe Thelma Huffaker was president after Rose Todd.

Q. Do you remember any other officers?

A. Well, there is a president now, but I can't remember the name.

Q. Those are the only officers you recall, Herbert Mutchler, Rose Todd and Thelma Huffaker?

A. I believe they are.

Q. Do you recall who presided at the meeting at which you discussed choosing a pin?

A. No, I don't remember who presided.

Q. Do you remember who presided at any meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. Well, I can remember Herbert Mutchler, I believe, but to my recollection we didn't have so very many meet- [fol. 4801] ings, mass meetings, or anything like that.

We weren't required to go, and I probably didn't attend a lot of them.

Q. How many meetings do you recall attending of the Loyalty League?

A. Well, I remember the one where we chose the pins, and that is the reason I remember that, and I can't remember just off-hand what others I attended.

Q. You don't remember any other meeting at all?

A. No, not right now I can't.

Q. I notice this article which you read said—described the meeting of February 8, "Mrs. Gray displayed a drawing of a tentative pin and explained the meaning of the word 'Loyalty', as it pertains to the League purposes."

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I make a further objection to that question for the reason it is not proper cross-examination. Respondent didn't go into that matter direct, it is not in the offers of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

A. Do you have a question?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Yes, I read you from this Athletic Association News a statement that Mrs. Gray, at the mass meeting of February 8, made, "displayed a drawing of a tentative pin and explained the meaning of the word 'Loyalty' as if pertains to the League's purposes," and ask you if you recall that in connection with the choosing of the pin.

[fol. 4802] A. I don't know whether we chose our pin then or whether it was just discussed.

Q. Do you remember Mrs. Gray discussing the meaning of the word "Loyalty"?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. You don't remember whether this is the meeting you attended or not?

A. That, I guess, is what I remembered, the drawing of the pin. I don't remember whether that was the meeting I was at or not.

Q. But you do recall being in a meeting where there was a drawing of a pin discussed?

A. If I remember, I was.

Q. Do you remember who discussed it at all? A. No.

Q. Do you remember where the meeting was held?

A. I don't remember; it probably said there, but I don't remember the meeting.

Q. I would like to have the witness look at I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 19, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 5984, and state whether she ever heard that article read, or read that article?

Mr. Reed: What is the date of it?

Miss Weyand: February 16, 1935.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we renew our objection to [fol. 4803] this question as being outside of the scope of your ruling, as it involves a time of two years before the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, there isn't any question pending. Do you have it there, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: May I see it?

Mr. Reed: After that, the further objection that it is immaterial, incompetent, and foreign to the issues.

Mr. Langsdale: The last page of respondent's offer covers the entire existence of the Loyalty League.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent further objects to anything that is printed in the Liberty Magazine, as not binding on the respondent.

Mr. Lane: The intervener makes the same objection in regard to this article.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. Is there a question pending, Mr. Reporter?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter as follows:

"I would like to have the witness look at I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 19, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 5984, and state whether she ever heard that article read, or read that article?")

Trial Examiner Batten: The objections are all overruled.

[fol. 4804] A. No, I never read it and I don't remember hearing it read.

Q. (By Miss Weyand): I will ask the witness to look at I. L. G. W. U. Exhibit No. 2, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at 5942.

Trial Examiner Batten: What was that page?

Miss Weyand: 5942.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. And ask the witness if she ever signed such a statement?

A. I don't remember whether I did or not.

Q. Have you ever read that statement before?

A. I couldn't say.

Mr. Reed: Is that statement at the head of the membership of the Loyalty League that you are referring to?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

* * * * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you ever hear of a petition being circulated at the time the Loyalty League was formed?

A. It seems that I did, but I don't recall just those words, I don't remember whether that is what it was or not.

Q. Do you remember anything that was in the statement that was circulated, and that the girls signed?

A. No, I don't recall—it seems that—I just don't recall [fol. 4805] signing it. I may have, but I don't remember.

Q. Do you know whether, at the time the Loyalty League was formed you felt that you wanted to protest against and resist the attempts of outside interference?

A. Well, that was the expression to each other; loyalty to each other in the plant, in protest against the untruths that had been stated about us.

Q. What untruths are you referring to?

A. Well, I think we had been called a sweat shop.

Q. And that is the only untruth you remember, that you had in mind?

A. Oh, I don't think that was the only one, I think there was more than that.

Q. Do you remember the date on which the Loyalty League was formed?

A. I think it was in—I don't remember the month, but it was in 1935, it was early in the spring, I believe.

[fol. 4813] Q. Did you, prior to July 15, 1939, personally take up any grievances with Mr. Baty?

A. No, I personally did not.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How often, prior to July 15, 1939, did you speak to Mr. Baty?

A. How often did I speak to him?

Q. Yes, monthly, weekly, daily, hourly, or on what occurrence?

A. Probably daily, I saw him daily I am sure.

Q. Did you ever discuss with him very often?

A. No, I didn't take the time to talk much with him.

Q. Did you ever visit with him?

A. Oh, I think I did once at a party, I believe I danced with him.

Q. What, of your own knowledge, do you know of Rose Todd's job?

A. Just what I stated on direct examination. She had [fol. 4814] something to do with the notions.

Q. What do you actually know about what she has to do?

A. Well, I don't actually know what anybody's job is but mine.

Q. What did you actually see Rose Todd do?

A. I saw her come into the section sometimes to check up on what was needed to go on a certain type of work that we had, I have seen that.

Q. And that is the only thing you ever saw Rose Todd do?

A. I know she was always running here and there, doing little odds and ends, and checking them off, and things of that sort, so I supposed what I saw about it was so.

Q. Did you ever attend any style shows that were mentioned?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. What time of day were those held?

A. Well, we have had style shows at different places, we have had style shows in the evenings and after work, but I don't believe I attended any of them during the day. They have had them during the day.

Q. Had you ever heard Mrs. Reed make a speech before March 18?

A. Yes, I think she has spoken at the style shows.

Q. How often had you heard her speak prior to March 18?

A. Well, it was not very often.

Q. Do you have any idea of how many times?

[fol. 4815] A. No, I couldn't say how many times, because I don't recollect how many style shows I went to; she also spoke at Christmas parties, but I never attended those.

Q. Do you remember the occasion prior to March 18th on which you heard Mrs. Reed speak, the last one prior to March 18?

Mr. Reed: I couldn't hear that question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. No, I don't remember.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember what Mrs. Reed said at any of the meetings, what the topic of her speeches was?

A. Well, it was naturally on the new lines, because that is the topic of conversation at style shows.

Q. Did you ever hear her mention anything pertaining to labor matters prior to March 18, 1937?

A. I don't believe I did.

Q. Did she discuss the bus situation at the March 18 meeting?

A. I don't know whether she discussed that or whether someone else did. I don't remember hearing her say anything about that.

Q. Did you ride buses?

A. I believe that I rode sometimes in the evening, but not in the morning.

[fol. 4816] Q. Do you remember how the committee was chosen at the March 18 meeting, to go and see a lawyer?

A. I don't remember how it was chosen.

Q. Did you know that the committee had gone to see Mr. Tyler prior to the April 27 meeting at which Mr. Tyler appeared?

A. Yes, they were the committee that went, but I don't remember how they were chosen.

Q. When did you first learn they had gone to see Mr. Tyler?

A. I think that was the meeting the last of March.

Q. Did they tell you anything of the discussion they had with Mr. Tyler when they saw him?

A. As I remember they did.

Q. What did they say?

[fol. 4817] A. Well, it was mostly just that he would require a retaining fee before he could go to the trouble of advising us.

Q. Do you remember what was the next meeting after that at which you discussed a retainer fee.

A. After the last of March meeting?

Q. Yes.

A. I think the next meeting was where he came and talked to us.

Q. Did you discuss a retainer fee at that meeting?

A. No, I don't believe so; we had raised our retainer fee at the previous meeting.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4819] Q. When you joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, you stated you expected it to protect you. What did you have in mind by that?

A. Well, I believed that if we had our own union there would be no reasons for any violence, because we would be able to speak for ourselves, and no one else could call a strike in our plant.

[fol. 4820] Q. Do you have any knowledge as to whether the $16.50 minimum included in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union supplemental contract raised the pay of any girls, or were all the operators getting $16.50 prior to that contract?

A. Prior to the first contract?

Q. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: How does that come within this cross-examination?

Miss Weyand: I think it is proper with her understanding of what she thought the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was going to do.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I didn't ask you what you thought. I said, how does it come within this cross-examination?

Miss Weyand: Well, on direct she testified as to her expectations of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. I was just going into her understanding of what she thought it was going to do, so I think that is proper cross-examination.

Mr. Ingraham: I submit on direct the respondent did not go into that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I don't know anything that was gone into in that connection, or anything that related to it. Of course, I realize, Miss Weyand, and I presume all counsel here agree with me, that as a general proposition where a witness testifies on a matter [fol. 4821] which might enable the person who has to decide the case to draw an inference, or something of that sort, that, of course, either the Examiner or anyone else conducting a hearing should be very careful not to limit cross-examination on a possible inference which may be drawn, and yet, with that, as with everything else, there has to be a limit some place.

Miss Weyand: On direct she testified that girls were so satisfied with their conditions down there that they didn't want the union to get any advantages. I submit the question is proper cross-examination in view of that direct.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think so. I don't think I want to open up that question in connection with those contracts.

Miss Weyand: I also think it is proper cross-examination in view of her identification of meetings along in March, April and May. These also occurred in May and June, and it is proper to have her show her recollection of what was stated at these meetings.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is not the question.

Miss Weyand: Maybe I should rephrase it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't know anything about you rephrasing your question, but if you have a question raised, it will be very obvious to you what I am directing my remarks to.

Will you read the question please?

[fol. 4822] Miss Weyand: I'll state a new question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's have it read.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Do you have any knowledge as to whether the $16.50 minimum included in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union supplemental contract raised the pay of any girls, or were all the operators getting $16.50 prior to that contract?")

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, as I say, I don't care to go into that matter.

Miss Weyand: Here is what it was on direct. She said everybody knew what they wanted and were getting it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I still say I don't want to go into that matter.

Miss Weyand: All right. Can I ask her —

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) You ask the question, and I'll determine whether or not I think it is proper.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What did you mean by that statement that everybody knew what they wanted and were getting it?

A. Maybe I didn't express myself. I should have said everybody knew what they didn't want, anyway.

Q. You didn't mean to say they knew what they did want?

A. Well, I think they knew what they did want, too. They did want to keep the I. L. G. W. U. out.

[fol. 4823] Q. And that was all you had in mind when you made that statement, was it?

A. Yes, I think that is what I had in mind.

Q. And when you said, "and were getting it," what did you mean by that?

A. Well, they were taking steps in that direction.

Q. And by those steps you referred to what?

A. To protecting ourselves against outside interference.

Q. By that you mean the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, do you, or do you refer to something more than that?

A. I think I had the formation of a union in mind. We knew that is what we should do, after we talked to our attorney.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mrs. Barnes, you are now working as an operator?

A. I am.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4824] Q. You have been here a number of days, while this trial has been going on? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Before you took the witness stand? A. Yes.

Q. And you heard the other witnesses testify?

A. Yes, I heard some of them.

Q. You were at the meeting of April 27, when the union was formed? A. I was.

Q. And your vote was taken as to whether or not there should be a union formed?

A. Was there an open statement?

Q. There was a vote taken as to whether or not there should be a union formed.

A. There was a motion made that we form a union.

Q. Yes, and a vote taken on that motion?

A. There was.

Q. Unanimous, wasn't it? A. It was.

[fol. 4825] Q. And then someone said the union was going to be called the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and they had the cards all ready to sign, did they not?

A. Nobody signed cards until after that.

Q. I know, but at that meeting you signed the cards, didn't you?

A. I didn't sign my card at that meeting—yes, I did too.

Q. I thought you said you did. But those cards were printed and ready for you?

A. Well, yes, I should say they were.

Q. And the name in the card was Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And you took a vote on whether or not that should be the name?

A. I think that was discussed at the meeting in the last of March.

Q. When?

A. At the meeting the last of March.

Q. Oh, you think you discussed it the last of March, that the name should be Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, is that your recollection?

A. Well, I imagine that is right.

Q. Well, I want your best recollection.

[fol. 4826] A. That is my best recollection.

Q. Your best recollection is that this meeting that followed the 18th of March meeting was the first meeting in which you heard it discussed, that the name should be Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. It was mentioned at some time, it was probably that meeting.

Q. Yes. Well, that is your best recollection, is it?

A. I will say that it was.

Q. Who discussed it at that meeting?

A. Well, I am not very clear on it, so I can't say.

Q. Well, was it Rose Todd? A. I couldn't say.

Q. Have you any judgment at all as to who, at the meeting, where this 50c was voted, discussed the name, "Donnelly Garment Workers' Union"?

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. You don't recall who discussed it?

A. I am not sure that it was discussed.

Q. Well, didn't you just get through saying your best judgment was that it was discussed?

A. I said I imagined if it was discussed it was at that meeting.

Q. What do you mean by imagined?

A. If it was definitely discussed prior to the 27th, it was probably—that was probably when it was discussed. [fol. 4827] On the other hand, it might have been the committee who made up the name; in fact, the name was perfectly obvious, of what it would be called.

Q. Now, let's get back to your statement that your best judgment was that you first heard the name discussed at the meeting at which they voted the 50c. Is that your best judgment?

A. I wouldn't say that it was discussed then, or it was not discussed then.

Q. What committee are you talking about, that may have gotten the name up before April 27?

A. The committee that was voted to see Mr. Tyler.

Q. What committee?

A. The committee that went to see Mr. Tyler.

Q. Well, that was Miss Todd, Miss Ormsby and Mr. Atherton, is that correct? A. Miss Todd was one.

Q. Well, had you consulted with that committee any time prior to April 27, when the union was formed?

A. On March 18 meeting, we gave them the authority to go ahead and—

Q. (Interrupting): That is not the question. Had you consulted with the committee at any time prior to April 27, 1937? A. I had not.

[fol. 4828] Q. Do you know anyone who had, with reference to the name "Donnelly Garment Workers' Union"?

A. I don't believe I know anyone personally.

Q. Now, at that meeting there was a motion made that a nominating committee be appointed to—

Mr. Reed (Interrupting): You are speaking now of the meeting of the 27th?

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you remember that motion? A. I do.

Q. And the vote on that was unanimous, too, wasn't it? Do you remember that? A. Yes.

Q. And do you remember that the vote on the name was unanimous? A. On what name?

Q. Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, I imagine that it was: All the votes they took were unanimous.

Q. Was there anything at all discussed at that meeting, where there was any dissenting of any kind?

A. I don't remember of any; everyone had an opportunity to say what they thought.

Q. But no one thought of saying anything that was opposed to the motions that were made, did anyone?

A. I doubt if they wanted to.

[fol. 4829] Q. Well, I am not asking you that: Did anyone? A. I don't know what they thought.

Q. Well, did anyone say anything against any motion presented?

A. They didn't say anything, they might have thought it.

Q. Now, you remember Mr. Tyler pulled some by-laws out of his pocket that he had already prepared and read them, do you?

A. No, I think he took them out of his brief case.

Q. Oh, out of his brief case, instead of his pocket?

A. Yes.

Q. But he read them?

A. Yes, he read some by-laws.

Q. And then there was a motion that the by-laws be accepted, was there not?

A. Well, I think they were accepted subject to change.

Q. Well, let's see if you remember this motion, "Motion made by Ellen Nokes that we accept the by-laws as they were read; seconded by Virginia White," does that refresh your recollection? A. Yes, I imagine it does.

Q. And then the vote was unanimous, wasn't it?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. No one discussed those by-laws, did they? A. No.

Mr. Reed: Wait a minute. I think counsel ought not [fol. 4830] to try to mislead the witness. If he puts in part of these minutes, he ought to put in the qualifying phrase that it was explained that the by-laws could be changed at any time. Isn't that right in the minutes before you?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4832] Mr. Reed: Well, I move to strike out the question as misleading and improper for the reason that there is no connection with the other matter called attention to, which counsel did not refer to, although he apparently was reading from the records. This was said, "I suggest to adopt, then, the by-laws, and then leisurely amend them when the majority of you wish them changed. They are drawn as follows:" so that there was in this meeting a statement made that if they adopted them, then they could change them afterwards.

Now, I think Mr. Langsdale, perhaps inadvertently, omitted to call attention to that fact.

Mr. Langsdale: I didn't do it inadvertently. I don't have to read everything that happened at that meeting.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question and answer, [fol. 4833] please; there is a motion to strike.

(Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. No one discussed those by-laws, did they?
"A. No.")

* * * * * *

A. Mr. Examiner, I think before that I was asked if these by-laws were accepted, and I said they were accepted subject to change.

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten): Well, then, you weren't misled by any questions Mr. Langsdale asked you, were you? A. No, but he didn't read all of it.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4841] Q. Now, you, I believe, said Mary Sprofera and Inez Warren brought the petition of March 2 to your machine and you signed it. A. Is that a question?

Q. Is that correct or not? A. That is right.

Q. How long did these girls pause at your machine, if you know?

[fol. 4842] A. Long enough for me to read the petition.

Q. And to—

A. —and to sign it.

Q. And to recollect and think over the article of February 26?

A. I didn't have to rethink over that article.

Q. You said you did, at the time you signed this petition, in answer to one of Mr. Lane's questions—that you had in mind the article of the 26th of February when you signed this petition of March 2. Did you say that?

A. I had quite a lot of things in mind at that time.

Q. Did you say that—the article of February 26?

Mr. Reed: Say what?

Mr. Langsdale: That she had that article in mind when she signed this so-called "Loyalty petition" on March 2.

Mr. Reed: That doesn't mean she had to stop and think it over, as you put into your question.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question to the witness is, did she have it in mind?

A. I don't know whether I had that article in mind or not.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You answered that you did, in reply to Mr. Lane's question, did you not?

A. I imagine that the results of that article were in my mind.

Q. But right now you don't know whether you had that [fol. 4843] particular article in mind or not, do you?

A. I say, I imagine the results of it were in my mind.

Q. But do you know whether or not you had the article in mind? Not "the results."

A. Probably not the complete article.

Q. Any part of it?

A. As I say, the accumulation of suggestions were in my mind.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4844] Mr. Langsdale: Well, Mr. Lane asked you if when you signed the March 2 petition you had in mind the newspaper article of February 26, and you said "yes." Now, do you mean to stick by that answer, or do you want to modify it?

Mr. Reed: Now, I object to that. That is improper cross-examination. The witness has not changed her testimony in the slightest.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, does she want to, Senator? Not that she has.

The witness: No, I do not.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4845] Q. You stated that you didn't think your instructor even knew that that petition was going through the section. On what do you base that statement?

A. I don't believe I said she didn't know that one was going through. There are a lot of things go through that she doesn't know about.

Q. Didn't you say you didn't think the instructor knew that that petition was going through, the petition of March 2? A. I don't know whether she knew it or not.

Q. Well, you have no recollection now at all as to whether she knew it or not; is that correct?

A. I think she was asked to sign it. She knew later, anyway, that it was.

Q. Who was that instructor?

A. At the time I don't know who the instructor was.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4846] Q. Now, in answer to one of Mr. Ingraham's questions you answered you didn't think the instructor knew that the petition was going around. Did you mean that?

A. Well, if she knew it I didn't know that she knew it.

Q. But that isn't— Do you think that answer is the same as "I don't think she knew it,"?

* * * * * *

[fol. 4847] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now then, do you recall answering Mr. Ingraham that you didn't think the instructor knew the petition was going around?

A. Well, I think what I had in mind then was the fact that it was possible that she did not know it, because we send a lot of those things through that they do not know about. It's possible that she didn't, or she could have. I don't know what she knew.

Q. Let me understand you. Do you say this could be true in your section, that two girls would come along with a petition and go from machine to machine and talk to the operators about that petition, asking them to sign or not, as they saw fit, and the instructor would never know that that was happening?

A. An instructor would know what was happening, but maybe she hadn't read the petition.

Q. She would know they were there at the girls' machines with something and getting something signed, wouldn't she?

A. Evidently she would. I have had petitions in my hand and the instructor would ask me what they were and I wouldn't tell her.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4848] Q. Now then, before 1939, July of 1939, can you name any petition that ever went around in your section when the instructor didn't know about it?

A. I don't recall any specific one. There have been, I imagine.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, you testified when you were shown Senator Reed's interview published in the Times of May 11, by Mr. Ingraham, as to whether what the Senator said about Mr. Dubinsky in that interview had any effect on your decision with reference to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. Do you remember that?

[fol. 4849] A. I do.

Q. Do you remember your answer was, "My feelings were already formed at that time."? A. That is right.

Q. Do you remember that Mrs. Saucke gave that same answer? A. No, I do not.

Q. You sat here and heard Mrs. Saucke testify, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. And you don't recall that she gave that same answer?

A. I don't recall all of those questions, no.

Q. Did you hear Mary Warth give that same answer?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Would you say she didn't?

A. I wouldn't say she didn't. I don't remember that she did, though.

Q. You heard her testimony, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. Was it while you were at Sylvia Hull's machine or near thereto that someone demanded that she give up her Loyalty League pin?

A. No, I don't believe I was there at that time.

Q. Did you hear that that had been done?

A. I heard that that had happened.

Q. Did you hear why they demanded her Loyalty League pin? A. I heard why.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4851] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if you understand it, you may answer.

A. She did belong.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you think she had no right to belong to the Loyalty League and the I. L. G. W. U. at the same time?

A. As far as I know, she had a right to, although it was really against the policy of the Loyalty League, because we had all pledged our loyalty to each other.

Q. And against any union?

A. Against any outside interference.

* * * * * * *

Q. You said you didn't believe that Rose Todd at any time ever represented the Donnelly Garment Company. Did you know that she made trips to the bank during that period for the Donnelly Garment Company—the First National Bank?

[fol. 4852] A. I wouldn't know when she went to the bank.

Q. I am asking you if you did know.

A. I said I wouldn't know.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4856] Q. Now, up to that time did you know that the instructors sat in once a week with Mrs. Reeves and some others and discussed the work of the operators?

A. Up to the time that Mr. Baty took over?

Q. Yes.

A. I know they had what they called "going over the cards." I don't know who was there.

Q. Did you know the instructor was there? A. Yes.

Q. Was there any notice sent around or any word given to you when Mr. Baty went there that the instructors would no longer sit in on those conferences?

A. Mr. Baty had a desk on the seventh floor when he took over that job; it was put on the seventh floor, and we were told that anything that came up that needed to be settled, we could take up with him.

Q. Who told you that?

A. I think one of the girls asked an instructor one day about some prices or something, and she told her to go to Mr. Baty.

. . . . . .

Mr. Langsdale: Can you think of anything else said by anyone else that told you there had been a change in the [fol. 4857] authority of the instructor?

A. All I know is that his desk was there on the seventh floor and he started coming around and seeing about the work, and we were given to understand he was in charge—

. . . . . .

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you know of any other incident, except the one you stated about some girl saying something to an instructor about prices and the incident of Mr. Baty's [fol. 4858] desk being on the seventh floor, that led you to believe there had been any change in the authority of your your instructor?

A. Well, I do know that Mrs. Reeves hated to give it up, because she said so.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4859] Trial Examiner Batten: This last question, whether there was anything else other than the incident of Mr. Baty's desk being on the seventh floor and the incident of some girl making a statement about the instructor, was there any other incident that caused you to believe there was any change in the system?

[fol. 4860] The Witness: I thought I stated that Mrs. Reeves said she hated to give it up.

Trial Examiner Batten: Outside of that, there was nothing else—

The Witness: Not that I know of.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4862] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, you said you did get a little peek of Sylvia Hull and you thought she looked ashamed, did you?

A. I did.

. . . . . .

Q. And did you have to look through the crowd to see her?

[fol. 4863] A. Well, no, I went over there once and saw her.

Q. Did you have to make your way through the crowd?

A. Oh, there wasn't a crowd.

Q. How many would you say were around her machine?

A. Oh, at the time I was there, there were probably two or three.

Q. Two or three? A. Yes.

Q. And that was after the demonstration was over, was it not?

A. Well, no. I seen girls going up there by twos and threes and fours just to see her.

Q. Was there any time when as many as fifty girls were around her machine?

A. No, I don't think that many could get around her machine.

Q. Well, in the room there getting as close as they could to her machine?

A. No, I never saw such a crowd as that.

Q. You didn't see that large a crowd? A. No.

Q. You didn't hear Sylvia Hull say anything when you got close to her?

A. No, she didn't say anything when I was close to her.

Q. And you didn't hear anyone say anything to her?

A. The girls said something to her but I don't remem-

[fol. 4864] ber what they said.

Q. What was it about her that influenced you to say you thought she was ashamed? A. She was very nervous.

Q. What else? A. She kept her eyes down.

Q. And what else? A. She wouldn't talk to anyone.

Q. What else? A. Well, I don't know.

Q. Did you know that someone had threatened to throw her out the window? A. No, I didn't know that.

Q. You didn't know that is what made her nervous?

A. No.

Q. Did you learn that someone had threatened to tear her clothes off if she didn't give up her loyalty league pin?

A. No, I didn't hear that.

Q. You don't know whether that is what made her nervous or not? A. No.

[fol. 4871] Redirect Examination.

Q. (By Mr. Ingraham): Mrs. Barnes, after Mr. Baty took charge of the plant did you observe that complaints were taken up with him, complaints of other operators?

A. Yes, they were sent to him.

Mr. Langsdale: What was that answer?

A. They were sent to him.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Prior to the time that Mr. Baty was in charge of the plant did the instructors have authority to settle complaints?

A. Yes, they had the authority to go and see about prices and to make adjustments in the section and things of that sort.

Q. And was the change noticeable immediately after Mr. Baty took over?

A. Yes, it was. The instructor didn't have anything [fol. 4872] to do with those any more, we had to see someone else, Mr. Baty.

Q. Now, you stated, I believe, that at the meeting of—at the meeting the latter part of March, 1937, that you made a contribution of 50c for the purpose of paying a retainer fee to Mr. Tyler? A. That's right.

Q. Now, did you make that contribution to the Loyalty League? A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you make the contribution for any purpose in any way connected with the Loyalty League?

A. No. I thought it was clear that we raised that money simply to retain a lawyer to inform us about our rights under the law to protect ourself.

Q. Did you ever make a contribution to the Loyalty League, that you recall, at any time?

A. Not that I remember.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4875] Recross Examination.

* * * * * *

Q. Mrs. Barnes, state whether or not it was a common practice for employees to send notices or memoranda of one kind or the other through the sections, pertaining to personal matters?

A. Yes, if they wanted to send notes through, they did.

Q. Will you state some of the occasions on which that was done?

A. Well, there were so many occasions. Somebody had a ride for someone in a certain vicinity, and they would send it through the sections or to the floor; if they wanted to take up a collection for flowers for someone, or buy a wedding present, or anything.

[fol. 4876] Q. And did you employees generally refer to those notices as I. D. M.'s?

A. Well, some of them borrowed I. D. M. paper to write them on, that is just paper that was just used in the section for scratch paper.

Q. The employees personally used that paper for any sort of personal notice they wanted to send through the sections?

A. Yes, if they didn't have any of their own, they just went up and got it.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4880] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Well, if you had machine trouble, or something, did you lose the time that you were not working at your usual work because of machine trouble?

A. Well, I believe that was taken care of through the cage, to my understanding. When we put in a call—the calls are all written on a card, the time they are put in, the time they are answered, and in that way they check the cards and see how much time we have lost.

Q. And how are you paid for that, a certain amount an hour, or do you know?

A. Well, for just our regular hourly pay, I suppose; that is my understanding.

* * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Well, did they give her an allowance, if the style was hard for her to get onto, and the first week or two she couldn't make her usual allowance?

[fol. 4881] A. Why, yes, I think she is given an allowance.

Q. Who determines whether she is given an allowance? A. Well, I suppose Mr. Baty does.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4887] EDITH DEAN, a witness called by and on behalf of the Respondent, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Please state your name. A. Edith Dean.

Q. What is your address? A. 2523 Lawn.

Q. Kansas City, Missouri?

A. Kansas City, Missouri.

Q. Are you employed?

A. At the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. How long have you been employed at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Eighteen years ago last April.

Q. In what capacity do you work at the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Operator.

Q. Do you do any special kind of sewing?

A. Well, I run a pinker.

Q. How long have you been employed at the Donnelly [fol. 4888] Garment Company?

A. Eighteen years last April.

Q. Were you working there during the months of March and April in 1937, at the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes, sir, I was.

Q. Are you a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. Yes, sir, I am.

Q. Did you join that union when it was organized?

A. I did.

Q. Do you recall about when that was?

A. It was the last of April in 1937.

Q. Now, at that time had there been any strikes in other garment plants in Kansas City, Missouri.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibits 16, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, and 38, and ask you if you recall reading the articles that are contained in those exhibits, and if so, which articles you read.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4889] Q. (By Mr. Ingraham): And you can state the number of the exhibit. That is exhibit 16. In exhibit

16 did you see the pictures that are contained on the front page of the Kansas City Times of March 18, 1937?

A. I did. No. 17 I read; I didn't read 18 or 19 at that time; we didn't take the Post and I didn't read those except at the plant.

. . . . . .

A. I believe I read 20, one of the girls handed it to me. This 21 I don't recall reading at that time, or 22.

. . . . . .

I read this 23. I don't remember that I read 24 at that time.

. . . . . .

A. I don't believe I read 24, I don't remember reading the article at that time.

This 25 I read at that time, it was in the Star—the Times, rather.

And 26, I read that also, and 27, I read that.

. . . . . .

A. Yes. No. 28, I read that also. 29 I read.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4890] And 30, I read that also.

I don't recall reading 31, though.

I don't think I read 32 either, nor 33.

. . . . . .

I believe I read 34 down at the plant, I am not sure about that, but I believe I did at that time.

And 36, I read that.

. . . . . .

A. I read that at the plant. Is that 35?

Q. (By Mr. Ingraham): Yes, that is 35.

A. Well, I read that down to the plant, one of the girls had it there.

I read 37.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4891] And 38, I read most of 38, but I don't believe I read it all at that time, but I read the biggest part of it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Dean, the articles that you recall reading, will you state what effect they had on you?

A. Well, it seemed to me like it was rather terrible that outside people would come in and keep people off of their jobs that they were working on to make their living at.

Q. Will you state whether or not the reading of those articles caused you to feel any nervousness about what might happen to you?

A. Well, it certainly did, yes.

Q. Was there a general discussion at the plant among the employees, of these news articles that were appearing in the Press? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you observe what effect the articles had on the other employees at the plant?

A. Well, they were all more or less like myself, they were rather nervous and worried about what might happen to us.

Q. Was there any discussion of those articles among the employees? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I believe you stated that you read—or saw in the Kansas City Times of March 18, the picture that appeared on the bottom of the front page; this is exhibit 16? A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 4892] Q. And you stated that you read the article that appears in the Kansas City Star of March 17?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Entitled "Sitters Block a Door"? A. Yes, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: What number is that?

Mr. Ingraham: That is exhibit 27.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, at that time, or approximately at that time, on March 18, after these articles had appeared in the paper, did the employees hold meetings?

A. Well, yes, we did.

Q. Will you describe any meetings that you recall that were held?

A. Well, they held one on the 18th of March, I think it was.

Q. Do you recall the purpose of that meeting?

A. Well, to see if we could get some way to protect ourselves against this violence, so we wouldn't be subject to what some of the other plants in the city were being subjected to.

Q. Did any official or executive, or any person that you thought represented the management, discuss with you the holding of such a meeting?

A. No, they never.

Q. Did any official or representative of the management request that a meeting be held?

[fol. 4893] A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you ever hear it said by any employee that the management wanted a meeting to be held?

A. I never did.

Q. Was that meeting a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did you attend the meeting because you felt that if you didn't go you would be penalized by the management?

A. No.

Q. Did you go to that meeting of your own free will?

A. I did.

Q. Was there a general discussion at the meeting about what steps could be taken to protect yourselves?

A. There was.

Q. Will you state whether or not there was a suggestion made at that meeting that Mrs. Reed be requested to come to the meeting?

A. There was, I think.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed appear at the meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she make some remarks?

A. Yes, sir, she talked to us a few minutes.

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Reed make the statement that if the plant was unionized it would be closed?

A. I did not.

[fol. 4894] Q. Did you hear Mrs. Reed make the remark that she was not going to let Dubinsky tell her how to run her business?

A. I don't think I did, no.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed make any statement with reference to what she thought about whether or not an employee could join or not join a union?

A. Well, she said that she was not going to let Dubinsky force her employees to do anything that they didn't want to do; they could join or they could not, that was up to them, and she was not going to let anybody force them to do any particular thing.

Q. Did she make any statement to the effect that she was not going to let Dubinsky force her to force the employees to join the union against their will?

A. Well, something to that effect, but the exact words, I don't remember; but she was not going to let him force us to join any union against our will.

Q. About how long did Mrs. Reed appear at the meeting?

A. Oh, around ten or fifteen minutes, something like that.

Q. Did you see Mrs. Reed or hear Mrs. Reed read a letter from the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. No, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4895] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, was there any action taken by the employees with respect to appointing a committee?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Will you state what occurred with reference to that?

A. Well, we appointed a committee of three to see somebody to find out what we could do to get legal counsel, we didn't know just what we could do to protect ourselves.

Q. Do you recall who was appointed on that committee?

A. Well, there was Rose Todd and Sallie Ormsby and Herbert Atherton, I believe, was the third one, I believe that was his name, Atherton.

Q. Now, did your instructor order you or direct you to attend that meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did any thread girl suggest or order you to attend the meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did any floor lady?

A. No, sir.

Q. And how did you happen to go to the meeting?

A. Well, I first heard of it in the lunch room at noon, that there was going to be a meeting, and then we talked it in our section that afternoon.

Q. You say you heard of it in the lunch room?

A. I heard somebody talk of a meeting in the lunch [fol. 4896] room at noon, the girls talking amongst themselves, the employees.

Q. Do you mean the operators?

A. The operators, yes.

Q. Now, after this meeting of March 18, did you read in the paper of the continuation of the violence at these other plants?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you personally see any of the violence?

A. Well, I never personally seen the violence, but my sister was hurt in it.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Was she hurt in the strike at 26th and Grand?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was your sister doing there at the time?

A. You mean what was her work in the plant?

Q. No, how did she happen to be there?

A. Well, she was going to work; she worked at Gernes.

Q. Was she trying to get in to work?

A. She was trying to get in to work, yes, sir.

Q. Was your sister seriously hurt?

[fol. 4897] A. Well, I don't know whether you would call it so seriously or not, but it was pretty painful.

Q. Did she have to go to the hospital?

A. No, I don't think she went to the hospital, but she was off from work quite a while.

Q. Did your sister — strike that.

Were those injuries that were visited on your sister caused by the I. L. G. W. U. strikers?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that unless she knows.

A. That is what she said.

Mr. Langsdale: Did she tell you who it was?

A. She didn't know their names, she said it was the union girls.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did your sister say whether or not these strikers worked at the plant where she worked?

A. She said it was no one she knew, she didn't know any of them.

Q. They were from outside of the plant?

A. She didn't know any of them.

Q. Was there a later meeting after the meeting of March 18 that the employees held in connection with the matters that the committee had been requested to investigate?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall about when that meeting was held?

[fol. 4898] A. Yes, as near as I can recall, it was along the last of March, but the date I don't remember.

Q. Did you attend that meeting?

A. I did.

Q. Did anybody representing the management or whom you thought represented the management discuss the holding of that meeting with you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you requested or directed to go to that meeting by your instructor?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you requested to go to that meeting by the thread girl?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or floor lady?

A. No, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4899] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I want to go back just a minute to the meeting of March 18. Will you tell the time of day that that meeting was held?

A. Well, as near as I can remember it was around 5 o'clock.

Q. Will you state where the meeting was held?

A. On the second floor, I believe.

Q. Were you through work that day when you went to that meeting?

A. Yes, sir, I was.

Q. Now, going back to the meeting that was held the last of March, will you state what time of day that meeting was held?

A. It was around 5 o'clock.

Q. Will you state where that meeting was held?

A. It was also held on the second floor, I believe.

Q. Now, was that meeting a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear it stated among the employees of the plant that that was the Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 4900] Q. Will you state what occurred at that meeting?

A. Well, we had a report from the committee that went to see about legal advice, what we could do to protect ourselves, and they had seen Mr. Tyler and talked to him.

* * * * * *

A. And they said that he asked a retaining fee of $500, and would like to have suggestions on some way to raise it, or what they thought about it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you know what was done?

A. Well, everybody wanted to just give the money, you know, instead of raising it some other way, they all just wanted to give the money; I did, and somebody suggested $1, but we came down to 50c, and each girl was to give 50c.

Q. When did you give this money?

A. The next morning.

Q. Do you recall whom you gave the money to?

A. I gave it to a girl in our section, but I don't recall what her name was.

Q. Did you make that contribution of 50c to the Loyalty League?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 4901] Q. I will hand you again Respondent's exhibit 23 and I believe you stated you did read that article which appeared on March 27, 1937, in the Journal-Post?

* * * * * *

A. Yes, I read this article.

* * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you understand from that article that the garment companies involved in the strike had applied for an injunction?

A. That is the way I understood it.

Q. And was there a general discussion at the plant, at the Donnelly plant?

A. Yes, sir, that is where I read the article.

Q. Was there a general discussion among the employees that an injunction might be obtained to protect you employees?

A. Yes, there was.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4903] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Dean, at the meeting that you just referred to, the latter part of March, was there a discussion at that meeting about the purpose of employing Mr. Tyler?

A. Well, the way I understood it, we wanted to see what we could do to protect ourselves against the violence that had been going on at these other plants.

Q. And was there a discussion about employing a lawyer to investigate the law, for the purpose of bringing an injunction suit?

A. Well, that was my understanding, that it was part of his remarks.

Q. Now, did you see employees at that meeting make their contributions of 50c apiece?

A. Yes, I seen a few of the girls throw their money up on the platform, or where Miss Todd was standing, who presided; and someone suggested that we wait and take it up in our sections the next day, and each section appointed a girl to give the money to, and I went in and gave mine to the girl the next morning, before I went to work.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, did the fact that Rose Todd presided at that [fol. 4904] meeting lead you to believe that the meeting was sponsored by the company?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you consider Rose Todd a boss down at the plant? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you believe that Rose Todd spoke for the management in reference to labor matters? A. No, sir.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd presided at the meeting lead you to believe it was a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not Rose Todd took an active part in the meeting of March 18?

A. She did.

Q. Well, did that fact lead you to believe that the meeting was sponsored by the company? A. No, sir.

Q. Did it lead you to believe it was a Loyalty League meeting? A. No, sir.

Q. I believe you stated that you read respondent's Exhibit 38, which appeared in the Kansas City Star of April 12, 1937, and is entitled: "Wagner Act upheld"?

A. I didn't read all of it at that time, but I read the biggest part of it at that time.

[fol. 4905] Q. Do you know whether or not the fact that the Wagner Act had been upheld was discussed by the employees?

A. Well, we discussed it in our section.

Q. Did you hear any discussion at the plant of an article that appeared in the Kansas City papers, on or about April 22nd, which stated that Sylvia Hull was going to the I. L. G. W. U. convention as a representative of the Donnelly employees?

. . . . . .

Q. (By Mr. Ingraham): Was there a general discussion of that article?

[fol. 4906] A. Yes, sir, there was.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Had you selected Sylvia Hull to represent you and go to an International convention and ask support for a strike at the Donnelly plant? A. I had not.

Q. Did you hear of any employee at the Donnelly plant selecting Sylvia Hull to represent her?

A. I had not.

Q. Did you hear of any employee at the Donnelly plant that wanted a strike called by the International at that plant? A. I had not.

Q. What was the effect of reading this article, on you?

A. Well, it made me rather angry.

Q. What was the effect on other employees, so far as you could observe?

A. The same effect as it had on myself.

Q. I believe you had already stated that on April 27th, you joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I did.

Q. Now, will you please state what reasons you had for voting to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, I felt like we could do better by ourselves than [fol. 4907] any outsider, and because we knew our own problems, and I felt that someone in the plant representing us with the company could do better than any outsiders would, who didn't know anything about our organization and our work in the plant.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not the activities of the I. L. G. W. U. had anything to do with your feelings?

A. Well, more or less, yes.

Q. Well, in what respect?

A. Well, I didn't want to be called out on a strike, and I didn't want to go and participate in any violence, I would not have done that.

Q. Did anyone representing the management discuss with you the forming of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, sir.

Q. Did anyone representing the management discuss with any employee, so far as you know, the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Never that I ever knew anything of.

Q. Did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will? A. I did.

Q. State whether or not you felt that you would be penalized by the company if you did not join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. A. I did not.

[fol. 4908] Q. Will you state whether or not you felt any pressure or any coercion on the part of the management in any respect in connection with whether you joined or did not join any labor organization? A. No.

Q. How did you vote, if you recall, in regard to the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? I mean, was there an oral vote or was it written, or what did you do?

A. Well, an oral vote; as far as I remember, it was an oral vote.

Q. Will you state whether or not the employees were unanimous? A. Yes, they were.

Q. Will you state whether or not that was the sincere desire of the employees? A. I believe it was.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4909] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you state who acted as chairman at that meeting?

A. As far as I remember, Miss Todd did.

Q. Did the fact that Miss Todd acted as chairman lead you to believe that the meeting was sponsored by the company? A. No, sir.

Q. Did the fact that Miss Todd acted as chairman lead you to believe it was a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd acted as chairman lead you to believe that she was speaking for the management in any way? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall what Rose Todd did, or what her work was at the plant?

A. Well, I never did just exactly know what Rose's work was, for she was at this place and that, was matching thread, and she hunted down this dress and hunted down that dress, and matched thread, or something, but I never did know what her general work was, but she was [fol. 4910] just here and yonder in the plant.

Q. Now, did you attend any of the meetings you referred to, the March 18 meeting, the meeting the last of March, and the meeting on April 27, in your capacity as a member of the Loyalty League? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you a member of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you join the Loyalty League?

A. When it was formed, I think it was in 1935.

Q. Did you ever consider the Loyalty League a labor organization? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear of the Loyalty League dealing with the management in respect to rates of pay or wages, or anything like that. A. No, sir, I never did.

Q. What did it do, the Loyalty League?

A. What did the Loyalty League do?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, as near as I can understand it, it was a social affair; they gave parties. We had a number of clubs around through the sections, and they thought it would be nice to just get them all together as a whole, and have our dances and things together, and kind of get [fol. 4911] the employees to know one another, mingle together.

Q. Did anyone connected with the management ask you to join the Loyalty League? A. No, sir.

Q. Was it a voluntary organization?

A. As far as I know.

Q. Did you pay any dues into the Loyalty League?

A. I never did.

Q. Did you ever hear of the Loyalty League having any activities that were sponsored by the company?

A. The Loyalty League?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. I mean by that did the Loyalty League hold a carnival or a dance at the request of the company, or anything like that?

A. Not that I know of. The only way I know the Loyalty League helped was on the Christmas parties; they would help on the Christmas parties, that is the only recollection I have of that.

Q. Did you understand or gain the impression that the Loyalty League promoted the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you understand or gain the impression that the [fol. 4912] Loyalty League was the forerunner of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir, I never did.

Q. Did you understand or gain any impression that there was any connection between the Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, sir. [fol. 4913] Q. Do you recall whether or not there were meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, then the meeting would be adjourned and they would hold a meeting of the Loyalty League, or anything like that?

A. There never was, to my knowledge.

Q. Was there any pressure or influence of any kind brought to bear on you by the Loyalty League or its officers to cause you to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, sir.

Q. Did any instructor or thread girl request or order you to join the Loyalty League?

A. To join the Loyalty League?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. Do you recall when Mr. Baty was made production manager of the plant? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that during the summer of 1935?

A. I believe it was.

Q. Will you state whether or not you ever considered an instructor your boss? A. No.

Q. Did you ever consider a thread girl your boss?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, referring back to the time Mr. Baty took over [fol. 4914] the job of production manager, from that time up to the summer of 1939 I will ask you to state whether or not Mr. Baty took up grievances that the employees might have? A. Yes, he did.

Q. What had been the practice before Mr. Baty became production manager, if you recall?

A. Well, we would talk to our instructor, and then we would talk to Mrs. Reeves.

Q. After Mr. Baty took over how did you learn that he handled grievances?

A. Well, I went down on the seventh floor and seen him at his desk there. I made inquiries as to why he was there and they said he had taken charge of the plant and had taken over part of Mrs. Reeves's duties.

Q. Did you inquire what duties he would handle?

A. Well, the way I understood it—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. The question was, Did you inquire?

Do you mean, did she inquire of Mr. Baty?

Mr. Ingraham: Or anybody.

A. No, I didn't inquire of Mr. Baty.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you learn what duties he was taking over and what he would handle?

A. I understood he was to have charge of the plant.

Q. From whom did you get that information?

[fol. 4915] A. Well, I'm not positive whether I went down to the nurse or not, but I believe that is the way I got it. The hospital was on the seventh floor at that time. I know I went down to the seventh floor for something and, as near as I can remember, that is where I talked about it with someone.

Q. When did this occurrence take place, if you recall?

A. About the nurse?

Q. Yes.

A. I think it was the day Mr. Baty's office was put down there, or the day after. I forget when it was when he first came down there.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not you observed Mr. Baty handling the complaints personally that had formerly been handled by instructors?

A. I seen the girls go talk to him.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You did not know specifically what those matters were, did you?

A. No.

Q. So you didn't know whether they were matters that had formerly been handled by instructors or not, did you?

A. Well, not what they were talking about.

Q. In other words, unless you knew what they were talking about, you wouldn't know, would you?

A. No.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Well, was it generally understood among the em-

[fol. 4916] ployees at the plant that after Mr. Baty took over, the instructors would not have authority to handle complaints?

* * * * * * *

A. That was my understanding of the situation at the plant at that time.

[fol. 4917] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not after Mr. Baty took over the plant there was any change, to your knowledge, of the authority of instructors, passing on hiring or laying off or disciplining employees.

A. I don't know as the instructors ever had that authority to hire and fire employees.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You mean by that, not knowing whether they ever had it, you couldn't say whether there was any change? Is that what you mean?

A. Oh, yes, there was a change—

Q. No. My question to you is, not knowing whether the instructors ever had the right to hire and discharge, you couldn't say whether there was any change?

A. I know they never had the right to hire and discharge.

Q. Well, then, can you say whether there was any change when Mr. Baty went in there?

A. Yes.

Q. As to hiring and firing?

A. Well, as to— I don't know, but—

Q. My question to you was, as Mr. Ingraham's question was, whether there was any change as to hiring and firing.

Mr. Langsdale: I think the question was a little more comprehensive than that.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may have been, but that was the point I was concerned about.

[fol. 4918] Mr. Langsdale: Will you read the question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Which question, the original question?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes, asked by Mr. Ingraham.

(Thereupon the last question by Mr. Ingraham was read by the reporter, as follows:

"I will ask you to state whether or not after Mr. Baty took over the plant there was any change, to your knowledge, of the authority of instructors, passing on hiring or laying off or disciplining employees.")

Mr. Langsdale: " . . . passing on . . . "?

The Reporter: Yes.

Mr. Ingraham: Were you through with your answer?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you state whether or not you ever understood that 3 or 4 people, an instructor, Elizabeth Reeves, and several other people, passed on laying off people when Elizabeth Reeves was in charge of managing the plant?

A. No. I didn't know anything about that.

Q. Will you state whether or not prior to the time Mr. Baty became factory manager there was a custom or rule for the operators to take up complaints with their instructors?

A. That was the custom.

Q. Now, after Mr. Baty became factory manager was [fol. 4919] there a change in that custom?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Where did you go then?

A. To Mr. Baty.

Q. Was Mr. Baty through the plant frequently?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever consider a thread girl a boss?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever take up complaints with thread girls?

A. No, sir.

Q. What did a thread girl do, as far as you could observe?

A. Well, she brought the thread to and from your machine.

Q. I will ask you to read respondent's exhibit No. 6, which appears at page 4864 in the Circuit Court record, which is an article that appeared in the Kansas City Times of February 26, 1937, entitled "Reopen Garment Feud," and ask you if you recall reading that article.

. . . . . .

Q. Do you recall reading that article?

A. I do.

Q. Do you recall reading in this article the stafement:

"'Part of the union's campaign directed against the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union will be to send six women to cities and towns where its garments are sold, ad- [fol. 4920] vising retailers and labor organizations,' Perlstein said. 'Miss Palmer will have charge of this squad of fellow-workers.'"

Do you recall reading that?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. What effect, if any, did that statement have on you?
A. Well, it made me rather angry.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:
Q. Why did it make you angry?
A. Because it was affecting my job, or would affect my job.
Q. Do you remember reading this statement:

"'The union claims only 25 members among the Donnelly workers but officials said hundreds of others were related to union members. Within a year we will have it completely organized,' Perlstein said. 'As soon as we have enough members we will call a strike.'"

Do you remember reading that?

A. Yes.
Q. What effect did that have on you?
A. I didn't think they could call a strike.
Q. Did you later learn, when the strike started at the Gernes plant, that the International would call a strike, even though they had no members?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4921] A. Yes, I did.

By Trial Examiner Batten:
Q. You did learn that later; is that right?
A. Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:
Q. What was the effect of this article, so far as you could observe, on the other employees at the Donnelly plant?
A. Well, the ones that I talked to felt something like I did about it.
Q. Do you recall signing a petition on March 2, 1937, which petition was directed to Mrs. Reed?
A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4922] Q. I will hand you I. L. G. W. U. Exhibit No. 10, appearing in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at 5961, and ask you if you recall signing a petition that had the writing on it that appears in this exhibit at the top of the page.

A. Yes, I signed it.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not the article that appeared in the paper on February 26, 1937, influenced you in any way in signing this petition? Do you want to see that article?

A. No, I think I remember; it was Mr. Perlstein's speech?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, to some extent I would say it did.

Q. Who asked you to sign this petition?

A. Well, it was just passed to my machine by the girl next to me.

Q. Do you know whether or not, or did you know who brought the petition to your section?

A. A girl by the name of Mary Sprofera, I think, and another girl, I don't know what her name was.

Q. Did you have any conversation with those girls?

A. No, I never.

[fol. 4923] Q. Did you have any conversation with anybody about this petition before your signed it?

A. No.

Q. Did you sign this petition of your own free will?

A. I did.

Q. Now, in this petition there is a statement, "and refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization." Do you recall reading that in the petition?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you want Mrs. Reed to know that that was your feelings at the time?

A. Well,—you mean any union organization in the plant?

Q. Well, it said here "and refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization." Will you first explain what you thought that meant?

A. I thought that meant an outside union.

Q. And did you want Mrs. Reed to know that fact?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did you at that time think the outside union referred to the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, in this statement it is further stated, "The undersigned wish to make it known we are perfectly happy and contented with our positions which we hold with this organization," and there is another statement, "We are thankful for the real humanitarian interest extended by [fol. 4924] our employer, Mrs. Reed." Did you want Mrs. Reed to know that?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Why did you want her to know that?

A. Because I felt that way about it.

Q. Did the attacks being made by the I. L. G. W. U., which charged that the employees were mistreated, have anything to do with you wanting Mrs. Reed to know that?

A. To a certain extent I think it did.

Q. Did anyone representing the management ask you to sign this petition?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did anyone representing the management discuss this petition with you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you believe this petition was circulated by the Loyalty League?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear that this petition was circulated by the Loyalty League?

A. No, sir, I never did.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 7, which is an article that appeared in the Journal-Post of March 6, 1937, and ask you to read that, please; and that appears at pages 4865, 4866, and '67 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record.

[fol. 4925] Mr. Ingraham: Do you recall reading that article? A. Never until now.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you hear Mr. Reed make any speeches in the Presidential campaign of 1936? A. I did not.

Q. Have you heard Mr. Reed make any speeches at all? A. I never did.

Q. Prior to April 27, 1937, did you ever hear that Mr. Reed said many harsh things about Dubinsky in the previous political campaign?

A. I had heard it, just hearsay, people talking.

Q. Did that influence you in any way in voting in favor of joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I couldn't say that it did.

Q. I will hand you Board's Exhibit 27, and ask you if you will read that article which appears in the Kansas City Times of May 11, 1937? Did you read that article in the paper? A. I think I did.

Q. That was on May 11, 1937?

A. It was along in there sometime.

[fol. 4926] Q. Did anything that Senator Reed said in that article influence you in any way in remaining a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. (Continuing) The morning after the article appeared in the paper on the 22nd of April, in connection with Sylvia Hull going to the International convention. Were you at work the following morning?

A. I read the article at work.

Q. Will you state what effect that had on you?

A. It made me rather angry.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Will you state whether or not you heard any employees state that they did not want to work if Sylvia remained there?

A. Well, there was some talk, but just what they stated, I couldn't say, there was quite a bit of talk, and quite a bit of confusion.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4927] Cross-Examination

Mr. Lane: Mrs. Dean, I'll hand your Board's Exhibit 1 quadruple B, which is an offer of proof by the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, appearing at page 3471 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4928] By Mr. Lane: I'll call your attention to the seventh page of the signatures to that exhibit, which is page 3480 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, and especially to the name on the nineteenth line from the top of the first column, and ask you to state whether or not that is your signature.

A. It is.

Q. Mrs. Dean, state whether or not the meeting of March 18, 1937, was called by the employees on their own initiative. A. Yes, it was.

Q. Do you know of any action or influence or suggestion of the employer brought to bear on you or any other employee, in connection with calling that meeting?

A. No, I do not.

Q. I believe you stated that the meeting had been in session sometime when Mrs. Reed came down to the meeting? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long was Mrs. Reed there?

A. Oh, I think around ten or fifteen minutes.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Lane: I'll ask you to state whether or not Mrs. Reed said that she would not allow members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to work in the Donnelly Company.

[fol. 4929] A. She did not.

* * * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. I'll ask you to state whether or not Mrs. Reed said the I. L. G. W. U. would never be allowed in her plant.

A. I never heard her.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed say that she wanted the names of anyone who joined the I. L. G. W. U. reported to her?

A. I never heard her say that.

Q. Did she say anything that in substance expressed any ideas that she wanted anybody who joined the I. L. G. W. U. reported to her?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to this examination, after having shown the witness the offer of proof, which she signed, having her read it, which contains all of those answers, and then proceeding to examine her from the document which he has just shown her and which she signed and swore to.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

A. What was the question?

(Last question was read by the reporter.)

[fol. 4930] A. I never heard anything to that effect.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I'll ask you to state whether or not—strike that.

You were present throughout the meeting, were you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you hear everything that Mrs. Reed said, in the talk she made? A. I think I did.

Q. What did Mrs. Reed say with respect to whether the employees could, so far as she was concerned, belong or not belong to any labor organization?

A. As far as she was concerned, we could do as we pleased.

Q. What did Mrs. Reed say, if anything, with respect to whether she would permit anybody to force her to compel her employees to join any labor organization?

A. She said she would not permit Mr. Dubinsky to force her employees to join any organization against their will.

Q. Do you recall when it was your sister was injured in the strikes at the Gernes plant?

A. I don't recall the date, no.

Q. What month was it?

A. It was in March, I think it was in March.

Q. Do you recall when it was with reference to the March 18 meeting?

A. It was after the March 18 meeting, I am sure.

[fol. 4931] Q. But it was in the month of March?

A. Yes.

Q. Was your sister a member of the I. L. G. W. U. at the time those strikes began? A. No, sir.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. How long was your sister away from work because of injuries received there?

A. I don't just exactly remember, but it was something around four to six weeks, but I don't exactly remember the exact length of time.

Q. Did she go back to work at the Gernes Garment Company? A. Yes.

Q. Did your sister join the I. L. G. W. U.

A. No, sir.

[fol. 4932] Q. Is she still employed at the Gernes Garment Company? A. Yes, sir.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Was anything said at the meeting of March 18, with respect to employing buses to haul the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company to and from work?

A. Yes, there was.

[fol. 4933] Q. And was that done any time after March 18? A. Yes.

Q. How soon after?

A. Well, I don't just exactly remember how soon after, because I never rode one.

Q. Well, now, was the disturbances and the disturbances and disorder and violence connected with those strikes at the Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri plants a matter of common and frequent conversation and discussion among the employees at the plant? A. Yes, they were.

Q. Well, how frequent?

A. Well, almost every day we talked over what happened, what we had heard had happened.

Q. I am asking you to state whether you had any fear that those things might happen at the Donnelly plant?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What was your observation as to whether or not other employees had the same fear?

A. Well, the ones I talked to seemed to feel that way, that something might happen to us.

Q. Did you hear any threats or statements made that the Donnelly plant was next in line?

A. Yes, I heard that.

Q. Where did you hear it?

[fol. 4934] A. Well, I read it in the papers, for one thing.

Q. Well, where else did you hear it?

A. Well, just general talk.

Q. Did you understand from this interview of Mr. Dubinsky in the Kansas City papers of February 26, that the occurrences at Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri were just a part of a general campaign in which the Donnelly plant was to be involved?

A. Well, that is what I took it to be.

Q. Was your sister injured at the time she was endeavoring to get to work in the morning? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at what place?

A. At 26th and Grand, at the Gernes Garment Company.

Q. As she was trying to enter the building?

A. As she was trying to get into the building.

Q. Now, since the question has been asked here, would you mind stating your sister's name? A. No, I don't.

Q. Will you state it, please? A. Anna Keel.

Q. Anna Keel? A. Anna Keel.

Q. How do you spell that last name?

A. K-e-e-l (Spelling).

Q. What effect, if any, did all of these occurrences [fol. 4935] there have on your action in connection with employing legal counsel at this meeting, or discussing the employment of counsel, at this meeting of March 18?

A. Well, I thought we ought to have some way to protect ourselves against the violence that was going on, and I didn't know how else to do it unless they would get legal advice.

Q. Did you know who Hobart Atherton was in April '37? A. Well, I did know him about the plant.

Q. What did you observe him doing around the plant?

A. Just one thing and another; I didn't have any particulars or take any particular notice of anything he did.

Q. Did you, from your observation of him, have any impression that he was a representative of the management? A. Well, I didn't think so, no.

Q. Did you know Sallie Ormsby? A. Yes.

Q. What was she? A. An operator.

Q. Did you have any impression that Sallie Ormsby in March and April of 1937 was a representative of management? A. No, sir.

Q. Or had any right to speak for management in connection with labor matters? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, for the purpose of refreshing your recollec-
[fol. 4936] tion, I am going to hand you the minutes of the meeting of April 27, 1937, which is Board's exhibit No. 8-1, beginning on page 4395 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. What time of day did that meeting occur, Mrs. Dean? A. Around five o'clock, I would say.

Q. Did you attend the meeting in your uniform, or were you in your street clothes?

A. I have forgotten whether I dressed or not.

Q. Did you sometimes go to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings in uniform?

A. Sometimes I did, and sometimes I changed.

Q. How long did the meeting last?

A. Well, I don't just remember; I think something like an hour, I don't just exactly remember the length of time.

Q. Did your instructor tell you and all of the other members of your section to stay in a body and go to that meeting together, and come back to your section after it was over and resume work, or did anything of that kind occur? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you vote at that meeting to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

[fol. 4937] A. I did.

Q. When you cast that vote were you acting voluntarily?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you doing what you wanted to do, of your own free will? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you doing what you wanted to do, of your own free will? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have the feeling at that time that you were being intimidated by anything the company had said or done, in taking that action?

A. No.

Q. Did you have the feeling in your mind that you were under any pressure or duress or intimidation of the company, or any of the company officials, to take that action? A. No, sir.

Q. Was it your own personal preference to form your own plant union, rather than to belong to some outside union or not have any outside union at all?

A. Well, it was my preference to have a company union.

Mr. Langsdale: To have what?

A. To have our inside union.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Do you have any knowledge of any facts or any instance in which the employer or any representative of [fol. 4938] the employer has exerted any pressure or intimidation or coercion or any other influence upon you or upon any other employees to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or to stay out of any other labor organization? A. No.

Q. Now, as shown by these minutes, at page 4400 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, a committee of five people was appointed to act as a nominating committee, and those people were Mrs. Riggs, Lyle Jeter, Clyde Crawford, Cordelia Taylor, and Leona Moore. Did you regard any one of those people as being a supervisor of the company, or being entitled to speak for the company in connection with labor matters? A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you know Fred Brown? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was his job?

A. Well, he worked in the cutting, but I don't know what he done.

Q. Did you regard him as a supervisor, or as a representative of management?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4939] A. I can't say that I did, no.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you know Mamie Riddle? A. Yes.

Q. What was her position? A. Operator.

Q. Did you regard her as a supervisor or spokesman for the management? A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. Did you know Anna Richards?

A. No, I didn't know her.

Q. Did you know Marjorie Green?

A. Well, I seen her.

Q. Did you think Marjorie Green was a supervisor of the company, or boss, or representative of management?
A. No, I didn't consider her that.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:
Q. Did you know Jack McConaughey? A. Yes.
Q. What was Mr. McConaughey's position?
[fol. 4940] A. He worked in the cage.
Q. What do you mean by that?
A. Well, he took the machine calls.
Q. Will you explain a little more what you mean?
A. Well, whenever a machine breaks down, we turn in a call and he wrote it down on the board.
Q. Did you think Jack McConaughey was a supervisor of the company? A. No, I didn't.
Q. Or that he was a boss or a person entitled to represent the management in any labor matters?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. Did you know Charlie Casey?
A. No, I do not know him.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:
Q. Have you discussed with anyone the matter of forming your own plant union, prior to this meeting of April 27?
[fol. 4941] A. Well, we had talked something of it.
Q. And by "we" you mean who?
A. The girls right around me in my section.
Q. And when did you talk about it?
A. Oh, at various times.
Q. And you said that you saw in the paper that article of April 12, stating that the Wagner Act had been held constitutional? A. Yes, I did.
Q. Well, with reference to that date, was it before or after?
A. It was after that date, as near as I can remember.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4942] Mr. Lane: Q. Mrs. Dean, I think you stated on direct examination that you read the article appearing in the Kansas City Journal-Post on April 22, 1937, entitled "Donnelly workers will be sent to Union convention" down at the plant? A. Yes.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Lane: Q. Now, in connection with the strikes that were going on at Gordon, Gernes, Missouri, what was your understanding as to whether or not the pickets and those who were conducting the strikes were employees in those plants?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4943] A. It was my understanding they wasn't employees of those companies.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Now, do you recall reading in this Journal-Post article of April 22nd, this portion of the article "Perlstein said the Donnelly committee desired one of their number to appear at the convention and asked the interested body to indorse and support a strike against their employer for failure to negotiate a contract for higher wages, shorter hours and improved conditions." Do you remember reading that part of the article? A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. When you read that article what was your opinion as to whether the strikes mentioned there was to be a strike only of those employees at Donnelly's who were members of the I. L. G. W. U. or whether it was to be a strike conducted against all employees of the Donnelly [fol. 4944] Garment Company.

* * * * * * *

A. It was my opinion it was to be against all the employees.

By Trial Witness Batten:

Q. You mean not against the company but against the employees?

A. Against all of us, to keep us from getting in to work.

Q. My question was, you mean it was against the employees, not against the company, is that what you meant?

A. Well, if it would keep the employees from getting in to work wouldn't that be against the company, against the employees?

Q. I don't know, I was asking you.
A. That is the way I thought it was.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

Mr. Lane: Q. What did you take this article to mean as to whether Sylvia Hull was going to represent at this convention, or was undertaking to represent at [fol. 4945] this convention, only those employees who were members of the I. L. G. W. U. or whether she was going to undertake to represent all employees?

* * * * * *

A. My understanding was she was going to represent all of us.
Q. You mean from reading the article?
A. From reading the article.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4946] By Mr. Lane:
Q. Was this article of April 22nd discussed by you with other employees at the Donnelly plant?
A. Yes, we discussed it.
Q. What was your opinion as to what other employees believed this article to mean from what she said to you in discussing the article with you?

* * * * * *

A. Well, the ones I talked to I think felt the same way as I did. She was representing us, the employees.
Q. Mrs. Dean, I will hand you Board's exhibit 8-21 beginning at page 4415 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, being the minutes of the meeting of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of May 25, 1937, but before I ask you a question in that connection, did you, after April 27, 1937, attend the meetings of the Donnelly Garment [fol. 4947] Workers' Union regularly? A. Yes, I did.
Q. I will ask you to read those minutes and state whether or not you attended that meeting.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you attend that meeting? A. I did.

Q. Was there ever a meeting of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that was followed immediately by a meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Was there ever a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union preceding immediately by the Loyalty League? A. Not to my knowledge, there wasn't.

Q. Did you, at this meeting of May 25, 1937, of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, discuss the matter of raising money for the Loyalty League? A. No.

Q. What time of day did that meeting of May 25th convene?

A. Well, I should say around five, something around there.

Q. Was it after you had concluded your work for the day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there ever a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in May of 1937 that began at 3:45 P. M.? [fol. 4948] A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. I will hand you Board's exhibit No. 18-A, beginning at page 4709 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, and ask you to read that exhibit.

Mr. Reed: Please state that number again.

Mr. Lane: The page number is 4709. These are the minutes that Mrs. Greenhaw said she kept.

Trial Examiner Batten: As long as the witness has testified there never was such a meeting, you want to examine her about the contents of this, is that it?

Mr. Lane: I want to examine her specifically with the statement in those Greenhaw minutes. There was a discussion about raising money for the Loyalty League.

Trial Examiner Batten: Can't your direct her to that part of it then?

Mr. Lane: Let me look. There may be other questions I want to ask. I think the only way in which I can clearly ask questions is to have the witness read the minutes of both this report of Mrs. Greenhaw of the minutes of that meeting and also the purported minutes of the Loyalty League which followed.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Dean, at the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union which you attended on May 25, 1937, did Rose Todd say "I want to tell you this is going to be two meetings, the first being a meeting of the Donnelly Gar-[fol. 4949] ment Workers' Union and after that a meeting of the Loyalty League."?

A. I never heard her say that.

Q. Did Hobart Atherton say at that meeting "There seems to be a little misunderstanding as to why the Loyalty League needs this money," and a little later on "I will explain that to you."?

A. I never heard it.

Q. Was there any discussion at this meeting as to raising money for the Loyalty League?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever attend a Loyalty League meeting at any time at which the matters referred to in Board's exhibit 18-D and following, beginning on page 4712, which you just read in which those matters were discussed. Do you recall reading those minutes?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever attend a Loyalty League meeting at which those matters were discussed?

Mr. Langsdale: What matters are you referring to?

Mr. Lane: I am referring to Circuit Court of Appeals 4712, purported minutes of Loyalty meeting kept by Miss Greenhaw?

A. No I never.

Mr. Lane: That is all.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you ever attend a Loyalty League meeting at [fol. 4950] which carnivals were discussed?

A. Well, I don't remember.

Q. Did you have a lot of carnivals?

A. I can't say that we did, no.

Q. Did you ever have one?

A. That a Loyalty League —

Q. (Interrupting) Yes.

A. I don't remember the Loyalty League having one. I remember the Athletic Association having some.

Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union have any carnivals?

A. Not that I can remember of.

Q. Did they ever discuss at their meetings having carnivals?

A. No, not that I can remember of.

Q. Did they ever have carnivals and booths at a dance for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Not at any I was at.

Q. Did you attend many of the dances given by Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I don't think I attended but one.

Q. Do you remember which one that was?

A. No, I can't say.

Q. But you did attend the meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union regularly did you?

[fol. 4951] A. Yes, I did, through that period.

Q. Did you usually leave before the meeting was over or did you usually stay throughout the meeting?

A. I most generally waited until it was dismissed.

Q. Were you absent from work due to illness or other reasons from the time the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed until July 15, 1939?

A. No.

Q. You worked steadily during that period except for the time you went on your vacation, did you?

A. I think so.

Q. What time of the year did you take your vacation?

A. Well, most generally in the summer.

Q. Do you remember what month you took it in in 1937?

A. Well, I can't say that I do, No.

Q. What is — was it as early as May?

A. I don't remember.

Q. What do you recall that was discussed at the meeting of May 25, 1937?

A. Well, we was talking about our union and we was talking about raising money, or trying to raise money so we could pay our attorney's fees to go ahead.

Q. Now, you are talking about the meeting of May 25, 1937, are you?

A. May 25th.

[fol. 4952] Q. How do you remember that meeting?

A. Well, we had raised the $500 for Mr. Tyler and these other things that come up and we had to have some way to meet them. We had to have counsel, we had to pay him before we could have him.

Q. When you say these other things that came up, what do you refer to?

A. Well, this outside interference and trying to get an injunction and those things.

Q. When you told Mr. Lane that you did not remember any of the things that were discussed in the pages 4712 through 4718 of the record occurring at any meeting, were you speaking of meetings of the Loyalty League or meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, I was speaking of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. I wonder if you would look over these minutes and specify the things therein you don't recall occurring in any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers', beginning the middle of page 4712, which is Board's exhibit 18-D, and continuing through page 4718, which is Board's exhibit 18-J.

A. Now, this is in a union?

Q. You said you didn't recall those things occurring. Will you notice the things there and state each of the things you did not notice ever occurring at the Donnelly [fol. 4953] Garment Workers' Union?

Mr. Lane: My question was whether or not this witness ever attended a Loyalty League meeting.

Miss Weyand: I have a right to ask this question.

Mr. Lane: You haven't any right to misdirect her attention.

Trial Examiner Batten: Nobody is misdirecting anybody.

Mr. Lane: Miss Weyand asked it, in attempting to repeat my question —

Miss Weyand: (Interrupting) I asked her which she was referring to that she didn't know occurred — she said —

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) You understand the question?

A. I don't remember Miss Todd saying "That they were several things came up that the Loyalty League will be interested in, mainly about the sweep stakes" I think some of the people understand it and some do not and a great many people have expressed to us a desire."

Mr. Langsdale: Speak a little louder please.

Trial Examiner Batten: Apparently you are reading it to yourself, Mrs. Dean?

A. Yes, sir. I never did hear of any bills that the Loyalty League ever owed. I never heard anything about a committee going to rent the floor of the building for a carnival and the union meeting I never heard anything of [fol. 4954] Loyalty League representatives meeting with the Athletic Association. I don't say by that that they didn't but I never heard of them. I never heard of Miss Todd asking Hobart to explain any indebtedness of the Loyalty League at a union meeting. I never heard him say that we had any indebtedness from any Loyalty League. I never did hear they had a meeting of the Loyalty League representatives and they were authorized to obtain legal counsel and I never heard that they retained Mr. Tyler. I never heard him say that this, the bill to Mr. Tyler, was the only debt the Loyalty League had which had not been paid.

Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Examiner — have you been taking these notes and answers, Mr. Reporter?

The Reporter: Yes, sir.

Mr. Langsdale: You looked like your hands were in your pockets.

A. I don't remember of ever hearing anyone say this, "I think it is very unjust and thoughtless for someone to say I just work here. I don't know anything about those bills. As I said at the last meeting we haven't any secrets we all work here. It is everybody's business. There is only one person that doesn't work here, that is Mrs. Reed. She owns the business. Don't feel timid about asking questions, we are just one employee talking to another." I never heard that at a union meeting. I never heard Miss Todd say "The union would have to take care of Mr. Tyler's expenses from now on." In fact I never heard any [fol. 4955] of this said in a union meeting, that I have been reading, if that is what you want to know. I can read it clear through from the start but I never heard it in a union meeting.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I wish you would go on. Would you read out loud the things you didn't hear said at any meeting? Will you continue to do that?

A. I haven't read much I did hear at a union meeting.

Q. I wish you would continue to read out loud what you didn't hear said at any union meeting that appears there so that the reporter can take it down. Do you remember, Mrs. Dean, where you stopped reading out loud?

Mr. Ingraham: I think Miss Weyand wants you to read out loud everything you didn't hear at a union meeting.

A. I don't exactly remember where I stopped.

Mr. Reed: The reporter will find it for you.

(Thereupon last part of witness' testimony, as requested, was read by the reporter.)

Miss Weyand: That is at the bottom of page 4714.

A. "But the Loyalty League, through the officers of the Loyalty League, assumes this responsibility — this retainer free, but as Mr. Atherton said, it was the only organization the employees had and I felt as long as we had that organization we certainly were privileged to go ahead and do something about it. We had to protect ourselves. We are just beginning in this thing so don't let us [fol. 4956] get rusty. If anybody is interested in joining the union you don't want to let me know. If you are interested you had better keep quiet about it. There has never been any force about belonging to the Loyalty League. Anybody is privileged to belong or not belong,

As far as the union is concerned you don't have to belong to that either. I haven't any doubt about a few who have joined the union, I think in time they will give themselves away about that, but we want to be fair and square."

Mr. Lane: Mrs. Dean, will you please read just a little louder, I can't quite hear you?

A. "Lewis moved each member of the Loyalty League pay 50c to take care of any current indebtedness, seconded by Louie James. I think right here in this meeting we will have each representative to accept this money and keep a close check. This is purely voluntary, if you want to do it all right, if you don't want to do it all right. The sweep stakes, or derby as we call it, we will forget it. This meeting right here takes care of the only thing we are concerned about, that is the derby, and that is taken care of. Our dance we talked of in the last meeting, and we will have a picnic one of these days. We have lots of nice times and they haven't cost anything and I am sure you feel real good about it and so do I. There is one more thing. A great many people haven't carried their iden- [fol. 4957] tification cards. Please bring them. They are getting fussy about us getting in down stairs and I don't blame them. I think we better put it to a vote. All in favor of donating 50c for the Loyalty League indebtedness make it known by the usual sign. Carried. I think one of the boys should come up and tell us what has been done at the picnic grounds. I think everybody would like to know. Will some of the boys come up and tell us what shape the picnic grounds are in, whether we have water or not. While he is coming up I will tell you, last night at our meeting of the Chairman I resigned as President of the Loyalty League and we elected a new President, Thelma Huffaker, in section 411. Fred Brown: The picnic grounds aren't in very good shape right now. We have weeds about knee high and two ovens and three tables now but when the time comes to have a picnic I think we will have another oven or two built and I think we will have to get the boys out and cut those weeds, that is the shape it is right now. Miss Todd: Is there any other business to come before the Loyalty League? If not, you can give your 50c to the representative of your department. If you want to give a dime at a time that is all right. Now, I want to introduce Miss Huffaker, your new President. Miss Huffaker: Girls and fellow workers, this is quite an honor to me, to the best of my ability I will carry on the best I know how. Miss Todd: If there is no other business the meeting is adjourned."

[fol. 4958] A. "Mr. Atherton: I don't want this meeting to break up without giving Miss Todd a big hand for what she has done. (Applause.)"

"Miss Todd: I appreciate it very much and I will try to do my best."

"Meeting adjourned."

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Now, it is your testimony you never heard any of those things which you read occur at any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, is that correct?

A. At any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that I attended.

Q. That was the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union you are speaking of? A. Yes, ma'am.

Trial Examiner Batten: That she attended.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember them occurring at any meeting of the Loyalty League that you attended?

A. Well, several of those things had occurred at Loyalty League meetings, yes. We talked over the picnic grounds and Mr. Brown talked about our picnic grounds.

Q. Do you know when those occurred?

A. Well, I don't just remember, but I think it was along in 1935 or 1936: I don't remember the exact time, but it was at a Loyalty League meeting when we were planning a picnic at Mr. Reed's place out on Reed Road. [fol. 4959] Q. That is Senator Reed's place you are referring to? A. Somewhere out on Reed Road.

Q. That was the Loyalty League meeting?

A. That was the Loyalty League meeting.

Q. Now, when you read the part about paying the retainer fee, and stated that didn't occur at the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting, you meant just in the words there? A. Just that one meeting.

Q. Will you explain what you meant? I don't think I have it clear.

A. As near as I can recall, the meeting of May 25th was the one you were talking about, wasn't it?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I don't remember of that ever being discussed at the May 25 meeting.

Q. You read certain parts from here, and you said you didn't recall them occurring at any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute, that is the difficulty of your question, Miss Weyand. It isn't clear to begin with. I am sure that this witness felt most of the time that what she was saying was that she didn't hear these things mentioned at the May 25 meeting.

Miss Weyand: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now you say "not at any union meeting."

[fol. 4960] By Miss Weyand:

Q. When you read them over, you meant at any union meeting, or at the May 25 meeting?

A. At the May 25 meeting or any other union meeting.

Q. That is what I thought you testified to.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, irrespective of what she testified to, my point was the question in the first instance was not clear, because it wasn't clear to me, but as long as it was clear to the witness, that is sufficient.

Miss Weyand: The record will show I emphasized very clearly what I wanted. I wanted to get her statement out, because she talked in there about the Loyalty League paying a fee.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let's proceed.

Miss Weyand: I wanted to ask her when she made this answer, was it only at a Loyalty League meeting, or at a union meeting? A. I don't get what you mean.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Look at page 4715. Do you remember what you read off of that page out loud, as not having remembered occurring at any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union?

A. Of the Loyalty League, about paying him a retainer fee for $500.

Q. Now, you skipped certain things on that page. Do you remember which things you skipped?

A. "I certainly can assure you if we get into court [fol. 4961] with this, as we very likely will, we will probably have to have more money during the year."

Q. And you heard that made at a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, sometime or other?

A. Yes, that was talked of at our meeting sometime or other, but I wouldn't say what meeting.

Q. That is correct. Now, what else was there on there that you skipped?

A. I think this was one of them, "One of these days we are going to work for a closed shop and I think we are going to get it."

Q. And you had heard that discussed at some meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Prior to May 25?

Q. Any time. A. Yes, we had talked of that.

Q. Do you know at what meeting you had talked of that?

A. Well, we talked of it at several meetings, that we asked for a closed shop before our contract was turned in, I believe that is the way it was.

Q. That is your recollection?

A. That is my recollection on it.

Q. Did you attend very many meetings of the Loyalty League? A. Well, I did some.

Q. Do you remember any meeting?

[fol. 4962] A. Not any special one, I couldn't say that I do any special Loyalty League meeting. I attended several, though, but I don't bring any special one to my mind.

Q. When was the first Loyalty League meeting, can you recall?

A. Well, the first Loyalty League meeting I recall was in 1935, I think, when they joined the organization down there to the plant; the Loyalty League is a social affair—we joined our clubs together, each section had a club.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, may it be understood the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, has a continuing objection to inquiring into matters around 1935 or thereabouts? Your ruling was given when the intervener was going into matters except those within a reasonable time prior to April 27, 1937.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, this question has nothing to do with my ruling, but I'll grant you the continuing objection.

Mr. Lane: Well, she is inquiring of something that occurred in 1935.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, concerning the Loyalty League, Mr. Lane.

Mr. Ingraham: It is understood the respondent still maintains its objection to any matters prior to July 5, 1935.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't understand it, unless you make it.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I made an objection at the first [fol. 4963] hearing as to all matters that occurred prior to July 5, 1935.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean your original objection in the first hearing?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, the objection you made at that time, I assume, continues through the entire hearing.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, that will be my understanding of it.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4964] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did the Loyalty League have representatives in each section? A. Yes, they did.

Q. How were those chosen?

A. Well, I think each section chose their own representative, as near as I can remember.

Q. Did each section hold meetings, at which they chose the representative?

[fol. 4965] A. Well, just around through our section we did.

Q. Did you pass a paper around with the name of every girl on it?

A. We would pass a box around with the name in it, and find out if they wanted that name, and whichever name got the most votes, was the representative.

Q. That was passed around at your machines?

A. At our machines.

Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union have representatives in each section? A. Yes, we did.

. . . . . .

Q. How are they chosen?

A. Well, we chose them in the union meetings,—I'll retract that. I don't believe we had a union representative in each section; we had one in the section I was in, but in the other sections I don't know for sure.

. . . . . .

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union have a pin? A. Yes.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4966] By Miss Weyand:

Q. I hand you the minutes of the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for Wednesday, July 21, 1937, being Board's exhibit No. 8-32, which appears at page 4426 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record—

. . . . . .

[fol. 4967] Miss Weyand: (Continuing) And ask you to examine it sufficiently to tell me whether or not you attended that meeting? I might indicate to the witness, to save time, if she has any definite recollection if she was there or not, I only intended to ask her about a matter on the first page.

A. I heard part of this, but I don't remember hearing all of this. It may have been; I couldn't say it was or it was not.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Well, do you recall being at that meeting, Mrs. Dean?

A. Yes, when some of these things were discussed I recall that meeting.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. You think you attended that meeting?

A. I believe I did.

Q. The thing I was specifically interested in appears on the first page of the minutes there with reference to buying the pins, "If anyone has not paid for their pins, please get in touch with your representative in your department, and take care of this as soon as possible." Could you tell me what representative Rose Todd referred to there?

A. I judge the representative on our floor there that represented our piece work department, our girl that represented the kind of work we did.

[fol. 4968] Q. How many of those were there in the plant?

A. I don't exactly remember. I know we had one in our section that represented us, but I don't remember about the others.

Q. Who was the person you referred to as representing the under armers? A. Mamie Riddle.

Q. And you don't remember who else represented others than the under armers?

A. I don't know that I do, I may have heard it, but I don't remember.

Q. You stated that following the meeting the latter part of March, 1937, a girl was appointed in your section to take up the 50c, is that correct? A. Well, yes.

Q. Do you remember who was appointed?

A. I can't say, no.

Q. Do you remember how she was appointed?

A. Well, I think we just, amongst ourselves, just decided to give it to that girl. There was no ballot taken, we just asked her to take the money.

Q. Do you remember when you got together and asked her to take the money?

A. I think it was after the union meeting that some of our girls were talking about it, I don't remember exactly how it was.

[fol. 4969] Q. And you think it was the same afternoon or evening the union meeting was held?

A. I kind of believe it was, I am not sure about that.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you have any recollection one way or the other, whether it occurred after the meeting or the next day?

A. I can't say. It must have been after the meeting, because the next morning I went to the girl's machine and gave her my money.

Q. So you knew before work started the next morning and you went to the girl and gave her your money?

A. I don't know whether I knew it in the morning or the night before, when I got home. I don't remember.

Q. Was your section all together after the meeting?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Have you any way of explaining how you would have a recollection that the girls in your section might have gotten together after the meeting and decided on a girl?

A. Well, as we get off the elevator, we would have to wait to get out the door; we might have been together, some of us, talking, some of us. It might have been in our locker rooms where we change our clothes; I can't say where we talked.

[fol. 4970] Q. Would all the girls in your section have been together on those occasions?

A. I can't say, I don't know; I don't remember when it was that we chose the girl.

Q. But you did know before you went to work the next morning who the girl was.

A. Before I went to my machine.

Q. And you paid her the 50c? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did she give you a receipt?

A. I can't say if she did or didn't, I don't remember?

Q. Do you usually keep all those receipts?

A. I do not.

Q. You do not? A. I don't.

Q. What section did you work in in March and April of 1937? A. 415.

Q. That is on the eighth floor? A. Eighth floor.

Q. And who was the instructor of that floor at that time? A. I don't just remember.

Q. What instructors did you have along about the spring of 1937?

A. Well, Lola Skeens was in there for a while, and Efta Dorsey was there for a while, and I don't just remember; Rose Henricks had that section for a while, but [fol. 4971] whether in that period or not, I couldn't say.

Q. Were you in the same section with Sarah Saucke at that time? A. No.

Q. I notice your name appears about 13 names before hers on the Loyalty petition. I wonder if you would look at this Loyalty petition, at page 5965—

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting). For my information are you referring to the Loyalty League, or that paper that was sent to Mrs. Reed?

Miss Weyand: The Loyalty petition, the paper that was taken out to Mrs. Reed, the photographs put in the paper of her receiving it in the garden.

A. It is March 2.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Yes, and ask you if you can identify this as your signature? Now, reporter's stamp is right over yours; I have another photostat which doesn't have that stamp over it, which also appears in the record at page 5379, which you might find it easier to identify your signature from. It is in the second column, the one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, ninth signature from the bottom. A. Yes, that is my signature.

Q. You may note it is the same on both pages, but the reporter's stamp is over it on page 5965. And that [fol. 4972] is your signature? A. Yes.

Q. Can you, by looking at the names, immediately preceding and following yours, tell us which of those girls worked in your section at that time?

A. Yes, Kathryn Chandler is on the end; I worked next to her. Then Jennie Brown worked next to her, and Mary Van Gordon and Lena Richardson.

Mr. Reed: I can't hear you at all.

A. Those (indicating) were the hemmers; I didn't pay much attention to the hemmers.

Mr. Reed: I can't hear you at all.

A. Kathryn Chandler worked on the end and I worked next. Then Jennie Brown, then Mary Van Gordon, Lena Richardson, then Opal Stufflebean and Zella Fisher.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. And those were all in your section?

A. On that side of the row.

Q. Were any of those in the next column in your section? A. They weren't in my section.

Q. Now, are there any names preceding yours, which you read in that list, which were in your section?

A. I believe the girls over on the other row back of me, in my section—I didn't even know their names.

Q. Those are the girls whose names appear above yours?

A. I know from this name (indicating) on down to [fol. 4973] here (indicating).

Q. You mean—

A. (Interrupting) I am referring from Kathryn Chandler to Zella Fisher, those girls worked on my side of the row, but about the others, I couldn't say, I wouldn't know them.

Q. When Mary Sprofera brought this to your section, did she tell you to read it? A. She never gave it to me.

Q. Who gave it to you? A. Kathryn Chandler.

Q. And did you hear anyone tell you to read it?

A. No.

Q. Did you read it? A. I did.

Q. How much did you read of this page, before you signed it?

A. Well, I think I read the headlines of it.

Q. Were there signatures already on it when it was handed to you? A. Yes, there was.

Q. Did you read the signatures on it?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You didn't look at them at all? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Would you be able to identify some of these signatures for me? The first column on the same page, you [fol. 4974] will notice the signature of Carrie Abrams.—Did you know who she was at that time?

A. Yes, I knew Carrie.

Q. Do you know her very well?

A. At that time I knew her well enough to pass the [fol. 4975] time of day with her, was all, I wasn't any personal friend of hers, I knew her whenever I spoke to her.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4976] Q. Did you know Bessie Neimoyer, whose name appears also in the first column?

A. Neimoyer—well, I can't place her.

Q. You don't know whether there is a thread girl or instructor at the Donnelly Garment Company by the name of Bessie Neimoyer?

A. There is a Miss Neimoyer there, but I don't know what her first name is.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4977] By Miss Weyand:

Q. I notice the name "Helen Little", one, two, three, four, five, six, names above yours in the second column on page 5379 of the record, 5965 of the record, being a loyalty petition. Do you know who Helen Little is?

A. Well, I have seen her down there, I know her when I see her.

Q. Is she an operator on the eighth floor or was she at that time? A. No, she is not an operator.

Q. Do you know what her position with the company was?

A. She had something to do with the notions, but what it was I don't know.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4978] Q. Are higher-priced dresses usually made on the eighth floor? A. Yes.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4979] Mr. Ingraham: I object to anything that requires an answer that refers to matters after July, 1939.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

Miss Weyand: We are having eighth floor operators here. I would like to show the difference from the general operators. I think the interest of the witness is important in the case. We have had all eighth floor operators with possibly one exception. I think I can inquire as to that. I will, however, if the Trial Examiner instructs, limit it to the July 15, 1939. Did you have any understanding prior to July 15, 1939, that girls working on higher priced dresses and located on the eighth floor generally had a higher minimum guarantee than other operators? A. Yes.

Q. Was your sister Anna Keel an operator at the Gernes plant in March or April, 1937? A. No.

Q. Was she employed by Gernes' as a supervisory employee in March or April of 1937?

A. Just what her position was called I don't know.

Q. Do you know what she did at Gernes?

[fol. 4980] A. She had charge of the section on inspecting.

Q. Did the Gernes plant sign a closed-shop contract with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, do you know? A. I don't know anything about that.

Q. Do you know your sister never joined the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, is that correct?

A. Well, she said she didn't.

* * * * * *

(Thereupon, the question was read by the reporter.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Is that the sister you were referring to when you said one of your sisters was off four to six weeks from an injury sustained at the Gernes' plant?

A. Which one?

Q. Anna Keel. A. Yes.

[fol. 4981] Q. Prior to July 15, 1939, could you give me any estimate of how long a section worked on a given style on an average before changing to another style?

A. No, I couldn't.

Q. What is the longest period you recall prior to July 15, 1939, that a section worked on a given style?

A. Well, I don't know much about over in the sections but where I worked we handled all the styles.

Q. All the styles?

A. Most all of them, on that floor. I was under-arming.

Q. You were not in a section that made a whole dress but the section that did under-arming?

A. Hemming in that section and under-arming.

Q. I believe you stated you also did pinking? A. Yes.

Q. You used a special machine for pinking and under-arming? A. Yes.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4983] Q. I hand you Board's Exhibit No. 2 which appears at page 4671 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record and ask you to direct your attention to page 4362 and 4363 thereof, particularly the article entitled "Nine Hundred Join Loyalty League". I will ask you if you ever read that before?

Mr. Ingraham: May the Respondent have a continuing objection to this exhibit?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Lane: Intervener desires also to object and to have [fol. 4984] a continuing objection. It is outside of the scope of the examination permitted us.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4988] Cross Examination.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mrs. Dean, were you here when Mrs. Reed testified?

A. No, I wasn't.

Q. Were you here when Mrs. Holloway testified?

A. Part of her testimony.

Q. What did you say? A. Part of it.

Q. You were here when Mrs. Warth testified?

A. Yes.

Q. You were here when Mrs. Saucke testified?

A. I never heard all of it.

Q. You were here part of it? A. Part of it.

Q. You were here when Mrs. Barnes testified?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have chairs at the March 19th meeting?

A. I don't remember whether we did or not, I don't know.

Q. You don't know whether you stood up or had chairs?

A. It seems to me there was a few chairs, I don't think there was enough, I don't exactly remember whether there was enough or whether there was all chairs.

Q. Did you ever meet in that room before March 18th, any mass meeting? A. I think we did.

[fol. 4989] Q. Did you have chairs?

A. For the Loyalty League meeting we had down there?

Q. Do you know how the chairs were provided?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you know who ordered them? A. I do not.

Q. Or from what company they were ordered?

A. I do not.

Q. You did have a Loyalty League meeting in that room, did you? A. I think we did.

Q. You have no recollection as to whether there were chairs in the March 18th meeting?

A. I believe there were some, I can't say positive now because I don't just exactly remember.

Q. What time of day did you first learn that they were to have a meeting on March 18th?

A. I can't say exactly what time of the day it was.

Q. How long before the meeting?

A. I couldn't say that either.

Q. Well, was it just a few minutes before the meeting?

A. I don't know that either.

Q. You don't know the name of the person who told you you were to have a meeting?

A. I think it was the girls in the section talking around,

[fol. 4990] I don't remember how I got word of it.

Q. Was there an I. D. M. passed around?

A. I never seen any.

Q. Well, do you know whether there was one or not?

A. I never seen any.

Q. Well, you have gone to meetings that were announced by an I. D. M. being passed around, have you not? A. For what?

Q. For the Donnelly Garment Company Workers' Union meetings, for instance?

A. If our Union wanted to have a meeting we announced it sometimes that way.

. . . . . .

[fol. 4991] Q. At any rate, you did have these notices with the letters I. D. M. on them passed around at times?

A. I didn't say the I. D. M. was on the notice that was passed around of the union meeting.

Q. Do you know whether they were or not?

A. I don't think they were.

Q. Have you any recollection one way or another?

A. Well, the girls had a habit of going up and getting the paper when they wanted it.

Q. I am not asking that, it may be that is true, have you any recollection as to whether or not the piece of paper known as an "I. D. M." was passed around announcing this meeting of March 18th?

A. Not to my knowledge, no.

Q. What about the meeting of April 27th?

A. I can't remember anything being passed around about the meeting.

Q. You do remember that some of the union meetings were called by passing around I. D. M. notices?

A. I didn't say I. D. M. notices.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 4993] Q. Your sister, Anna Keel, is an instructor in Gernes' is she not?

A. What her position is called in Gernes' I don't know.

Q. Did you ever hear her say it?

A. I never asked her.

Q. Would she tell you without her asking?

A. No, she never said.

Q. Did you ask her about this time she got hurt in the strike?

[fol. 4994] A. I heard she had charge of the inspecting department but was called off there; I don't know.

Q. Did you hear her say she was an instructor?

A. I didn't get that.

Q. Don't you know she is an instructor?

A. I don't know yet.

Q. Don't you know that is the reason she doesn't belong to the I. L. G. W. U., because they don't belong in the Gernes' place. A. I did hear that, yes.

Q. You have another sister there who does belong to the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. I have one there, yes.

Q. What is her name? A. Do I have to tell that?

Q. Of course, you are not telling us any secrets, I want it in the record? What is her name?

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, is there any reason why you shouldn't tell us?

A. She belongs to the union.

Q. Well, I say, is there any reason why you shouldn't tell us. A. Not that I know of.

Q. Tell us. A. Ethel McPherson.

[fol. 4995] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Is she a married woman? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so is Mrs. Keel? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so are you? A. Yes.

Q. What does your sister, Mrs. McPherson, do at Gernes' place?

A. I couldn't tell you her duties, I don't know them.

Q. Is she an operator?

A. I couldn't tell you, I don't know.

* * * * * *

[fol. 4999] Q. Did Miss Todd say this at the meeting at which the fifty cents was voted: "You can give your fifty cents to the representative in your department. If you want to give a dime at a time that is all right."

A. I didn't remember ever hearing her say that.

Q. You didn't hear her say "give the fifty cents to the representative in your department"?

A. What representative?

[fol. 5000] Q. Well, the representative? A. Of what?

Q. I am asking if she said "give it to the representative"?

A. Give it to some girl who we picked to take the money?

Q. Did she tell you—did you understand her to mean to give it to the Loyalty League representative?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. The fifty cents? A. No, I didn't.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5003] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, you read the article or looked at it that was published in the Kansas City Times or Star of April 12, 1937, containing the account of the Supreme Court of the United States' ruling that the Wagner Act was constitu-

[fol. 5004] tional, did you not? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. Now, I believe you stated that from reading that article you concluded you had a right to form a plant union? A. I didn't say a plant union.

Q. Well, a union?

A. A union, that was my impression, I didn't have no legal—

Q. From reading the article in the April 12th paper?

A. Well, from reading the article on the Wagner Act, that was my impression, that if we wanted one we could. I didn't know for sure.

Q. Can you tell me now what you read in that paper to cause you to conclude that you could form a union?

A. I don't know that I can right off hand.

Q. Could you look at the article again and tell us, you think? A. I might.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5005] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. I don't want you to take the time to read this whole article. If you can glance at it and see what there is there that told you, as a layman I might say, not as a lawyer, what there was about the article that told you you could form a union—

A. Why, here is one paragraph that I think—

Q. (Interrupting): What?

A. Employees have a right to organize and select their representatives for lawful purposes as the respondent steel company has to organize and select its own officers and agents.

Q. Now, is that what caused you to think—

A. (Interrupting) I wouldn't say that was all of it, but I think that was a part of it.

Q. That that gave you the right to form a union?

A. I wasn't real sure.

Q. Didn't you know that long before the Wagner Act, you had a right to form a union of your own in that plant? A. Well, I never had thought about it.

Q. Now, let me ask you if this is not what you got from the Wagner Act, not from your reading it, but from what others told you, that for the first time in the law of the [fol. 5006] United States, if you had a plant union or a union within your shop and got a closed shop agreement, that every woman had to belong to it or could be fired?

A. You mean that somebody told me that?
Q. Yes. A. I never heard anybody.
Q. You never heard of a closed shop agreement?
A. Not up to that time, no.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5007] By Mr. Langsdale:
Q. Did you know or did you learn that at that time, if you should form a plant union, get a closed shop agreement, that everyone would have to belong to that union?
A. You mean at the time I read that Act?
Q. Yes. A. April 12?
Q. Yes.
A. Well, I couldn't say that I remember just when.
Q. Did you learn it at the time you voted on the 27th of April to form that plant union, that when you got a closed shop you could keep the I. L. G. W. U. out by firing everybody who joined it?
A. Well, I understood if we had a closed shop that we could keep other unions out, but I didn't hear anything about firing anybody.
Q. Well, of course—did you know that your contract provides that anyone who belongs to any other union must be fired?

* * * * * *

[fol. 5008] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I don't see it is particularly material to go any further into this matter.

Mr. Langsdale: I am trying to find out what this article of April 12 really told her.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, is that your only purpose in these questions?

Mr. Langsdale: I am trying—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): My question to you is, is that the only purpose of these questions to the witness, to find out what she found out about the Wagner Act from reading this article?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes, that is it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if that is your only purpose, you may proceed.

Mr. Reed: I submit she has already answered that direct question, which was asked, what, in the article, called her attention to where there was anything that had to do with the Wagner Act that would show her that they could organize under the Wagner Act. She took the article and read from the article; and she was directed to answer that question.

Mr. Langsdale: That is what you think is a direct answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed, Mr. Langsdale.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. But I am now asking another question. Did you learn from the Wagner Act that forming a plant union [fol. 5009] and getting a closed shop you could keep the I. L. G. W. U. out by refusing to let any employee belong to it?

A. You mean did I learn that by reading the Wagner Act?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I can't say that I did.

Q. Or reading anything about the Wagner Act?

A. I can't say whether—

Q. (Interrupting): Well,—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Just a minute, Mr. Langsdale; permit the witness to finish.

Q. (By Mr. Langsdale): Did you have anything else to say?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. Go back to that question and read it, and the answer thus far.

(Thereupon the question requested and answer thus far, were read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Or reading anything about the Wagner Act?

"A. I can't say whether—")

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mrs. Dean, will you finish your answer, please?

A. I can't say whether I got my impression all from that, because I didn't understand it all, but I did get the impression that we could have a company union and organization of our own, if we wanted it, but I didn't know how to go about it.

Mr. Ingraham: I called the plant union a company [fol. 5010] union; I didn't think there was anything wrong with it.

Mr. Lane: I want to clear my position—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): What position?

Mr. Lane: In connection with the objection I made a while ago.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, I ruled on that.

Mr. Lane: I am making it again in connection with this question just asked.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if the question is asked and answered, then an objection is not proper at this time, is it?

Mr. Lane: You have been interrogating the witness yourself, so I didn't have an opportunity to make the objection. Now, my objection is, to the question Mr. Langsdale asked, the last portion of it, with respect to keeping—to preventing any employees from joining the I. L. G. W. U.—now, that is not a provision of the Wagner Act, and I submit counsel should not be permitted to ask that question, that if they get a closed shop they have a right to require all the employees to belong to that union, and the Wagner Act doesn't provide that every employee shall stay out of the I. L. G. W. U.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I say, Mr. Lane ought to go and read the Wagner Act, and read some of the decisions.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if that is an objection, it is overruled, because the question has been put and the [fol. 5011] answer is in the record. So, you proceed, Mr. Langsdale.

Mr. Langsdale: Q. Mrs. Dean, there was a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on May 11, 1937; as far as the record shows that was the first meeting after the organization meeting, April 27. Did you attend that meeting?

A. Well, I attended all of those union meetings, along at that time.

. . . . . .

Mr. Langsdale: Q. Let me ask you if you heard this question asked of Rose Todd, and this answer being given by her: "Question: If an employee comes in are you going to set a time before they have to become a member of the union?

"Answer: Anybody coming to work for us will join the union immediately; if there is any doubt in their minds about whether they want to join our union then there is some doubt in their mind as to whether they want to work here." Did you hear that question and answer?

A. I don't remember anything like that. I don't remember reading much about that.

[fol. 5012] Q. Do you remember the substance of that answer at that meeting? A. No, I can't say that I do.

Q. Let me let you look at the photostatic copy of this meeting, Mrs. Dean—which starts away over here—you don't have to read any more of it than you think you need. Here is the page upon which it occurs, and here is the question and answer (indicating).

A. I don't remember anything about that, much. This meeting was when?

Q. May 11, that is the first meeting after the organization meeting in 1937.

A. I can't say that I remember that.

Q. You did go to the meeting, did you?

A. Well, I went to meetings of the union along then, but I can't exactly remember these statements made here.

Q. Well, did you ever hear Rose Todd say at any place or time that anyone who wants to work for the Donnelly Company would join the union immediately?

A. I can't say that I did, no.

Q. Do you know of any authority given to her by anyone connected with the management, to tell the people at this meeting that "anybody coming to work for us will join the union immediately"? A. No, I don't.

[fol. 5013] Q. "If there is any doubt in their minds about whether or not they want to join our union then there is some doubt as to whether or not they want to work here"?

A. I don't remember anything of that sort.

Q. You never heard her say that?

A. I couldn't say that I did.

Q. Did you ever hear that anyone had given her authority to say that?

A. No, I never. I thought our contract gave them a month's time to work there, that has always been my understanding.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. I don't just understand that, Mrs. Dean; that contract gave who?

A. Anybody who came to work, a month's time before they made up their mind to become one of us.

Q. I am talking about May 11, 1937. You didn't have any contract then, Mrs. Dean, not until May 27.

A. I don't remember about that meeting.

Q. Do you remember it was May 27 when you got your contract?

A. I know it was along in there sometime, but I can't say the exact date.

Q. Well, don't you know it was after May 11?

A. I couldn't say that.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5019] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. In answer to one of Mr. Ingraham's questions, or Mr. Lane's question, I forget which one, that it was your [fol. 5020] understanding that Rose Todd was not representing the employer? A. Was not what?

Q. Representing the management or was not a supervisor at any time prior to July 15, 1939?

A. Well, to my knowledge, not that I ever know of. I don't know exactly what her duties were.

Q. What did you base your understanding on? Just that she was not a representative of the management?

A. Well, I seen her around over the company. When I first knew her she worked, I believe, in the button section, I believe that was. I am not sure on a machine. After that I seen her around over the factory. One place matching threads and matching material and hunting dresses up out of bundles that was lost. That is all I ever seen her doing.

Q. So it is what you knew she was doing caused you to arrive at the understanding she was not a representative of the management?

A. Well, I wouldn't call her that.

Q. Well, at any rate, it is what you knew she was doing that caused you to have that understanding, was it? A. Yes.

Q. Now, I believe you stated yesterday that you didn't know at that meeting of May 11, 1937, of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, she had said anyone coming to [fol. 5021] work for us would join the union immediately?

A. I don't remember hearing Rose ever say that. I don't say she didn't say it.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. (Interrupting) Did you know Rose Todd had gone to St. Joseph, Missouri, on May 13, 1937, to organize into the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union the employees [fol. 5022] of the Donnelly Garment Company in that plant? A. No, I did not.

Q. Then, did you ever hear that at that meeting, on May 13, 1937, Rose Todd had said that to those assembled employees of the Donnelly Garment Company "The question was asked how much time will be allowed before definitely stating whether or not you will join the union. I think if you are interested in working for the company you will be interested enough to join the plant union."

Mr. Ingraham: Just a minute. Will you read the question? I object to this. She didn't know Rose had gone to St. Joe and obviously couldn't have known anything Rose stated. It calls for hearsay testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, this is with reference to a meeting of May 11th, is it?

Mr. Ingraham: No, the 13th, isn't it?

Mr. Langsdale: It is on May 13th, 1937, in St. Joseph, Missouri.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, the witness said she didn't even know Rose Todd went there. How could she possibly know what Rose Todd said in St. Joe?

Mr. Langsdale: If the Examiner please, it is perfectly harmonious with my question: "When you arrived at your conclusion that Rose Todd was not a representative of the management, did you know this: that this, that and the other—"which to my mind indicates that she was a rep- [fol. 5023] resentative of the management? Now, when she comes forward and says she didn't know she was a representative of the management I think I have a right to inquire whether she knew she did this, that or the other. If she had set out here to form this union I think I would have a right to ask her, if in coming to her own conclusion that Rose Todd was not a representative of the management. If she knew that. What I want to show—that the information is sufficient to come to a conclusion as to whether she was there as a representative of the management or not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well of course, it is obvious that it didn't include that fact because she didn't even know she went to St. Joseph.

Mr. Langsdale: I know it is. I think it is proper for me to call attention to it when I am interrogating her about what information she had to form any conclusion as to whether or not Rose Todd was a member of it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it might be, Mr. Langsdale, if there were a preliminary question to indicate whether or not the witness knew, anything that Rose Todd said or did in St. Joseph but having said that she didn't even know she went there it doesn't seem to me it is entirely proper.

Mr. Langsdale: I think I could probably avoid the difficulty you seem to think that I am in my not saying any- [fol. 5024] thing about her, asking her whether she knew about the St. Joseph meeting or not and merely asking if she knew she said this in St. Joseph.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is a matter, I presume, for you to determine how you shall ask your questions.

Mr. Langsdale: That shows the way I am asking it is all right. Of course I will abide by your ruling.

Trial Examiner Batten: I have indicated I don't think it is.

Mr. Langsdale: I think when this witness said Rose Todd was not a representative of the management I have a right to call attention—her attention, to things that Rose Todd did that would reasonably point to the fact that she was a representative of the management. That is my purpose.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you read the last question?

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not going to permit the witness to answer the question.

Mr. Langsdale: You said to proceed.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I indicated I didn't think it was proper.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't want to leave that point without making my purpose perfectly clear to the Examiner. Here they bring along a number of witnesses who say that in their judgment Rose Todd was not a representative of the [fol. 5025] management. Now, I have a right to inquire what they knew about Rose Todd that caused them to form that conclusion—and I have a right to say to these people "Rose Todd did so and so. Did you know that when you formed the conclusion she wasn't representing the management." That is my theory, I think it is a proper theory. Do you still adhere to your ruling in the matter?

Trial Examiner Batten: I haven't changed it, Mr. Langsdale.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I am not a mind reader, I couldn't tell.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't understand that you were.

Mr. Langsdale: I thought you might indicate a change.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Let me ask you, when you formed your conclusion that Rose Todd was not a representative of the management you knew that in the office of the management on the 23rd day of April, 1937, in the presence of Mr. Baty, the factory manager, and Ella Mae Hyde, the personnel manager, Rose Todd had said to Fern Sigler, "We are going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way, the majority is going to rule as always." Did you hear her say that? A. Did I hear her say that?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. Did you hear she had said it? A. No, sir.

[fol. 5026] Q. Then that conversation had nothing to do with you forming your opinion she was not a representative of the management?

Mr. Reed: Manifestly, if she didn't hear it.

Trial Examiner Batten: She answered and said "no".

A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you want the answer stricken in view of this, Mr. Reed?

Mr. Reed: Oh, no, it isn't important. I didn't know it was going to be answered so quickly.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. May I ask you if, when you formed your opinion that Rose Todd was not a representative of the management you knew that on the 23rd day of April, 1937, in the presence of Mr. Baty, the factory manager and Ella Mae Hyde, the personnel manager, Rose Todd had said to Fern Sigler, with reference to the demonstration on that day at Fern Sigler's machine, "We went down stairs and sent those girls back to work and they went back to work." Did you know that? A. If I heard it?

Q. Did you know she said that? A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: You will have to speak up, Mrs. Dean.

[fol. 5027] A. No, I didn't.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Let me ask you, when you formed your opinion that Rose Todd was not a representative of the management did you know that Rose Todd on the 23rd day of April, 1937, in the office of the management and in the presence of Lee Baty, the factory manager, and Ella Mae Hyde, the personnel manager, Rose Todd had said to Fern Sigler, "If you want to go home, all right, nobody is going to do any violence against you, you got yourself in it and you can stay in it or get out if you want to get out." Did you know she had said that?

A. I didn't even know she had ever talked to Fern Sigler. I don't know Fern Sigler.

Q. You stated that the Loyalty League was purely a social organization, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know that it had been formed for the purpose of resisting the activities of Mr. Dubinsky and his crowd? A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. I think you, yesterday, read this article that appeared in the Kansas City Times on May 11, 1937, marked Board's exhibit 27?

A. I think I read that yesterday.

Q. Do you recall this portion under the heading "Formed their own union"?

[fol. 5028] A. This part here?

Q. Right here, Mrs. Dean (indicating).

Mr. Reed: What is that article from?

Mr. Langsdale: From the Kansas City Times of May 11th.

A. I remember reading that yesterday.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Didn't you say you had read the article when it appeared? A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. Well, I will ask you now if you read the article of May 11th, 1937, in the Kansas City Times, the one that I have just shown you and which is marked Board's exhibit 37, at or about the time it appeared in the paper of May 11, 1937? A. I can't say that I did.

Q. When you had the meeting of April 27th, at which the union was formed, did you have chairs?

A. Well, I don't remember whether we had a lot of chairs or not. It seems like there was a few. I don't remember whether there was a lot of chairs or not.

Q. Did you know that the Loyalty League had paid for the rental of such chairs as were there on April 27, 1937? A. I didn't know anything about it.

Q. You didn't know that? A. No.

Q. You stated that the petition which you signed on March 2, 1937, which stated that you didn't want to acknowledge any outside union; you understood that to mean [fol. 5029] the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union? A. That is what I took it to be.

* * * * * * *

Q. Did you see any part of the occurrence around Sylvia Hull's machine on April 23, 1937? A. Yes, I did.
Q. What floor was Sylvia Hull working on?
A. The eighth floor.
Q. What floor were you working on?
A. The eighth floor.
Q. Were you in the crowd that was around Sylvia Hull?
[fol. 5030] A. I walked up the aisle past her.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5031] JESSIE MUDD, a witness called by and on behalf of the respondent, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Ingraham:
Q. Will you please state your name?
A. Jessie Mudd.
Q. Where do you live, Mrs. Mudd?
A. At 7846 Pennsylvania.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:
Q. Are you employed? A. Yes, I am.
Q. Where? A. Donnelly Garment Company.
Q. How long have you been employed at the Donnelly Garment Company?
[fol. 5032] A. For about—it was 11 years ago last March.
Q. When you went to work for the Donnelly Company, in what capacity were you employed?
A. I was hired in the pressing department.
Q. Pressing department? A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long did you work in the pressing department?

A. I worked in the pressing department about—oh, perhaps 3½ years.

Q. What did you do there?

A. Well, the first few days there I pressed, and then after that I did floor work in the pressing department.

Q. Well, what did that consist of?

A. Well, it was buttoning up the dresses and getting them ready to be belted after they were pressed, putting belts in them and matching them with the dresses, and any buttons that had to be put on, in the operation of them, pinned them on and tied the bows.

Q. After you worked in the pressing department, where did you go? A. I inspected.

Q. And how long did you inspect, if you recall?

A. I believe for about a year and a half, maybe 2 years; I don't remember exactly.

Q. Well, can you briefly state where you worked in the [fol. 5033] Donnelly plant, up and until July, 1939?

. . . . . .

A. Then after I left the inspection department, I was put on as a thread girl and worked in section 415 on the eighth floor for a while, and then I believe I worked on the seventh floor after that, in section 517, and then I was later transferred to section 519.

. . . . . .

Q. As a thread girl?

A. Yes; and then in between there, during one season I went back and inspected for a few days when we were stacked up with inspecting, but I was a thread girl from the time I was put on the floor in that capacity, only just a few times I did help on inspecting, when they got stacked up.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you work any length of time as a sewing operator?

A. I don't believe before 1939 I did. There was, one fall, that I worked on the machine for just—working on some—well, I was working on returns, just repairing them, for a short time, but it was just repairs, fixing belt loops and small things like that, that anyone could fix.

[fol. 5034] Q. You never worked on any special machines in sewing? A. No.

Q. Now, will you state what you did as a thread girl or floor girl?

. . . . . .

Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) Q. Are those terms used interchangeably?

A. Yes, they are one and the same. I think some of the girls might refer to me as a floor girl, and others a thread girl.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You stated you worked in the pressing department as a floor girl. Were there any other duties that you performed besides the ones that you have mentioned?

A. Well, yes, while I was in there I did work on the— [fol. 5035] now, that floor work down there is piece work, and at times I did time work; and that was after I was there quite a while, and then I took care of damaged dresses, and looked over the repairs. The damaged dresses are what the pressers would keep out of the bundles, may be a fault in them, and they were all folded and put in a separate box, and I used to look over them and make out an order on them.

They were sent to the store. It was just to keep track of them, and then I used to look over the returns sent back to the pressing department; some of them were dresses and just odds and ends of things like that.

Q. Now, did you have any authority to give any instructions to other employees in the pressing department?

A. Oh, no, none whatsoever.

Q. Now, you stated that you worked in the sewing section on the floor. What did you do in that capacity?

A. Well, whenever the operators needed anything like thread or any belt loops or shoulder tapes or waist tapes to go with that work, I would take them the right ones, and the work sent to the section by the notion department, the supplies necessary to go out, and I have to know that the notions are there—there is always a requisition that accompanies them showing what threads have to be used on what colors, and then I put that thread away in the cabinets that they have there, and mark it, so when it is needed to be given out, I give it out without any delay; [fol. 5036] and if there is any certain kinds of shades of threads needed, I go down to the notion department and see whether that thread has been O. K.'d and whether it is the right thread—well, if a girl needs binding I take that to them, and I also call the notion department if there are any supplies needed.

Q. Are there shades of thread of the same color that would go on the different dresses that are of different shades?

A. It might be, if there is some special work on the dresses. For instance, some tucks or darts stitched on the outside, it might be we have one thread that would be used there, and a trim or maybe it would be a contrasting thread, and there might be other dresses with thread that matches the dress.

Q. Well, is it your job, then, to see the right color of thread is given to the operator?

A. Yes, that is my responsibility, to see that the right thread is given to the operators.

Q. Do you have any directing authority over the operators? A. No.

Q. Do you have any authority of any kind?

A. No, none whatsoever.

Q. Are you consulted at any time about what operators should be employed or laid off? A. No.

Q. Have you ever, at any time, had anything to do with [fol. 5037] that particular thing. A. No, never.

Q. Were you working at the plant in the months of March and April, 1937? A. Yes, I was.

Q. Do you remember the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you recall when you joined the union?

A. I joined the union when it was formed.

Q. Do you recall what date it was, approximately?

A. It was April, the latter part of April, 1937.

Q. Did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did anybody representing the management discuss with you the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No.

Q. Did anyone representing the management make any suggestions about holding a meeting for the purpose of organizing the plant union? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Now, prior to the time of the formation of the plant union, had you read in the Kansas City newspapers anything in connection with strikes in other garment plants?

A. Yes, I had.

[fol. 5038] Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibits 16 and 18 through 38, and ask you if you will name the articles that you recall reading in the Kansas City Press.

* * * * * *

A. I remember exhibit No. 16, and also 18. No. 19, I am not sure whether I read it at the time, or I just heard it discussed. I believe I read exhibit 20.

* * * * * *

~~A. Exhibit 25, I read it at home.~~

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, do you mean then—how about the intervening ones?

A. These other ones were in the Journal, I didn't read them at the time. The ones I named I have read. The others, I might have heard about them at the time but I don't remember reading them.

Q. Well then, I would suggest, Mrs. Mudd, that on each one you indicate as you go along whether you read it or you didn't read it, or whether you heard about it. Don't skip any of them. You are now on 26, are you?

A. Yes. I read exhibit 26 at the time, I think; and exhibit 27, I read that at the time. No. 28, I read that; [fol. 5039] and exhibit 29 and exhibit 30, I read them; and exhibit 31, I saw that at the time.

* * * * * *

A. I don't believe I read 32; exhibit 33, I am not sure whether I read it or heard it talked out at work. I don't remember reading exhibit 34. I read exhibit 35 the next morning after it appeared. I read exhibit 36 and also 37,—that is exhibit 21 (indicating).

* * * * * *

A. And exhibit 38, I read that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I believe you stated that there were some exhibits you do not recall whether you read them or they were discussed at the plant. What do you mean by that, Mrs. Mudd?

A. Well, at the time—I don't believe we bought the Journal regularly, I don't believe we had it delivered at home; I bought it occasionally when I would be going home, transferring from one street car to another; but some of them I read then, but as to all the Journal articles, [fol. 5040] I don't believe I read all of them, but as a general thing, we did talk over just about everything that appeared in the paper in connection with the union and the strikes that were then occurring in town.

Q. Well, who talked it over?

A. The girls who worked in the section.

Q. Now, what effect did the reading of the articles have upon you?

A. Well, in regard to the union strikes and violence that were going on at the time, I thought they were rather disgusting, to be referred to as—the garment workers, as having them, and I knew all the garment workers were not having them; from the understanding I had it was quite a few professional pickets that were causing these disturbances, and it made the people think the garment workers were not a very upstanding kind of people; I had always been proud of where I worked, and I still am, and I didn't want them to think we were working under such conditions that we needed someone who didn't know about our work to come in and protect us; we didn't need that kind of protection, only against them.

Q. Did you have any personal knowledge of the violence that was going on at the other plants?

A. Just what I read in the newspapers.

Q. What effect, if any, that you could observe, did the articles that appeared in the press have on other em- [fol. 5041] ployees at the plant?

A. They were all pretty well upset and disgusted; they didn't know whether to feel afraid to go to the street car line by themselves or not, whether to have someone to go with them to see they got there, and got to work on time. It seemed at that time if you started out, you didn't get to where you intended to go without being molested.

Q. What do you mean by molested?

A. Well, from what we had read in the paper, some of those girls that attempted to go to work were waylaid before they got there, and before they got home they were apt to be chased and injured.

Q. Did that have anything to do with you voting in favor of the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. Yes, it did.

Q. Will you state why you voted in favor of organizing a plant union?

A. Well, at that time it seemed as if a union of some sort had to be formed, in order to have the legal protection that we needed to keep from having to join up with the International, for instance.

Q. Did you object to joining the International?

A. Yes, I did. I didn't want to be classed as—I didn't feel like they had anything to offer me, and I didn't want my name amongst ones picketing some other firm that I [fol. 5042] didn't have any grievance against.

Q. Now, at the meeting that your have referred to, of April 27, when the plant union was formed, will you state when that meeting occurred?

A. That meeting was after working hours.

Q. Will you state where it occurred?

A. It was down on one of the lower floors, the second or third floor; I know it was a vacant floor.

Q. Did anyone representing the management request you to go to that meeting? A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did anyone representing the management suggest that you would be penalized if you didn't go to the meeting? A. No.

Q. Did anyone representing the management suggest that you would be penalized if you didn't vote to form a plant union? A. No.

Q. Did the instructor in the section where you were working direct you to go to the meeting?

A. No, she didn't.

Q. Did you direct anybody to go to the meeting, yourself?

A. No, I didn't. I might have talked with a group of girls that said they were going, and I went with them.

Q. Do you recall how you learned that the meeting was going to be held?

[fol. 5043] A. Someone in the section told me about it.

Q. Was the meeting of April 27 a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did you think that the Loyalty League was promoting the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I didn't think it had anything to do with it right then.

Q. Did you ever have any suggestion made to you by anyone that the Loyalty League was a forerunner of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I never had that understanding.

Q. Did anyone whom you considered a boss attend that meeting?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Was there anything said or done by anyone that led you to believe that the management was in favor of the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I never heard anything said to that effect.

Q. I believe you stated that you read the article in the paper or heard it discussed at the plant, that Sylvia Hull was going to a convention of the I. L. G. W. to request support for a strike at the Donnelly plant?

A. Yes, I remember that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you just speak a little louder, Mrs. Mudd, please, so we can all hear you?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5044] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did that have anything to do with you favoring the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. Why was that?

A. Well, I felt like if the International was going to appoint someone or have someone appointed in the plant to represent the girls, and the girls not even know anything about it, I thought it was about time for us to take steps in some manner so we could protect ourselves, and keep away from someone representing us or knowing anything about what we had to do with it.

Q. Will you state whether or not the fact that support of strike was to be requested at the International convention influenced you in any way?

A. Why, yes, I didn't want to lose any work on account of something we didn't even want.

[fol. 5045] Q. State whether or not you understood or believed that a strike meant the same kind of violence that had been engaged in by I. L. G. W. U. at the Gordon, Gernes, Missouri plants?

A. Well, in my own mind I knew if someone told me to go on a strike I wouldn't go on a strike as long as things were like they were. No one had a reason to tell me that. I knew I would personally feel like that. I didn't want to lose any time because somebody else may be far distant—in a far distant city, across the city, or in another city, felt like they should go on a strike.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I want to direct your attention to the article that appeared in the Kansas City papers on March 17th, which is respondent's exhibit 27. Did you see the picture that appeared at the bottom of the front page of the Kansas City Star of March 17th?

A. Yes, I saw that.

Q. Now, I believe you stated that you read that article entitled "Sitters block the door."?

A. Yes, I did.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit 16 and ask you if you recall seeing the picture that appears at the bottom of the front page of the Kansas City Times for March 18th?

[fol. 5046] A. Yes, I saw those.

Q. Now, at that time on or about March 18th did the employees hold a meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the purpose of the meeting, if you recall?

A. Well, I know I was very curious as to what steps we should take, where we stood in the idea of this—well, mob moving in on the garment company or a group, and demanding they stop work and join up with their union—whether or not you want to or not. I didn't feel like waiting until they came to the door to start. I felt if there was any way to take steps to avoid that I thought we should do that. What we could do, when and how about doing it.

Q. Did the articles I have just called your attention to have anything to do with your reason for attending that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. How—

A. We didn't know when we might go down and find them in our door, or start down there and not be able to get in the door or get in whole. We didn't know whether we would get in there with our clothes on or parts of them on.

Q. Did you understand that the International intended to start their campaign against the Donnelly Company?

A. That was my understanding.

[fol. 5047] Q. Will you state, so far as you could observe, what effect these articles had on other employees at the plant?

A. I think—

Q. (Interrupting) These articles I have just referred to.

A. I think, as a whole, the girls all felt rather a fear. They did not know whether they were safe or not in coming to work alone, or whether they would have to have someone bring them to work every day and meet them at the door to take them home.

Q. Now, this meeting you have referred to, of March 18th, will you state when that meeting occurred, what time of day?

A. We did it after work.

Q. Will you state where the meeting was held?

A. It was on the second floor, I believe.

Q. Do you recall how you learned of the meeting?

A. I don't know exactly. We had been talking about these articles in the paper at work—it was just the topic of conversation—it seemed like no matter what you started talking about it always got around to that, it was in the uppermost part of our mind. In the course of conversations I learned that the employees were having a meeting that evening after work.

Q. Did anybody representing the company discuss the holding of that meeting with you?

A. No, they did not.

[fol. 5048] Q. Did anybody representing the company request or suggest that you attend that meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did anybody representing the company tell you, or suggest in any way, that the employees would be penalized if they did not attend that meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did the instructor in your section direct you to go to that meeting?

A. No, she did not.

Q. Did you direct or order anybody to go to that meeting?

A. No.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you arrive at the meeting when it opened, if you recall?

A. I am not sure, I don't remember.

Q. Did Rose Todd preside at that meeting?

A. I am not sure she presided, I know she talked at the meeting.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Was there a general discussion among the employees?

[fol. 5049] A. Yes, that was the purpose of the meeting.

Q. What was the discussion about?

A. About the violence that was then in progress at 26th and Grand, and different employees told what they had heard and seen and what we could do, what we should do and what we could go ahead and do about it.

Q. Will you state whether or not a suggestion was made to ask Mrs. Reed to come to the meeting, and state what the company was going to do?

A. Yes, I believe someone did make a suggestion that they ask Mrs. Reed what the company's stand was on the occurrence.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed come to the meeting?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. Did she make some remarks?

A. She made a speech. She talked to us.

Q. Do you recall whether or not Mrs. Reed made the statement that—made the statement in substance like this "If the plant was unionized it would be closed."?

A. I didn't hear her say that.

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Reed say that she was not going to let Dubinsky tell her how to run her business?

A. No, I didn't hear her say that.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed make any reference as to the rights of the employees to join or not join a labor organization?

A. As nearly as I can remember Mrs. Reed told us that [fol. 5050] we were free then as we always have been to do as we pleased. If we felt like we wanted to join a union we were free to do so.

Q. Do you recall whether or not there was mention made of arrangements that were going on for the using of buses to bring the employees to and from work?

A. Yes, there was something said about the buses at that time.

Q. Did you—or were the buses used after that time, sometime after that?

A. Some time after that they did have the buses.

Q. Do you recall what the reason was for the use of buses?

A. That was so the girls could get to work, and felt like we could get to work better that way. We didn't know whether it was safe to come within a block of work without being stopped, like riding on the buses from a distant point in the city while we could come in large groups like that and we felt like we would be safer.

Q. Do you recall that Mrs. Reed stated that the company was trying to make arrangements for buses?

A. I don't remember whether she said it, I remember it was talked about, I don't remember whether it was she that said it or how it came about.

Q. Did you see or hear Mrs. Reed read a letter from the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. I don't remember ever having—anything about a [fol. 5051] letter being read.

Q. Do you recall a committee being designated at that meeting by the employees? A. Yes.

Q. Will you state what the purpose of designating a committee was?

A. Well, my understanding of that was that the committee would seek legal advice as to what our understanding was under the law as to what we could do to take steps to protect our rights.

Q. Do you recall who was appointed on the committee?

A. I remember Miss Todd and Hobart Atherton was. That is all I remember about who was on it.

Q. Now, after that meeting occurred was there another meeting held by employees prior to the meeting of April 27, 1937? A. Yes, there was.

Q. Do you recall when that meeting occurred?

A. No, I don't know exactly.

Q. Well, was it a week or ten days after your meeting of March 18th?

A. It might have been about a week later, I am not sure.

Q. Where was that meeting held?

A. It was on the lower floor. I think the second or third floor, I don't remember which.

Q. When was the meeting held?

[fol. 5052] A. It was after work.

Q. Did anybody representing the management discuss with you the holding of that meeting? A. No.

Q. Did anyone representing the management request you to go to that meeting? A. No, they did not.

Q. Did anyone representing the management say anything that led you to believe that the company would penalize you if you didn't go to the meeting? A. No.

Q. Did you go to the meeting of your own free will?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you go to the meeting March 18th of your own free will? A. Yes, I certainly did.

Q. What, if anything, occurred at this meeting—the one that occurred after March 18th?

A. Well, that was the meeting where the committee reported to us as to what they had found out when they went to the lawyers.

Q. Do you recall, prior to the time that that meeting was held, that the Gernes, Gordon and Missouri Garment Companies had brought an injunction suit against the strikers at their plants?

[fol. 5053] A. I know there had been injunction suits from some of those plants against the union.

Q. I hand you again respondent's exhibit 26 and ask you if you recall reading about an injunction suit in that article which appeared in the Kansas City Times of March 23rd? A. Yes, I read that.

Q. Was there a general discussion at this meeting that occurred after the meeting of March 18th, of the possibility of bringing an injunction suit?

A. Yes, we talked about applying for an injunction.

Mr. Langsdale: What meeting? March 18th or the one following?

Mr. Ingraham: The one following.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did the employees take any action at this meeting following the meeting of March 18th?

A. Yes, that is the meeting that Miss Todd told us that we would have to raise some money in order to retain a lawyer, and at that time we voted as to how we would obtain the money.

Q. How was the money obtained?

A. It was suggested we all contribute 50c in order to pay for the retaining fee.

Q. Did you make that contribution? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you make that contribution to the Loyalty League? A. No.

[fol. 5054] Q. Did you understand when you made the contribution that it was for any purpose of the Loyalty League? A. No.

Q. Do you recall whether or not other employees made a contribution at that time? A. I believe they did.

Q. How was it made?

A. Some of the girls, I understood later, gave it that night but I gave it to one of the girls in the section.

Q. Do you recall who you gave it to in the section?

A. No, I don't remember which girl it was.

Q. Did you give it to a girl, or to the girl, because she was a representative of the Loyalty League?

A. I don't remember whether or not she was a representative of the Loyalty League.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if you don't remember who you gave it to you wouldn't know, would you? Isn't that right, Mrs. Mudd?

A. Yes, that is, but I don't remember.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you intend that the money that you gave be used by—for any activity or purpose of the Loyalty League?

A. That money that we gave at that time was not for the Loyalty League.

[fol. 5055] Q. Did you see girls at the meeting contribute the 50c? A. No, I didn't see them do that.

Q. Did you direct any employee to attend this meeting? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did your instructor direct you to attend this meeting? A. No.

Q. Did you tell anybody that she should make the contribution of 50c?

A. No, I didn't attempt to tell anyone what they should do.

Q. Did your instructor tell you that you should make a contribution?

A. I don't know that my instructor even talked to me about it.

Q. She didn't tell you to make this contribution?

A. No, she didn't.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, you asked this witness if she instructed anybody. Would there be anything wrong if she did? Why do you ask her?

Mr. Ingraham: I asked that in anticipation of the position that Miss Weyand is probably getting around to taking. There isn't any reason under the sun why this woman couldn't say anything about making a contribution, so far as respondent is concerned.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5056] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I believe you stated that you read the article that appeared in the Kansas City Star for April 12, 1937, entitled "Wagner Act is upheld?" A. Yes, I read that.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5057] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Was that discussed at the meeting of April 27th?

A. I believe it was.

Q. Did Mr. Tyler make a talk at that meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And, in that talk, did he mention the Wagner Act?

A. I believe he mentioned it.

Q. Were you—or did that have anything to do with you voting in favor of the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, I believe it did to the extent that I felt like we just had that much more right. It had been tried by the Supreme Court and they had found it constitutional. I felt like it was a little more assurance that we could exercise our right to do as we pleased, as far as labor organization was concerned.

Q. Were you at the plant on, or about, April 23, 1937?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. What floor did you work on?

A. I believe at that time I worked on the seventh floor.

Q. Do you recall any commotion in connection with Sylvia Hull or Fern Sigler? A. I remember some.

[fol. 5058] Q. Well, did either of those girls work on your floor?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Well, did you personally see any commotion?

A. I went up there to see what—when I heard that one of the girls that was working there had signed up with the I. L. G. W. U. and was going to a convention, I was curious to see what a girl would look like—well in my own mind, that is silly. They would sign up with the International Garment Workers' Union and not know any better to come on to work and expect the girls to still feel she was one of us.

Q. Did you want to work as long as she was there?

Mr. Langsdale: Which one?

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Which girl did you go upstairs to see?

A. I went up to see what Sylvia Hull looked like.

Q. Did you want to work so long as Sylvia Hull remained working there?

A. I felt rather disgusted. I don't know as I felt like I didn't exactly want to work, as long as she was there. I didn't have to work close enough that I knew her.

Q. Did you hear any of the other girls say they didn't want to work as long as she remained there at work?

A. I heard some of the girls in the section say they didn't think she should be allowed to stay there and work.

Q. How long were you on the eighth floor?

[fol. 5059] A. A very few minutes, I just went up to see what she looked like and returned to the section again.

Q. Are you a member of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Do you recall when you joined the Loyalty League?

A. I joined it when they organized it.

Q. Do you recall when that was?

A. I don't know exactly.

Q. Was it several years prior to 1937?

A. I believe it was two or three years before that, I am not sure.

Q. What were the activities of the Loyalty League?

A. The Loyalty League sponsored dances and card parties.

Q. Did you attend any of those?

A. I attended most of them I believe.

Q. Did anyone representing the management ask you to join the Loyalty League?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did you feel that if you did not join the Loyalty League that you would be discharged?

A. No, I never gave that a thought.

Q. Did you ever hear anybody say that employees would be penalized by the management if he or she did not join the Loyalty League?

A. No, I never.

[fol. 5060] Q. Did you pay any dues to the Loyalty League?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever know of the Loyalty League dealing with the company with respect to wages and terms and conditions of labor?

A. No, I never heard of such a thing.

Q. Do you state that the Loyalty League's activities were—or did you state that the Loyalty League's activities were confined to dances and carnivals?

A. That was the purpose of the Loyalty League, was the social get togethers that they planned for the employees.

Q. Did you ever hear of the Loyalty League engaging in any purpose that had anything to do with representing the employees in connection with the terms or conditions of labor?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever know of a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union being held that was followed immediately by a meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever hear of a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that was preceded by the meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Is there any connection of any kind between the Don- [fol. 5061] nelly Garment Workers' Union and the Loyalty League?

A. There is none whatsoever, as far as I have ever known of.

Q. Is the Loyalty League still in existence.

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd presided at the March 18th meeting and the second meeting held some time the last of March or the meeting of April 27th, lead you to believe that those were meetings of the Loyalty League?

A. No.

Q. Will you state whether or not you considered Rose Todd a supervisory employee?

A. She never has been as long as I have known her.

Q. Did you ever consider her your boss?

A. No.

Q. What did Rose Todd do, so far as you could observe?

A. Well, what time I knew her she would come in the section to see whether or not we were being held up on our work by the lack of any notions or supplies or anything wrong with them, if there was part of the bundle lost or something, it was just to find out why the work wasn't going through as it was needed, and as it had been planned to go through.

Q. Did Rose Todd have any authority to give directions to anybody so far as you could observe?

A. So far as I know, she didn't have.

[fol. 5062] Q. Did you ever hear of Rose Todd having any authority to hire, discipline, or discharge employees?

A. No.

Q. Did you believe that Rose Todd had authority to speak for the management in connection with labor matters?

A. No.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit 6, which appears in the Circuit Court record of 4864, and ask you if you recall reading this article, which appeared in the Kansas City Times of February 26, 1937, entitled "Reopen a garment feud"?

A. I read that.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What effect did that article have on you?

A. I thought it was rather odd to bring a personal feud into the business. Dubinsky was trying to get back on Mr. Reed and he wasn't connected with the management of the Company. I didn't see why that personal difference should make any difference as far as sending people out to tell their customers we weren't paid enough and our working conditions weren't right, and they couldn't even offer us any suggestion; as far as we knew there wasn't any improvement that they were offering us and I couldn't see why. Then they was going to get a large sum of money to [fol. 5063] organize us. Well, it looked to me like that money could have been used to a better purpose. We didn't want them and we had let them know we didn't want them before. I couldn't see why as far as the other companies were concerned why they should come down there and say our wages weren't high enough, when they didn't have anything to offer as far as wages were concerned, and saying there was 25 members in the company at that time and as soon as they got more they would call a strike down there.

I couldn't see why—they would tell us they would let us go on a strike, how that would help us any. Our salaries wouldn't have gone on if we were on a strike, as well as losing time at work.

I don't think anybody wanted to do that. We didn't like to have them. I didn't like to have it out in the paper that we were so badly—well, I don't know—they wanted the idea out we weren't being treated right.

I knew in my employment there I had certainly been treated right.

Q. Did you know that you were being paid far in excess of wages that were being paid in plants that had contracts with the I. L. G. W. U. in Kansas City?

A. I felt sure I was making far more than I would in some of these other factories.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5064] Trial Examiner Batten: How is that material? You say did she know. Well, of course, I have no objection to it, she has answered it. Of course, it doesn't mean that we are going into that whole question of whether, in fact, they were. The only question that will raise is whether or not this witness—what her own information is concerning the statement, whether it is supported by anything. I didn't want you to think that raises the whole issue of the truth.

Mr. Ingraham: We still contend that is an issue we are interested to go into and that even under your ruling, that is a factor that these employees have a right to consider.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, that is what I just said.

Mr. Ingersdale: I object to the question and ask that it be stricken—the answer—for the reason it isn't covered by their offer of proof and for the reason that if they do open up that subject, to what other union factories are paying in Kansas City, I think I would have the right to show when the I. L. G. W. U. came here and organized those other factories they were working fifty and sixty hours a week for four and five dollars a week, and whatever they were getting at the time of this controversy was two or three times what they had been getting, in the light of that line of testimony. The comparison would amount to nothing.

If we are going into those subjects I would like to go into it that deeply.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am only going into it to the [fol. 5065] extent I indicated. These witnesses have testified what it was that led them to form the organization or why they did it. Now, I am permitting it to that extent and that doesn't mean I am excluding the testimony you indicated, Mr. Ingraham, that you still take the position it is an issue. I am not ruling on that matter now, only with respect to this witness's testimony.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What effect did you observe that this article had on other employees at the plant?

Mr. Langsdale: Is this March 26th?

Mr. Ingraham: February 26th.

A. Well, I think they were all rather disgusted to think we was going to have to fight and defend our rights as workers if we didn't want to join a union, and the time they were reopening the campaign and sounded the way the article read if it was between—on account of the Presidential campaign the year before we didn't see what difference it would make how we worked—regardless of how a political campaign came out.

I think the majority thought—or felt like it was bringing in something that didn't concern us at all. Regardless of what personal feelings between two men, even outside of our own group—

Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) Q. Do you recall a petition being circulated a few days after that article ap- [fol. 5066] peared in the press? A. Yes.

Q. I will hand you I. L. G. W. U.'s exhibit 10, page 5974 of the Circuit Court record, and ask you if that appears to be a photostatic copy of the petition that you signed?

[fol. 5067] A. Yes, I remember it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you sign that of your own free will?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Will you state the circumstances under which you signed that?

A. Well, I don't believe at the time that it was on the floor—I must not have been up there; I don't remember, I didn't see it at that time. I heard about it after it was passed through the floor. Some of the girls asked me if I had seen it, and I hadn't known anything about it, so I asked about it, the next day I asked about it, and then there was one brought to me, and I got to sign it.

Q. Why did you want to sign it?

A. Well, because I felt very much that I wanted Mrs. Reed to know that I certainly was in favor of continuing work, and I was very well satisfied, and I didn't see any necessity of any changes, and I wanted her to know that I fully agreed with the petition, and I wanted to read it, and I wanted to sign it.

Q. Did you want her to know that you felt the working conditions were satisfactory? A. Yes, I did.

Q. There is a statement in that petition to the effect that "The undersigned refuse to acknowledge any labor organization." Did you have any particular labor union in mind that you thought that referred to?

[fol. 5068] A. Well, in my mind, when I signed this I was thinking of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. I didn't know what the petition referred to other than that. That is what I had in mind.

Q. Was there any other union that you knew of, that was attempting to organize the workers at the Donnelly plant at that time?

A. That was the only one I had heard of.

Q. Did anybody representing the management ask you to sign that petition? A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did anybody representing the management lead you to believe that you would be penalized in any way if you failed to sign that petition? A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did anyone representing the management give you any impression that the mangement did not want the employees to join or not join a labor organization?

A. I hadn't heard anything to that effect.

Q. Well, did the article that appeared on page 26, which was respondent's exhibit 6, that you have just referred to, did that have anything to do with your desire to sign the petition that you have just referred to?

A. Yes, it did.

[fol. 5069] Q. Do you recall when Mr. Baty became factory manager? A. I remember it.

Q. Do you recall about when that was?

A. No, I couldn't. I just remember that there was a change made in the management, but I don't remember just when it was.

Q. Do you recall what effect that change had upon the duties of the instructors, do you know anything about that?

A. Well, I knew at that time that the instructors didn't have as much to say about the work, about the girls, what they did and what they didn't do.

Q. Do you know whether or not operators, after this change, had to take up complaints with Mr. Baty rather than with the instructors?

A. I know that that is the way it was handled, that the instructor would tell the girl that—I know whenever I was around the instructor and a girl came up and asked about something, I have heard her tell them to go to Mr. Baty and tell him.

Q. After Mr. Baty was made factory manager, did you see him frequently on your floor at the plant?

A. Yes, he was there a great deal.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5070] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. When you say frequently, how many times a day and how frequently would Mr. Baty generally be on your floor?

A. Well, you see, his desk was there on the seventh floor, and in going to and from the elevator, I passed his desk, and then he was in around the sections during the day, too, he would make the rounds; I think it was his practice to make the rounds of all the sections. I know he came in our section rather regularly.

Q. Did you understand that Mr. Baty was the one boss in the factory? A. That was my understanding.

* * * * * * *

A. The idea was, he was my boss, I didn't feel like anyone else there was my boss.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5071] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You understood Mr. Baty was your boss? A. Yes.

Q. Did you understand the instructor in the section where you worked was the boss? A. No.

* * * * * * *

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Mudd, what did you understand the duties of the instructor were in April, 1937?

A. Well, it was their job to show the girl how to do the work.

Q. Did you at that time wear a uniform?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you go to the meeting of April 27, and other Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings in your uniform, or did you change to street clothes?

A. I think—at first I believe I always went in my uniform, I think later on I got to changing clothes before I went to the meetings.

Q. Did you say what time of day it was that the meeting [fol. 5072] of April 27, 1937, was held?

A. It was after work.

Q. Do you recall the hour? A. No, I don't.

Q. I believe you stated at that meeting you voted in favor of forming an independent union? A. I did.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Had you had any discussion with anybody prior to April 27, or prior to the meeting on April 27, about the formation of a plant union?

[fol. 5073] A. I don't remember of having had.

Q. Did you know Hobart Atherton?

A. Yes, I knew him.

Q. What did you observe him doing around the plant prior to April 27, 1937?

A. I don't know what he did, I just knew him when I saw him.

Q. Had he ever done anything or said anything that gave you the impression that he was a supervisor or a boss, or a person—

* * * * * * *

Mr. Lane (Continuing) Held out by the management as being entitled to represent the management or speak for the management on labor matters?

[fol. 5074] A. No, I didn't.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Do you know Sallie Ormsby?

A. I knew who she was.

Q. Did you know what her job was?

A. I don't know. I had the impression she was an operator, I never knew what she was.

Q. Did you know Ethel Riddle?

A. Yes, I knew Ethel Riddle.

Q. Do you know what her job was? A. Yes.

Q. What was her job? A. Operator.

Q. Did you know Arch Lyle?

A. No, I didn't know him.

Q. Did you know Lena Tyhurst? A. Yes.

Q. What was her job?

A. She was also an operator.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Riggs? A. Yes.

Q. What was her job?

A. I knew she worked up on the ninth floor in the patterns.

[fol. 5075] Q. Did you know Lyle Jeter? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know what his job was?

A. He was a machinist.

Q. Did you know Carl Crawford? A. Yes.

Q. What was his job?

A. I don't know what his job was. I know he worked on the fifth floor.

Trial Examiner Batten: Q. Which floor? A. Fifth.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Do you know what department?

A. Well, the cutting department is there, but I don't know what he did.

Q. Did you know Cornelia Taylor?

A. No, I didn't know her.

Q. Did you know Leona Moore? A. No.

Q. Did you know Ellen Nokes? A. No.

Q. Did you know Virginia White? A. Yes.
Q. What was her job? A. I don't know.
Q. Did you know Fred Brown?
[fol. 5076] A. I knew who he was.
Q. Do you know what he did? A. No.
Q. Did you know Mamie Riddle? A. Yes.
Q. What was her job? A. She was an operator.
Q. Did you know Anna Richards? A. Yes.
Q. What was her position?
A. She was a presser.
Q. Did you know Marjorie Green? A. Yes.
Q. Do you know what she did? A. No.
Q. Did you know John McConaughey? A. Yes.
Q. What did he do?
A. At that time I don't know whether he was a basket boy or worked in the cage on the eighth floor.
Q. What do you mean by working in the cage?
A. Took machine calls when there was a machine call put in.

By Trial Examiner Batten:
Q. Well, two or three witnesses said something about the cage. What do you mean? Was he working in a cage?
[fol. 5077] A. Well, there is a little room on the eighth floor at the north side of the building, which was enclosed by a wire netting, I guess you would call it, and it is always referred to as a cage. There is a little window to go up to, to tell them what you want.
Q. Well, that is what you mean when you say "cage"?
A. That's right.

By Mr. Lane:
Q. By that you mean if some machine part is broken or missing, or it needs repairing, you report that?
A. You report that you need a machinist.
Q. Did you know Charlie Casey?
A. No, I didn't know him.
Q. Did you know Hazel Saucke? A. No.
Q. Did you know Anna Reece?
A. No, I didn't at that time.
Q. Was there anybody who took any part in the meeting of April 27, that you regarded as being a supervisor or a boss or a manager, or as a person authorized by or held out by the management as anybody authorized to speak for the management in connection with any labor matters?

A. No, not to my knowledge there was not.

Q. Or any relation to any matters, between the management and the employees? A. No.

[fol. 5078] Q. Did you, when you voted to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, have the feeling in your own mind that you were doing a voluntary act?

A. Yes, I did it of my own free will.

Q. An act that expressed your preference? A. Yes.

Q. Did you, in your mind, have any fear you were under any domination or intimidation or coercion or pressure on the part of the management or anybody representing the management?

A. No, I didn't feel that way.

Q. Did you know of any act or anything said by anybody—any one of the supervisors or superintendents, or Mrs. Reed, or any department heads, that you regarded as indicating pressure or coercion on their part to form a labor union or stay out of any labor union?

A. I didn't hear it discussed by any of them at all.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not it was your belief and opinion in doing what you did at the April 27th meeting, that you and the other employees were acting together as employees, in doing what you, as employees, preferred to do. A. I was doing as I preferred.

Q. Did you attend the meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union thereafter fairly regularly?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. I will ask you to look at Board's exhibit 8-12, begin-[fol. 5079] ning on page 4406 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, being the minutes of a meeting of May 11, 1937.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Mudd, did you attend that meeting?

A. I believe I did.

Q. Was it your understanding the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union would be independent financially?

A. Yes, that was my understanding.

Q. That any bills, including attorneys' fees, or any services rendered to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union had to be paid by the union?

A. The union was responsible for all expenses.

Q. Do you know of any financial contribution or any other kind of a contribution that anybody has ever made to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. The members is all I know of that ever contributed to the union.

Q. Have all expenses of the union, so far as you know, been paid from the dues, assessments, and other collections from the employees, members of the union?

A. To my knowledge the union has taken care of all of the expenses.

Q. Do you recall whether or not this was said at the [fol. 5080] meeting of May 11? I am referring to page 4409 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record: "Do you realize now that Mr. Tyler is representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and he will have to be paid? I expect a good many of you are wondering what he is going to charge. I talked with him in some detail and I am sure you will feel that he is quite right in the answer he gave me, he doesn't know what his answer will be, because it depends on how much trouble we give him, and how much work he will have to do for us. The union does have to be self-supporting in every detail. Being a thoroughly reliable group of employees, we can take care of our own financial obligations."

A. Yes, I remember that being discussed.

Q. I will ask you to look at the minutes of the meeting of May 25, 1937, beginning on page 4415 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, and ask you to read those, and state whether you attended that meeting.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Lane: The exhibit number is Board's Exhibit 8-21.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Lane: Did you attend that meeting?

A. Yes, I believe I did.

[fol. 5081] Q. Do you know at what time of day you quit work, on or about May 25, 1937? When was your work over for the day?

A. I don't remember. I imagine it was around 4:30.

Q. Do you know what time of day that meeting was held?

A. I never went to any meetings only after work.

Q. Do you know whether you were there at the beginning of that meeting? A. I feel sure that I was.

Q. Was there ever any union meeting, that you know of, that began at 3:45 in the afternoon? A. No.

Q. Did you discuss at that meeting the matter of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union raising money to pay a bill of the Loyalty League?

A. No, we took care of union business at the union meetings.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Was there ever a union meeting at which you discussed raising money for the Loyalty League? A. No.

Q. Was that meeting followed immediately by a meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. Not that I ever knew of.

Q. Was there ever a time when you knew of a meet- [fol. 5082] ing of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union being immediately followed or immediately preceded by a meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did you know Elsie Graham Greenhaw?

A. No, I don't believe I did.

Q. I believe you said you knew Marjorie Green?

A. Yes.

Q. Did she hold any office in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. She was our secretary.

Q. Did you see her at the meetings?

A. I think I saw her at most of the meetings.

Q. Did you see her do anything at the meetings?

A. She took notes; she was always up on the platform taking notes.

Q. Is it your recollection she was at the meeting of May 25?

A. I don't remember of anyone else taking notes. If they did I don't remember it.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5084] Q. I will ask you to state whether or not at the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, held on May 25, 1937, Rose Todd said "This meeting has been called very hurriedly. We were to have chairs at 3:30, they were to be here at 3:30 but it takes a few minutes to get them and set them up and it takes a few min-
[fol. 5085] utes to get you all down here. But I didn't know there were none until I came down." Do you recall that at any union meeting that Rose Todd ever made that remark?

A. Not at 3:30 in the afternoon. I never heard her mention anything about ordering chairs.

Q. Did Rose Todd say at the meeting you attended on that day, "I want to tell you this is going to be two meetings. The first being a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and after that a meeting of the Loyalty League."?

A. Not to my knowledge, we never had a meeting of the Loyalty League and the Union together.

Q. Did Rose Todd say that at that meeting?

A. I never heard her.

Q. Were you there at the beginning of that meeting?

A. I am sure I was.

Q. I will ask you to state whether Rose Todd said this at that meeting: "For you people here working I want to advise you to work quietly."?

A. We weren't on the floor where anyone was working. We had those meetings on the vacant floor.

Q. Did Rose Todd, at that meeting, say anything about people working where you were?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. And you say there were no people working in the room where you were holding your meeting?

[fol. 5086] A. We had those meetings on the vacant floor, no.

Q. I will ask you to say whether or not Hobart Atherton made this remark at that union meeting: "There seems to be a little misunderstanding as to why the Loyalty League needs this money," and a little later on "I will explain that to you."?

A. I never heard him make that remark.

Q. Did Rose Todd say this "If there is any business pending of the union, please bring it up now. If there isn't I want to close this and open it as a Loyalty meeting."? A. No.

Q. Was there a motion made to adjourn the union meeting and immediately open a Loyalty meeting?

A. Not that I heard.

Q. Did you stay through the meeting of May 25th until the end of it?

A. I stayed until the meetings were adjourned.

Trial Examiner Batten: What was that?

A. I stayed at the meeting, when I would go to them, until they were adjourned.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you, at the meeting of May 25th, hear Miss Todd say this: "There have been several things come up that the Loyalty League will be interested in, mainly about this sweep stakes,"?

A. May 25th? I never heard of any sweep stakes in [fol. 5087] May. What sweep stakes we always had the athletic association might have a sweep stakes in conjunction with their golf tournament in the fall, when they would quit playing golf.

Q. Was that discussed at this Athletic Association—discussed at your union meeting of May 25th, 1937?

A. No, they never. I never knew of them holding a sweep stakes in May.

Q. Did you, at your union meeting, discuss a bill of the Loyalty League?

A. I never knew the Loyalty League ever had any bills.

Q. Well, did you discuss it at that union meeting?

A. Not that I remember of.

Q. I will ask you to state whether, at a meeting you attended on May 25th, the union meeting, Hobart Atherton said this "As Miss Todd has already told you, we only have one debt of the Loyalty League. A good many of you seem to be under the impression we have accumulated quite a lot of bills as we run along, but we have only one." Was that matter mentioned or discussed?

A. I don't remember anything said about that.

Q. Was this said at that meeting "You all realize when this agitation first started we didn't have any union started and it was up to some organization to take the initial step to protect our rights as employees of the Donnelly Garment Company, so the Loyalty League had a meeting of the representatives and were authorized by the representatives to retain legal counsel. We retained Mr. Tyler, [fol. 5088] as you all know, he came down here and talked to us. That debt, the bill of Mr. Tyler's, is the only debt the Loyalty League has which has not been paid, and as Miss Todd told you, that is—", was anything of that kind discussed at the meeting of May 25th?

A. I don't know that the Loyalty League had any debt. The Loyalty League wasn't mentioned at that meeting.

Q. Was there anything said at that meeting that the Loyalty League had a meeting of representatives and retained legal counsel? A. No.

Q. Was anything said at that meeting about the Loyalty League taking the initial step to protect your rights as employees? A. No.

Q. Was there any suggestion or motion made at that meeting to pay 50c per person in order to raise this money for the Loyalty League? A. No, there wasn't.

Q. Will you state what activity the Loyalty League had after the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I don't remember any one particular occasion that we had after that.

Q. Was the Loyalty League still in existence on July 15, 1939? A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 5089] Q. Had its activities, after April 27, 1937, and up to July, 1939, been the same as its activities for the same period preceding April 27th? A. I think it had.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit 7, which appears at page 4865 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, being an article appearing in the Kansas City Journal-Post on March 6, 1937, and ask you if you read that article?

* * * * * * *

A. I believe I did.

Q. Did you read this portion of the article attributed to Mr. Dubinsky: "Dubinsky said that Reed would receive a polite letter within a few days inviting him to confer with Kansas City labor leaders about signing a union contract. If he refuses to meet with us we will start our campaign. It may take a long time to organize the Donnelly Company plant but we will win out in the end as all our 240,000 members of our organization are behind us."?

[fol. 5090] A. Yes, I read that.

Q. Now, when the strike controversy was going on at the Gordon, Gernes, Missouri companies in March, state whether or not, in view of the article I have just read to you, you considered those strikes as part of the campaign Mr. Dubinsky mentioned in this article?

A. I thought that was—I thought that is what he had reference to. Strikes of that nature, that is the only way they could even attempt to organize us.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Lane:

Q. I will show you Board's exhibit 27, appearing on page 4743 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, being an article in the Kansas City Times on May 11, 1937, entitled "Reed assails Dubinsky" and ask you to look at that and state whether you read that article, at about that time? A. I believe I read it.

Q. Did that article have any influence on you—your wish to remain a member of the Donnelly Garment Work-
[fol. 5091] ers' Union or to have the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as your representative for collective bargaining?

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Miss Witness, I don't understand, a while ago you looked at some exhibits Mr. Dubinsky quoted, and I gathered from your answer that you believed what he said, but what Senator Reed apparently said you didn't believe or didn't influence you, and yet you didn't know Mr. Dubinsky and you do know Senator Reed.

A. I don't know Senator Reed any more than I do any other man. I know who he is now from seeing him here and from other gatherings but as far as knowing him, I don't know him. I wasn't influenced by what he said as to whether or not I wanted to belong to the union.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5092] By Mr. Lane:

Q. In this article of March 6, 1937, purporting to be an interview with Mr. Dubinsky in which he is alleged to have said "Mr. Reed said many harsh things about me during the recent political campaign but all that is past and I shall deal with him only as a maker of dresses." Did the fact that appeared and attributed to Mr. Dubinsky influence you any in your decision with respect to forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Only that he was planning on organizing the place where I worked. Not that he referred to Mr. Reed, because Mr. Reed wasn't a part of the company.

Q. Well, did the fact that he is alleged to have said "Mr. Reed said many harsh things about me" have any influence on you?

A. No, it didn't make any difference to me.

Q. Now, up to July 15, 1939, and I use that date because the Examiner has confined us to that period—

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5094] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Mudd, did you, during that period, remain a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free choice? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Martha Gray in April, 1937?

A. Yes, I believe I did.

Q. Do you know what she did?

A. She worked in the store.

Q. Do you know what work she did there?

A. Well, she was just a clerk to my knowledge.

Q. Were you occasionally in the store?

A. Yes, I went in there from day to day.

Q. Did you see what she was doing?

A. She always just waited on you if you wanted a dress or any material she waited on you for it.

[fol. 5095] Q. Was there anything that Mrs. Gray ever did or anything that she ever said to you that led you to believe that she was a superintendent or supervisor or was being held out by the company as having authority to speak for the company in connection with any labor matters? A. No, I never did think she had.

Q. Did she, so far as you know, have any control over other employees? A. No, not that I know of.

Q. Did anybody ever say anything to you or did you get the impression anywhere she was a supervisory employee? A. No.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Lena Tyhurst? A. Yes.

Q. What was her position in April of 1937?

A. Well, to the best of my knowledge she was one that looked at the work to see if it was all right, or made suggestions about the handling of the work, the quality of the workmanship.

Q. Do you know whether or not she had any control or supervision over any other employees?

A. To my knowledge she didn't have.

Q. Did you have the opinion, or impression, in April of 1937, that Lena Tyhurst was a supervisory employee?

A. No.

Q. That she was being held out by the company as oc-
[fol. 5096] cupying a supervisory status?

A. No, I never thought she did.

Q. And did that continue to be the situation so far as Lena Tyhurst was concerned, down to July, 1939?

A. I believe it was.

Q. Is the same thing true of Mrs. Gray? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know Marvin Price in April of 1937?

A. I knew him when I saw him.

Q. Did you know what he did? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did he ever do anything in your presence or say anything that led you to believe that he was a supervisory official of the company? A. No.

Q. Did you ever see him exercise any control or authority over any other employees? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Do you know Mrs. Bogart?

A. I knew her when I saw her.

Q. What is her first name, do you know?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know what she did? A. No.

Q. In April of 1937?

[fol. 5097] A. I don't know.

Q. Did you ever see her do anything or hear her say anything that gave you the opinion or impression that she was a supervisor for the company? A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Witness, did you say you didn't know her?

A. I knew her when I saw her, but I wasn't acquainted personally with her. I knew who she was when I saw her, that is all.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you know Mrs. Strickland? A. I knew her.

Q. Could you connect up her name with her in April of 1937, so you could identify her?

A. Yes, I believe I was bowling at that time with Mrs. Strickland.

Miss Weyand: I didn't understand that last answer.

A. I think at that time I was bowling on the same team with Mrs. Strickland.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. You know what her position was?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Did she, during working hours or after working hours, on this bowling team you speak of, ever say or do anything to give you the opinion that she was a supervisor of the company? A. No.

[fol. 5098] Q. Did she or anybody else ever say anything to you, or do anything to give you the belief that she was authorized to speak for the management in connection with labor matters? A. No.

Q. Or that she could control the activities of other employees? A. No, she didn't.

Q. Did you know Ted Scoles in April of 1937?

A. I knew him when I saw him.

Q. Do you know where he worked?

A. I had the impression he worked on the fifth floor.

Q. What department? A. The cutting department.

Q. Did you have the opinion at any time from April, 1937, to July, 1939, he was a supervisory employee of the company? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you know Herbert Mutchler? A. Yes.

Q. Was he employed by the company in April of 1937?

A. I believe he was.

Q. Do you know what he was doing then?

A. No, I don't know what his duties were.

Q. Do you know what his duties were at any time he was employed there?

A. Well, I think at one time he checked up on—came in, [fol. 5099] I believe he looked up bundles. I don't know what he did. It seems to me that is what he came in the section for occasionally.

Q. Do you know when he left the employment of the company? A. No, I don't know.

Q. Did you ever have the opinion or the impression during the period from April, 1937 to July, 1939, that Herb Mutchler was a supervisory employee? A. No.

Q. Or that he had any control over other employees?

A. No, I didn't.

Mr. Lane: I believe that is all.

[fol. 5100] By Miss Weyand:

Q. I believe you stated you started in as a presser, is that correct? A. That's right.

Q. Do you call it a pressing section or a pressing department, or what is the term you use referring to the group of pressers?

A. I believe it is referred to as the pressing department.

Q. What is the title given the presser in charge of the pressing department? Is it an instructor, or do they have some other name?

A. Well, I don't know as I ever heard any title in connection with the name of the lady down there.

Q. What lady do you refer to? A. Mrs. Waddell.

Q. Has she been in charge of the pressing department ever since you first were acquainted with it?

A. Well, when I worked down there, she was, but whether she is now, or in 1939, I don't know; I left that department after I worked down there for a while.

Q. And she was always referred to as Mrs. Waddell?

A. I always heard her referred to as Mrs. Waddell, I guess she was the instructor.

Q. Did she have someone called the thread girl?

A. While I was down there she did not, that I remember.

Q. Was there anybody who assisted Mrs. Waddell?

A. I don't remember, when I was there, that there was.

[fol. 5101] Q. When you went on the floor in the pressing department, what did you do?

A. I counted the work as it came into the department, and put the belts with it, and later on I put the belts—that work was one job, and later on I did another job of putting in the belts in the dresses separately and buttoning them up and fastening the plackets, and such as that, in order to get them ready to fold.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5102] Q. In the sewing section, who are paid by piece rate and who by time rate?

A. I am paid by the time.

Q. Do you know whether or not anyone else is?

A. I suppose the instructor is.

Q. Do you know whether anyone else is?

A. I don't know that anyone else is paid by time all the time; of course, I don't have anything to do with how they are paid.

Q. What instructors were you the thread girl to, during the period of 1935 to 1939?

A. I wasn't on the floor in 1935; I believe I went on the floor the early part of 1936. I worked for Mrs. Cook at one time, and I worked at one time for Mary Copowycz, and I worked for Mrs. White.

Mr. Lane: I didn't understand that last name.

A. Mrs. White; and for Clara Finnell; I believe that is all, other than maybe just during vacations. I might [fol. 5103] have relieved or worked for somebody else who might have taken the instructor's place, that I was working with during vacations.

Q. You said you might have relieved somebody. You mean who?

A. Any other floor girl. One vacation, I believe, was the only time I worked in that way, in one of the small sections on the ninth floor, in the place of Frances Dumit.

Q. This morning when you were reading the February 26, 1937, article, you said that at that time you had already let the I. L. G. W. U. know that "We didn't want them in the plant." Were you referring to the Loyalty League when you made that statement?

Mr. Reed: What is that?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. I think that is what I had in mind.

Miss Weyand: Who was your instructor at the time of the March 2nd petition, March 2, 1937?

A. I believe Mrs. Cook.

[fol. 5105] Q. Who brought the petition to you when you signed it?

A. Well, as near as I can remember, I believe Mary Sprofora did; I am not sure whether she brought it to me, or whether I went and hunted it up.

Q. Did you sign it at some meeting at which all the instructors and thread girls were present?

A. I wouldn't remember.

Q. You wouldn't know one way or the other?

A. No, I am afraid not.

Q. Did you notice what names were on the petition when you signed it?

A. I don't remember now. I probably at the time did notice whose names were there.

Q. I wonder if you would look at the names, and tell me whether or not the first eight or nine names are those of instructors, and their respective thread girls, on the eighth floor at that time? Will you read the names out loud?

Trial Examiner Batten: Let's see. What is that exhibit?

[fol. 5106] Miss Weyand: That is L. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 10, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at 5974, and they are at 5388.

A. I don't know where these instructors and floor girls worked; I might know who they are, but I don't know as I would know where they worked at that time.

Q. Well, will you read the first eight, and see if those were not instructors and thread girls, who were on the eighth floor at that time?

A. I believe Lola Skeens was on the eighth floor.

Q. And the name following her name?

A. Nellie Biggs, I don't know whether she was an instructor or thread girl at that time. I believe she was a thread girl, but I don't know where she worked.

Q. And what is the next name?

A. Marie Patton was an instructor.

Q. On the eighth floor? A. Yes.

Q. And the next name? A. Marie Grampz.

Q. What was she?

A. Marie was a thread girl, I believe; I don't know whether Marie Grampz was on that floor or not as a thread girl, but I believe she was.

Q. And the next name?

[fol. 5107] A. Lena Allison, I believe at that time she was an instructor on the eighth floor. Rose Henricks, I am not sure about her.

Q. Was she Lena Allison's thread girl at that time?

A. I don't know really.

Q. Was she at any time around that period?

A. I don't know who worked together. Ada Vining was an instructor.

Q. You missed a couple of the first names.

A. Etta Dorsey, she was an instructor too, to the best of my knowledge; I never knew exactly what section she was in, but she had special machines, as a rule, along with other machines in the same section, embroidering and tucking, and such as that. I couldn't say whether she was up on the eighth floor at that time or not. I was on the seventh floor.

Q. Carrie Abrams.

A. Carrie Abrams, I believe she was an instructor at that time?

Q. Was she on the eighth floor?

A. I don't believe so; I don't believe she has been up on the eighth floor as an instructor.

Q. Grace Davis?

A. Grace Davis, I don't know whether at that time I knew Grace Davis.

Q. Do you know whether she was ever the thread girl for Carrie Abrams, or Etta Dorsey?

[fol. 5108] A. Not to my knowledge, I couldn't say either way.

Q. That covers the first eight or nine names. Now, taking the next group of names, do you know on what floor Ada Vining was?

A. Ada Vining, I am under the impression, was on the eighth floor.

Q. As an instructor? A. Yes.

Q. And Clara Finnell?
A. I believe she was an instructor on the eighth floor.
Q. Emma Grober?
A. I believe she was a thread girl.
Q. On the eighth floor?
A. I don't know where she worked.
Q. The next name, Anna Barthol?
A. She was a thread girl at times. Anna Barthol got sick sometime along there; I don't know whether she was on that floor then or not.
Q. She must have been working there the day this was signed, wasn't she?
A. Well, I don't know whether she was on the floor.

Mr. Reed: Please keep your voice up. I can't hear you.

Miss Weyand: I am sorry.

By Miss Weyand:
Q. The next is Mary Snedden.
A. Now, Mary Snedden was a thread girl for a while; [fol. 5109] I don't know at this time whether she is. I knew Mary Snedden as an instructor when I was on that floor, and I know she was up on the floor as a thread girl too for short times, but as to this date, whether she was a thread girl, I couldn't say. I never worked with or close to Mary Snedden.
Q. Do you know who her instructor was when she was a thread girl? A. No, I don't.
Q. Grace Gnotta? A. She was an instructor.
Q. What floor at that time? A. Seventh.
Q. Vera Marshall?
A. Vera Marshall, I believe, was a thread girl.
Q. Was she Grace Gnotta's thread girl?
A. I don't think so.
Q. She was on the seventh floor, wasn't she?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Lillian White.
A. Mrs. White was an instructor.
Q. On the seventh floor? A. I think she was.
Q. And Edna Bienert? A. She was a thread girl.
Q. Was she Mrs. White's thread girl?
[fol. 5110] A. I think perhaps she was.
Q. Rosetta Cook?

A. She was the instructor I was working with at the time I signed the petition.

Q. And your name follows her name, is that correct? That is your signature? A. Yes.

Q. And you were on the seventh floor at that time?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. The next name, Kathryn Rosen?

A. Kathryn Rosen was an instructor, I believe.

Q. And she was on the seventh floor, was she?

A. I don't remember. Kathryn was also an instructor and had special operators.

Q. What about Pearl Collins?

A. I don't know whether Pearl Collins was an instructor or a thread girl then.

Q. She has been both? A. Yes, she has.

Q. Martha Gorman?

A. I am not sure about Martha Gorman; I believe she was a thread girl.

Q. Do you know whether she was on the seventh floor?

A. No, I didn't know Martha very well.

Q. Mary Copowycz?

[fol. 5111] A. I think Mary Copowycz was a thread girl then.

Q. Do you know what floor she was on?

A. No, I don't.

Q. She has been both a thread girl and an instructor around that time?

A. Yes—later than that she was an instructor. I don't know at that time; I believe she was a thread girl then.

Q. Pearl Atchison?

A. I am not sure about Pearl; I never knew Pearl very well. I think she was a thread girl.

Q. Do you know what floor she was on?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Cecile Ealy?

A. I think Cecile was an instructor at that time.

Q. Do you know what floor she was on?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know whether she continued to be an instructor up until July 15, 1939?

A. I think she went up and worked with Mrs. Nichols sometime during that time, as a thread girl; I know her position has changed.

Q. Do you know whether she had any other positions before July 15, 1939?

A. Well, yes, she has had; I don't know just when, but I know that she has something to do with the produc-
[fol. 5112] tion work, getting production out.

Q. Do you know what her work for Mrs. Nichols was?

A. I think she was just an assistant, just worked up there along with the pricing of the work.

Q. Who is Ada Wolfe?

A. I don't know Ada Wolfe. I knew her when I saw her, and that is all the better I knew Ada Wolfe.

Q. Was she an instructor?

A. I don't know; I don't know Ada Wolfe.

Q. Stella Willis?

A. Stella Willis, to my knowledge, was an instructor at that time.

Q. She was on the sixth floor?

A. I believe that is where that section was.

Q. Was Stella Willis an instructor continuously from 1935 down to July 15, 1939?

A. To the best of my knowledge, she was. I never worked with her, but that was always my opinion.

Q. Mary Bogart?

A. If that is Mrs. Bogart, I know she works in the dividing room, if that is her name. I knew a Mrs. Bogart down there, but I didn't know what her first name was, but if that is the same person, she worked in the dividing room.

Q. Is she the instructor in the dividing room?

A. I don't know at that time, I had very little occasion
[fol. 5113] to go to the dividing room.

Q. Was she the instructor of the dividing room any time prior to July 15, 1939? A. Not that I am positive of.

Q. Who was in your own dividing room?

A. I don't know.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You say "dividing room". What do they do down there?

A. When the work is cut, it is in stacks, and I know they bundle up the work with tickets attached.

Q. Oh, yes, I remember, where they separate it into bundles, with the instructions and sort of schedule it for the different sections.

A. They tie it up with the tickets, so the basket boy can take it to the sections in order to get the work done on it.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. It was located on the fifth floor?

A. I think it was.

Q. And Lulu Waddell?

A. I think she was in the pressing department.

Q. Elma Jennings?

A. She worked as a presser when I was down there.

Q. You don't know whether she ever went on the floor or not? A. No, I don't.

Q. Anna Wherry, at that time what position did she hold?

[fol. 5114] A. She was in charge of production. I don't know exactly what her job was.

Q. Was she ever called factory manager, to your knowledge? A. No.

Q. Do you know what she did?

A. Well, to the best of my knowledge—I never had a whole lot to do with Mrs. Wherry, she never did direct me what to do. I never talked with her a whole lot about the work, but I think when the machines needed to be changed, in order to get in special machines into the sections and take them out, I think she had something to do with that, as to the production work, but I don't know to what extent. I don't know what she did do other than that.

Q. Lena Tyhurst—you mentioned her before?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And Mollie Smith?

A. Mollie Smith was in the binding department. I don't know what she really did down there. I know I called Mollie Smith for binding whenever I needed binding, that is as far as I know what she was.

Q. Do you know whether Mollie Smith was ever an instructor prior to July 15, 1939?

A. I don't know; I know whenever I needed any binding I called her on the phone.

Q. And you don't remember signing this at any meet-
[fol. 5115] ing with those people? A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know how it happens there seems to be considerable following in order from the top floors down to the bottom floor? It went from the eighth to the seventh to the sixth to the fifth floors. A. No, I don't.

Q. You don't know how that happened at all?

A. No, that isn't within my knowledge.

Q. You don't know who the girl, who brought it to you, took it to after you signed it?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. When you were a thread girl in the sewing section, did you have a machine? A. No.

* * * * * *

Q. Did you have a table at which you kept your supplies?

A. I had a table to put my pocketbook in; we have bins for our files.

Q. Where are those bins located with reference to the section?

* * * * * *

[fol. 5116] A. I think, as near as I can remember, they have always been right at the end of the rows of machines.

Miss Weyand: Q. Where is that table on which you put your pocketbook located?

A. It is located at the end of the room.

* * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Where is the instructor's desk?

A. There is no such a thing. That table there is where we put our personal pocketbook in our room.

Q. Is that table used for anything else?

A. Just to put work on it to match it up.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5117] Q. Do the girls own their own bobbins?

A. Well, I can't say that they all do; I believe they do, but I am not positive. I don't know for sure.

Q. You don't know of any rules about their buying bobbins when they come to work? A. No, I don't.

Q. You don't know how they acquire their bobbins?

A. No, not positive.

Q. Do you have any idea?

A. I think they put up a deposit on bobbins, but I don't know that they do.

Q. Do you know how much that deposit is?

[fol. 5118] A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know anything about whether they have to sign something for them?

A. No, I don't know anything about signing, I never seen them sign anything.

Q. What office do they go to, to get those bobbins?

A. They go to the machinist's cage on the eighth floor.

Q. Each of the girls goes up there for her bobbin when she starts to work?

A. I don't know that each of them do. I have seen girls up there getting bobbins, but I don't know whether they all go up and get them when they start working.

Q. Well, when a girl is hired, someone said Mrs. Hyde brings them down to the section. Do they start in without bobbins or do they have to get bobbins?

A. When I was hired there I was in the pressing department, but as far as being hired as an operator, I don't know about that.

Q. How long did you work as a thread girl in the sewing section? A. From 1936, I believe.

Q. And you worked continuously from 1936 to July, 1939, as a thread girl? A. I believe I did.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5119] Q. Now, the thread you gave the girls isn't on a bobbin, is it?

A. No, it is on spools.

[fol. 5120] Q. You never give a bobbin to a girl who didn't have a bobbin? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. She always had bobbins?

A. So far as I know they always have had.

Q. You don't know where she got them?

A. No, I am not positive. I suppose they get them at the cage.

Q. You don't know, when a new girl comes in to work, how she gets her bobbins?

A. I suppose she goes to the cage to get them, but I don't know that.

Q. How does she know to go to the cage to get them?

A. She has an instructor tell her.

Q. What else does the instructor tell a new girl when she comes there to work?

A. As far as I know, she tells her what time to go to lunch, and gives her the work, and shows her how it has to be done; she shows her samples of what her work is expected to look like when she gets through.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5123] Q. Does more than one section work on a style at the same time?

A. As a general thing I don't believe they do.

Q. One section is assigned one style, and they fill all [fol. 5124] the orders until you cease having orders on that style?

A. As near as I have noticed, I think one section does make one style; I don't know as they always do that. If the work gets low, they might transfer the style to another section in order to help out.

Q. When a new style comes in, are there a good many changes made in the section?

A. I didn't notice it that way.

Q. Do they rearrange the machines at times?

A. Not very often; I haven't seen them change very many machines during the styles.

Q. Are there sometimes differences in the sequence of operations on the different styles?

A. Some dresses have to be made differently than others.

Q. When that happens, when you get a style that is considerably different from the one you were working on preceding that, what is done in that section?

A. Well, I still match up the work and put out the thread.

Q. I am asking you what is done in the section.

A. I don't know as anything particular is done.

Q. Well, the instructor has to show each girl how to do a new style, doesn't she?

A. If it is something different from what she has worked on, she would.

Q. Let's assume the case where there is a difference; [fol. 5125] you can remember a case where there was a difference, can't you?

A. I can remember when a girl's work has been changed, yes.

Q. What happens when you remember changes, when there was a change of sequence of operations, when the machines have to be changed?

A. You don't have to change the machine because one machine is put on one operation and another machine on another operation.

Q. Was there any necessity of changing the machines to meet the sequence of operations for a new style?

A. Not as I know of. We carry the work from one machine to another.

Q. So it doesn't follow from one girl to another, but it sometimes jumps around in the section?

A. That is the way we did the work there at that time, maybe a sleeve girl on one end of the machine and a skirt girl on the other end of the row.

Q. Who carries it?

A. I do, or the instructor, depending on which one gets to it first.

Q. And how many do you carry at a time?

A. How many what?

Q. Pieces of goods. Did you carry a dozen at a time, or individually?

A. Our work is put up in bundles, it isn't made up that way.

[fol. 5126] Q. You don't carry it until she finishes a bundle?

A. If the work is very low, we might carry part of a bundle at a time.

Q. Is there always a given girl going to do the next step in a sequence of operations, or sometimes do three or four girls do the next step?

A. There has to be more than one girl to do the next operation.

Q. When you pick up a bundle to take it over to a girl, how would you pick out the girl to whom you are going to give it?

A. If the girl wasn't on that particular style, I would ask the instructor whom to give it to. Otherwise, I would put it on the table.

Q. You never give it to a girl and decide yourself which girl to give it to?

A. No, that isn't part of my duties, I don't do that at all.

Q. Does it make a difference to the girls which styles they get, or what goods is handed to them to work on?

A. I think the majority of people have their preference as to what kind of work they do.

Q. The majority of people think they can make better money on one job than another?

A. Yes, some girls can handle a certain type of collar easier than another girl can.

Q. If a girl doesn't make her given minimum guarantee for some weeks, isn't she sometimes reduced from her [fol. 5127] minimum guarantee?

A. I don't know anything about that.

Q. And if a girl makes her minimum guarantee for a number of weeks continuously, is she sometimes given a higher minimum guarantee?

A. I don't know how their minimums are determined.

Q. Do you know it to be a fact that the number of weeks a girl makes her minimum guarantee determines whether she moves up or down in the minimum guarantee?

A. I don't know how they guarantee it. I would think a girl would be paid according to her ability and her work.

Q. Do you know if a girl makes her guarantee for, say, 12 weeks—I don't know how long they have to work to make their minimum guarantee—she moves up into the next guarantee? A. No, I don't know that.

Q. You wouldn't know how many weeks she would have to make a minimum guarantee to move up?

A. No, I wouldn't.

Q. You don't know what is the system of the girls in the sections in which you have been a thread girl?

A. No, I certainly do not.

Q. Did an instructor ever tell you when she had gone over the cards and discovered a given girl had fallen down on her minimum guarantee, and her instructor had noticed that she had been doing that for six or seven weeks, has she ever asked you what you thought could [fol. 5128] be done with the girl so she would make her minimum guarantee?

A. I don't know as an instructor ever asked my advice on that.

Q. Would you, being her thread girl, remember that she asked your advice on a case?

A. I don't believe she ever asked my advice on any occasion.

Q. You don't remember one way or the other?

A. I don't know as I have ever been asked that in a section?

Q. Did the instructor ever discuss with you which girl should be given a certain piece of work?

A. No. The instructor plans her work as to what girl she is going to have do it, in order to keep the girls going.

Q. She never asked your opinion as to which girl could do the work better? A. No.

Q. When an instructor is absent from the section a few hours, who is in charge?

A. There is no one in charge.

Q. Suppose some of this work had to be moved during that time?

A. If an instructor expects to be gone for a few hours, she sees that the girls are started on work that they can continue with while she is gone.

Q. And you never had an occasion arise when that was [fol. 5129] not all taken care of when your instructor left?

A. I don't remember of any specific time that that has happened.

Q. You don't remember an occasion when some girl finished a bundle, and the instructor hadn't told you what girl to give that bundle to?

A. If a girl has already started on a certain type of work, the chances are some more work like that would come up.

Q. Who would give it to her?

A. I would give it to her. It would be the same type of work, no change of work.

Q. Did the instructor leave written instructions to you as to which work to give to which girl when she was absent for hours at a time? A. No.

Q. She just told you what to give them?

A. There wouldn't be any necessity of telling me what to do if she was going to be gone for a short while, for the girls in the section are all on a certain type of work, and we don't change a girl on her work.

Q. During the time the instructor was absent, you handed the work to the girl?

A. Yes, or I would ask Lena Tyhurst or the instructor in the next section.

Q. But you would hand out the work to be done?

[fol. 5130] A. No more than I would if the instructor was there.

Q. While the instructor is there, you do hand out work to be done?

A. If I pick up a bundle of work ready for the next operation I am apt to give the next girl that work.

Q. Did you ever take care of a section for a whole day at a time? A. Not by myself.

Q. What happens if an instructor is gone a day?

A. Any time I have been in a section when an instructor was gone for a day, they would bring someone in the section to take her place.

Q. Do they have a group of alternate instructors that they keep on hand?

A. There is a group of girls up on the ninth floor, capable of being instructors, or that have been instructors, or there is also Lena Tyhurst that can take care of the section.

Q. Do you know the names of any of those girls brought in prior to July 15, 1939, as alternate instructors?

A. I believe Mrs. White, up on the ninth floor.

Q. Were there any people on the ninth floor who didn't work regularly as instructors, who were brought down at times to act as instructors?

A. I don't know as there was anyone in particular.

Q. Do you remember the name of any one person who [fol. 5131] was brought to your section as an instructor, who was regularly acting as an instructor?

A. Before that time I don't remember being with an instructor unless it was one during vacation time.

Q. What is the longest time you remember of an instructor being absent from your section, aside from vacation time, prior to July 15, 1939?

A. I don't believe I ever worked in a section where the instructor was absent other than vacation time before that.

Q. How many hours at a time do you recall her being absent during a day?

Mr. Reed: What was that question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon, the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. I don't know. The instructors don't leave the sections for any length of time, as a rule, during the day.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Don't they go up weekly on Tuesday or Wednesday, to go over the time cards with Mr. Baty?

A. That doesn't take hours.

Q. How long does it take?

A. Perhaps they might be gone half an hour or 45 minutes.

Q. You don't remember them being gone over 30 or 45 minutes during the period when they went over the time cards with Mr. Baty?

A. I wouldn't say they are gone longer than that. [fol. 5132] I don't recall them being gone any long length of time.

Q. On those occasions you are always left in charge?

A. I am not in charge; I see the instructor in the next section, or Lena Tyhurst, if something comes up.

Q. Do they come there immediately upon your instructor leaving? A. No.

Q. Doesn't the instructor in the next section have to go up to the office at the same time your instructor goes up?

A. I don't know that they always do that; they might once in a while. I never notice them going up at the same time.

Q. You don't know that they do?

A. No. I thought they went up separately.

Q. It was your understanding each one went up individually? A. That is my understanding on it.

Q. Do you know what day of the week they normally go up?

A. I don't know as they have any set day; it is usually the first part of the week when they get the cards ready.

Q. Did you ever help an instructor get the cards ready?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether other thread girls helped instructors get the cards ready?

A. As far as I know, the instructor merely goes up there and looks at the cards; I don't know anything about helping get anything ready up there.

[fol. 5133] Q. If a girl has a question, while the instructor is absent, about doing her work, do you always call on the neighboring instructor to come in and answer it?

A. Not always; I sometimes look up Lena.

Q. You always call on Lena?

A. If there is a part of a dress she doesn't understand, I might give her a sample, or take that part of the dress to Lena and find out about it.

Q. You never explained to the girl how she should do it?

A. I never attempted to explain to a girl anything about the work.

Q. And you have never done it?

A. I never have done it.

Q. Did your experience afford you an opportunity, and the knowledge gained from your work, and your abifity, to explain it to the girl?

A. I never had that job, I never had a job of that sort.

Q. Would you know how to explain it to her, however?

A. I wouldn't really attempt to advise as to how anything should be done in the way of sewing.

Q. Did you ever look up the instructions, while the instructor was absent, to see what the instructions said?

A. I don't remember of having done that.

Q. Did you ever read the instructions for a garment?

A. Yes.

[fol. 5134] Q. Do you usually read them when a new style comes down?

A. I read it to see what order the work is to be done in.

Q. Could you describe one of those instruction sheets for me? A. I believe I could.

Q. What are they like?

A. The sheet is about—at the top of the sheet it gives the style number; the next thing is the instructions to the binding department as to whether to make buckles or buttons; then the next step could be a notice to the notions department as to sending belt loops and waist tapes and shoulder tapes; and then the next instruction could be as to the sleeves, whether there is one pleat on the sleeve or half a dozen, one portion would be just shirred on the sleeves.

Maybe the next operation is to sew a facing on the bottom of the sleeve; the next operation would be to press the sleeve facing, or maybe just shirr it; and then another, each one of our tickets is on the bundle and has a code number on it, and the operations are all in code numbers, and perhaps the skirts have a separate ticket on them, there will be a number designating the skirts and it shows the operations to be done on them.

And that follows through in order, and the same way with the rest of the dress.

Q. Do you know the code numbers or understand them? [fol. 5135] A. I think by working this long, I have a fair understanding what they mean.

Q. Do they change each time you have a new style change?

A. No, not to my knowledge.

Q. The system code remains the same?

A. Yes. For instance, 32 ticket would be the bundle of collars; that is the reason I know whether to put them away; 21 ticket would be the sleeves.

Q. Now, when a new style comes down you have to get acquainted with the sequence of operations from the instructions?

A. That is my usual procedure.

Q. And then you don't have anything new until you hit a new style again; is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. And for sometimes as long as six weeks at a time you have been on a given style, haven't you?

Mr. Reed: I submit the witness said she couldn't state any definite time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, did you ever remember an occasion of as long as six weeks?

A. No. That question came up a while ago. I don't know of any one style in particular that takes that length of time, but it may be, according to the way they are sold, we make them according to the way they are cut.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was there ever a time since you have been a thread [fol. 5136] girl, where there was a blackboard, or some kind of a blackboard where there was a number of thousands of dollars' worth of dresses that you had to get up to? A. I never heard of it.

Q. Was there ever a quota ever assigned to the sections?

A. I don't know that there ever was.

Q. Did you ever keep track of the thousands of dresses or the thousands of dollars' worth of dresses you turned out in a day? A. I never heard of it.

Q. You never did?

A. I suppose in the office it would be taken care of.

Q. But you were never informed what your section had done from time to time?

A. I think we got a report from time to time, as we got our work out.

Q. How regularly would you be notified as to whether you were getting your work out or not?

A. That notice would go to the instructor, and as to how often I wouldn't know.

Q. She never informed you whether your section was getting the work out?

A. It may be she would or she might [now].

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean as to the amount?

Miss Weyand: Yes, or whether they were getting their [fol. 5137] work out.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. That is what you understood me to be referring to?

A. That is what I thought. I didn't have anything to do with getting the work out; as far as the quota is concerned, that is up to someone else, I don't know who.

Q. When they made up these instructions, are they mimeographed or just typed, with a lot of carbon copies, or how is it? A. I don't know.

Q. You have seen them?

A. I have seen them, but I don't know how they prepare them.

Q. There is more than one copy prepared, isn't there?

A. They bring one copy to the section.

Q. Does the binding department get one?

A. I don't know. We get an instruction sheet for each one of our styles, but who else they send it to or what type of instructions, I couldn't say.

Q. When you get thread or notions, in any other department, do they have any instructions there that tell them what thread they are to supply you?

A. When I get the thread up to the section, it always has a requisition with it. When I need more thread, I go down and ask for that particular type of thread that I need for the work.

Q. They don't have a record down there of the style or which dress it is to be used for?

[fol. 5138] A. I suppose they keep a record.

Q. Do they have a copy of the instruction sheet so they know the style, and which says section such-and-such is working on such-and-such a style, and working with such-and-such a thread?

A. I imagine that is the only way they keep their thread straight, but I don't have any personal knowledge about it.

Q. Who takes those requisition sheets? Do you carry it yourself to where this thread is kept, or how?

A. The thread is sent to me with that requisition sheet, and when I put that thread away, I put the requisition sheet away for future notice. If I want to refer to that thread requisition, I have that to show that that thread was issued to me for a particular style.

Q. When a new style comes in, is the thread automatically sent to you for the new style?

A. Yes, and all the other things.

Q. It all automatically comes to you?

A. Yes, that is part of the procedures.

Q. And then you don't have to get new thread until that runs out?

A. If I use that thread up, I go after more.

Q. They automatically send you all you need?

A. That's right.

Q. And they automatically send all the other notions [fol. 5139] you need in your department? A. Yes.

Q. How often do you run out of thread?

A. It depends. Sometimes there is machine trouble, and we use up more thread. That is a very hard question to answer as to how often.

Q. Is it a daily occurrence, or a weekly occurrence?

A. I don't know. Sometimes I go down every day for a week, and maybe not for two weeks.

Q. You always go in person, and never send a messenger?

A. Sometimes I send a note and sometimes I call over the phone.

Q. Suppose a girl uses the wrong thread, does that ever occur? A. Well, once in a while it does.

Q. What do you do about it?

A. I go down to the notion department and see if it left there O.K.; if not too badly off shade, it is sent up to the office to see whether it is O.K. for that particular thread on that particular work; if something can be done by taking care of it by stitching the rest of the dress in the same shade of thread, all right; if not, it is ripped out.

Q. The girl rips it out?

A. I do some of that myself. If it is the girl's own fault, I guess she would rip it out, but I don't know whether that [fol. 5140] happens very often.

Q. Is she paid for it, if it is considered her fault?

A. I don't know how that is taken care of. The instructor takes care of anything that comes up like that.

Q. Does the instructor consider it the girl's fault if she has the wrong thread?

A. I think it would be my fault, because I watch it, to see. As I go down the row, I glance to see whether or not the girl is using the thread she should.

Q. If she is not using the right thread, what do you do?

A. I ask her if it is a mistake, if she hasn't put on different thread than I told her to.

Q. And what then?

A. I don't know as there has ever been a disagreement. One of us will look it up; I will get the order out to see for sure whether it is the wrong thread.

Q. Do you handle something else besides threads?

A. Belt loops, waist tapes, shoulder tapes, Nellie Don labels.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think we will recess for 15 minutes.

(Recess was accordingly taken.)

* * * * * *

[fol. 5142] Q. Prior to July 15, 1939, did the company have a switchboard which was connected with telephones located at each section?

A. Yes, all the sections I have worked in has had a telephone.

Q. And that telephone is on a company switchboard, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Where is that phone located?

A. It is at the—well, in some sections it is on the wall and in some sections it sets on a table.

Q. The table it sets on is the instructor's table, is that correct? A. I think as a rule it is.

Q. Is there more than one table at a section when you refer to "the table"? Is it one given table?

[fol. 5143] A. It is the table, the instructor's table, that I have reference to.

Q. When that phone rings, who answers it?

A. The instructor or the floor girl in the section.

Q. You use the expression "on the floor of the Donnelly Garment Company," what is your understanding—

A. (Interrupting) What was that question?

(Thereupon last question was read by reporter.)

A. I don't know what you mean, I have used it.

Q. You say you went "on the floor"?

A. I mean when I was assigned as thread girl.

Q. When a girl says someone "went on the floor" does she mean merely she was a thread girl or also a kind of instructor, does it include one or the other or is it limited?

A. Well, I don't know, it would depend upon who the person was, I would think.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Is there a common word used by everybody which means the same thing?

A. I think that is just an expression, if you are working on the floor, whether there is no one working on the floor in the section, only the instructor and the thread girl directly in that section. When I said I was put "on the floor" I meant I went in the section as a thread girl.

Q. If a girl becomes an instructor would an operator say she went "on the floor"?

[fol. 5144] A. I suppose she could say it in that way.

That is the practice at Donnelly is it?

A. I don't know that I ever paid particular attention to that.

Q. Do you know whether the ferm "floor lady" means either an instructor or floor girl?

A. I have never heard anyone at Donnelly's referred to as a "floor lady".

Q. You don't use that term?

A. I never have, I have never heard it used down there.

Q. And if I told you the pay roll—or showed you the payroll with that term on it, you wouldn't know what it meant? A. No, I wouldn't.

Q. When you use the term "floor girl" is that used at Donnelly? A. Yes.

Q. Do you mean just a thread girl or could it also be used to mean an instructor?

A. I think that term is usually meant as the person who takes care of the thread, the thread girl, but sometimes referred to as a "floor girl" but it is one and the same thing.

Q. Your understanding is that it does not include instructor? A. Absolutely not.

Q. In other words, floor girl means the same thing as thread girl? A. That is the same term.

[fol. 5145] Q. But on the floor could mean either becoming an instructor or a thread girl, is that correct?

A. I would think it would be.

Q. Coming now to the March 18th meeting, was the committee composed of Rose Todd, Sally Ormsby and Hobart Atherton the only committee chosen at that meeting? A. So far as I remember they were.

Q. Do you have any recollection one way or the other?

A. So far as I can remember, it seems to me like that was the only committee that was appointed. I couldn't remember any others.

Q. Was that committee directed to do anything other than see a lawyer?

A. To my knowledge they were appointed for the purpose of seeking information as to what we could do under the law.

Q. Was that committee appointed before or after Mrs. Reed spoke?

A. I think it was appointed afterwards.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed tell you in her speech that the company laywers were looking into what could be done to protect the girls? A. I don't remember her saying that.

Q. Do you have any impression as to whether she did or not? A. I don't remember.

Q. When the committee reported to you at the next [fol. 5146] meeting, did they tell you they had taken any steps other than to see a lawyer?

A. To the best of my knowledge, the way I remember it, I believe they merely wanted to see a lawyer to see what we could do.

Q. Did they report to you that any committee of employees had taken any other steps to protect the girls?

A. Will you repeat that question?

(Thereupon last question was read by the reporter.)

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember of any other committee of employees taking any other steps during March to protect the girls.

A. I remember some girls with the petition going to Mrs. Reed to let her have known our opinion, if you could call that a protection, I believe we wanted her to realize in that way that we intended to remain working under the same conditions and the same methods.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5147] Q. All right, do you have a receipt for the fifty cents you paid?

A. I don't have it now, I don't believe. If I ever had one, I don't know.

Q. Do you keep receipts that you usually got for payments to the union?

A. No. I think I have my first union card receipted on it as to our payments; otherwise, it is on my check stubs.

Q. Were some of the assessments for the attorney put on your check stubs?

A. The assessment wasn't put on our check stubs, I donated mine, it wasn't taken out of my check.

Q. Later, others were raising money?

A. I never had it deducted from my check, my pay check.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5148] Q. Did Mrs. Reed at the meeting on March 18th express to you her appreciation for the petition you took out to her?

A. I don't know that she referred to the petition particularly, I know she expressed her appreciation of our loyalty.

Q. Do you recall one way or the other as to whether she mentioned the petition? A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you remember her making any remark directly or indirectly with reference to that petition?

A. No, I don't.

Q. She didn't mention the girls had come out to her home and given it to her a few days before?

A. I don't remember her mentioning it.

Q. I mean a few weeks before. You still don't recall that? A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you recall Mrs. Reed making any mention of the name "Dubinsky" at the meeting on March 18th?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you later learn that any committee of employees had taken any other action other than those you mentioned during March or April? A. What do you mean?

[fol. 5149] Q. Well, we know the committee went to see the lawyers and the loyalty petition was circulated and busses were provided. Do you know of any other action during either of those months? I didn't make my question too limited before.

A. I don't recall any particular committee at this time that did anything.

Q. Do you remember any group of employees who did anything to protect the employees?

A. Right now, I don't remember.

Mr. Ingraham: I think counsel should direct the witness' attention to whatever she is referring to, and ask the witness if she recalls whatever it is.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think she has the right to ask the witness whether she recalls anything else, Mr. Ingraham, I don't see anything unfair about that.

Mr. Ingraham: Counsel is referring to something, I suppose.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am sure I don't know, I am not asking the questions but I presume any counsel has the right to determine what the witness knows or recalls without even intimating what it is and then, of course, if the witness doesn't recall matters, I presume if counsel desires to they may refer to specific matters for the purpose of refreshing a witness's recollection.

[fol. 5150] Q. On some questions this morning you were asked whether any representative of the management did certain things, and you said "no". Who did you understand was meant by the term "representative of the [fol. 5151] management"?

A. I thought Mr. Ingraham was referring to Mr. Baty or perhaps Mrs. Hyde, they were the only ones I would come in contact with that to my knowledge that represented—they were the ones I looked up to that represented the management that I ever came in contact with.

Q. Those are the only persons you thought he had in mind and those are the ones, the only ones you were thinking of? A. Yes.

Q. And no one else? A. No.

Q. Did you know a Fern Sigler?

A. I didn't know her.

Q. Did you go down to the sixth floor to see Fern Sigler?

A. I went down to the door, I didn't go in.

Q. Could you see her from the door?

A. No, I saw there was a few girls over there, I thought I had been away long enough, I went back to the section.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5154] Q. Mr. Lane read you excerpts from certain minutes this morning or this afternoon. As I recall, one of the excerpts which he read was "if there are any people in here working, I would advise you to work very quietly." What did you think that sentence meant? A. I supposed—

Mr. Reed: Wait a moment. She isn't obliged to construe what a sentence meant or means in a document that is produced here or what she understood it to mean when she read it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, unless she has some understanding of it, she couldn't reply to it.

Mr. Reed: She could say she did not hear that statement. Now where the witness is asked what is meant by the statement involves a construction of what was meant by a statement in a document of purported minutes of a meeting—

Trial Examiner Batten: She explained it sometime this morning as I recall or this afternoon, she explained what she meant.

Mr. Ingraham: As I understood it she said that those things never were said.

Mr. Langsdale: That is what she said.

Miss Weyand: She also showed she had a certain understanding of that sentence when she made the answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean that was never said?

[fol. 5155] Mr. Langsdale: She said it was never said at the meeting on May 25th.

Miss Weyand: That is right.

Mr. Langsdale: He asked if there was anyone working around there.

Miss Weyand: That is right, I want to ask a question about it.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is a matter of the Greenhaw minutes?

Mr. Lane: That is right.

Mr. Langsdale: She said that it was never made at the meeting of May 25th.

Mr. Ingraham: The witness testified this morning that she never heard that statement made at this meeting.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is your objection, Mr. Lane?

Mr. Lane: I haven't made one yet but I am going to. I think it is a purely hypothetical examination as to what a statement would mean. If the witness had heard it made but the witness' testimony was that she did not hear that statement made.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, would you put that in the same category as the question "what was meant by 'no labor organization' in that petition?" She was asked to explain what that meant to her.

Mr. Lane: The words are there in that petition.

Mr. Reed: She had signed it.

[fol. 5156] Trial Examiner Batten: Supposing they are there. The witness has been asked the meaning of a certain word. Now what is the difference? If she can interpret it as to what it meant to her, why can't she interpret what Miss Weyand asked her or are we going to stop the witnesses from expressing an opinion on conclusions and suppositions and so forth?

Mr. Lane: Words mean something, depending upon the circumstances under which the witness has heard those words spoken or has understood them, but to ask a witness who says she never heard a certain word what they would have meant or what they did mean is just really speculative and hypothetical.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she has heard them now in the question, hasn't she? Can't she tell Miss Weyand what they meant to her.

Mr. Reed: Meant to her? When she says she never heard them!

Trial Examiner Batten: She heard them in the question, didn't she, Senator? I will overrule the objection. Mr. Reporter, will you read the witness the question?

Mr. Reed: We object.

A. Well, we were on the floor that was vacant. If we was having a meeting down there, it would be on a vacant floor. I don't see if anyone was working, I don't know—

[fol. 5157] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, what you mean to say is they don't mean anything to you, is that right?

A. It would be a funny thing to say on a vacant floor—

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you have any independent recollection of whether that was said or you just say you don't believe it was said because it was a funny thing to say?

A. I don't remember it being said.

Q. You are certain you don't recall that being said?

A. I don't remember it.

Q. You certainly were present at the meeting, the whole meeting? A. I missed very few meetings.

Q. You read the minutes of the May 25th meeting which were the genuine minutes according to your counsel and you said you remembered being at that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. You are certain you never heard such a remark made at that meeting?

A. I don't remember hearing that remark made.

Q. Do you say you didn't hear that?

A. I said I didn't remember.

Q. Are you just not remembering because you think it would have been a funny remark to have made?

A. I don't remember having heard it.

Q. Suppose I read you the sentence before that remark, [fol. 5158] inflected differently, would you tell me it would now mean something different than you thought the remark made: "That is raising their ante quite a bit in two weeks", referring to the C. I. O. Rose Todd has just read a clipping, about the C. I. O. getting members in the plant, "but I still can't feel they can sign up enough people here to call a strike. Any people in here working, I would advise them to work very quietly." Do you suppose she might have been talking about C. I. O. people working in the plant and not on the floor?

Mr. Reed: I object to that—the assumption that the words were spoken. The witness has said she did not hear those words, and the question is incompetent and immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, even if the witness were to answer something about them, it wouldn't mean nor would it even infer that this was done at the meeting.

Mr. Reed: That is the form of the question as I understand it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it wouldn't to me, I wouldn't even draw an inference if the witness were to explain the entire thing. I wouldn't draw any inference that it necessarily meant it was said at this meeting for it is all in a more or less general form.

Mr. Reed: Or said at any other meeting so that the witness is being examined now about something that nobody up to this time has said took place in this hearing and is asked to construe the language which she never heard.

[fol. 5159] Trial Examiner Batten: She has been asked to construe it as Miss Weyand gives it in her question. If the witness were to answer it, it would have no application to these minutes, the Greenhaw minutes, or to the fact that the witness was present at a meeting where it was said.

Mr. Reed: Then it is clearly incompetent and immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, it isn't, Senator. That is the reason why I said a moment ago that Miss Weyand had a perfect right to ask the witness what it meant. Now, the witness can explain what it means if she wants to and understands it.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, I think the question is completely and utterly speculative and hypothetical, but I have no objection to Miss Weyand asking this witness whether Rose Todd ever said anything which implied that Rose Todd was intimating that there were C. I. O. workers in there and that they were working—that she advised them to work quietly. I would be very glad to have the witness answer that question.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed, is there a question pending, Mr. Reporter?

Reporter: Yes, sir.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you restate the question, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: I will just read the quotes, I want [fol. 5160] her to now interpret it: "That is raising their ante quite a bit in two weeks, but I still can't feel they can sign up enough people here to call a strike. If there are any people in here working, I would advise you to work very quietly."

Mr. Stottle: May we have, may it be understood our objection still remains?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

A. I don't remember Rose Todd saying that particularly.

Trial Examiner Batten. The question is: What does it mean?

Miss Weyand: Was she referring to people working at something—machines—on that floor or do you think she was referring to C. I. O. members trying to organize people in the plant?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean assuming she said this, is that it?

Miss Weyand: If I read those two sentences together, would she understand them to refer to the C. I. O. people organizing in the plant rather than to people working on machines on that floor.

Mr. Lane: I certainly object to that as hypothetical. Assuming Rose Todd said this, what would be your interpretation, what she said, assuming she said it, that is not a proper question.

Mr. Reed: I object to it as incompetent and immaterial.

[fol. 5161] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't know. I thought I understood it, but I don't now. I mean it seems to me you are mixing it up, you said a moment ago that Rose Todd said—well, in the question that wasn't in there.

Miss Weyand: If Rose Todd had said these two sentences together instead of just the one sentence Mr. Lane read her which she thought was impossible because she thought it was silly, would she, taking the two sentences together, still say that second sentence meant what Mr. Lane read it to mean.

Mr. Lane: She can't say what Rose Todd might have meant because she wouldn't know Rose Todd's inflection. She would not know Rose Todd put a period and a break after that first portion and proceeded to a new subject or whether Rose Todd was speaking of that whole thing in connection with one subject matter.

Trial Examiner Batten: You might ask the question "Do you still beat your wife?" I presume it would depend somewhat on how you would say it, I don't believe it is a proper question, Miss Weyand. In other words, if the witness answers it, well, what about it? Supposing she said it meant what she said a moment ago or supposing she said "well, no, now that you have put your inflection upon it and so forth and changed it, now that doesn't mean that to me." Supposing she did, I don't see—

Miss Weyand: Mr. Lane read the sentence out of the context, I wanted to read her the two sentences and I will [fol. 5162] now withdraw the latter question and ask if she recalls Rose Todd ever making the two sentences together.

Mr. Reed: The witness has already answered that, it has all been gone over.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you ever recall their making this statement?

A. I don't remember she ever made that particular statement.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let's proceed.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Are you sure she didn't say that at the May 25th meeting?

A. I still say I don't remember hearing her say that.

Q. What was discussed at the May 25th meeting?

A. I don't remember exactly what was discussed at the meeting.

Q. Do you have any recollection of that meeting at all, except by looking at the minutes and saying you think you attended all the meetings so you must have been there?

A. I attended most all the meetings, I think I was there, when looking over the minutes they were in line with the way the meetings were usually conducted but as far as what anyone did at any one meeting outside of the raising of our funds and organizing our union, I don't remember anything particular that was taken care of.

Q. Did you think the Elsie Greenhaw minutes were not the right minutes because you didn't recall that sentence I read to you being in there?

[fol. 5163] A. It wasn't that sentence, it was the idea of the Loyalty League being discussed at the union meeting; we never held two meetings like that together at that time of day.

Q. You don't actually remember what occurred at the May 25th meeting at all?

A. I can state I do know we did not discuss the Loyalty League.

Q. Do you know anything that you did discuss at that meeting?

A. I couldn't name anything right now that we did discuss.

Q. Do you know what that meeting was called for?

A. It was called for a union meeting to take care of union business.

Q. You don't remember any business that was brought up there? A. Off hand, I can't say that I do.

Q. Do you know what date the contract of the union was entered into, the first contract?

A. No, it was shortly after we organized, I don't know what date it was.

Q. If I told you it was May 27th—would that refresh your recollection so you would know that was the day?

A. I wouldn't say it was that date in particular, I don't remember the exact date of the contract.

[fol. 5164] Q. Did you ever hear Rose Todd warn C.I.O. members to work quietly in the plant at any meeting?

A. I don't know as I did.

Q. Did you ever hear her make any remark of that general character?

A. I think her remarks were more to the promotion of our union.

Q. Did she ever discuss the matter of I. L. G. W. U. organizers visiting Donnelly employees?

A. I am not sure if was taken up at a meeting.

Q. Do you recall one way or another whether you heard her make any such remarks at a meeting?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you attend a meeting of May 11th?

A. If there was a meeting held May 11th, I imagine I attended it.

Q. Do you recall that is one of the meetings which Mr. Lane had you read the minutes—could we agree on that?

Mr. Lane: I think that is correct, yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. In those minutes occurs the remark with reference to Tyler: "He will have to be paid." That appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals Record at page 4409, the minutes of May 11, 1937. Do you recall that discussion of the May 11th meeting?

A. That one small expression? How was that used? [fol. 5165] That could have been used in a number of different discussions in that form.

Q. Quote from Page 4409 of the record, "you realize now that Mr. Tyler is representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and he will have to be paid. I expect a good many of you are wondering what he is going to charge." Do you remember that coming up at the May 11th meeting?

A. I remember that was discussed at one of our meetings, about paying Mr. Tyler.

Q. How would you explain such a remark occurring in the minutes of the May 11th meeting if Mr. Tyler had already been paid some fee?

Mr. Ingraham: I don't understand that question, will you repeat the question please?

(Thereupon last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Ingraham: Is there any evidence Mr. Tyler had already been paid a fee by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Miss Weyand: This is proper cross-examination. I don't think you should suggest to the witness the answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is improper at all if the witness doesn't understand the question—the question to the witness was "do you know why this would be brought up in this meeting? It is the last place, isn't it?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, if he has already been paid.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question?

(Thereupon last question was read by the reporter.)

[fol. 5166] Trial Examiner Batten: I think the question is poorly stated because it goes on the assumption that if a certain thing is true, how would you explain this? Isn't that right?

Miss Weyand: Yes, she has stated that there was $500 raised for Mr. Tyler. If the employees had given him $500 how would they be coming to this meeting and saying "we will have to pay him some way."

Trial Examiner Batten: Your question wasn't that to the witness.

Miss Weyand: I withdraw it and make my question what I have now stated.

Mr. Ingraham: Will you read the present question, Mr. Reporter?

Trial Examiner Batten: You are going to restate it aren't you?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. If the employees at the Donnelly Garment Company did, as you have testified, raise $500 at the end of March to pay Mr. Tyler, how do you explain that in the minutes of May 11th the two sentences appear: "You realize now that Mr. Tyler is representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and he will have to be paid. I expect a good many of you are wondering what he is going to charge."?

A. Well, the union had agreed to engage Mr. Tyler to represent us on the legal side of the affair and naturally, I would suppose we would have to pay him for his serv-[fol. 5167] ices. We wouldn't expect him to represent us and give us legal advice without having to pay him for it.

Q. Did you think he had already performed all the services that you expected him to perform for the first $500 which you paid him?

A. I didn't know, I hadn't thought about that being limited to any certain amount of performance. My idea was that he was to be engaged until we decided we didn't need him or until the time came that we didn't need his services any longer. Until that time I would naturally expect to be called upon to help pay for it.

Q. Was it ever explained to you at any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union how much legal services the first $500 you gave Mr. Tyler covered?

Mr. Lane: Are you talking about $500 paid by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Trial Examiner Batten: The first $500 I presume was raised in the last meeting of March.

Mr. Lane: Did she ask if it was ever explained in a union meeting?

Trial Examiner Batten: I assume it was explained in a nnion meeting how much service that $500 was to cover.

Mr. Reed: I submit all the evidence there is is a retainer fee.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, no matter what it was the question is very simple to this witness. That is [fol. 5168] how much services was he to perform for the $500, if she knows.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you know, Miss Witness, what he was to perform for the $500?

A. Well I hadn't ever given it a thought as to that, as far as how many hours work or anything like that, what it was to cover; I considered it was a regular retainer fee, I thought it was customary to pay an attorney a retainer fee when he took care of a case you had an interest in. I thought if it was something that was a long drawn out affair, as other matters came up, that would have to be met at the time they came up.

Miss Weyand: You considered that a long, drawn-out affair, did you?

Mr. Reed: She didn't say that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now just a moment, Senator, please! When the questions are asked if you have an objection, make an objection and state your reason.

Mr. Reed: Well—

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment, that wasn't an objection that you just made.

Mr. Reed: I think there is an objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: I can't interpret your meaning, will you state your objection, Senator?

Miss Weyand: I am going to ask the witness to be excused from the room—

[fol. 5169] Trial Examiner Batten: I don't want her excused.

Mr. Reed: Read me the question.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: I can't see how there could be any objection to that.

Mr. Lane: I have an objection to it on the ground that it is entirely indefinite and it is not at all clear to me. Miss Weyand says—

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment, please! The reason it is indefinite is because—that is the reason Miss Weyand is asking the witness what she meant by an indefinite statement, I don't want any further discussion of it.

Mr. Lane: I am objecting on the grounds the question is not clear.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection. The witness may tell us what she meant by that statement.

A. Well, I meant I expected this to be a long, drawn-out affair if the I. L. G. W. U. thought they was going to walk in on us and organize without any fight, I certainly expected us to fight it as long as it was necessary for us to fight it.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Tyler at the meeting of April 27th, 1937, making the following remark: I am going to page 4398 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record beginning with the bottom third of the page where Mr. Tyler has referred to the Wagner Act, he goes on "it says employees shall have the right to organize their own [fol. 5170] union. It encourages you to take such actions as I am now recommending. If the Wagner Act, certainly since it has been declared constitutional, is to extend its protection to you, it will by reason of your becoming unionized and fully recognize your rights to form your own union. I do not think this action can or will be considered as any act of unfriendliness to your employer. I believe they recognize your right to take this step and that it isn't an unfriendly act to them. In fact, it is much better for them and for yourselves for you to have your own union with your own representatives, rather than to have a group here trying to represent outsiders from New York, and another group here representing some other outside union, et cetera."

Do you remember that remark?

A. I remember him saying something about the Wagner Act at that meeting.

Q. Do you remember him telling you that it would be much better for the company if you workers formed your own union?

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you recall that, Miss Witness?

[fol. 5171] A. I don't remember those particular words being said.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you recall that idea being expressed to you by Mr. Tyler?

A. I remember that he was looking into the case on our behalf and he advised us he thought his entire presentation of the law, that it would be to our benefit and the way we was taking our stand as to—if we wanted to join a union of our own organization it was perfectly within the law and we had the Wagner Act to further insure our safety.

Q. Do you recall his telling you that it would be better for the company as well as for yourselves for you to have your own union rather than to have outsiders represent you?

A. I really don't remember him mentioning that part of it.

Q. You don't recall his stating any such idea to you?

A. I don't remember hearing at that time any thing about as to how the company would fare if we joined a union or not.

Q. Did you at any other meeting ever hear Mr. Tyler express to you that action he recommended for you would be better for the company as well as for yourselves?

A. I can't remember him seeming to protect the company in any of the action he proposed for us to take. In my belief, he was looking at it from our viewpoint.

Q. He never told you what he thought the company would think, was the best thing for you to do or what he thought was the best for the company?

[fol. 5172] A. I don't remember him bringing the company into it so much.

Q. I am going to read an excerpt from page 4432 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Record which is from the minutes of July 21st, 1937.

* * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. "After most careful consideration it is our opinion it would be to your benefit and, incidentally to the company's, to appear in court and as a union file an intervening petition asking that your rights as a union be considered in any decree the court makes. I want you to consider this and I will now turn the meeting back to Miss Todd."

Do you recall hearing Mr. Tyler express such an idea to you at any meeting?

A. I don't remember that but if he did express it in that way, I believe I would interpret his meaning. In my belief, it would be that he meant by intervening would simply strengthen the case to get an injunction; that would be my thought, rather than whether or not it complied with the company's wish, that it would be—that it would strengthen the suit.

Q. You knew the company was wanting to get an injunction, didn't you?

A. I believe I did have that understanding from the newspaper articles.

[fol. 5173] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, supposing the employees also wanted to get one, would there be any objection to their having a common interest to join in it?

Miss Weyand: I am asking her what she recalls.

Trial Examiner Batten: I asked if there would be anything wrong if they happened to have a common interest to join together, would there?

Miss Weyand: I don't think that requires an answer from me, does it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the only answer you could give is the one I would give, that it certainly doesn't. In other words, that is the difficulty, Miss Weyand, with some of these questions. The reason I say what I do about some of them is that, being very familiar with the Board's procedure and Board cases, I think I know perhaps what inferences are sometimes drawn from questions in Labor Board proceedings and where they are not entirely clear I want to make them clear.

* * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I believe you testified at the first meeting of the union you recall wearing your uniform, though at later dates or meetings, you didn't? A. I believe I did.

Q. I believe the reason was you stated that you were [fol. 5174] working a lot of overtime at that time.

A. I don't believe I mentioned any overtime in any of my testimony.

Q. Were you working a lot of overtime?

A. I couldn't say whether we were or not, we worked overtime sometimes but at other times, we don't. I don't remember.

Q. You have no recollection of March or April, 1937?

A. No, I can't remember that.

Q. Did you ever go back to work after a meeting?

A. No.

Q. Never at any time did you return to work after a meeting?

A. It was after working hours, I wouldn't have anything to go back to work for.

Q. Do you recall whether during March and April when girls were working overtime they would work overtime during each day of the week or just work overtime certain days of the week and not work overtime other days?

A. Well, I can't remember, that would depend upon what kind of work they were doing and how much there was of it.

Q. Was there any practice at that time with reference to working nine hours a day when you had a lot of work to do or did you just—

A. (Interrupting) If a particular operator's work was holding up the section and causing a delay in the work, it might be she would work overtime.

[fol. 5175] Q. When did the thread girls work overtime?

A. I worked overtime if the section worked overtime.

Q. And if the payroll should indicate that you were working overtime during these weeks, would that mean that all the girls in your section were working overtime or not?

A. No, not necessarily, if the girls didn't want to work overtime they never were required to. A girl always had that privilege when she completed her regular day's work if she didn't want to work overtime she had the privilege of not working any later.

Q. Would you work overtime if just one or two girls in your section were working overtime?

A. I don't know—I don't remember at that time one or two girls working in a section that I worked in.

Q. Would you ever work overtime when none of the girls in your section were working overtime?

A. No, there wouldn't be any object in me working overtime then.

Q. What is the fewest number of girls working that you recall?

A. I don't remember, specifically, when only a few of the girls was working. It seems to me like what time I worked overtime the entire section worked.

Q. Would you be able to tell from looking at the payroll record from the amount you were paid during those [fol. 5176] weeks and tell us how much overtime was being worked, I will show you what the payroll looks like.

A. I have never seen it, I don't know.

Q. Directing the witness' attention to Board's Exhibit No. 28-D being the semi-monthly payroll of time workers for the period of April 16, 1937, to April 30, 1937, which appears at page 4748 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, I am also going to ask the witness to look at the preceding payroll periods that contain her pay for those semi-monthly periods, being pages 4764, 4772, 4781, 4789 and 4794 and 4801.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you think she can do that in about six minutes?

Miss Weyand: I think she can glance at the pages and see the amount.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I will ask her first if she can explain the word "Rate 54.17" which follows her name on page 4748?

A. I suppose that is what my regular pay-check was.

Q. That would be your rate for two weeks?

A. Semi-monthly.

Q. Well—

A. (Interrupting) It wouldn't be for two weeks, it would be from the 1st to the 16th or from the 16th to the 1st.

Q. You notice the check you actually got for that period was $70.42, is that correct? A. That's right.

[fol. 5177] Q. It says twenty-six hours at 62½ cents, is that the overtime? A. I would judge that it is.

Q. Would you have any doubt about that being overtime that you worked those weeks?

A. I don't know what else it could be.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5178] Q. Is that about the amount you recall getting at that time? A. It could be.

Q. And the amount of the check about what you would get if you worked twenty-six hours overtime that week, is that correct?

A. This is semi-monthly, it wouldn't be twenty-six hours in a week.

Q. Twenty-six hours for the two-weekly period, is that correct?

A. Well, if that is the way they kept track of it I suppose so.

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, if the twenty-six means hours and the other means rate per hour, that would indicate then you were paid for twenty-six hours of time at rate of pay if that is what it means?

A. Yes, sir. That is all I can see it would mean.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5205] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did they have a large meeting on April 27?

A. Yes, they had a large meeting.

Q. Was Lena Tyhurst there?

A. She might have been. I don't recall seeing her.

Q. You know that she became a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, don't you?

A. I was under that impression. I didn't know it.

Q. Was Mrs. Anna Wherry there?

A. I don't know. I don't remember seeing her.

Q. You don't know whether she was or not? A. No.

[fol. 5206] Q. Was Lee Baty there?

A. I don't remember seeing him.

Q. Do you know whether he was there or not?

A. I don't know.

Q. Was Mrs. Reeves there? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know whether she was or not?

A. No. I didn't look around particularly to see who was there.

Q. You don't know whether any of those people were there; is that correct?

A. No. I didn't pay any particular attention to whether they were or not.

Q. So when you made this answer to Mr. Ingraham's question, on page 5043:

"Q. Did anyone whom you considered a boss attend that meeting?

"A. No, they did not."

you didn't know whether they did or not, did you?

A. I don't remember seeing them there, and I don't know.

Q. You don't know whether they were there or not?

A. No.

Q. So when you said, "No, they did not," in answer to Mr. Ingraham's question—

A. I believe he said, "Do you know whether they were [fol. 5207] there or not?"

Q. Let me read the question to you again. I don't want you to be under any misapprehension, Mrs. Mudd, about this,—

Mr. Reed: Now, I submit that this lecturing of the witness by counsel ought to be stopped. Let him ask the questions and—

Mr. Langsdale: I submit that the lecturing of counsel by the Senator ought to be stopped.

Trial Examiner Batten: Proceed with your question.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. I will read the question again.

"Did anyone whom you considered a boss attend that meeting?

"A. No, they did not."

Now, do you understand that question and answer?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Now, you say you don't know whether they did or not; is that correct?

A. Yes, that's right. I don't know that they were there.

Q. And you don't know that they were not?

A. I didn't see them.

Q. Did you see Dewey Atchison there? A. No.

Q. Did you see your instructor there?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Who was your instructor at that time?

[fol. 5208] A. I believe, Mrs. Cook.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5216] Q. Had you known Sylvia Hull prior to April 23? A. I never did know Sylvia Hull.

Q. How did you learn where to go to take a look at her on that date?

A. Well, I heard she worked up on the eighth floor, in section 412.

Q. From whom did you learn that?

A. Some of the girls in the section.

Q. Do you remember who? A. No, I don't.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, from the girls in your section?

A. In the section I worked in, yes.

Mr. Langsdale: Did you also go take a look at Fern Sigler?

[fol. 5217] A. No. I didn't go downstairs—I didn't go in downstairs. I—

Q. You went down and looked in?

Mr. Reed: Let her answer, please.

A. (Continuing) I went to the door.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. What door? A. On the sixth floor.

Q. What door was it?

A. There was only one door, I believe; right there where the steps are.

Q. That door leads into what?

A. I don't understand what you mean.

Q. Well, was the door opening out of the section?

A. I don't even know just where it was on the sixth floor she worked. I started in there and there were some girls in ahead of me, and I went back to my section.

Q. You said you went to "the door." Now, I am trying to find out what door it was.

A. There is only one door.

Q. Where does that door lead to? A. Into the room.

Q. You went to the door and looked into the room where Fern Sigler was at her machine?

A. I went and looked in on the floor. That is a large floor.

[fol. 5218] Q. Did you see Fern Sigler there?

A. I don't recall seeing her there.

Q. What did you see?

A. There were some girls ahead of me, so I just went on back upstairs.

Q. Any girls from your section ahead of you?

A. I don't remember who they were.

Q. Was there a crowd there that obstructed your view?

A. There were several girls in front of me.

Q. So you couldn't even see Fern Sigler?

A. I believe I said I didn't see her.

Q. Well, after taking a look at Sylvia Hull did you form any impression as to what kind of a girl she was?

A. I wasn't up there thinking about what kind of a girl she was. I wanted to see her, to see if I knew her. I didn't connect her name with any individual I had known and I wanted to see who she was, so I would know her if I saw her again.

Q. Did you make this answer on page 5058:

"A. I went up there to see what—when I heard that one of the girls that was working there had signed up with the I. L. G. W. U. and was going to a convention, I was curious to see what a girl would look like, when in my own mind that is silly."

Now, did you go up to see what that kind of a girl would look like?

[fol. 5290] A. I went up to see who she was and whether or not I knew her.

Q. You said here (indicating transcript), "I was curious to see what a girl would look like . . ."

A. I certainly thought it was a silly thing for anyone to go ahead and do something like that when they had a good job.

Q. Did she look any different from the other girls?

A. I don't know that she did, only it was my notion that it was an awfully silly thing to do.

Q. Therefore, you went down to see what kind of a looking human being would do that?

A. I wanted to see—

Q. Did she look crazy to you?

A. I didn't pass judgment on her.

Q. You did see Sylvia Hull, didn't you?

A. I went up there to see where she worked.

Q. While you were looking at Sylvia Hull, did you hear any conversation?

A. I didn't go up there and stare at her. I simply went up there to see whether or not I knew the girl, and then I went back downstairs.

Q. The question was, while you were looking at Sylvia Hull, did you hear any conversation?

A. I wasn't there long enough to hear anything.

Q. Did you hear any conversation?

[fol. 5220] A. I wasn't there long enough.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question was, Mrs. Mudd, while you were looking at her, did you hear any conversation? A. No.

Mr. Langsdale: And you didn't hear anyone demand her Loyalty League pin? A. No.

Q. Did you learn that had been done?

A. Afterwards I heard she had turned her Loyalty League pin in to someone.

Q. Did you hear that anyone demanded that she do that? A. No.

Q. You didn't hear that?

A. I don't remember hearing it.

Q. I believe you stated you were at the meeting of May 11, 1937. You read the minutes.

A. I believe those are the minutes I read the other day.

Q. And you were at the meeting of May 25?

A. I believe so.

Q. And you were at the meeting of April 27? A. Yes.

Q. Was there anyone taking notes of what was occurring at those meetings?

A. I don't remember noticing anyone in particular. I do remember that Majorie Green was our secretary, but [fol. 5221] as to just what meetings, or whether she took them at every meeting, I'm not sure.

Q. So you don't know whether she was taking the minutes of the organization meeting on April 27 or not?

A. I couldn't say for sure.

Q. And you don't know whether she took the minutes of May 11, 1937, or not?

A. Well, I couldn't say for sure that she did, but I was under the impression that after we organized she did start taking minutes at all of the meetings from then on, but I don't remember exactly as to when she did.

Q. Have you any kind of a recollection of her taking any minutes on May 11?

Mr. Reed: I submit the question has been answered fully.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer, whether she has any recollection of any kind of Miss Green's taking minutes on May 11.

A. I don't remember exactly whether or not she did.

Mr. Langsdale: Have you any recollection of her taking the minutes of May 25?

A. I really don't remember just any particular meetings, as to whether she took the minutes or not. I know she was our secretary, and I remember seeing her taking notes from time to time, but I don't remember at just what particular meetings. It was my impression she took them at all of them.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5222] Mr. Langsdale: But that impression is not based on anything you remember having seen; is that correct?

A. I don't know as it is. I know she was our secretary and I would just think she would take all of them.

Trial Examiner Batten: As a matter of fact, you know that was her job.

A. I know that was her job. She was elected to do it, and I supposed she did it. It was the job she was elected to do.

Mr. Langsdale: The meeting that followed the March 18 meeting—do you know who was there?

. . . . . .

A. I couldn't just name anyone that was there.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5223] Q. Was Mrs. Reeves there?

A. I don't remember. When I went to those meetings I went with the girls in the section. I didn't look around to see who was there other than the ones I went with.

Q. I am asking you if you know.

A. I don't know.

Q. Was Mrs. Wherry there? A. I don't know.

Q. Now, you say you usually went with the girls in the section. What do you mean by that?

A. I mean, the girls I work with. Naturally, you go with the ones you are friends with.

Q. On account of the elevator facilities did you go down by sections?

A. Well, I don't remember exactly. I know we got off from work and went over and got on the elevator and went down.

Q. Do you remember any meetings there where sections went together at a time because of the lack of elevator facilities for everyone to go at once?

A. We have always got off down there at intervals, the whole factory doesn't get off at the same time, so when you get off, naturally you would be going down in that way.

Q. Section by section?

Mr. Reed: She didn't say "section by section."

[fol. 5224] Trial Examiner Batten: The question to the witness was, "Section by section?"

. . . . . .

A. When we would get off, the ones that got off at that time would naturally go on down. The entire floor didn't get off at one time.

Q. You said, "in that way." In what way?

A. In the order you are dismissed from work. When your work is over, that is the order in which you go on home, or to your lockers, or wherever you are going.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5225] (Thereupon the last question by Mr. Langsdale was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Section by section?")

. . . . . .

A. I meant after we got through with our day's work we would go on about our business; we were free to do as we pleased or go where we pleased.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5227] Q. At any of the meetings, April 27, May 11, [fol. 5228] in July or August, or any other time, was it the practice that when your section got through working those in that section who wanted to go to the meeting would go together?

A. No, I couldn't say it was the practice to go as a section like that.

[fol. 5229] Q. In April, 1937, who were the clerks in the store where Mrs. Gray was?

A. Let's see. Well, there was—I didn't know all of them, by their names; one little girl there by the name of Ruth, but I don't know what her last name was.

Q. How many people were in that store?

A. Well, at times there were more than at others. I think probably—I don't remember exactly, but at noon and in the evening, when you would be going out, there would be more in there at that time, sometimes more in there; I think that probably there were three or four.

Q. Can you name any of them except Mrs. Gray?

A. Well, there was that little girl by the name of Ruth.

Q. That is all of her name that you remember?

A. I don't know her last name.

Q. Can you name anybody else, either part of their name or all of it?

A. Well, there was a girl in there by the name of Mary.

Q. Do you know who Mary was?

A. No, I can't think of her last name. I know it, but I just can't think of it; I do know her name.

Q. The only one's name you know is Mrs. Martha Gray?

A. I knew her by the name of Mrs. Gray, I didn't know her first name; there was another, Mrs. Murray.

Q. You didn't call Mrs. Gray by her first name?

[fol. 5230] A. I never did.

Q. But you do call the other girls by their first names?

A. They were younger girls, and Mrs. Gray was a lot older.

Q. And this demonstration around the machine of Sylvia Hull and the demonstration around the machine of Fern Sigler which occurred on the 23rd of April, 1937, do you remember that? A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. That was just four days before the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed? A. That is correct.

Q. And you learned that both Sylvia Hull and Fern Sigler, their employment was severed on that day, did you not?

A. I learned that they had resigned that day.

Q. Yes, on the 23rd. And you learned that the resignation grew out of the fact that they came to the plant with their I. L. G. W. U. pins on, did you not?

A. It was my understanding that they resigned because the other girls didn't want to work around them, and they just resigned.

Q. But they came to the plant with their I. L. G. W. U. pins on, you knew that, didn't you?

A. Well, I didn't know they wore their pins; that was in the paper about Sylvia, but I didn't hear about the pins.

Q. Didn't you hear that Fern Sigler had her pin on?

A. I don't remember hearing it.

[fol. 5231] Q. Did you learn anything about why the demonstration [—] around Fern Sigler's machine?

A. I didn't hear a whole lot about Fern at that time.

Q. You did hear that she had resigned, as you say, on that day of the demonstration around her machine?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you know why that demonstration?

A. The girls didn't want to work around her.

Q. Why?

A. They resented the fact that they had joined the I. L. G. W. U.

Q. I see. So, then, those two girls did leave the plant on the 23rd of April, 1937, because they had joined the I. L. G. W. U. You knew that, didn't you?

A. I heard that they left because the other girls resented them.

Mr. Langsdale: Because they had joined the I. L. G. W. U.?

* * * * * *

A. The rest of the girls around there felt they didn't remain very loyal to the girls, as co-workers. They were members of the Loyalty League, and we pledged our loyalty [fol. 5232] to one another as co-workers, and these girls went ahead and joined an outside organization. To all intention it seemed like they were representing us, and we didn't care for that representation.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You mean in the Loyalty League you had pledged your word to each other as co-workers?

A. Our loyalty to one another.

Q. And did that loyalty in your mind include not joining the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. At that time I think we had that in our minds, that at the time of this demonstration we also had reference to any other outside interference in our work.

Q. In your mind you felt they shouldn't have belonged to the Loyalty League and the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. I felt that I didn't want to belong to any outside organization; if I had, I wouldn't have felt like I would be a member in good standing of the Loyalty League.

* * * * * *

Mr. Langsdale: Did you think that that demonstration around Fern Sigler's machine and Sylvia Hull's [fol. 5233] machine and their subsequent resignations had anything to do with the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, four days later?

A. Well, we already had that—that didn't just come up from that one demonstration. We had already had Miss Todd and Hobart Atherton to go and see what we could do; it was not an afterthought of those girls being members of an outside organization that we didn't care to have any dealings with.

Mr Langsdale: Now, will you read the question, Mr. Reporter, and please try to answer it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Did you think that that demonstration around Fern Sigler's machine and Sylvia Hull's machine and their subsequent resignations had anything to do with the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, four days later?")

A. You make your questions so long and it is hard to understand.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you listen, and if you don't understand, you say so.

Read the question.

(Thereupon, the last question was reread by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed: Now, read the answer, please.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer, please?

[fol. 5234] (Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Well, we already had that—that didn't just come up from that one demonstration, we had already had Miss Todd and Hobart Atherton to go and see what we could do; it was not an afterthought of those girls being members of an outside organization that we didn't care to have any dealings with.")

Mr. Langsdale: I insist she answer the question, and if the Senator wants to read the whole record, let him read it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute. Will you read the answer?

(Thereupon the last answer was reread by the reporter.)

Mr Reed: I submit that is an answer, she says it was not because of this particular act, but there were others.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, did that have anything to do with it?

A. Why, it probably did have some, a little, maybe, to do with it, but we had already started getting into it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, then, Mrs. Mudd, you have testified that you didn't know anything about the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union until you went to the meeting on April 27, did you not?

A. I believe that my meaning was that I didn't know we were actually going to join the union that night, form [fol. 5235] a union, but we were going to see what we could do about it, but that was what came about.

Q. Haven't you testified you didn't talk to any person about the formation of a plant union until you got to the meeting of April 27?

A. I don't think I did talk about forming a union. At the time we talked about the things as they were coming up, but as far as talking about organizing a plant union, I don't remember it.

Q. Then, you hadn't already decided to form a plant union before April 27, had you?

A. I don't know as a plant union had been talked of; we were going to see what we could do, but there wasn't anything said about actually forming a plant union.

Q. But you hadn't talked about the forming of a plant union before these demonstrations at the machines of Sylvia Hull and Fern Sigler on the 23rd of April, had you?

A. I don't believe particularly that I had.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5239] Redirect Examination.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Mudd, will you state whether or not operators have the right to go up to the table and get a bundle themselves, if they happen to run out and you haven't given them a bundle?

A. Why, yes, they could go up and get a bundle, if they were out of work and needed it.

Q. Does that frequently happen?

A. Yes, I believe it does, quite often.

Q. State whether or not, to your knowledge, from July, 1935, to July, 1939, instructors had any authority to discipline operators in the section.

A. To my knowledge, they didn't have.

Q. During that period of time were the instructors the bosses of the sections in the sense that they could command operators to do certain work and punish them if they didn't?

A. No. It was Mr. Baty that did that. The instructors didn't have anything to do with disciplining the girls.

57, Tabulation relative to Comparative Earnings of Piece Work Operators—First Six Months—1937 and 1938	7131	4321

Q. During that period of time, will you state whether or not an operator who had a complaint about the kind of work she was doing would have that complaint acted upon by Mr. Baty?

A. Yes, she would go to Mr. Baty and he would take care of it.

Q. Did the instructor have any authority, that you [fol. 5240] could observe, to take care of complaints?

A. No, she didn't have.

Q. Now, after the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, did the union handle complaints for operators?

A. Yes, they went to the union about the complaints then.

Recross-Examination.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Mudd, was there ever any time when, so far as you know, an instructor said to you and the girls in your section that you were to go to a meeting as a body or as a section and stay together, and when that meeting was over to return to your section and resume work?

A. No, I never heard anybody say anything like that.

Q. Did that ever occur, so far as you know?

A. No, not as far as I know.

* * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Baty discipline a girl?

A. No, I don't know as I ever saw him.

Q. Did you know anything about sewing sections in 1935?

[fol. 5241] A. I never did sew in them. I don't know as I could say I knew anything about them.

Q. Did you have any information as to what any instructor's authority was in 1935 or theretofore?

A. I don't think I did.

ETHEL RIEGEL, a witness called by and on behalf of respondent Donnelly Garment Company, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Where do you live, Mrs. Riegel?

A. At the present time I live at 4321 Walnut.

Q. Where are you employed?

A. Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. How long have you been employed at the Donnelly Garment Company?

[fol. 5242] A. I went there in November, 1928.

Q. In what capacity are you employed?

A. I am a power machine operator.

Q. Do you work on any special machines?

A. Yes, I have run two or three special machines; straight sewers, binder, and pinkers, I think, is classified as a special machine, and double-stitcher. I think that is all of the special machines.

Q. Were you working at the Donnelly Garment Company during the months of March and April, 1937?

A. I was.

Q. Are you a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. I am.

Q. When did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. When it was first organized, in April, I think, 1937.

Q. Do you recall that that was on or about April 27, 1937? A. Yes, I think that's the date.

Trial Examiner Batten: Q. You joined at the first meeting?

A. The first meeting, where it was organized.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did anybody representing the management discuss with you prior to that meeting whether or not a union [fol. 5243] should be formed? A. No.

Q. Did any official or executive or anybody representing the management request you to go to that meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did you attend that meeting of your own free will?

A. I did.

Q. Do you recall the time of day that the meeting occurred?

A. Well, as near as I can remember, it was around 5 or 5:10 in the evening, after work. I don't remember. It was between 5 and 5:15, I think.

Q. Do you recall where the meeting was held?

A. It was on the second or third floor, but I wouldn't be positive. It was a vacant floor.

Q. Prior to the meeting had there been any strikes going on at other garment plants in Kansas City?

A. Yes, there had.

Q. Do you recall what plants had strikes?

A. Well, as I remember, it was Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri, I think.

Trial Examiner Batten: Those are three different plants?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: All in one building.

Trial Examiner Batten: The reason, I say that is, we have used those three names here so much, someone might [fol. 5244] get the impression that it is a firm name. I wanted the record to indicate that they are three separate companies.

The Witness: I meant three separate companies.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I know what you meant, but I wanted it clear for someone who might be reading the record.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibits 16 and 18, through 38, and ask you if you will state what newspaper articles contained in those exhibits you read.

I believe on the first exhibit, No. 16, there just appears some pictures at the bottom of the front page of the Kansas City Times of March 18. Do you recall seeing those pictures?

A. I remember the picture is this one (indicating)—exhibit 16, is that right?—in the Kansas City Times.

Q. Now, will you please go through these exhibits, beginning with exhibit No. 18, through 38, and state whether or not you read the articles?

A. I don't think I read the ones that appeared in the Post, unless it was just one or two. I didn't take the Post at that time.

. . . . . .

A. I didn't read 18, as I remember.

[fol. 5245] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did, or did not?

A. Did not.

And I don't remember reading 19, or 20 either, as I recall it.

I don't think I saw the pictures on exhibit 21; I don't remember it.

I didn't read 22 or 23.

I think I heard 24 discussed, but I don't think I read it. I think the girls I worked with—I heard them talking about it. It seems like I remember that.

I think I read 25. I read 26, 27, 28, 29, and 30.

I don't remember reading 31.

I didn't read 32.

I think I heard 33 discussed—talked about—but I don't think I read it.

34, I don't think I read that.

I don't remember reading 36. I might have, but I don't just remember whether I did or not.

Mr. Reed: Is that 36 or 35?

A. I remember this picture on the front, so I believe I did.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is that one, Mrs. Riegel?

. . . . . .

[fol. 5246] A. No. 36.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you skip 35, this page (indicating)?

A. Yes, I skipped that. I read that the first thing when I got to work that morning. I remember that one.

I read 37. I remember reading the headlines.

I read part of 38. I don't remember whether I read all of it or not. I don't think I read all of it.

Q. State what effect, if any, the reading of the articles that had reference to the strikes at the Missouri, Gernes, and Gordon plants had on you.

A. Well, to me they were disgusting; and then, also, they made me just a little bit scared that they might come over to our place sometime.

Q. Was there a general discussion of these articles by the employees at the plant?

A. Well, with the ones I worked around, I remember clearly that we did.

Q. What effect, if any, did these articles have on other employees, so far as you could observe?

A. Well, their attitude—the ones who talked to me, they felt just about like I did.

Q. Did you personally see any of the violence at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants?

A. Well, not over close. I rode down Main Street hill [fol. 5247] there, coming to work, and from work, and I could see crowds over there, but I couldn't distinguish anything or anyone.

Q. Now, at the meeting of April 27 when the union was formed, state whether or not there was any discussion at that meeting of what was going on at these other plants or had been going on, at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants.

A. Well, yes; that was the way I remember it. It was the general topic—most of it—we talked about. Some had seen them. They talked about different things about it.

Q. Did you vote to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I made the motion, as I remember it, to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Will you state why you voted to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. Why I voted?

Q. Yes. What were your reasons at the time, if you recall?

A. Well, I didn't want to belong to the I. L. G. W. U.—didn't have any desire or intention to, and I thought if we had our own plant union we would be a stronger body as a whole, to keep together, and we wouldn't have any such chance of being forced into anything like that—I didn't think they could.

Q. Why didn't you want to belong to the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. Well, I just couldn't see myself belonging to an organization that carried on that violence and had that [fol. 5248] attitude—trying to make people do things they didn't want to. I just couldn't do it, that's all. I didn't believe in it and I didn't want to belong to it.

Q. Did you vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union because of any suggestion or discussion on the part of anybody representing the management? A. No, I didn't.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you have any fear that if you did not vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union the company would penalize you in some way?

A. No, I didn't have any fear at all that way.

Q. Did any official, executive, or anyone representing the management discuss, to your knowledge, with any other employees the desirability of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I never heard any discussions of that nature, no.

Q. Did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will? A. I did.

Q. And have you remained a member, of your own free will? A. I have.

Q. I believe you stated that you read the article that [fol. 5249] appeared in the Kansas City Star on March 17, 1937, which is contained in respondent's exhibit No. 27. The article is entitled "Sitters Block a Door."

A. Yes, I think I stated I did.

Q. And I believe you stated you noticed the pictures that are contained on the front page of the Kansas City Times for March 18. This is respondent's exhibit No. 16 (indicating).

A. Yes, I remember seeing those pictures.

Q. Now, on or about that time was there a meeting of employees held—on or about March 17 or 18?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Did these articles which had appeared in the paper prior to the time of the meeting have anything to do with the holding of the meeting; do you know?

A. Yes, I think they did. I know I had—

* * * * * * *

A. (Continuing) I know I had seen the articles, and it was my idea that that caused the meeting to be held.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. State the purpose of the meeting, if you know.

A. As I remember, it was to see what we could do about securing legal counsel to help us out—to tell us anything that could be done to protect ourselves, as I remember it.

[fol. 5250] Q. Was there a general discussion among the employees about taking some action to protect yourselves from the violence? A. Yes, there was.

Q. Was there a general discussion that the International was going to use the same kind of violence against the Donnelly employees that was being used in the strikes at the Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri plants?

A. Yes. That was discussed, that it would be worse for us, as I got it, than it was at the other plants.

Q. Had other employees at the Donnelly plant personally seen the violence? A. Some of them had.

Q. Had any threats been made against the employees of the Donnelly Company by the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. I think some of them stated they had been threatened. I never was.

Q. Did any officer, executive, or anyone representing the management discuss with you the holding of this meeting?

A. No, not that I ever recall, as long as I was there.

Q. Did you go to the meeting of your own free will?

A. I did.

Q. Did any officer, executive, or anyone representing the management suggest or direct that you go to the meeting? A. No.

Q. Did you feel that you would be penalized by the [fol. 5251] company if you did not go to the meeting?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Do you recall whether or not Mrs. Reed appeared at that meeting? A. Yes, she did.

Q. Do you recall how she happened to come to the meeting?

A. Well, the way I recall it, someone suggested that Mrs. Reed come down to talk to us, and someone went out after her, and she came back in; I don't know who did it, but I remember seeing her there.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed make a talk? A. Yes, she did.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed say that she would close the plant if it was unionized? A. I didn't hear her say that.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed say she was not going to let Mr. Dubinsky tell her how to run her business?

A. I didn't hear her say that.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed make any statement with reference to employees joining or not joining any labor organization?

A. Well, the way I recall it, she told us we could do as we pleased, but she wouldn't permit Dubinsky to force her employees to join the union or do anything against their will—that we could make up our own minds.

Q. Did she mention anything about busses?

[fol. 5252] A. Yes, busses were discussed. I don't know whether someone asked her about it, but she told us she would try to secure busses. I know it was talked over and busses were provided later, and I rode the busses, but I don't just remember how it came up at that meeting—just what started it.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed read a letter from the union, the I. L. G. W. U., to the company, at the meeting?

A. I don't remember hearing any letter read.

Q. Do you recall whether or not the I. L. G. W. U. had circulated a pamphlet prior to this meeting? Do you have any recollection of that? A. Prior to the meeting?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I don't recall just whether they had or hadn't at that time.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 41 and ask you if you recall that the I. L. G. W. U. had people in front of the plant handing out circulars like this exhibit.

A. I don't know whether I read that or heard the girls talk about it; I couldn't say positively which. I heard about it, but I don't remember whether I read the pamphlet or not.

Q. Do you recall that the pamphlet was circulated by the I. L. G. W. U. at the plant, or handed out by the I. L. G. W. U. close to the plant?

A. That particular pamphlet?

[fol. 5253] Q. Yes.

A. Well, I either read it or discussed it, so I guess it was handed out there.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, do you remember whether it was handed out there? Was one handed to you?

The Witness: Not that I recall. It wasn't handed directly to me.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did the employees at the March 18 meeting appoint a committee to investigate what protection they could obtain? A. Yes, they did.

Q. Do you recall who was on the committee?

A. Yes, I do. It was Miss Todd, Hobart Atherton, and Sally Ormsby.

Q. Did you feel that you would be penalized by the management if you did not attend that meeting?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Now, after the meeting of March 18 and prior to the meeting of April 27, when the union was formed, did the employees hold any meeting?

A. Yes; we had another meeting to hear the report of our committee.

Q. Do you know when that meeting took place?

A. Well, the latter part of March. I don't know what date.

Q. By the way, with reference to the meeting of March [fol. 5254] 18, what time of day was that meeting held?

A. Well, between 5 and 5:15 in the evening, after work.

Q. Do you recall where it was held?

A. Well, the second or third floor; they were both vacant at that time. I don't know. I couldn't say positively which one.

Q. Now, this meeting you have just referred to the latter part of March, do you recall what occurred at that meeting?

A. Well, yes. We had a report of the committee and they said they had seen Mr. Tyler and talked to him and he would require a retainer's fee. And I know it was discussed at that meeting, how would we raise the money for this retainer's fee? I think it was $500. I don't remember all of the discussion about how the money would be raised, but I remember it came up and they said for each to donate 50 cents.

Q. Did you donate 50 cents? A. I did.

Q. Do you recall when you made the donation?

A. I threw mine up on the platform that evening.

Q. Now, the meetings you have mentioned, the March 18 meeting, the meeting the latter part of March, and the meeting on April 27, did you consider those Loyalty League meetings? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you attend the meetings thinking that they were Loyalty League meetings?

[fol. 5255] A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did anybody suggest to you or say to you that they were Loyalty League meetings? A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd presided at these meetings lead you to believe that they were Loyalty League meetings? A. No, it didn't.

Q. Now, the 50-cent donation that you have just mentioned, did you make that donation to the Loyalty League?

A. I made that donation for this retainer's fee.

Q. Did the Loyalty League have anything to do with it? A. No, not anything.

Q. So far as you know?

A. Not as far as I know. I didn't even connect it with the Loyalty League.

[fol. 5256] Q. Did any official or executive or anyone representing the management suggest that you attend the meeting that was held the latter part of March?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did you feel that you would be penalized by the management if you did not attend that meeting?

A. No, I never had that feeling.

Q. Are you a member of the Loyalty League?

A. I am.

Q. Did anyone representing the management suggest or direct that you join the Loyalty League?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did you join the Loyalty League of your own free will? A. I did.

Q. Do you recall what activities the Loyalty League engaged in?.

A. Well, they had, as I recall, an ice cream social, I know I was on one of the committees to help serve at an ice cream social for the Loyalty League, and I also served as one of their hostesses at one of their dances that they had at the Plaza Hall.

Q. Do you know of any activities that the Loyalty League engaged in that weren't social activities?.

A. No, I don't. I will state that I have attended Loyalty League picnics.

[fol. 5257] Q. Did you pay dues to the Loyalty League?

A. No, I never did.

Q. Did the Loyalty League raise its money to pay for its activities by making charges at the picnics and the dances?

A. I don't know just what you mean.

Q. How did the Loyalty League, if you recall, pay for a dance or a picnic if it gave one?

A. Oh, they sold tickets to the dances.

Q. Did you ever authorize the Loyalty League to represent you in connection with labor matters?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever hear of the Loyalty League representing the Donnelly employees in connection with any labor matters? A. No, I didn't.

Q. You never heard of it in any way dealing with the company in respect to wages and hours and conditions of labor?

A. No, I always took the Loyalty League that it was just purely a social organization, and never connected it with anything else, to my knowledge, that I ever knew of.

Q. Did the Loyalty League have anything to do with the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, it didn't.

Q. Did the Loyalty League hold meetings immediately following the meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I never attended such a meeting.

[fol. 5258] Q. Did the Loyalty League ever hold any meetings immediately preceding the meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you ever recall of any money being raised at a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting for any purpose of the Loyalty League? A. No, I never did.

Q. Did you ever hear of any business of the Loyalty League being discussed at a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting? A. No, I didn't.

Q. I believe you stated that you read respondent's exhibit 35, which is an article that appeared in the Journal-Post on April 22, 1937, the article entitled "Donnelly Worker will be sent to Union Convention"?

A. Yes, I read that, one of the girls down there had the paper.

Q. What effect, if any, did that article have on you?

A. Well, it really surprised me, and it also made me furious.

Q. Why did it make you furious?

A. Well, I knew Sylvia to speak to her, and knew her as—I never worked right with her, but I have eaten lunch beside her and all, and she didn't seem the type of girl to take action and do anything like that, and besides it made me furious to think she would represent a group, if there was a group in our factory that would take it upon themselves to represent us in any such meeting that the [fol. 5259] paper stated they were going to.

Q. Do you recall seeing in that newspaper article, which is respondent's exhibit 35, the statement: "Perlstein said the Donnelly Committee desired one of their members to appear at the convention and ask the International body to endorse and support a strike against their employer"?

A. Yes, I remember reading that.

Q. Did that statement influence you in your feelings at the time? A. Well, yes, it did.

Q. Did you want a strike called at the Donnelly plant?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Why didn't you?

A. Well, I was perfectly satisfied there as to my working conditions and the way everything was, and I didn't feel like I would participate in a strike, and I didn't want to have any part in it, and didn't want any of it where I was working, I didn't want to engage in any such carrying-ons.

Q. State whether or not you feared you might be injured if a strike was called.

A. Well, I didn't know whether I would get in there with all my clothes on or my hair on my head or what would happen to me; from reading the other articles, I didn't know whether I would be in one piece in there or not, if they did strike.

Q. State what effect that article had on other em-
[fol. 5260] ployees so far as you could observe.

* * * * * * *

A. Well, the way they talked, they felt just about like I did. Some of them were afraid, and some of them were indignant, and they were very much concerned, all of them that I talked to.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did that article influence you in voting in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union at the meeting of April 27th?

A. Well, yes, in a way it did. I felt like if we had our own union, that we would be the ones that would bargain for our company, and for ourselves, that there wouldn't be anybody else have a right to go to some convention and talk in our behalf on those things they didn't know anything about.

Q. What floor were you working on on April 23, 1937, if you recall? A. The eighth floor.

Q. The eighth floor. Was that the floor that Sylvia Hull worked on? A. Yes, it was.

[fol. 5261] Q. Did you work in the same section with Sylvia Hull? A. No, I didn't.

Q. That morning, April 23, 1937, did you see Sylvia Hull?

A. You mean when I saw her, or did I see her?

Q. Did you see her? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Will you state what you observed in connection with any demonstration that took place?

A. Well, the way I recall it, I was in 415; that was in the north end of the building; Sylvia was in 412, that was on the south part of the building and across the building. I would see girls going to and from her machine, some of them would maybe stop around there, but I never paid a lot of attention. Some girl came—I don't know whether it was from the section or not—but some girl stated, the way I got it, that some of them asked her what she was doing with the Loyalty League pin on if she was representing the I. L. G. W. U., and she made the remark that she would give the Loyalty League pin back if they would give her her 35c.

And that section right over next to our section—we called ourselves the under-armers, we girls that did under-arming in our sections, we girls made up the money, 35c—I don't know where it came from, to give to Sylvia, her money for her pin, and they wrapped the money up and brought it up on our end of the table and wanted to know who would take it over there, and I said, "I will take it over there," and so I took it over there and laid [fol. 5262] it down on her machine in front of her, and I said, "Sylvia, here is the 35c that you wanted for your pin," and she didn't raise up her head, just mumbled something—I don't know what she said, and she laid the pin on her desk and I picked it up and took it back over to the section, and I don't recall just what I did do with the pin, whom I gave it to.

Q. Did you hear anybody threaten Sylvia in any way?

A. Well, I don't recall it if I did.

Q. Did you hear anybody say, "Let's throw her out of the window," or anything like that?

A. No, I don't recall hearing anything like that.

Q. Did you see anybody push Sylvia or strike Sylvia?

A. No, when I went over there, Sylvia was sewing.

Q. State whether or not operators that were on the floor at the time made any remarks to the effect that they weren't going to work so long as Sylvia remained there?

A. Yes, I think I heard that statement.

* * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

[fol. 5263] Q. When you stated "you think so", do you mean to say, that you do recall hearing some operators make that statement?

A. Well, I believe I have. I don't remember whether I made it myself, but I might have; but I don't remember whether I did or not, but I could have, I felt like it.

Q. Well, did you hear other operators make a statement to that effect?

A. Well, I just wouldn't be positive how they worded it.

Q. But something was said to that effect?

A. Yes, the girls were just as indignant as I was, and I know we talked the situation over, three or four that went over there when I went, that I worked with.

Q. Did you hear Sylvia make any statement at all?

A. No, I didn't. When I told her that there was her 35c, she tipped her head down and mumbled something, but I couldn't distinguish what she was saying, and I never heard her make another statement; she was talking, but it was low, and I really never did know what she said when I gave her her money.

Q. State whether or not you wanted to work if Sylvia remained there at work?

A. Why, I didn't want to work there with her; I don't think I would have had I been in the section with her.

Trial Examiner Batten: You weren't working in her section?

A. No. There was three sections in a row, and there [fol. 5264] was a section between her section and mine, but she faced me, and I faced that way (indicating); we faced each other, but the length of the building was between us.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit No. 6, which appears in the Circuit Court record at 4864, and ask you if you recall reading that article that was contained in the Kansas City Times of February 26, 1937.

A. Yes, I read that.

Q. Do you recall reading the statement: "The union claims only 25 members among the Donnelly workers, but officials said hundreds of others were related to union members. Within a year we will have it completely organized, Mr. Perlstein said, as soon as we have enough members we will call a strike." Do you recall reading that? A. Yes, I do.

Q. And the further statement: "This will be in addition to carrying our side to the consumers." Do you recall reading that? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Well, what effect, if any, did that article have on you?

A. You mean about the I. L. G. W. U. members already in our plant?

Q. Well, the whole article, including the statement there were 25 members in the plant, and as soon as they had enough, they would call a strike?

[fol. 5265] A. Well, I don't really just understand what you mean, what effect it had on me.

Q. Well, did that article have any effect on you with respect to how you felt towards the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. Oh, it sure did, that didn't change—I never did want to belong to any I. L. G. W. U., and that made me worse—made me want to less than ever, or worse than ever, just whichever way you want to put it. I can't just state how I felt about it.

Q. State whether or not other employees at the plant discussed that article.

A. Well, I know the ones that sat around me did.

Q. What effect, if any—so far as you could observe, did this article have on other employees?

A. Well, the way I got it, they felt just about like I did.

Q. Do you recall a petition being circulated a few days after that article appeared in the paper?

A. Well, I recall the petition being circulated, I guess that is when it was.

Q. I hand you—

A. (Interrupting) I remember one being up there.

Q. (Continuing) I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 10, that appears in the Circuit Court record beginning at page 5961, and ask you if you recall signing a petition that had the statement at the top of it, that appears in this exhibit. A. Yes, I do.

[fol. 5266] Q. Will you state how you happened to sign that petition?

A. Well, yes, I recall that petition. It was brought up into my section at that time, and I was still in 415, and I remember the two girls bringing it up. There were two rows, and I was on this row (indicating) but I don't remember what time of day, whether it was at lunch time or early in the morning, I couldn't say, but I know we usually gathered at one end—it was either lunch time or in the morning, I can't recall which. We gathered at one end of the section before time to go to work, to talk, you know, and to discuss things, and we went to our machines, and I remember it coming on the other row, and I went over there when the group was around them; I knew this Mary Sprofera, I didn't know the red-headed girl's name, but I had seen her; and I was over to my end of the row, and I went over to where the whole bunch was reading it, and I know I read it and I signed it over there at that time. I remember that very clearly.

Q. Did you sign the petition of your own free will?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did any officer, executive or anyone representing the management discuss with you anything in connection with this petition?

A. No, they didn't with me, I don't remember them saying anything to me; I don't recall anyone—I don't [fol. 5267] remember any executives there when I seen it, just a bunch of we girls, and I just signed it when those girls signed.

Q. Who handed you the petition, if you recall?

A. Well, I can't state whether Mary handed it to me, or whether some girl signed it and handed it to me, who had signed before me. I just wouldn't know. We were all gathered up there together.

Q. Was there anything said by Mary with respect to whether or not you should sign it or not sign it, as you remember?

A. She told us to read it over and to sign it if we wanted to.

Q. Did you feel that you would be penalized in any way if you did not sign the petition?

A. No, I never thought of that. I wanted to sign it; it expressed my feelings better than I could put it in words, and that is just what I wanted.

Q. There is a statement in the petition: "And refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization." Why did you want that?

A. Because I didn't want to belong to any labor organization outside of—

Mr. Langsdale: Will you read that answer?

Mr. Ingraham: She hasn't finished it.

Trial Examiner Batten: She hasn't finished it yet.

A. What made me want to sign, I didn't want to belong [fol. 5268] to any I. L. G. W. U. or any labor organization of that kind, that is the way I felt.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did the strikes that the I. L. G. W. U. engaged in influence you in any way in not wanting to belong to the I. L. G. W. U.? A. Well, yes, they did.

Q. Did you want Mrs. Reed to know that was the way you felt? A. I sure did.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5269] Mr. Ingraham (Continuing): Did you read or [fol. 5270] understand these garment companies which were involved in strikes with the I. L. G. W. U. had signed up with the I. L. G. W. U. and the employees were forced to join the I. L. G. W. U.?

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Do you understand the question?

A. Yes, I think I understand what you mean.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if you understand.

A. I think what he asked, he means did I read about some other company doing that, or heard about it?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5271] A. Well, I think I have, but I wouldn't say positive whether I read it or had heard it, but I think I have heard that discussed or read about it.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5272] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I want to direct your attention to the petition of March 2 that I asked you about this morning. You recall that petition? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Was that petition circulated by the Loyalty League?

A. No, it wasn't connected with it, to my knowledge, in any way.

Q. Did you know Rose Todd? A. Yes, I did.

Q. State whether or not you considered Rose Todd a boss of any kind. A. No, I never did.

Q. Did you know of any authority that Rose Todd ever had to direct other employees in anything?

A. No, I never did.

Q. Did you consider that Rose Todd had authority to speak for the management with respect to labor matters? [fol. 5273] A. No, I didn't.

Q. State whether or not instructors had any authority to hire, discipline, or discharge employees from July, 1935, to July, 1939.

A. Well, I never knew of it, if they did.

Q. Did you consider an instructor a boss?

A. No, I never did.

Q. Did you feel that because instructors joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that that meant that the company was sponsoring the union?

A. No, I never did think the company was sponsoring the union.

Q. Did employees use the telephones at the plant?

A. The telephones?

Q. Yes. At the plant.

A. Yes; I have used the telephones.

Q. Has that been permitted as long as you have worked at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. As long as I have been there, I have always used the telephone when I wanted to.

Q. Do the employees at times use the sewing machines for some personal purpose?

A. You mean for themselves?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I never did. Oh, I've put a hem in a dress, or [fol. 5274] sewed up a seam in a dress that was ripped, or something like that. I don't know about the others.

Q. The company never objected to that?

A. They never did say anything to me.

Q. Do employees frequently pass papers down the sections?

A. Well, that is just about an everyday occurrence.

Q. Has the company ever objected to that?

A. No, they never did.

Q. Did an instructor direct or suggest that you attend either the March 18 meeting or the meeting the latter part of March or the meeting of April 27?

A. They never instructed me to attend any meeting.

Q. Have they ever suggested or instructed you to attend any union meeting? A. No, they never have.

Q. Has anybody representing the company ever suggested that you go to any union meeting?

A. They never did.

Q. Have you gone to union meetings of your own free will? A. I always have.

Q. Without any suggestion on the part of any official or executive of the company?

A. They never did suggest my going.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5275] Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Riegel, I have heretofore shown you, for purposes of refreshing your recollection, Board's exhibit No. 1-RRRR, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 3471 and following. I will show you the fourth page of signatures of that offer, being page 3477,—

* * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Now, will you look at the 11th name in the right-hand column and state whether or not that is your signature?

A. Yes, that is my signature.

Q. Did you sign that offer of proof?

A. I did.

[fol. 5276] Q. Was there any influence or suggestion or any action taken by the employer, so far as you know, in connection with calling the meeting of March 18, 1937?

A. No, there wasn't, to my knowledge.

Q. Was that meeting called by the employees on their own initiative, so far as you know?

A. So far as I know, it was.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed say at that meeting that she would not allow members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to work at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I didn't hear Mrs. Reed say that.

Q. You heard Mrs. Reed speak there, did you?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you hear all of her speech?
A. I was there during all of it.
Q. You were there when she came in and when she went out?
A. I was.
Q. Did she say in that speech that she would not allow I. L. G. W. U. to be in her plant?
A. No, I didn't hear that.

By Mr. Lane:
Q. Did she say she wanted the names of anyone who joined the I. L. G. W. U. reported to her?
A. I didn't hear her say that.
[fol. 5277] Q. Was anything said at that meeting about providing busses for employees to ride in?
A. It was discussed and talked about.
Q. Do you know when busses were first furnished?
A. No, I don't.
Q. Did you ride the busses?
A. I rode them home every evening, I think, as far as they went, and I think I rode them a few mornings, but not all mornings. I rode with a neighbor lady and sometimes we would get out at Thirty-first and Main, where we caught the busses. But I always rode back to Thirty-first and Main.
Q. When you didn't ride the busses what means of transportation did you have to get to work?
A. I rode with a neighbor lady. Her husband brought us down.
Q. Did you personally have any fear of violence from the I. L. G. W. U. that was conducting these strikes over at Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri during the time the strikes were going on?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. What was your belief, based on your conversations in the plant and from what you read in the papers, as to whether the I. L. G. W. U. intended to visit the same sort of disorder upon the employees at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Well, that's the way I took the readings and the conversations I heard. At least, I was afraid that was [fol. 5278] what they were going to do.

Q. Did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will?

A. I did.

Q. At the time you joined it did you have any belief in your mind that you were being coerced, intimidated, or dominated by the Donnelly Garment Company to take the action you took in helping to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I didn't have that feeling.

Q. Do you know of anything that the company ever did that you thought was an instance of domination or pressure or control on the part of the company over you or the other employees in connection with forming any labor union or staying out of any labor union?

A. None of the officials or anyone ever talked to me and I never had that belief.

Q. Now, when you made the motion on April 27, 1937, to form an independent, unaffiliated plant union, did you think that you were taking that action on behalf of the Loyalty League?

A. No. I didn't connect the Loyalty League with it in any way.

Q. Who was Arch Lile?

A. I don't think I knew him—where he worked—I don't think I did.

Q. Did you know Lena Faulconer?

[fol. 5279] A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did she do?

A. She was a hemmer.

Q. A machine operator?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Eva Liebermann?

A. Yes, I know Eva.

Q. What was her position?

A. She was an operator.

Q. Do you know Lyle Jeter?

A. Yes, I knew Lyle.

Q. Do you know what he did?

A. He was a mechanic.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Riggs?

A. Well, I knew of Mrs. Riggs. I didn't know her personally.

Q. Had you seen her about the plant?

A. I had seen her to know who she was.

Q. Did you know Carl Crawford?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he do?

A. Well, he worked in the cutting department, so far as I knew.

Q. Did you know Cordelia Taylor?

A. No, I didn't.

[fol. 5280] Q. Did you know Leona Moore?

A. Yes.

Q. What did she do?

A. She was an operator.

Q. Was there any one of the persons whom I have thus far mentioned you regarded as being a representative of the management or as being entitled to speak for the management in directing the activities of any other employees or to speak for the management in labor matters?

A. No, I didn't regard them as such.

Q. Did you know Ellen Nokes?

A. I don't think I did.

Q. Did you know Virginia White?

A. I don't think so. I don't recall the name now.

Q. Did you know Fred Brown?

A. Yes, I knew Fred.

Q. Did you know Sally Ormsby?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know Mamie Riddle?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know where Fred Brown worked?

A. Well, in the cutting department.

Q. Where did Sally Ormsby work?

A. She was an operator, but I don't know what section [fol. 5281] she worked in.

Q. What about Mamie Riddle?

A. Mamie was an operator.

Q. Did you know Anna Richards?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you know Marjorie Green?

A. I knew Marjorie when I saw her.

Q. Do you know where she worked?

A. She worked in the office.
Q. Did you know Jack McConaughey?
A. Yes.
Q. Where did he work?
A. In the mechanics' cage.
Q. Did you know Hobart Atherton?
A. Yes.
Q. What did you observe him doing around the plant?
A. Well, I never knew what Hobart did—exactly what his job was. I always thought he worked in the mechanical department, down in the parts and things.
Q. Did you know Charlotte Casey?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. What did you observe Rose Todd doing around the plant?
A. Well, I don't know just what I would consider Rose's job, other than—
Q. Tell what you saw her do.
[fol. 5282] A. I have seen her come in our section and—maybe there would be an old bundle or a cut of dresses that was held up that we would have a recut out of, or something, and she would hunt up those old bundles, or maybe parts of them.
Q. Did you ever have the opinion, from what you saw Rose Todd do, that she was being held out by the management as a representative of the management, entitled to speak for the management in labor matters?
A. No, I never did.
Q. Did Rose Todd ever say anything to you, or did anybody else ever say anything to you that indicated that Rose Todd represented the management or was a boss or supervisor?
A. No.
Q. Was that true of all of the other persons whom I inquired about just before asking about Rose Todd?
A. Yes, that is true.
Q. Did you know Hazel Saucke?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Do you know what she did?
A. She was an operator.
Q. Did you know Anna Reese?
A. Yes.
Q. What did she do?

A. She was an operator.

Q. Was there anybody who took any part in the meeting [fol. 5283] of April 27 who, in your opinion, occupied a supervisory status or position of a straw-boss or position superior to that of other employees?

A. No.

Q. Did you attend the meeting of May 11, 1937?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. I will ask you to state whether this was said, in substance, at that meeting:

"You realize now that Mr. Tyler is representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and he will have to be paid. I expect a good many of you are wondering what he is going to charge. I talked to him in some detail, and I am sure you will feel that he is quite right in the answer he gave me. He doesn't know what his answer will be, because it depends on how much trouble we cause him and how much work he will have to do for us.

"The union does have to be self-supporting in every detail. Being a thoroughly reliable group of employees, we can take care of our own financial obligations."

Did Rose Todd say that, or that in effect?

A. Yes, I remember that she did.

Q. Did you attend the meeting on May 25, 1935?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember whether or not at that meeting Rose Todd read an article appearing in the noon paper of [fol. 5284] that day, which referred to an interview claimed to have been had with Meyer Perlstein, in which he was asserted to have said:

"'. . . the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union opened headquarters at 1022 Baltimore Avenue today to organize,' he says, 'the Donnelly Garment Company.'

"'We will open with an advertising campaign through newspapers and radio against the patronage of garments manufactured in the Donnelly plant,' Perlstein said. 'Six girls now are undergoing training to travel from coast to coast visiting storekeepers handling the Donnelly garments, urging them to stop handling the Kansas City product. If the store operators refuse to comply, their stores will be picketed.'

"'As membership of our union in the Donnelly plant increases, a strike will be called. In such a case additional money will be required and we are ready to spend $250,000 to accomplish our goal, and that amount is ready.'".

Do you remember that article from the paper being read at that meeting?

A. Yes, I recall it.

Q. Was there anything discussed in that meeting of the union about raising money for the Loyalty League?

A. No, there wasn't.

Q. Did you ever at a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union discuss ways and means of raising any [fol. 5285] money for the Loyalty League?

A. No, we never did.

Q. Was there ever a time when a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was followed immediately by a meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. Not that I ever remember.

Q. Did you go to the meetings in March and April in your uniform, or did you dress before you went?

A. Well, I can't recall whether I always dressed or whether I didn't. I just can't remember.

Q. Did you sometimes go to the meetings in your uniform?

A. Well, I just don't remember.

Q. Do you recall at what hour your working day was finished in March and April of 1937?

A. Well, if we didn't work overtime, it would be 4:10 or 5:10.

Q. Was there ever a time in 1937, or any other time, when you were ordered by your instructor to go with the other members of your section in a body to a meeting and to stay together as a section and to return to work after the meeting was over?

A. No.

Q. Did that ever occur, as far as you know?

A. I don't remember anything like that ever occurring.

Q. Have you ever made a complaint since the forma [fol. 5286] tion of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union with respect to piecework prices, or any other matter involving your work, to a representative of the union?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Are you able to fix the date of it?

A. No, I wouldn't know the exact date.

Q. Do you know whether it was before or after July 15, 1939?

A. No. I just couldn't recall.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5288] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you, from the time the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed up to July 15, 1939, continue to belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will and choice?

A I did.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Were you working at the Donnelly Company at the time the Loyalty League was organized?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Do you remember how it was organized?

A. How?

Q. Yes, what occurred.

A. You mean at the meeting it was organized?

Q. Is that the first you heard of the Loyalty League, at the meeting?

A. I don't understand your question.

Q. I just wondered what was the first you heard of the Loyalty League and what steps you knew that were taken to organize it.

A. Well, we had a meeting when it was first organized as a whole.

[fol. 5289] Q. When was that meeting?

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, I have heretofore objected to matters going as far back as 1935 or thereabouts, on the ground we were precluded from inquiring into those matters under Your Honor's ruling, and I object to Miss Weyand going back to matters as far as 1935.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, of course, if you were precluded, why did you continue to ask questions about that?

Mr. Lane: I didn't ask any questions about 1935.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, you have asked questions concerning the events of Rose Todd and all those various people, whether they were ever supervisors, without any restriction at the time. Of course, it doesn't make any difference, because I haven't placed any restriction on the Loyalty League of any kind at any time in this hearing.

• • • • • • •

Trial Examiner Batten: I'll overrule the objection.

Mr. Reed: I want to make an objection, or rather, I am asking for information just now. Are we to understand that as to the Loyalty League, all the events leading up to its organization and its organization back in 1935 are to be received, but not what the company did in the conduct of [fol. 5290] its business, or what the scope of authority the employees had in conducting the company's business, is cut off in 1939?

Now, it seems to me those two rulings are contrary to each other, and that either all matters back of the filing of the charges here — wait one moment until I get that straight. Either all the matters that happened back there in 1935 are out on both sides, and with reference to everything else, all that took place is competent, and that you can't — that for the purposes of the prosecution here you can go back to 1935; but when the company comes to its defence, that time is cut off at 1939. I don't think that those two rulings can stand together.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think, Senator, if that was the ruling I would agree with you. Do you have an objection to this question?

Mr. Reed: I object to it for the reasons I have given in this colloquy, and I am asking Your Honor now if you want to clarify this situation.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think it needs any clarification, Senator. I think if you will go back in the record, the day we were discussing it, when I made the ruling, and it is very clear, I have gone over it a couple of times, and I think it is very clear in the record what was covered in the ruling.

• • • • • •

[fol. 5291] Mr. Langsdale: The Court of Appeals ordered you to come back and take the testimony on the offers of proof, which you denied; on page 23 of respondent's offer of proof, with respect to the Loyalty League being organized as a social organization and remained such clear up to the time of the trial, they offered to prove it, and you wouldn't let them prove it, and the Court of Appeals told them they could prove it. That is the reason Your Honor ruled that way.

Mr. Reed: No, the Court of Appeals didn't tell them any such a thing.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is there a question pending? I'll have it read then, Senator, and if you have an objection to the question —

Mr. Reed: I object to it, because I say it is outside of the restrictions and rulings of the Court, denying us to go back to certain specified dates.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. When was that meeting?")

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer. You are referring to the organizational meeting?

Miss Weyand: The one she mentioned. She said the first she heard of it was a meeting.

[fol. 5292] A. I said the formation of it.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I see. What was the first you heard of the Loyalty League?

A. Well, the first I considered it as a body, as a whole, was when it was formed.

Q. Had you considered it as an individual before that?

A. As what?

Q. As an individual. You said you considered it as a body when it was formed.

A. Well, when we formed it, we grouped all together, where before we were just little organizations amongst ourselves.

Q. Now, when you refer to it as being little organizations, what do you refer to?

A. Well, I mean our clubs, our section clubs.

Q. Do you know what arrangements were made to form those section clubs into the Loyalty League?

A. What arrangements?

Q. Yes.

A. No. I don't remember clearly.

Q. When did you first learn they were going to form a Loyalty League?

A. When?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I don't remember that hardly, as to date.

Q. Do you know?

[fol. 5293] A. You mean as to the exact date?

Q. Well, was it before the large organization meeting to which you referred?

A. Well, it was when we had that meeting.

Q. Did you know of it before you went to that meeting?

A. Well, probably that day, or it might have been the day before, I don't remember.

Q. Do you know anything of a meeting of 40 people at Mrs. Gray's home? A. Yes, I was there.

Q. You were at Mrs. Gray's house? A. Yes, I was.

Q. Will you tell me what took place at that meeting?

A. No, I can't exactly. I just don't remember.

Q. They did discuss forming the Loyalty League at that meeting, did they?

A. Well, I couldn't say whether that was before we formed it or after we formed it. I really just don't remember.

Q. How many meetings were you out at Mrs. Gray's house?

A. Well, I never was but to one that I remember of.

Q. Were there representatives from each section present at that meeting? A. Well, I really can't say.

Q. Did you go there as a representative of the club in your section?

[fol. 5294] A. I couldn't say. I did.

Q. Do you remember whether that meeting was in the afternoon or the evening? A. At Mrs. Gray's?

Q. Yes. A. Oh, it was at night.

Q. Do you remember the names of any other persons present at that meeting?

A. Well, one girl I remember, that I know, she was there, I sat by her, Kathryn Chandler.

Q. You say you sat by her. You mean you sat by her at Mrs. Gray's home, at the meeting?

A. That is the only one I really do remember.

Q. Do you remember whether notes were taken at that meeting? A. No, sir, I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember who presided at that meeting?

A. I sure don't remember that clearly. I don't know.

Q. Did you prepare a pledge to circulate among the girls at that meeting? A. I don't remember.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5296] Q. I am asking you to look at Board's exhibit No. 2, at pages 4362 and 4363 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, asking you to direct your attention to the article "900 Join Loyalty League", and ask you if you ever read that before.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I understand respondent has a continuing objection to this exhibit.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is my understanding, Mr. Ingraham.

A. I remember of attending that meeting where the word "Loyalty" was discussed.

[fol. 5297] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Have you read this article before?

A. Well, I am not sure.

Q. Do you know whether the meeting of February 5, held at the home of Mrs. Gray, is the meeting you attended?

A. I couldn't be sure. I attended a meeting there but I just can't be sure. I never attended but one, I never was at Mrs. Gray's house but once in my life.

Q. Do you know how you were invited to Mrs. Gray's house? A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember whether Mrs. Strickland was there? A. I just wouldn't know.

Q. Do you know who Mrs. Strickland is?

A. I know her when I see her, but, you know, I never met her personally, but I know where she works, on what floor.

Q. Do you remember whether cards were passed out at this meeting at which the meaning of this "Loyalty" was explained?

A. I just don't remember a lot about that meeting, it is so vague in my mind. I remember discussing the word "Loyalty", and what the word stood for, but I don't remember a lot about it.

Q. Do you remember who discussed the word "Loyalty"? A. I think Mrs. Gray did.

Q. Do you remember whether there was a drawing of a pin at that meeting? A. A drawing of it?

Q. Yes.

[fol. 5298] A. I don't remember just — what do you mean, a drawing, the shape of the pin?

Q. Yes, so you could see the design you were going to choose.

A. Well, I just don't remember clearly on that, lady.

Q. Do you remember whether officers were elected for the Loyalty League at that meeting?

A. I think they were.

Q. Who was elected?

A. I remember Herb Mutchler being our president.

Q. Do you remember whether a constitution was adopted at that meeting?

A. I don't recall very much about it.

Q. Do you know whether the Loyalty League had a constitution?

A. Well, I guess you would call it a constitution.

Q. What was it that you refer to, that you guess you would call a constitution?

A. Well, I would call it a pledge to the Loyalty League and to each other and to Mrs. Reed, and I guess you would call it a constitution; it was either a constitution or a pledge.

Q. Did the Loyalty League have representatives in each section? A. Yes, they did.

Q. How were they chosen? A. I don't remember.

[fol. 5299] Q. Were you ever a representative from your section to the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, I was; I think the first year, or something, I was the representative.

Q. What year?

A. I don't ever remember being a representative again.

Q. You don't recall how you were chosen?

A. No, I don't.

Q. What were your duties as representative of your section of the Loyalty League?

A. Well, I never did take an active part in the social activities, because I never could go regular to their activities, I had small children at home; and I know once I acted as a hostess at a dance, and also served on a committee—I don't know whether you would call it a picnic or an ice cream social that we had—but I never did do an awful lot, because I didn't take in the activities.

Q. Do you know what the representatives in each section were supposed to do?

A. Their duties, exactly?

Q. Yes. A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you sell tickets in your section for the affairs?

A. Yes, I sold tickets to that dance that I was a hostess at, I am sure, I took care of them.

[fol. 5300] Q. Did you collect funds in your section for other purposes? A. Well, I don't remember.

Q. How often did the Loyalty League have mass meetings? A. Well, I don't remember.

Q. Did it have them?

A. I don't remember that, I just really don't.

Q. You don't remember any meeting of the Loyalty League except the original organizational meeting?

A. Clearly, I don't remember right now.

Q. Do you know where that organizational meeting was held?

A. Well, I think on the second floor, to the best of my knowledge.

Q. Do you know who was the president following Herbert Mutchler? A. Well, Rose Todd, I believe.

Q. And do you know who the next president was?

A. Thelma Huffaker.

Q. Do you know any other officers of the Loyalty League? A. Other than those?

Q. Yes. A. I don't recall any.

Q. Do you know when Thelma Huffaker was elected president? A. From what date, or when?

Q. What year.

A. Well, let's see, the year—it was when Rose Todd was [fol. 5301] elected Chairman of our Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, she gave it up and it was taken over by Thelma, the best I member.

Q. Do you remember whether Thelma was elected at a mass meeting, or just a group of section representatives?

A. Of section representatives?

Q. Yes. A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you know the method by which the Loyalty League was formed?

A. I don't remember that either.

Q. Did you ever attend a meeting at which Thelma Huffaker presided? A. I don't recall of any.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5303] Q. Was Eva Lieberman in your section?

A. Well, I wouldn't say. We were in what they called a special section, we did pinking, and they were blind stitchers and all; a lot of times there would be a vacant space in our section, and maybe they had taken machines out of other sections, and wanted to get some binding or straight sewing done, and the machines sitting in our place, and they would come up and work in our place at [fol. 5304] that time, and there have been some of them in our section at different times, but not all the time.

Q. Do you know who the instructor was in that section any time in the spring of 1937?

A. Well, I wouldn't be positive.

Q. What instructors do you remember along about 1936, '37 and '38? A. '36, '7 and '8?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean instructors in her section?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

A. Well, I wouldn't know what years they were there. I can remember what instructors I had, part of them, when I was in 415 up on the eighth floor.

Miss Weyand: Will you state the ones you remember having?

A. But I wouldn't know just what time they were there. Well, I worked for Clara Finnell and Etta Dorsey.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Are those prior to July 1939? A. 1939?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I think so. Now then, I believe Lola Skeens was over there for a short time, Gertrude Dauben was our [fol. 5303] instructor once; whether it was before then or not, I don't know, but she has been my instructor; but I wouldn't know what year. There has been two or three since then, and I wouldn't recall when they came in.

. . . . . .

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember the thread girls at the time of any of those instructors you have mentioned?

A. I remember thread girls that we have had over there, but I wouldn't know just when they were there.

Q. Would you name the thread girls you recall?

Trial Examiner Batten: Are these prior to 1939, as far as you know? A. Well, yes, I think so.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if any of them are prior to July, 1939, you may mention them.

A. I think Jessie Mudd was over there prior to that, [fol. 5306] but I don't know whether she was or not, or whether Emma Grober was there or not; I just don't recall when they were there.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What other thread girls do you recall?

A. In that section?

Q. Yes. A. Well, I just can't think.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5310] Q. Did Sylvia Hull have on a Loyalty League pin at any time on the morning of April 23rd?

A. Well, Sylvia didn't have it on when I went over there; whether she had it on before I don't know.

Q. You don't know how she happened to have it in her purse when you went over there? A. No, I don't.

Q. When did you first see that article about Sylvia Hull? A. When I did?

Q. When did you?

A. Well, I don't know whether I read it in the lobby, some of them had it down there that morning, or in the locker, I wouldn't be positive.

Q. Had you heard of if the day before?

A. The day before?

Mr. Reed: You mean heard of the article the day before it was printed?

Miss Weyand: No, it was printed on the 22nd, and we had been discussing a demonstration on the morning of the 23rd. I wondered if she heard of it on the 22nd.

A. Well, I could have. I don't remember clearly.

• • • • • •

[fol. 5312] Q. How soon after you started work did you notice a commotion around Sylvia Hull's machine?

A. Well, I don't remember.

Q. What is the first thing you remember seeing?

A. Seeing?

Q. That morning, of an unusual nature.

A. Well, I don't know as I remember anything, whether I was out in the wash room or someone said something, that Sylvia said she would give her pin back if they would give her her 35c; I think that was about the first I remember of any commotion or anything; I can't recall clearly what time in the morning it was.

Q. Had you previously stated that as long as Sylvia Hull was sitting there, you couldn't and wouldn't go to work?

A. Before I took the pin money over to her?

Q. Yes.

A. I didn't say I didn't. I could have said it. We talked about it, you know, the girls and all, and I might have said it, I don't remember.

• • • • • •

[fol. 5316] Q. How long after you took the money over to Sylvia Hull did she continue to work?

A. I never did know when Sylvia got up and left.

Q. But she was continuing to sew when you went over there to take the money?

A. She was sewing when I went over there and when I left.

• • • • • •

[fol. 5317] Q. Did you hear Mrs. Reed make any remark at the March 18 meeting about having received the Loyalty petition?

A. At that meeting?

Q. Yes. A. I don't remember clearly.

Q. You don't remember her making any reference, directly or indirectly, to the fact that a few weeks before certain girls had come out to her and presented a statement of their loyalty?

A. I don't remember whether she did or didn't.

Q. Do you remember how you came to move at the April 27 meeting that the employees form an independent union? A. How it came that I made the motion?

Q. Yes. That was the question. A. I wanted it.

Q. Had you discussed such a motion before going to the meeting?

A. No. But Mr. Tyler talked to us and explained it all to us, and I felt like that was just what I wanted.

Q. So you got up and made a motion for it? A. I did.

[fol. 5318] Q. Do you remember how you stated the motion?

A. Well, I don't know whether I can say it in the exact words. It seems like, "I make a motion that we form an independent, unaffiliated plant union," or something to that effect. I can't get the words all down just as they should be.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5319] Q. You think this March 18 meeting you heard about the morning it was held?

A. I don't remember whether word came down at lunch time or— The under-armers—we called ourselves the under-armers—always had lunch together. It may have been at lunch time; I don't know.

Q. What is your best recollection about the April 27 meeting?

A. Well, about in the same manner, as far as I can remember. There were about 10 or 12 of we under-armers, and we usually got word to the others if one heard something. That's about the best I remember.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5323] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mrs. Riegel, on a number of occasions you answered the questions by Mr. Ingraham to the effect that no one representing the management was at a meeting. What do you understand by the phrase "no one representing the management", or "anyone representing the management"?

A. Did I answer that no one representing the management was at the meeting or told me to go to the meeting?

Q. Was at the meeting or told you to go to the meeting, or at any other time that you used that phrase; what did you mean by that?

A. By the management?

Q. Anyone representing the management.

A. Well, I would consider Mrs. Reed or Mr. Baty; I wouldn't know who else.

. . . . . .

Q. So, in each instance where you said, "no one representing the management did this or that or the other," you mean Mrs. Reed and Mr. Baty, is that it?

. . . . . .

[fol. 5324] A. Well, I meant anyone that had any authority never told me anything.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5325] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. In answer to one of Mr. Ingraham's questions, you stated—his question was, "Did the employees at the March 18 meeting, appoint a committee," and your answer was, "Yes." What did you mean by "appoint a committee"?

A. Well, someone was designated to go and see legal counsel.

Q. How were they designated?

A. Well, I don't remember exactly.

Q. Well, were they appointed by Rose Todd, or were they elected by the body there?

A. Well, I don't know, I don't remember.

Q. Now, you stated that at the meeting of March 30 you threw your 50¢ up on the platform. On the following day, or on any day after that, did anyone in your section [fol. 5326] ask you again for the 50¢?

A. As I stated, there might have been someone that had taken up the money that was sitting by me or saw me throw my money up on there.

Q. Well, that isn't the question. The question is, did anyone ask you for it the next morning?

A. Well, I don't remember whether they did or not.

Q. Well, wasn't there some girl in the section who was collecting the 50¢ from other girls in the section on the day after this meeting?

A. Well, I had given mine, and I felt I had given what I had given, and I didn't give it a lot of thought.

Q. Well, do you know whether or not there was any girl that was collecting money from other girls the next day after the meeting?

A. Well, they made that rule that night, they said that there would be some girls that would pick it up in the sections the next day.

Q. Well, did they say it would be the representative?

A. I don't remember them saying it would be the representative.

Q. Do you know who your representative was?

A. Representative from what?

Q. From the Loyalty League in your section?

A. No, and I didn't know the Loyalty League was the [fol. 5327] one taking up the money.

Q. Well, do you know whether she did it or not?

A. I didn't know who she was at that time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you know whether someone did collect money in your section the next morning?

A. Yes, they did, from what I heard. I don't remember seeing anyone.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, did that person try to get the 50¢ from you again?

A. I said I didn't remember.

Mr. Reed: I submit that has been answered.

Trial Examiner Batten: She has answered it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. What was the answer?

A. I don't remember. I told them I had already given mine, and I don't remember anything about it.

Q. Now, you said the 50¢ was not for the Loyalty League. Did you know that on the day of the 30th of March, Rose Todd had gone to the First National Bank and borrowed a thousand dollars in the name of the Loyalty League?

A. Why, I wouldn't know where Rose went.

Q. She didn't tell you that the night of this meeting, did she?

A. What night of what meeting?

Q. The meeting where you say there was a report of the committee, and you contributed 50¢. On the night of [fol. 5328] that meeting, did Rose Todd tell you that she had been to the bank on that day, and borrowed a thousand dollars from the First National Bank in the name of the Loyalty League?

A. I don't remember any such statement. We discussed that the lawyers would have to be paid a retaining fee, and we discussed how it would be gotten up, and they voted to give the money, and that is the part of it I remember, throwing up my 50¢.

Q. And Rose Todd didn't tell you she already had the money, did she?

A. I didn't hear any such statement.

Q. Now, didn't you know the 50¢ you contributed went to the payment of a note of a thousand dollars at the First National Bank in the name of the Loyalty League?

A. The 50¢ I contributed, to my understanding, was to go for the $500 retaining fee to Mr. Tyler.

Q. Yes, I understand you understood that. But did you later learn that your 50¢ was paid on the thousand dollar note of the Loyalty League at the First National Bank?

A. I never heard that.

Q. Did you know that the Loyalty League paid for the chairs at the April 27 meeting, when the Donnelly Garment Union was formed?

Mr. Lane: That is objected to as being a statement of or an affirmation of a fact, Mr. Langsdale, when it is con- [fol. 5329] trary to the evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, did she know it.

Mr. Lane: Well, I object to the form of the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she may answer it.

Mr. Langsdale: Did you know that?

Mr. Lane: I object to the form of the question as though he was stating a fact, when it is contrary to the evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Well, I didn't know the Loyalty League paid for anything that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union had.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You don't know whether they paid for the chairs at the meeting of April 27?

A. No, I don't know that they did, and I never heard it mentioned or said that they did.

Q. You have been here, have you not, when other witnesses have testified, Mrs. Riegel?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Mudd testify?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Dean testify?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Barnes testify?

A. Part of it. I don't remember how much.

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Holloway testify?

[fol. 5330] A. Holloway?

Q. Yes.

Mr. Lane: I think you mean Mrs. Cooper.

Mr. Langsdale: Yes, Mrs. Cooper, she used to be Miss Holloway.

A. Just part of it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Warth testify?

A. Just part of it.

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Reed testify?

A. Mrs. Reed?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I didn't.

Q. How long had you known Sylvia Hull on the 23rd of April, 1937?

A. I don't recall how long I knew her. I didn't know Sylvia personally so much; it seemed to me she sat in the section with another friend of mine, that was a good friend of mine, and I think I have eaten lunch beside them when she ate with this other girl, and all.

Q. Did you know she had been working there eight years on the 23rd of April, 1937?

A. Well, I didn't know how many years Sylvia had been there.

• • • • • • •

[fol. 5334] Q. Did you hear anyone singing what they call the Loyalty League song?

A. No, I don't even know what they call the Loyalty League song.

• • • • • • •

Q. You say that you were the one who took the 35¢ to Sylvia?

A. I did.

Q. Do you know what denominations it was in?

A. No, I don't. It was wrapped up when it was handed to me. I know the girls pitched some money up there, and somebody wrapped it up and asked me if I would take it over there. What it was in I don't know.

Q. Wasn't it wrapped up in toilet paper?

A. I heard Sylvia's accusation of what it was; but I [fol. 5335] took it over there in my hand.

Q. You carried it to her?

A. I carried it to her in my hand, over to Sylvia's machine.

Q. How many feet was that?

A. I don't know how big that building is.

Q. Well, was it as far as from the back door of this room to the chairs against the wall?

A. Oh, I think our building is bigger than that; we had three sections, I don't know in feet how big it is.

Q. At any rate, you carried this 35¢ wrapped up all the way from your section over to Sylvia Hull's machine, and you don't know what it was wrapped up in?

A. I don't know. It could have been a tissue, it could have been Kleenex, it could have been anything; I don't remember even what my birthday presents are wrapped up in. I don't know what it was wrapped up in.

Q. What did the thing it was wrapped up in look like to you?

A. I just said I didn't remember.

• • • • • •

[fol. 5342] Q. You read the article, you said, of February 26, in which Dubinsky had had an interview saying he wanted to organize the Donnelly garment plant.

Mr. Ingraham: Just a minute. You mean Perlstein?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

A. Yes, I think I did.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. And then some 4 days later you signed this petition that has been called "the Loyalty Petition"?

[fol. 5343] A. I signed the petition.

• • • • • •

[fol. 5344] Mr. Langsdale: I am asking you, did it occur to you that the company had the petition signed and got the names and pictures in the paper as an answer to Perlstein's interview of February 26?

Mr. Reed: Now, that is objected to as incompetent and immaterial and as assuming that the company had this petition signed, when all of the evidence is to the contrary.

Mr. Langsdale: It isn't assuming that at all. I am asking her—

Trial Examiner Batten: The objection is overruled.

You may answer.

A. I signed the petition. I didn't think the company was having the petition signed, and I didn't know anything about any picture going to be in the paper when I signed it.

[fol. 5357] Q. On May 11 when you had your meeting—You remember the meeting of May 11, don't you?

A. I think I recall that.

Q. And I think you said you recall this statement by Rose Todd: (It appears at 815.)

"You realize now that Mr. Tyler is representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and he will have to be paid."

Do you remember that?

A. I think so.

Q. Did you know that he had already been paid $500 at that time?

[fol. 5358] A. That was his retainer's fee. I knew he would have to be paid more, as long as we kept him, depending on what his duties were. I never gave a thought to how much.

Q. Did you know on May 11—Rose Todd told you prior to May 11 he had already been paid $500?

A. Well, I don't remember whether she had told us or not. I suppose she had. We had donated the money for that, and I supposed if they were going to retain him they would have to turn the money over to him.

Q. Did she say, "I expect a good many of you will be wondering what he is going to charge."?

A. I remember Rose saying that.

Q. You didn't know at that time that he had already been paid $500?

A. I don't know whether I definitely knew or not. I assumed he had.

Q. Well, what did you think Rose Todd was talking about on May 11 when she said, "Mr. Tyler is representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and he will have to be paid," if you knew he was already paid?

A. Well, I didn't consider that $500 to pay him up. He was still our counsel.

Q. Did you think that this money that she was talking about on May 11 was in addition to the $500 he had already been paid, or did you know he had already been paid that?

[fol. 5359] A. I couldn't say.

Q. Could it be that you just have the dates mixed on when this 50 cents was collected, and that it was collected on May 25 instead of sometime in March, and Rose Todd was leading up to something else in the meeting of May 11 when she was talking about he was going to have to be paid? A. May 25?

Q. Yes.

* * * * * *

A. No. I was clear on when we paid the 50 cents, in the March meeting.

Q. But you don't know when it was paid to Mr. Tyler, do you?

A. Well, I told you I assumed it was given to him right away. I didn't suppose any lawyer would take a case unless he had some money.

[fol. 5363] RUBY CLAYTON, a witness called by and on behalf of the Respondent, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

Mr. Ingraham: Will you state your name, please?

A. Ruby Clayton.

* * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Where do you live?

A. 2637 Charlotte.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were you formerly employed at the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes, I was.

Q. What period of time did you work at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I worked from about 1929 until January, 1940.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5368] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. In what capacity did you work at the Donnelly Garment Company? A. As an operator.

Q. Were you working at the Donnelly Garment Company in March and April, 1937?

A. I was off for a while, but I came back to work the 22nd day of March in 1937.

Q. Do you remember how long you were off?

A. Well, off about six or seven months.

Q. Prior to that time? A. Yes.

[fol. 5369] Q. Were you a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. I was.

Q. When did you join that union, if you recall?
A. Well, when we formed the union I joined it.
Q. Was that on or about April 27, 1937?
A. Yes, sometime around that time.
Q. Was there a meeting at which the union was formed, a meeting of employees? A. Yes.
Q. Do you know what time of day the meeting was held? A. It was after working hours.
Q. And do you know where the meeting was held?
A. On the second floor.
Q. Do you recall whether or not a vote was taken in regard to forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?
A. Yes, I think there was.
Q. Now, did any officer or official discuss with you prior to that meeting the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, they didn't.
Q. Did anyone that you thought represented the management discuss with you the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. They did not.
[fol. 5370] Q. Did Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Keyes, Mr. Green, or Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde ever discuss anything with you in respect to the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, they didn't.
Q. Did Mr. Bachofer ever discuss anything with you in respect to the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. I didn't know Mr. Bachofer.
Q. Did any of the people I have just named suggest or instruct you to attend this meeting?
A. No, they didn't.
Q. Did any of the people I have mentioned advise you that you should vote to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No.
Q. Did any instructor discuss with you the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?
A. No, they didn't.
Q. Did any instructor suggest or direct you to attend this meeting? A. No.
Q. How did you happen to go to the meeting?
A. Well, we talked about it all the time, that was the main conversation, was about these meetings and about the strikes, and information that was going on.
[fol. 5371] Q. Had you read articles in the paper about strikes at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants?

A. Yes, I had.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit 16, which contains the front page of the Kansas City Times of March 18, 1937, and ask you if you recall seeing the pictures of the strike at the Missouri, Gernes, and Gordon plants?

A. Yes, I saw them.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibits 18 through 38, and ask you to look over these exhibits, and state which exhibits you had read in the papers. As you go along, just please tell us which ones you read.

A. I think I read exhibit No. 18; I am not sure about this No. 19; I am not sure about No. 20; I didn't take the Post at that time, but I did see some of those articles that was in the Post. I don't think I read No. 20 either.

Trial Examiner Batten: Q. What was that number?

A. Exhibit No. 20, I don't think I read it either; I heard about this No. 21, but I don't think I read it; I believe I did read No. 22; I am not sure about 23; I think I read 24 also; and I read 25; and I read 26; I also read 27; and I read 28; and 29, I read that also; and 30, I read that; I don't think I read 31; I am not sure about 32; I read 33; I read 34; I read No. 35 also; and 36, I read that; and I read exhibit 37; I don't think I read exhibit 38.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5372] Q. State what effect, if any, the articles that you read that referred to the strikes at the Missouri, Gernes, and Gordon plants had upon you.

A. Well, naturally it made me fear that they might do the same thing to us, that they would use violence on us, since they had threatened to organize our plant.

Q. Had you heard of any threats being made by the International to use the same kind of violence on the Donnelly employees?

A. Well, I had heard that they meant to organize us, and naturally I thought that meant to do it in the same way.

Q. Did you see any violence at the other plants?

A. No, I didn't see any of it, but I heard a lot about it and read a lot about it.

Q. Was there a general discussion of those strikes among the Donnelly workers?

A. Yes, that is about all we did talk about.

Q. What was the effect—no, strike that.

Do you know whether or not there was a general discussion among the Donnelly employees on these articles that appeared in the paper?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there a general discussion of the violence that [fol. 5373] was going on at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri Plants?

A. Yes, there was. The girls would come in and talk about someone that they happened to know of that had been hurt in different ways.

Q. Well, so far as you could observe, what was the effect of the strikes at those other plants, on the employees of the Donnelly plant?

A. Well, they all felt the same fear that I did, that they would try to use the same violence on us, and they resented it because they didn't care—they wanted to go about their own business and take care of their own affairs, they didn't want to have someone coming down and telling us what we had to do.

• • • • • •

[fol. 5374] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you observe that other employees were nervous and excited? A. Yes.

Q. And did you discuss with other employees the violence that you had read about in the paper? A. I did.

Q. Did you observe that the violence did cause you and other employees to be worried and excited?

A. Yes, that is all they talked about. We talked it at lunch and before work and after work, and the girls couldn't think of anything else.

Q. Was there a general discussion that the International might be at the plant in the morning before you got there?

A. That's right. We expected them there every morning, and every night, and they passed out slips to us at night when we went home from work, and talked about visiting us the same way.

Q. Now, you said that you were present at the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed. Will you please state if there was a general discussion at that meeting of the violence that was going on [fol. 5375] at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants?

A. You mean among the girls at the meeting?

Q. Yes. A. I can't remember for sure about that.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. I did.

Q. Will you state what your reasons were?

A. Well, I didn't care about—I thought if we had our own union that we would not be molested, that we could, by the law, have a right to do, you know, go back and forth to work and not be beat up every time we turned around, [fol. 5376] or something; I didn't care about the violence and all.

Q. You mean that you didn't want the violence?

A. That's right.

Q. Did you want to join the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. No, I did not. We were perfectly satisfied with our wages and conditions at work, and we had no reason to want to join any other union, and we didn't see why we should be forced into it.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Green, Mr. Bachofer, or Ella Mae Hyde, or anyone you thought represented the management, request you or instruct you to vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did any instructor request you to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, no one even mentioned whether I should or should not, I did it all on my own.

Q. Did you ever hear of any of the people I have mentioned discuss with any employees that they should vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you feel that you would be penalized if you did not vote to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. I had no thought of that kind, no.

Q. Did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union [fol. 5377] of your own free will? A. I did.

Q. Now, after you had returned to work on March 22nd, 1937, and prior to the time the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, did the employees hold another meeting? A. Yes, they did.

Q. Do you recall about when that meeting took place?

A. Well, it was about the last of March sometime; I don't recall the exact date; it was shortly after I returned to work.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Green, Mr. Bachofer and Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde discuss with you the holding of that meeting? A. No, they didn't.

Q. I want to include another name among these people I have mentioned, Miss Spilsbury. Did she ever discuss any meeting with you of any kind? A. No, she didn't.

Q. Do you know Miss Spilsbury? A. No, I don't.

Q. Did you ever have any talk of any kind with Miss Spilsbury? A. No, I haven't.

Q. Has Miss Spilsbury ever made any talk at any meeting that you can remember of?

[fol. 5378] A. No.

Q. Now, the questions I asked you with respect to the April 27 meeting, and I mentioned these people, Mrs. Reed, and so forth, I meant to include Miss Spilsbury. Would your answer be the same with Miss Spilsbury included in that list? A. That's right.

Q. Did any instructor discuss the holding of that meeting the latter part of March with you? A. No.

Q. Did anyone that you thought represented the management discuss with you the holding of that meeting?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Do you recall when the meeting was held?

A. Sometime the last of March, but I don't remember the exact day.

Q. I mean what time during the day?

A. Oh, yes, it was after working hours. We have never had any meetings that was not after working hours.

Q. Do you remember where the meeting was held?

A. It was held on the second floor; it was vacant at that time.

Q. Will you state what occurred, so far as you can remember, at that meeting?

A. Well, to the best of my knowledge, they wanted to know what we could do, and we selected a committee—ap-[fol. 5379] pointed a committee, I should have said—to see an attorney to see what we could do to get legal advice, to see what we could do.

Q. Was anything said in connection with paying the attorney?

* * * * * *

A. Why, yes, we decided if we had any attorney, that he would have to have a retaining fee, to retain him, and we was asked for suggestions on how we would go about raising this fee, and some of them suggested a dance, and different things like that, but in the end some of them suggested we take up enough money from each one of the employees to make up enough to pay the attorney; and I think [fol. 5380] we decided on 50¢ each—in fact, I know we decided on 50¢ each.

Q. Did you contribute 50¢? A. I did.

Q. Did you see other employees contribute their money?

A. I took up the 50¢ in my section.

Q. When did you do that?

A. Well, in the next day or two or three, it took some time, because I had to spend my lunch and take up the collection from the girls, before work and after work, and it took quite some time; I think it took two or three days for me to pick it up.

Q. Now, did you pick that money up for the Loyalty League? A. I did not.

Q. Did you understand that when you made your contribution of 50¢, you were making it to the Loyalty League?

A. No, I understood it was just for the employees to give as a retaining fee to the lawyer to advise us on what would be the best thing to protect ourselves.

Q. Now, did anyone representing the company, or that you thought was a representative of the company, make any suggestions about raising this money, or anything that took place at the meeting?

A. No, it was just among the operators, the girls there in the meeting.

Q. Did you see Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mr. Green or Mrs. [fol. 5381] Reeves, or Miss Spilsbury, Mr. Bachofer, Ella Mae Hyde, at that meeting? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Now, at the meeting of April 27, where the union was formed, did you see Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty—

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you see Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mr. Green, Mrs. Reeves, Miss Spilsbury, Mr. Bachofer, or Ella Mae Hyde at that meeting? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever see any of those people at any union meeting after April 27? A. No, I haven't.

Q. When you—strike that.

After you collected the money at the meeting of the last of March, or after the meeting of the last of March, whom did you turn the money over to?

A. I gave it to Miss Todd.

Q. In collecting the money that you referred to, or anything that you did at the meeting at the last of March, did you do any of those things as the representative of the Loyalty League? A. No, I didn't.

[fol. 5382] Q. Were you a member of the Loyalty League? A. I was.

Q. Do you recall when you joined the Loyalty League?

A. Sometime in 1935 or thereabouts, it was a couple of years before.

Q. Do you recall what activities the Loyalty League engaged in?

A. It was purely social, we had dances and parties and carnivals, and we even had amateur shows that we would put on among the employees.

Q. Did you pay any dues to the Loyalty League?

A. No, we didn't.

Q. Have you ever authorized the Loyalty League to represent you in any labor matters? A. No

Q. Did you ever hear of the Loyalty League representing any employees in connection with labor matters?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever hear of the Loyalty League dealing with the company with respect to wages and hours, and terms and conditions of labor?

A. I never heard of the Loyalty League doing anything other than just social activities, just putting on social activities.

Q. Did you feel that you would be penalized by the com-
[fol. 5383] pany if you did not join the Loyalty League?
A. No, I didn't.

Q. Do you recall any meeting of the Loyalty League that was held immediately following a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, we never had any two meetings in one night.

Q. Did you ever hear of any Loyalty League meeting that immediately preceded a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I think I answered that in the other answer; I never heard of two in the same night.

Q. Do you recall of any mention of raising money for the Loyalty League that took place in any Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting? A. No.

Q. Was any business of the Loyalty League, so far as you can remember, ever discussed at any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I don't remember of them ever having a discussion of the union affairs at a Loyalty meeting, or vice versa, no.

Q. Was there any pressure or coercion brought to bear on you, of any kind, to join the Loyalty League?

A. No, there was none.

Q. Did you join the Loyalty League of your own free will? A. I did.

[fol. 5384] Q. Did the Loyalty League, so far as you know, sponsor the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Was there any connection of any kind between the Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, not to my knowledge, there was not.

Q. Did the Loyalty League continue in existence after the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd was president of the Loyalty League at the time of the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union indicate to you that the Donnelly—strike that question.

Did the fact [the] Rose Todd was president of the Loyalty League at the time that she was active in the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union lead you to believe that the Loyalty League was sponsoring the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, it didn't.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd took an active part in the meeting that was held the latter part of March indicate to you that it was a Loyalty League meeting? A. No.

Q. Did you consider Rose Todd a boss at the time?

A. I didn't consider her one, no.

[fol. 5385] Q. Did you consider her as an instructor and boss of operators? A. No.

Q. I believe you stated that you read respondent's exhibit 35, which was an article that appeared in the Journal-Post of April 22, 1937, entitled "Donnelly Worker will be sent to Union Convention."

A. Yes, I did read that. One of the girls brought it down to work and I read it, in fact a number of them did.

Q. Did you read in that article: "Perlstein said the Donnelly Committee desired one of their members to appear at the convention and ask the International body to endorse and support a strike against their employer." Do you recall that being in the article?

A. Do I recall that in the article, did you say?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, I remember reading it.

Q. Was that article generally discussed among the employees of the plant? A. Yes, it was.

Q. What did you think about Sylvia Hull going to the International Convention and asking support for a strike?

A. Well, it made me very indignant, because I hadn't asked her, or none of the other girls, that I have heard of, asked her to represent them; in fact, it was news to all the [fol. 5386] girls that I talked to.

Q. Did you favor a strike at the Donnelly plant?

A. No, I didn't, I was satisfied.

Q. Did you believe that a strike meant that the International would use the same sort of violence that had been used at the Missouri, Gordon, and Gernes plants?

A. Why, yes, I could hardly think anything else. That is the way they had called all the other strikes that I knew of:

Q. So far as you could observe, what effect did that article have on other employees at the Donnelly plant?

A. Well, there was a lot of talk at the plant, and it was all—no one seemed to like the idea that she would take it on herself to put a piece like that in the paper and go some place to represent them, when they didn't want representation from the I. L. G. W. U.

Q. Were you at the plant on April 23, the day following the time the article was in the paper?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. What floor were you working on at that time?

A. On the eighth floor.

Q. What section were you working on?

A. 415, I believe it was, I worked in the special section.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5387] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you see Sylvia Hull that morning?

A. No, I didn't see her. She worked across the room from where I worked.

Q. Did you go over to Sylvia's section at all?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you see other girls go over?

A. No, I didn't see anything at all.

Q. Did you keep on working? A. Yes.

Q. Did you remain a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union up until July, 1939?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you do that of your own free will?

A. I did.

Q. Did you feel that because instructors attended the meeting the latter part of March and the meeting of April 27 that that meant that the company was sponsoring those meetings?

A. No, I didn't; I felt like the instructors were working there the same as I was, and that they didn't have any more right to tell anyone what to do than I did.

Q. Did you feel that because the instructors joined and favored the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that that meant that the company was sponsoring that union? A. No, I didn't.

[fol. 5388] Q. I'll hand you respondent's exhibit 6 that appears in the Circuit Court record at 4864, and ask you if you will please read that article. Do you recall reading that article?

A. I don't remember whether I read it or heard it discussed, but it is familiar to me.

Q. Do you recall the statement in the article: "The union claims only 25 members among the Donnelly workers, but officials said hundreds of others are related to union members. Within a year we will have it completely organized, Mr. Perlstein said. As soon as we have enough members, we will call a strike."

A. Yes, I do.

Q. (Reading) "This will be in addition to carrying our side to the consumers." A. I remember that.

Q. Did you want a strike at the Donnelly plant?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. What did you understand Mr. Perlstein meant by saying, "This will be in addition to carrying our side to the consumers"? Did you know what he meant by that?

A. Why, I thought he meant that other article he had in there about sending representatives to the different states to—

Trial Examiner Batten: Boycott, is that the word you are looking for?

[fol. 5389] A. Yes, to boycott the Donnelly Garment Company.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you want that? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you understand that the sending of such emissaries to boycott the Donnelly Garment Company might affect your job? A. Yes.

Q. So far as you could observe, what was the effect of this article—strike that.

Did this article cause you to have any resentment toward the I. L. G. W. U.? A. Yes, definitely.

Q. Did anything—strike that.

Did you ever hear Senator Reed make a speech?

A. No, I don't think I ever did.

Mr. Reed: One fortunate woman.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I believe you stated that the February 26 article [fol. 5390] that I just handed you before I handed you this last article, that that article was discussed. Do you mean that it was discussed after you got back to work?

A. Yes. I kept in constant touch with all the girls while I was off. I was off on account of illness, I had a major operation; but I was in touch with the girls, and I went to their meetings, just the same as I did while I was working; I mean, you know—I mean our clubs, and things like that.

Q. Do you have a sectional club? A. Yes, we did.

Q. Did that sectional club exist after the Loyalty League was formed?

A. Yes, I went to the meetings in our clubs after I quit work, well, up until I had the baby, and I couldn't go to the meetings because of him.

Q. The club still is in existence?

A. That's right.

Q. What do you call the club?

* * * * * * *

A. Well, the club I belonged to in my section, we call the 500 Pennies Club.

[fol. 5391] Q. I think I asked you a question and I don't know whether you answered it. Let me ask it again.

Did this sectional club exist up until July 1939?

A. Yes, sir. It is still in existence.

Q. I am only going to ask you about matters that occurred up to July 1939. Did you attend a meeting of employees on March 18?

A. No. I wasn't at work at that time.

* * * * * *

Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Clayton, who did you understand represented the management, entitled to speak for the management?

A. Well, anyone who can hire or fire, or an official of the company. That was my impression of who would be considered as a representative of the management.

Q. Did you know Rose Todd in April 1937?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. How long had you known her?

A. I had known her for quite a long while. I can't say just how long, but for quite a while.

Q. Do you know what she did, what her job was, in April 1937?

A. Well, she hunted lost bundles and things like that in [fol. 5392] the section.

Q. Will you detail, now,—tell everything you saw Rose Todd doing in her daily work in the plant?

A. She would just go through the sections and look to see if there were any bundles there that had recuts out of them—that the recuts had held up the bundles and they should have gone on through. That was all I ever saw her doing.

Q. Did you ever get the opinion in March or April of 1937 that Rose Todd was an official of the company, or a supervisor of the company?

A. No.

Q. Or a supervisory employee?

A. No.

Q. Did you get the opinion that she was a boss or that she had any control over the other employees?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Were there any employees working under Rose Todd, as far as you know?

A. Not that I ever knew of.

Q. Did Rose Todd ever say anything to you that gave you the impression that the company was holding her out as being entitled to speak for the management, as far as directing the affairs of the other employees was concerned?

A. No, she didn't.

Q. Did you know Hobart Atherton?

[fol. 5393] A. I just knew him when I saw him.

Q. Do you know what he did?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Did you have the opinion that he was a supervisor or boss or representative of the management?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you know Sally Ormsby?

A. Yes.

Q. Did she work in your section?

A. No. She was my locker mate. She was an operator in another section.

Q. Had she always been an operator, so far as you know?

A. Yes, she had.

Q. Did you have any idea that Sally Ormsby was a boss or a representative of the management?

A. No.

Q. Do you know who your instructor was in April of 1937?

A. I think it was Etta Dorsey.

Q. When you went back on March 22, 1937, you went into section 415, did you?

A. That's right. I worked in that section most of the time.

Q. Did you ever have the opinion in March and April of 1937 that Etta Dorsey was a spokesman for the company or that she was a supervisor or boss?

[fol. 5394] A. No.

Q. What did the instructor do, so far as the operators in the section were concerned?

A. She just sat down at the machine and showed the girls how to sew the different dresses or do their work, and if there was anything she was in doubt about she always went upstairs to see about it and we had to wait until she came back to show us.

Q. Did she, as far as you know, have any authority to hire the girls or fire the girls who worked in that section?

A. No.

Q. Or to discipline them in any way?

A. No.

Q. Who was the thread girl in section 415 in March and April of 1937?

A. I don't remember for sure. We had several thread girls, but Etta Dorsey and Kathryn Rosen were the only two instructors I ever worked steadily for.

Q. You mean you had—

A. At different times we had different thread girls.

Q. You don't mean you had several at one time?

A. No. Just one at a time.

Q. What did the thread girl do?

A. She brought thread to us to match the bundle of work, or rubber bands, or labels, or pins, or anything like that that we had to have, she gave those to us.

[fol. 5395] Q. Did the thread girls, as far as you know, have any ability to hire or fire operators?

A. No.

Q. Or to discipline operators?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever have the opinion in March or April of 1937 that the thread girl was held out by the management as being a boss of the operators in the sections?

A. No.

Q. Or as being a representative of the management, entitled to speak for the company in connection with labor matters?

A. No.

Q. Or any company policy?

A. No.

[fol. 5396] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Do you know what the closing hour was along in [fol. 5397] April of 1937, as far as your section was concerned—when you quit work?

A. I think it was 4 or 4:10—something like that. If we worked overtime it would be 5 or 5:10.

Q. Do you know whether you were working overtime in April 1937?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Did you go to the meetings in the latter part of March and on April 27, 1937, in your uniform?

A. I never attended the meetings in my uniform. I always dressed before going to the meetings.

Q. Did your get to each of the meetings, about March 30 and April 27, before the meeting had begun?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you remain throughout the meeting?

A. Yes.

[fol. 5400] Q. You voted, I believe, to form an independent plant union at that meeting?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. When you voted to do that, were you under any restraint or pressure or coercion from the company to vote [fol. 5401] in favor of forming a plant union, so far as you know?

A. No, I wasn't. That was my desire.

Q. Did you have the feeling in your mind that when you cast that vote you were exercising your own free choice in the matter?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was there any act, that you know of, by anybody that you believed represented the management from about the beginning of 1937 down to July 15, 1939, that in your own opinion constituted an act of coercion or intimidation on the part of the company to join any particular union or stay out of any other union?

A. No.

Q. Did you attend most of the meetings of the union following its organization in April 1937?

A. I attended most of them, yes.

Q. Did you attend the meeting of May 11, 1937, the union meeting?

A. Which one was it?

Q. For purposes of refreshing your memory as to whether you attended that meeting or not,— You have heretofore looked at the minutes of the May 11 meeting, have you not?

A. I think so.

Q. I will show them to you again, for purposes of refreshing your recollection (the number is 8-12, beginning at [fol. 5402] page 4406 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record) and have you look at them. Just glance at them briefly and see if they recall to your memory whether you did or did not attend that meeting.

A. (Referring to minutes indicated in the last question.) Yes, I attended that meeting.

Mr. Reed: What date is that, Mr. Lane?

Mr. Lane: May 11, 1937.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Was there any discussion at that meeting of union finances?

A. Was that before we formed the union or—

Q. No. This is May 11.

A. We formed the union March 27, wasn't it—that we had the meeting to talk to Mr. Tyler, wasn't it? March 27 was the date I collected the 50 cents, I am sure, for Mr. Tyler.

Q. The meeting I directed your attention to was the meeting of May 14, 1937, a meeting of the union, which was formed on April 27, and you said you attended that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. I will ask you whether or not this was said at that meeting:

"You realize now that Mr. Tyler is representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and he will have to be paid. I expect a good many of you are wondering what he is going to charge. I talked to him in some detail and [fol. 5403] I am sure you will feel he is quite right in the answer he gave me. He doesn't know what his answer will be, because it depends on how much trouble we cause him and how much work he will have to do for us.

"The union does have to be self-supporting in every detail. Being a thoroughly reliable group of employees, we can take care of our own financial obligations."

Was that, or that in substance, said at that meeting?

A. I remember that being said at a union meeting, but I get confused on all of these dates. I can't keep up with the dates. But that was said at a union meeting.

Q. Was there ever, so far as your recollection goes, a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union held at 3:45 in the afternoon?

A. No. I never attended a meeting or knew of a meeting being held only after working hours.

Q. Do you know what time of day the meeting of April 27 was held?

A. It was after working hours.

Q. What do you mean by that? I am asking you if you can fix the time of day.

A. I think most of them were held around 5 or 5:30, or something like that. I couldn't say about that particular meeting.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5404] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Now, I have shown you Board's exhibit No. 8-21 and asked you to look at that briefly to refresh your recollection as to whether you attended that meeting of May 25, 1937.

A. Yes, I did.

* * * * * *

Q. Did you attend the union meeting of May 25, 1937?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you at that meeting discuss ways and means of raising money for the Loyalty League?

* * * * * *

[fol. 5405] A. We never did discuss raising money for the Loyalty League at any union meeting, or discuss the Loyalty League in any way at any of our union meetings.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5406] Q. Where was that meeting held?

A. On the second floor.

Q. Were there any employees of the Donnelly Garment Company at work, operating machines or doing any other work, at that meeting?

A. There were no employees on that floor. It was a vacant floor.

[fol. 5407] Q. Did Rose Todd say at that meeting, "For you people in here working, I want to advise you to work quietly."?

A. I don't remember hearing her say that. She may have.

Q. Did Hobart Atherton say at that meeting, "There seems to be a little misunderstanding as to why the Loyalty League needs this money and a little later on I will explain that to you."?

A. No.

Q. Was the union meeting of May 25 followed immediately by a meeting of the Loyalty League on that day?

A. We had a meeting of the Loyalty League sometime after that; I couldn't say just when it was.

Q. Was the union meeting on May 25 followed immediately by a Loyalty League meeting?

A. Oh, no. We never had a meeting, either one following the other—no two on the same day. I thought you meant days after that, or something like that. I never attended two meetings on the same day, and I have never known them to have two on the same day.

Q. Did Rose Todd say at that meeting, "A motion has been made that we adjourn our union meeting and immediately open a Loyalty League meeting."?

A. No.

Q. Did Hobart Atherton say at the union meeting, "As Miss Todd has already told you, we have only one debt of [fol. 5408] the Loyalty League. A good many of you seem to be under the impression we have accumulated quite a lot of bills as we have gone along, but we have only one."?

A. No. I don't remember ever discussing the Loyalty League at a union meeting. We never discussed any affairs of the Loyalty League at a union meeting.

Q. When you collected 50 cents from the persons in your section shortly after March 30, 1937, did you do so as the Loyalty League representative?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Were you the Loyalty League representative in your section?

A. No.

Q. Do you know who was?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Were these meetings of March 30, or thereabouts, 1937, and the organization meeting of the union on April 27, 1937, attended by large numbers of employees?

A. Yes.

Q. You mentioned that prior to July 1939, you had a club in your section you called "The 500 Pennies Club." How long had that been in existence?

A. Oh, for several years. I couldn't remember just how many years.

Q. What was the nature of that club?

[fol. 5409] A. Just a social club.

Q. Did you have officers?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you pay dues?

A. No, we didn't have any dues.

Q. What activities did you have?

A. We had dinner together—go out and have dinner together, and maybe go to a show. We always met once a month and had dinner together, and different things like that.

Q. In the evenings?
A. Yes.
Q. After work?
A. Yes.
Q. Had that club existed prior to the time the Loyalty League was formed?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. And continued to exist afterwards?
A. That's right.
Q. Did you know Lena Tyhurst in March and April 1937?
A. Yes.
Q. What did she do?
A. She worked with the inspectors.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:
Q. Did you think Lena Tyhurst was a supervisor or a [fol. 5410] boss?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. Did you know Mrs. Gray?
A. Yes.
Q. What did she do?
A. She was employed in the store.
Q. Did you ever see her in the store?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. What did you see her doing?
A. Well, when the girls would go in to buy dresses, belts, material, or anything like that, she would wrap it up for us.
Q. Was she, in your opinion, a supervisor or a boss?
A. No.
Q. Or manager for the company?
A. No.
Q. Did you know Mrs. Bogart?
A. Yes.
Q. What did she do?
A. She worked in the dividing department. She was an instructor.
Q. Did you have the opinion that she was a supervisor or a boss?
A. No, I didn't.

Q. Or representative of the management?
A. No.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5411] By Miss Weyand:
Q. When you returned to work in March of 1937, you called up Mrs. Hyde, didn't you?
A. Mrs. Hyde called me.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5412] Q. Were you working at the Donnelly Garment Company when the Loyalty League was formed?
[fol. 5413] A. Yes, I was.
Q. What do you remember of its formation?

Mr. Reed: Now, we make the objection that that is going back of the dates fixed by the Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will make the same ruling I previously made.

Miss Weyand: Would the witness like the question read to her, or—

The Witness: Do you want me to answer?

Mr. Lane: I want the record to show the intervener makes the same objection, and I would like, instead of making the same objection to every such question, to have a continuing objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection.

Mr. Reed: And that will go for the company, also?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. You may have a continuing objection to any ruling which I have made with respect to the Loyalty League, if any.

* * * * * * *

A. Well, I don't remember a lot about it, just offhand.

By Miss Weyand:
Q. What do you remember?
[fol. 5414] A. Well, we just had a group meeting and elected officers, and things, and formed the Loyalty League.
Q. Now, when you say you "had a group meeting", what group are you referring to?

A. The employees of the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Where was that meeting held?

A. I think, on the second floor, or— I am sure it was on the second floor.

Q. Who presided at that meeting?

A. I don't remember.

Q. What officers were elected at that meeting?

A. I don't remember that either.

Q. Did you attend other meetings of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, I attended quite a number of them.

Q. Where were those meetings held?

A. In the same place.

Q. Who presided at any of those meetings, that you recall? A. Well, I remember Miss Todd.

Q. Do you remember anyone other than Miss Todd presiding at any of those meetings?

A. I can't remember.

Q. Were you ever a representative of your section in the Loyalty League?

A. I might have been. I don't remember.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5415] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Who succeeded Rose Todd as president of the Loyalty League? A. Thelma Huffaker.

Q. Were you present at the meeting at which Thelma Huffaker was chosen as president? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know when that meeting took place?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know who was present at that meeting?

A. It was sometime after we had formed our union— I remember that—and Miss Todd resigned as president because, she said, she had so many duties as president of our union that she couldn't take the responsibility of that also.

Q. Was that a mass meeting of all of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes, it was.

Q. Do you know how the president of the Loyalty League was selected? Was it by a vote of the members, [fol. 5416] or was it by the vote of the representatives in the sections? A. It was by the members.

Q. Did the Loyalty League have a nominating committee? A. Yes, I think they did.

Q. Do you know how the nominating committee was chosen? A. Just from the members at large.

Q. That was at a mass meeting, was it? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how the representative of each section of the Loyalty League was chosen?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Did you ever attend a meeting at which Thelma Huffaker presided? A. I don't remember that.

Q. Do you remember whether on the occasion on which she was elected she was present? A. Yes, she was.

Q. Was she asked to come up and say a few words?

A. Yes. And she was introduced to the girls as the new president.

Q. Who introduced her as the new president?

A. Miss Todd, I think. I'm not sure.

Q. You don't know on what date that meeting was?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Was that meeting on the second floor?

[fol. 5417] A. I think so.

Q. You say you "think so." Is that correct?

A. We had most of our meetings on the second floor.

Q. It is your best recollection that the meeting at which Miss Todd introduced Thelma Huffaker was a mass meeting of the employees; is that correct?

A. It was a mass meeting when Thelma Huffaker was introduced as the new president, yes.

Q. And that was on the second floor?

A. I think it was.

* * * * * *

Q. What is the first meeting you recall after you went back to work in March of 1937?

A. Of any kind, you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, the first meeting I recall was shortly after I went back to work. They had already selected a committee to see an attorney, and we had a meeting, and they told us they had seen an attorney and we would have to have a $500 retaining fee. That is the first one that I remember of.

[fol. 5418]

Q. What was the last meeting before you went back to work at which you met with other girls from the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Well, all of the time I was off sick I met with the girls in my club regularly.

Q. And that was at dinner once a month; is that right?

A. That is right.

• • • • • •

[fol. 5419] Q. How were you selected to take up the 50 cents in your section?

A. Miss Todd asked me to take it up.

Q. Did you know Miss Todd personally?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. How long have you known her?

A. Well, quite a long time.

Q. How many years? A. Oh, I can't say.

• • • • • • •

[fol. 5424] By Miss Weyand:

Q. When did you first learn of the newspaper article reporting that Sylvia Hull had been elected to attend a convention, or chosen to attend a convention?

A. The next morning, when I went to work.

• • • • • •

[fol. 5425] Q. You were working in section 415 at that time, is that correct?

A. I imagine I was, because that is the only section that I worked regularly in, but we had a 415 and a 415-A, and they were both special sections, but one was on one side of the room and the other on the other side of the room.

Q. Did you hear Ethel Riegel testify yesterday that she worked in section 415?

A. That's right, she did. We called them both 415, but they called one 415 and one 415-A; they were both special sections in one and the same section, but we had different instructors.

Q. Which were you in, 415 or 415-A?

A. I never worked in 415-A.

Q. Do you know whether Ethel Riegel was in 415 or 415-A? A. Well, she never did work in my section.

• • • • • •

[fol. 5431] Q. Do you know each section of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union had section representatives?

A. Do I know what?

Q. Whether each section of the plant had a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union representative?

A. No, they didn't. We just had eight representatives altogether, and there was one for the larger floors, and then where there was, you know, small groups of people there was one that represented two or three different groups, maybe.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5439] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mrs. Clayton, whom have you heard testify while you have been here in the courtroom and before you took the witness stand?

A. I just heard part of Ethel Riegel's, and part of Edith Dean's.

Q. Weren't you here when Mrs. Mudd testified?

A. No, I heard part of it, but not all of it. I just heard the first part of it.

Q. Then you heard part of three witnesses' testimony?

A. Just part of each of them, yes.

Q. I think I must have misunderstood your answer, when you were asked how you happened to go to the meeting of April 27. I have it here that you said, "Well, we had talked about it all the time," Had you ever talked about forming the union before you went to the meeting of April 27?

A. No. I mean we had talked about the strikes and discussed the violence and all that sort of thing.

Q. Yes, but you had never talked about forming a union?

A. And we talked of the meetings and all, but we [fol. 5440] didn't know anything about a union or even think about it, until Mr. Tyler talked to us.

Q. That is, you didn't even know why you were going to that meeting until you heard Miss Todd and Mr. Tyler speak, is that it?

A. We were going to hear what information Mr. Tyler had to give us.

Q. But you didn't know before you got to the meeting that there was going to be any union formed?

A. Why, no.

Q. You knew, did you not, that several weeks before April 27 the Gordon, Gernes, Missouri garment workers' strike had been settled?

A. I did know when they were settled, I don't remember the exact date.

Q. But it was settled before April 27, was it not?

A. I couldn't say as to that.

Q. You stated that you voted for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union to escape violence, did you not?

A. That's right.

Q. There was no violence going on at that time in Kansas City, was there, that you knew of?

A. Well, there had been; that is the way they had been forming other unions, and they were still talking of organizing us. I had no reason to think they would do any different.

[fol. 5441] Q. Now, did Mr. Tyler's speech cause you to believe that forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was to get away from the violence or the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. Well, naturally I thought if we had our own union that would be all that was necessary.

Q. How did you think that would protect you from violence?

A. Well, with our own union there would be no need for another one.

Q. But did you think the I. L. G. W. U. would just fold up and make no effort to organize the Donnelly Company?

A. I don't know; I should have known better, but I didn't.

Q. You say that Rose Todd asked you to collect the 50¢. Was that at the meeting she asked you that?

A. No.

Q. When did she ask you to collect the 50¢?

A. The next morning.

Q. Don't you remember at the meeting she said, "You can give your 50¢ to the representative of your department"? A. No, I don't.

Q. You didn't hear her say that?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you hear her say, "If you want to give a dime at a time, that's all right?" A. I did not.

Q. Where were you when Rose Todd asked you to collect the 50¢?

[fol. 5442] A. I imagine I was probably where I undressed or something, I don't remember for sure; I remember that I collected the money, and she asked me, and I took the money to her, but I can't say exactly where that was when she asked me.

Q. Well, were you working at your machine?

A. Why, no.

Q. Why do you say "Why, no"?

A. Because we never talked during working hours, it was always before working hours or after working hours.

Q. Have you any recollection at all of where it was or when it was Rose Todd asked you?

A. I might have been in the wash room or downstairs, changing clothes, or I may have been working.

Q. Have you any recollection at all?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know why Rose Todd picked on you?

A. Well, I don't know. I was always active in things like that in my club. I was secretary and treasurer, and I used to take up money for showers and different things like that, and I imagine because I collected money in the section a lot would be the reason she did.

Q. Now, you said in answer to a question by Miss Weyand that you might have been a Loyalty League representative, but you didn't remember; is that correct?

A. I don't remember of being one, no.

[fol. 5443] Q. Do you mean to say that you could have been elected a Loyalty League representative and not remember?

A. I said I didn't remember it, didn't I?

Q. Well, you don't say you weren't a Loyalty League representative?

A. I couldn't have been at that time, because I just came back to work.

Q. You don't remember whether you ever were or not?

A. I don't remember ever being one, no.

Q. Do you know who the Loyalty League representative was in your section on the 30th of March, 1937?

A. No, I don't; we had several, I couldn't possibly remember any particular one.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5444] Q. Now, why did you turn the money over to Rose Todd instead of some treasurer?

A. Why, it wasn't the Loyalty League that was getting the money. Why should I turn it over to the treasurer of the Loyalty League?

Q. Did you get a receipt from Rose Todd for it?

A. Why, no.

Q. Didn't you get any receipt to show how much you turned over to her?

A. I didn't get any receipt, and I didn't give any. I kept a list of the names of the girls as I collected from them, so I would know whom I had collected from; it wasn't compulsory for them to pay.

Q. Did you give a receipt to any of the girls you got the 50¢ from?

[fol. 5445] A. I did not.

Q. Did they all pay 50¢ at a time or did some of them pay a dime, or some less? A. They all paid 50¢.

Q. At a time? A. That's right.

Q. Now, did you collect 50¢ from your instructor?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you collect 50¢ from the thread girl?

A. I couldn't tell you whom I collected it from.

Q. Well, was there any reason—do you know anybody you collected any money from?

A. Well, no, no particular person. I know I collected from the girls in the section, but I don't remember who was there.

Q. Can you name one you collected the 50¢ from?

A. Just off-hand I couldn't. I could have put down a lot of them, if I had known you were going to ask me that.

Q. Well, you can take all the time you want to think about it now.

A. Well, I mean I could have asked the different girls which ones gave it to me.

Q. You can't remember it without them telling you?

A. Well, in a special section the girls change all the time. If you knew the way they worked, you would understand that, but not knowing that, you wouldn't understand.

[fol. 5446] Q. Well, you didn't change instructors during that time?

A. No.

Q. Who was your instructor during that period?

A. Etta Dorsey.

Q. Did you collect 50c from Etta Dorsey?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Was there any reason why you would pass her up in your collection efforts?

A. I don't remember who I collected from.

Q. Well, was there any reason why you shouldn't have collected from her?

A. No, I didn't see any reason why I should pass her up, but just to say I did, I couldn't, I don't know.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you know how much you turned over to Miss Todd?

A. No, I don't.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you know what became of the money that was collected on that occasion?

A. It was collected to give to Mr. Tyler as a retaining fee.

Q. Well, do you know what actually became of it?

A. How could I possibly know, I wasn't there.

Q. Did you know that Mr. Tyler had already been paid when you collected the 50c?

A. How could Mr. Tyler have been paid?

Q. Well, did you know that?

[fol. 5447] A. Why should I know that?

Q. Miss Todd didn't tell you?

A. Why, no.

Q. Did anyone else tell you he was paid on the first of April, 1937?

A. We elected Miss Todd for our president because we all knew her and respected her, and knew her as an upright woman, and after all, it would be kind of hard for her to go around and tell each individual exactly, every employee she met; she was working for our interest, and that was the thing.

A. No.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did Miss Todd tell you he had been paid on April 1, 1937?

A. No, why would Miss Todd tell me that?

Trial Examiner Batten: The question isn't why should she, the question is, did anyone tell you he was paid on April 1, 1937.

A. No.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did Miss Todd tell you when they were voting to collect the money on March 30, 1937, that she had been to the First National Bank on that day, and borrowed a thousand dollars in the name of the Loyalty League?

[fol. 5448] A. No.

Q. You didn't know that?

A. No, and I don't know of anyone else that does know it either.

[fol. 5449] Q. I hand you Board's exhibit No. 19 and ask you to examine it and state whether or not you ever saw that exhibit before.

(Thereupon Board's exhibit No. 19 was read by the witness.)

A. No.

Q. Never heard of it?

A. No.

Q. Do you recognize Miss Todd's signature there?

A. I wouldn't know Miss Todd's signature if I saw it.

Q. Did you learn, from Miss Todd or anyone else, that the money that you collected, the 50-cent pieces, went to help pay this note shown by Board's exhibit No. 19?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. I show you Board's exhibit No. 13, which appears on page 4699 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, and ask you to examine it and tell whether you ever heard of that check before.

A. No.

Q. That is a check dated April 1, 1937, made payable to Frank E. Tyler, signed "Nelly Don Loyalty League, Rose Todd, Pauline Hartman," is it not?

A. Yes; that's what it says.

Q. Drawn on the First National Bank?

A. I don't see anything unusual about that.

Q. I am asking you if that isn't what this shows.

[fol. 5450] A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever hear of this check before?

A. No.

Q. Did Rose Todd tell you at any time, or did she ever tell anyone else, to your knowledge, that she had paid Frank Tyler by this check, Board's exhibit No. 13, on the first of April 1937?

A. I don't know how she paid him.

Q. Did she tell you that, or did anyone else tell you that?

A. No.

Q. Did you learn that the money that you collected, 50 cents at a time, was used to pay part of this note, Board's exhibit No. 19, on July 15, 1937?

The Witness: Would you please read that question?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. No.

Q. Did you learn that the 50-cent pieces that you had collected had not been deposited until the 13th of July 1937?

A. No, I didn't.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5455] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Clayton, when your machine is in operation can you hear the girl next to you in a conversational tone?

A. Not very well, no.

Q. Can you hear the girls that are farther down the section when all of the machines are in operation?

A. No, you can't.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5456] LYDIA PHILLIPS, a witness called by and on behalf of respondent Donnelly Garment Company, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is your name?

The Witness: Lydia Phillips.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Where do you live, Mrs. Phillips?

A. Parkville, Missouri, Route 2.

Q. Are you employed at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. How long have you been employed at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Since February 25, 1929, but I was off from work from January of 1934 until in January of 1935.

Q. In what capacity are you employed at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. As an operator.

Q. What floor have you worked on?

A. Eighth floor.

Q. In what section?

A. I am in 413. I have worked in all sections on eight, though.

Q. Were you working at the Donnelly Garment Company during the months of March and April 1937?

A. Yes, I was.

[fol. 5457] Q. Are you a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall when you joined the union?

A. I don't remember when. It was when they organized.

Q. When the union was organized?

A. When the union was organized.

Q. Do you recall whether or not that was about the 27th of April?

A. Yes, I believe it was around that time.

Q. Do you recall where the meeting was held when the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

A. On the second floor.

Q. Do you recall the time of day?

A. Well, I should judge, around 5 or 5:10 in the evening.

Q. Had you finished your work that day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Baty, Mr. Green, Mrs. Spilsbury, Mr. Bachofer, Mr. Keyes, Mrs. Keyes, or Ella Mae Hyde ever discuss with you the holding of that meeting?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did they ever discuss with you anything in connection with the union?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did they request you to go to the meeting?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 5458] Q. Did you see any of the people that I have named at that meeting?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did anybody that you thought represented the management request you to attend that meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did your instructor request you to attend that meeting?

A. No.

Q. Now, you stated that you joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union at that meeting. Do you recall who presided at the meeting?

A. At the meeting when it was organized, you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, you mean the ones that—

Q. Well, did anybody act as chairman?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall who that was?

A. Rose Todd.

Q. Did any of the people that I have mentioned request you to vote to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No.

Q. Did you vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you do that of your own free will?

[fol. 5459] A. I sure did.

Q. Now, prior to the date of that meeting did you know of strikes that were going on at the Missouri, Gernes, and Gordon garment companies in Kansas City?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you read about the strikes in the paper?

A. I read of some.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 18, which is the front page of the Kansas City Times of March 18, 1937, and ask you if you recall seeing the pictures on that page, of strikers?

A. Yes, I remember seeing that.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibits Nos. 18 through 38, inclusive, and ask you if you will look at those exhibits and state which exhibits you recall reading in the paper; and as you go along, will you just state whether you read the exhibit or not?

A. (Referring to exhibits.) Well, exhibit 18, I might have read, but I don't take the Kansas City Journal-Post, and if I did read it, it was brought up there and I read it there. But I'm not sure that I read it.

This exhibit 19, I don't believe I read that.

I'm not sure about exhibit 20, because that is in the Journal-Post and I don't take it.

I think I read exhibit 21 down there at the factory.

[fol. 5460] I didn't read exhibit 22. And I didn't read 23.

I remember reading 24. I also read 25.

26, I don't know whether I read that or whether I just heard them talking about it.

I read 27. And I believe I read 28. I read 29. Also, 30.

I didn't read 31. 31, I just heard them talking about it.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. 31, you said?

A. 31. And I don't believe I read 32. 33, I believe I didn't read it, either. 34, I didn't read, but I heard them talking about it.

I read 35. I think I read 36. I'm not sure that I read 37, but I think I did. I read 38.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What effect, if any, did the reading of the articles that referred to violence have on you?

A. Well, the violence— It just made me feel like I didn't want to belong to that organization.

Q. What organization are you referring to?

A. The I. L. G. W. U.

Q. Did you personally see any of the violence of those other strikes.

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Was there a general discussion of the strikes among the employees at the Donnelly plant?

[fol. 5461] A. Yes, there was.

Q. Was there a general discussion of these newspaper articles at the plant? A. Yes, there was.

Q. What effect, if any, so far as you could observe, did those articles have on other employees at the Donnelly plant?

A. Well, it kind of stirred up the plant down there, the employees.

Q. Was there a general discussion among the employees about the I. L. G. W. U. coming to the Donnelly plant next? A. Yes, there was.

Q. Had threats been made that that was what the I. L. G. W. U. intended to do? A. Yes, they had.

Q. Now, did the violence that was taking place at these other strikes have anything to do with causing you to vote to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. Did you have any other reasons besides the violence that caused you to want to form a plant union?

A. Yes, I did. I read in the paper where it told about their guarantee, what their minimum wage would be in this I. L. G. W. U., and ours was far beyond that—above that, so I didn't feel like they could do us any good concerning wages.

[fol. 5462] Q. Did you object to joining the I. L. G. W. U.? A. Yes, I objected to it.

Q. I believe you stated that you read exhibit No. 27, which is an article that appeared in the Kansas City Star of March 17, 1937. The headline is "Sitters Block A Door." A. Yes, I read that.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall whether or not at about the time this article appeared in the paper, or shortly thereafter, that a meeting of employees was held?

A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. Did the strikes at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants have anything to do with the holding of that meeting? A. Yes, it did.

Q. Do you recall the date on which that meeting was held?

A. I think it was the latter part of March.

Q. Do you recall whether or not it was about the time this article was in the paper?

A. I don't recall that, but it could have been around there. I know when these were taking place was when we called our meeting.

Q. Now, this meeting that you refer to, did any official of the company, or executive of the company, or anybody that you thought represented the management, discuss the [fol. 5463] holding of the meeting with you?

A. Not with me.

Q. Did you ever hear that the company wanted the meeting to be held?

A. No, I didn't hear that at all.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Green, Mrs. Spilsbury, Mr. Keyes, Mrs. Keyes, or Ella Mae Hyde request you to attend that meeting? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you go to that meeting of your own free will?

A. I sure did.

Q. Do you recall when the meeting took place?

A. Well, it was in—

Q. I mean, was it after working hours, or—

A. It was after working hours, yes. Around 5 o'clock, 5:10, or somewhere in there.

Q. Do you recall on what floor? A. Second floor.

Q. Was the meeting generally attended by the employees? A. Yes.

Q. Was there quite a large number of employees there?

A. Yes, there was, to my recollection.

Q. Do you recall Mrs. Reed making some remarks at that meeting? A. Yes, I do.

[fol. 5464] Q. Do you recall how Mrs. Reed happened to come to the meeting?

A. No, I don't remember just how she come to come. I know they were talking about it, but I couldn't say how it happened.

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Reed make the statement that if the plant was unionized it would be closed?

A. No.

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Reed make the statement that she wasn't going to let Dubinsky tell her how to run her business? A. No; she didn't say that.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed make any statement with reference to the right of the employees to join or not join any labor organization?

A. No, I don't remember her saying anything—

Q. Do you recall any remarks that Mrs. Reed did make?

A. Yes, I remember, but I don't know whether I can word it just the way she said it. I do remember she said she wasn't going to let Dubinsky force her to force us into forming a union, or joining their union, the I. L. G. W. U., if we didn't prefer it—if that wasn't our wishes, to join the I. L. G. W. U.

Q. Do you recall anything said at that meeting about arranging for busses?

A. Yes, there was something talked about, about the busses.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed say the company was trying to arrange for busses?

[fol. 5465] A. Well, she said something about they were going to try to arrange for busses.

Q. Do you recall Mrs. Reed's stating, "I can't say at this time what will be done to protect you against violence, but the company's attorneys will consider what legal steps might be advisable."?

. . . . . .

A. I remember her talking about that, but just what she said and how she said it, I don't remember. But it was talked about.

Mr. Ingraham: Do you recall at that meeting whether or not a committee was designated to call on lawyers to get legal aid?

. . . . . .

A. I remember them saying something about that.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5466] The Witness: I remember them saying something about it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you know who was named on the committee?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Now, will you state whether or not there was any meeting after this meeting that you have just testified about—any meeting between that meeting and the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized, that you attended?

A. It seems to me like there was a meeting along about the last of March.

Q. Do you recall what occurred at that meeting on or about the last of March?

. . . . . .

By Trial Examiner Ratten:

Q. Do you know whether there was a meeting?

A. Well, it was along the last of March or the first of April—in there some place—where they had a meeting and took up 50 cents to pay for—

Q. I say, do you recall a meeting there about that time?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. And you say 50 cents was contributed by the employees?

[fol. 5467] A. Yes.

Q. Do you know the purpose of making that contribution?

A. For a retaining fee for a lawyer.

Q. Now, at the meeting the last of March—state when that meeting occurred, what time of day.

. . . . . .

A. Around about 5 o'clock, if I remember right.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were you through work? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall where the meeting was held?

A. On the second floor.

Q. Now, did any of the people I have mentioned, Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mrs. Reeves, and so forth,—did any of those people ask you to go to that meeting?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did any of those people ask you to contribute 50 cents? A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did you discuss with any of those people anything that occurred at that meeting?

[fol. 5468] A. No.

Q. Did any instructor request you to go to that meeting? A. No, nobody requested me to go.

Q. Did you go of your own free will? A. I did.

Q. Do you recall how you happened to hear that there was going to be a meeting?

A. Well, it was in talking to the girls. They would tell one another. That's the way I remember hearing about it.

Q. Now, at any of these meetings that you have testified about did the instructor in your section direct you to attend the meeting, and did you go as a body—all of the operators in the section go together? A. No.

Q. Do you recall whether or not you dressed before you went to the meeting?

A. Well, there might have been a time or two that I didn't dress, that I waited until after I got out of the meeting.

Q. Generally, what was your practice?

A. Dressing first.

Q. Do you recall when you got off work during March and April? A. When I got off work?

Q. Or what the regular time was?

A. The regular time was 4:10, but if we were working [fol. 5469] overtime, it was 5:10. But I don't remember whether we were working overtime at that time or not. If we were, that is when I went in my uniform, I expect, if we were working overtime.

Q. Now, did you understand that these meetings that you have referred to were Loyalty League meetings?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever hear anything said that caused you to believe that these meetings were Loyalty League meetings?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever attend a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that was immediately followed by a Loyalty League meeting? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever attend a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that was immediately preceded by a Loyalty League meeting? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever hear at a Donnelly garment workers' meeting any suggestion or discussion for raising money for the Loyalty League?

A. I don't remember anything of that sort.

Q. Now the meeting at which you testified 50 cents was contributed—did you make that contribution to the Loyalty League? A. No.

[fol. 5470] Q. Did you make it for any purpose of the Loyalty League?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. I don't think I asked you: Do you recall when you gave your 50 cents at that meeting in the latter part of March or the first of April?

A. I can't remember whether I gave it that evening or the next day. I gave it, but I don't remember when.

Q. Do you remember whom you gave it to?

A. I don't even remember that.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd took an active part in the meetings that you have testified about cause you to believe that the meetings were Loyalty League meetings?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you believe that the Loyalty League sponsored the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you know of any connection between the Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Not any at all.

Q. I believe you stated that you read the article that appeared in the paper on April 22, which is contained in respondent's exhibit No. 35. The article is entitled "Donnelly Worker Will Be Sent To Union Convention."

A. I read that.

Q. Do you recall reading the part that stated, "Perl-[fol. 5471] stein said the Donnelly committee desired one of their number to appear at the convention and asked the International body to endorse and support a strike against their employer . . ."?

A. I read that.

Q. Did you want a strike in the Donnelly plant?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you state whether or not you believed that a strike by the International would involve violence?

A. Yes, that's the way I felt about it.

Q. What effect did this article have on you?

A. Well, I didn't like it very well, because I didn't know that there was anybody in there that would do anything like that, because we were all so well satisfied there that it didn't seem to me that there could be anyone there at all that could be dissatisfied and let somebody else talk them into the notion of going some place else to represent us.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You mean the employees would have to be dissatisfied to have a union? Is that what you mean?

A. Well, it seems as though— I don't know. I didn't mean it just like that.

Q. You said "dissatisfied"—you didn't know there was anyone "dissatisfied."

A. Well, I didn't, because I felt like if anyone did go, they would have to have some reason for it.

[fol. 5472] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Had you heard that the I. L. G. W. U. had made charges that the Donnelly workers were poorly paid?

A. I heard that.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 41 and ask you to look at that circular and read it, please.

(Thereupon respondent's exhibit No. 41 was read by the witness.)

[5473] Q. Do you recall circulars like that exhibit being distributed at the Donnelly plant by the I. L. G. W. U. members about the time the first meeting of employees was held, the one you testified about?

A. I don't remember of this particular one.

Q. You don't remember that particular one?

A. I don't remember this one.

Q. At the meeting of March 18, where Mrs. Reed spoke, did you see or hear Mrs. Reed read a letter from the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. No, I don't remember that at all.

Q. I will ask you to read respondent's exhibit No. 6, and ask you if you recall reading this article in the Kansas City Times of February 26, 1937.

* * * * * * *

A. Yes, I remember reading it.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you recall in this article the statement: "We are going to send a letter to the Donnelly Company within a week, suggesting a conference to establish collective bar-[fol. 5474] gaining on questions of wages and working hours. If the firm refuses we will go to the consuming public of the company, and advise buyers of wages and hours prevailing there now." Do you recall reading that in this article?

A. I remember reading some of it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you remember reading that?

A. I remember reading that, but word for word I wouldn't remember it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall this statement: "The union claims only 25 members among the Donnelly workers, but officials said hundreds of others are related to the union members, and within a year we will have it completely organized, and as soon as we have enough members we will call a strike. This will be in addition to carrying our side to the consumers." Do you remember reading that?

A. Yes, I remember reading it.

Q. Did you want the I. L. G. W. U. to call a strike at the Donnelly plant?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you want the I. L. G. W. U. to send representatives to the customers of the Donnelly Company?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Why didn't you?

A. Well, because we didn't want the I. L. G. W. U. in there.

Q. Why didn't you want the I. L. G. W. U. to send repre-
[fol. 5475] sentatives to the customers of the company?

A. Because it would hurt our work.

Q. Did you feel that it might result in your not having work?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, did you understand that Sylvia Hull was going to the International Convention to ask the International to carry out this program?

A. Well, I read that she was going, but I didn't know at that time what she was going for.

Q. Well, did the article that you read state that she was going to ask support for a strike? Do you recall that in the article?

A. Yes, I recall that.

Q. Now, did you observe what effect the article that referred to Sylvia Hull going to the International Convention had on other employees?

A. Well, they didn't seem to like it a bit.

Q. Were you at the plant the following morning after the article had appeared in the paper?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And what floor were you on?

A. On the eighth floor.

Q. Did you see Sylvia Hull on the eighth floor that morning?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What section did you say you worked in?

[fol. 5476] A. I worked in 414.

Q. Where was that with reference to the section Sylvia Hull worked in?

A. Well, she worked on the south side of the building, and I was in the next section.

Q. You were in the next section?

A. In the next section.

Q. Did you go over to Sylvia's section?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did other employees go over there?

A. Yes.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5477] Q. How long did you stay over in Sylvia's section?

A. I didn't stay over there, I just walked over there and came back.

Q. Did this article that appeared in the paper in connection with Sylvia Hull have anything to do with you voting in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. What effect did it have on you?

A. Well, it made me feel like stronger than ever I wanted a union of our own in there.

Q. Did you object to Sylvia representing you?

A. Yes.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5478] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you hear any girls say that they did not want to work so long as Sylvia stayed there?

A. I didn't hear them say it, I heard about it afterwards, but I didn't hear them say it.

Q. Did you observe that that was the feeling among the employees?

A. Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that as an incompetent conclusion, that she could not draw from what she answered before; she heard no one say that, and how could she observe that that was the feeling among the employees when she heard nothing said.

Trial Examiner Batten: What was the basis of your observation, if that is the way you felt?

A. I didn't hear them.

Mr. Ingraham: She has testified she didn't hear them say it at the time.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am asking her about at the time. How long afterwards did you hear them talking about it?

[fol. 5479] A. Well, it was up in the day, but I didn't hear them say anything at that time.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. When did you hear them say anything?

A. Sometime during that day.

Q. Sometime during that day?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you observe that led you to believe that was the way they felt?

A. Because they were talking about it during the day; some of them said they wouldn't work if she stayed in there.

Q. And that was the basis of your statement?

A. Yes, it was.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Well, at the time Sylvia was there, did you see any of the employees not working?

A. Well, there were a lot of them working, but they were getting up a few at a time, you know, and going over there and coming back, but how long I don't know; I don't know how long it lasted.

Q. Well, were there employees that weren't working at the time, that did not work?

A. You mean—

Q. (Interrupting) While Sylvia was on the floor.

A. I don't know whether they did or not, whether they were working or not.

[fol. 5480] Q. Are you a member of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall about when you joined the Loyalty League?

A. Oh, it was after I came back to work in 1935, but I don't remember just when. It was after they had organized.

Q. What activities did the Loyalty League engage in?

A. In social activities.

Q. Did you pay any dues to the Loyalty League?

A. No, I never did.

Q. Did you ever hear of the Loyalty League dealing with the company with respect to wages and hours and terms and conditions of labor of the employees of the company? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever authorize the Loyalty League to represent you in connection with any labor matters? A. No.

Q. Did you ever hear of any other employee authorizing the Loyalty League to represent him or her in connection with any labor matters? A. No, I never did.

Q. Did you join the Loyalty League of your own free will? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you feel that you would be penalized by the company if you didn't join the Loyalty League? A. No.
[fol. 5481] Q. Did you understand or gain the impression that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was a successor to the Loyalty League? A. No.

Q. Will you state whether or not the Loyalty League continued after the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. Yes, it did.

Q. Will you state whether or not you signed a petition that had the same writing that appears at the top of I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 10, appearing in the Circuit Court record at 5961? A. Yes, I signed this.

Q. Do you recall the petitions had the date mark of March 2? A. Well, yes, I do remember.

Q. Now, do you recall that this petition was circulated a few days after the article that you have read, which quoted from Mr. Perlstein?

A. I remember it was after that, but I don't remember how many days it was.

Trial Examiner Batten: What article was that, Miss Witness? After what article?

A. That article that I read about Perlstein.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What was it?

A. That was where Perlstein was going to try to organize us. I can't recall just the words.

[fol. 5482] Q. Oh, you mean one of those exhibits Mr. Ingraham showed you, is that it?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, of February 26.

A. I can't quote the words, but I remembered what it was about.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. That was the article where Mr. Perlstein stated, "Within a year we will have it completely organized, Mr. Perlstein said, and as soon as we have enough members, we will call a strike." Is that the article you were referring to?

A. That is the article I was referring to.

Q. Do you recall who presented the petition of March 2nd to you?

A. No, I don't remember who it was, which one it was. There was two girls, Mary and Inez, that is all I knew; it was one of the two girls, but I don't remember which it was.

Q. Did either of those two girls hand you the petition?

A. One of them handed me the petition.

Q. Did they say anything to you when they handed you the petition?

A. They just handed it to me and told me to read it.

Q. Did they ask you to sign it? A. If I cared to.

Q. And did you read it? A. Yes, sir, I read it.

[fol. 5483] Q. And did you sign it of your own free will? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you feel that you would be penalized by the company if you did not sign it?

A. No, I didn't feel that way.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall a sentence, part of a sentence, which reads: "And refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization," in the petition?

A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. Did you have in mind any particular labor organization at the time you signed this? A. I. L. G. W. U.

Q. Did you want Mrs. Reed to understand that that was your view? A. Yes, sir.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you also want Mrs. Reed to understand your [fol. 5484] views about your appreciation of the treatment you had received from the company? A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you understand that this petition was being circulated by the Loyalty League?

A. No, I didn't understand it that way.

Q. Was anything said to you about the Loyalty League when the petition was presented to you? A. No.

Q. Did the fact that instructors joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union lead you to believe that the union was sponsored by the company? A. No.

Q. Will you state whether or not you considered instructors as bosses? A. No, I didn't.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did the fact that instructors attended the meeting of March 18 and the meeting the latter part of March or [fol. 5485] the first of April lead you to believe that the company was sponsoring those meetings? A. No.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 7 and ask you to please read this article that appeared in the Kansas City Journal-Post of March 6, 1937.

* * * * * * *

A. I read that, I read most of it; I don't know that I read it clear through, but I did read most of it.

Q. I mean at the time it appeared in the paper?

A. Yes, at the time it appeared in the paper.

Q. Do you recall the statement attributed to Mr. Dubinsky where he stated: "Mr. Reed said many harsh things about me during the recent political campaign"?

A. I remember reading that.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did that statement by Mr. Dubinsky that Mr. Reed had said many harsh things about him in any way influence you in joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, that didn't.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Reed make any speeches in the [fol. 5486] 1936 campaign? A. No, I didn't.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you ever hear Senator Reed say anything about Mr. Dubinsky?

A. I never did hear him say anything until I got up here in the courtroom.

Q. Did you ever read in the paper, that you recall, anything that Senator Reed said about Dubinsky?

A. I read some articles, but I don't remember what they were, about Dubinsky and Mr. Reed.

Q. Well, did those articles influence you in any way against the I. L. G. W. U.? A. No.

Q. Will you just glance at Board's exhibit 27 and state whether you recall reading that?

A. I don't remember reading this at all.

Q. Did any thread girl ever request you to attend any meeting?

[fol. 5487] A. No.

Q. Did you consider a thread girl a boss?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did the fact that the thread girls joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union lead you to believe that the company was sponsoring the union?

A. No, it didn't.

Q. Did the fact that thread girls attended the March 18 meeting and the meeting that you testified occurred the latter part of March or the first of April, or the meeting of April 27, did the fact that the thread girls attended those meetings lead you to believe that the company was sponsoring those meetings? A. No.

Q. Have you continued to remain a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will? A. Yes, I have.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean up to July, 1939?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, up to July, 1939.

Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Phillips, in 1937, in March and April, did you know Rose Todd? A. Yes; I did.

[fol. 5488] Q. How long had you known her?

A. I don't remember how long I had known her.

Q. Did you know her well or only casually?

A. Well, I didn't know her well.

Q. In March and April 1937, what did you observe Rose Todd doing about the factory?

A. Well, she—I don't know, I never did know just exactly what you would call her job, but she did come into our section.

Q. What did she do when she came to your section?

A. Well, I knew she was always doing something about the bundles, but I didn't know what it was all about.

Q. Did you ever have the impression from anything you saw Rose Todd do, that she was a supervisor or a boss or supervisory employee? A. No.

Q. Did Rose Todd ever say anything in that period that led you to believe she regarded herself as being a supervisory employee? A. No.

Q. Did you know Hobart Atherton?
A. I knew of him, but I didn't know him.
Q. Did you know Sallie Ormsby?
A. I don't remember whether I knew her at that time or not.
Q. Did you know Ethel Riegel?
A. No, I didn't know her.
[fol. 5489] Q. Did you know Arch Lyle?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. Did you know Lena Faulconer? A. No.
Q. Did you know Eva Lieberman?
A. No, I didn't know her.
Q. Did you know Mrs. Riggs?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. Or Lyle Jeter? A. Yes.
Q. What did he do? A. He was a mechanic.
Q. Did you know Carl Crawford? A. Yes.
Q. What did he do?
A. As far as I knew, he was working in the cutting department.
Q. Did you know Cordelia Taylor? A. No.
Q. Or Leona Moore? A. Yes.
Q. What did she do?
A. She was an operator.
Q. What section was she in, do you remember?
A. I don't remember what section she was in; she worked on seven, sometimes, and she worked on eight, so [fol. 5490] I couldn't tell you what section.
Q. Did you know Ellen Nokes? A. No.
Q. Virginia White?
A. No, I didn't know Virginia White.
Q. Did you know Fred Brown? A. Yes.
Q. Did you know what he did?
A. He worked in the cutting department.
Q. Did you know Mamie Riddle? A. Yes.
Q. What did she do? A. She was an operator.
Q. Do you know where?
A. Up on the eighth floor.
Q. Where did you say Sallie Ormsby was?
A. I don't know; I don't think I knew Sallie at that time.
Q. Did you know Anna Richards?

A. No, I didn't know her.
Q. Marjorie Green? A. I knew of her.
Q. Did you know where she worked?
A. She worked in the office.
Q. Did you know Jack McConaughey? A. Yes.
[fol. 5491] Q. Did you know where he worked?
A. He worked in the mechanic's cage.
Q. Did you know Charlotte Casey? A. No.
Q. Did you know Hazel Saucke? A. Yes, I knew her.
Q. Did you know what she did?
A. She was an operator.
Q. Did you know Anna Reese? A. No.
Q. Was there any of the persons I have mentioned that you regarded as being a supervisory employee or a boss or a representative of the management?
A. No, there wasn't any of them.
Q. When you voted on April 27th in favor of forming an independent plant union, did you cast your vote of your own free will? A. Yes, I did.
Q. Was there anything that you can recall that any of the executives or the supervisors of the company had done that you thought indicated any pressure or intimidation or coercion on their part to cause you to join any union or stay out of any union? A. No.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5492] Mr. Lane: Mrs. Phillips, you say you were away from the Donnelly plant from January 1934, to January 1935? A. That's right.
Q. And when you returned you went into section 413?
A. That's right.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Lane:
Q. Do you know who the instructor was in section 413 when you went back? A. Ada Vining.
Q. What did the instructor do in March and April, 1939?

Mr. Langsdale: You mean 1937, don't you?

Mr. Lane: Did I say "1939"?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

Mr. Lane: Excuse me. I meant 1937.

The Witness: What was that question?

By Mr. Lane:

Q. What did the instructor do?

A. She instructed us how to sew our operations—to do our operations that we were supposed to do.

• • • • • • •

[fol. 5493] Q. Did the instructors, so far as you knew, have any authority to discipline the operators? A. No.

Q. What did the thread girl do? A. She gave out the thread, the binding, shoulder tapes, and belt loops.

• • • • • • •

Q. Where were you working in March and April of 1937? A. I worked in 414 for a while, and 412.

Q. Do you remember who the instructors were in those two sections?

A. Well, at that time Ada Vining was over there—at one time, and Mrs. Allison, and—I don't remember whether Lola Skeens was there at that time or not, she could have been.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean they were in these two sections at different times? A. Yes.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you have the opinion that Ada Vining or Mrs. Allison or Loka Skeens was your boss or your supervisor?

A. No.

[fol. 5494] Q. Do you know who the thread girls were in sections 414 and 412 in March and April of 1937?

A. No, I don't remember who they were.

Q. Did the thread girls, so far as you know, have any authority to hire and fire employees in the sections?

A. No.

Q. Or to transfer them from one section to another?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Or to discipline the employees? A. No.

• • • • • •

By Mr. Lane:

[fol. 5497] Q. Mrs. Phillips, did you belong to a club in your section in March and April, 1937? A. I did.

Q. What was that club called? A. The By-Jingo.

Q. Did you have officers? A. No.

Q. What did that organization do?

A. Well, they had social gatherings after work in the evenings, and went out to dinner and shows together and had picnics.

Q. Do you know when that club was formed?

A. No. It was formed before I came back to work, [fol. 5498] during 1934 sometime.

Q. Did it continue to exist up until July 1939?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. Did you know Lena Tyhurst in March and April of 1937? A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did she do? A. She was an inspector.

Q. Did you look upon her as being a supervisory employee or a person held out by the management as speaking for the management in labor matters?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Gray?

A. Yes, I knew Mrs. Gray.

Q. What did she do?

A. She was clerk in the store.

Q. How long had you known her?

A. I don't remember how long I knew her, but I did know her.

Q. How frequently did you see her in the store?

A. About every day.

Q. What did you see her doing in there?

A. Clerking—waiting on the employees.

Q. Was she, in your opinion, during March and April 1937, a supervisor of the company? A. No.

[fol. 5499] Q. Did you know Marvin Price?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did he do? A. He was a mechanic.

Q. During this period we are talking about was Marvin Price, in your opinion, a supervisory employee of the company? A. No.

Q. Was there anything he did or said that indicated that he held himself out as being a representative of the management in connection with labor matters? A. No.

Q. Was anything ever said by any of the executives of the company that indicated that Marvin Price was their representative in labor matters? A. No, I don't recall anything.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Bogart? A. No.

Q. Did you know Ted Scoles? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you continue to belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union down to July of 1939 of your own free will? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you go to the meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union after May of 1937?

A. Some of them; not all of them.

[fol. 5500] Q. When you went to the meetings did you go in your uniform or did you change to your street clothes? A. Changed to street clothes.

Q. Do you know what the quitting hour of your section was in March and April of 1937?

A. Well, it was the regular hours. It was 4 o'clock or 4:10.

* * * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. You have stated, I believe, that at the time of the Sylvia Hull demonstration you were working in section 414. Is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. Now, you said 414 was next to 412. Could you tell us which side it was next to?

A. On the north side.

Q. It was on the north side of 412; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And both 412 and 414 were located on the west side of the building; is that correct?

[fol. 5501] A. That is correct.

Q. Which row of 414 were you sitting in?

A. In the south row.

Q. Were you facing Sylvia Hull, or did you have your back to her?

A. I was facing— Well, I sat at one end and she was at the other end, and we faced one another.

Q. You were facing south; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And she was sitting across the south wall of the building, facing north; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. How long had you been at work before you walked over to Sylvia Hull's machine?

A. I don't believe I went to work. I sat down to work, but I hadn't worked any. If I remember right, that's the way it was.

Q. When did you start work that morning?

A. Well, I will have to stop and think, because I have been in so many different sections and so many different kinds of work. I think it was 20 minutes to 8.

Q. That was the time you were supposed to start to work? A. If I remember right.

Q. What time did you begin work, if you recall?

A. It wasn't very long afterwards, because I didn't stay [fol. 5502] over there very long.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you keep your voice up, please?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How long did you stay over there?

A. I just went over there and came right back.

Q. Did some other girls from your section go over at the same time you did?

A. Another girl right there next to me did.

Q. Do you remember her name?

A. If I remember right, it was Amy—somebody—Epperson, I believe, and Dessie Horak.

Q. Had you read the newspaper article before you walked over to Sylvia Hull's machine? A. Yes, I had.

Q. Where did you read that article?

A. On the floor, the eighth floor.

Q. Do you remember who showed it to you?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. Did you hear any girl state that she, herself, would not work so long as Sylvia Hull was working for the company? A. No, I didn't hear them say that.

Q. But you heard other girls say that some girls had made such statements; is that correct?

A. During the day I did.

Q. Do you remember how early you heard that report? [fol. 5503] A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Was it in the morning?

A. I can't remember that. I know it was during that day that I heard it.

Q. Could you state your best recollection of just what you did hear?

A. Well, I heard that there were some girls over there said they wouldn't work there as long as she worked there. I do remember that, but nothing more.

Q. Do you remember seeing any girl who sat at her machine and refused to work?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. Do you remember whether other girls in your section were working that morning while Sylvia Hull was still on the floor? A. In my section?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, they were working.

Q. Could you see whether—

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you say some of them were working?

A Some of them were working, because some of them had got up and walked over there.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Could you see whether the girls in Sylvia Hull's section were working?

[fol. 5504] A. I could have seen, I guess, if I had looked, but I didn't pay any attention to that part.

Q. And when you walked over to Sylvia Hull's machine, you don't know whether the girls were working in that section or not? A. I don't remember.

Q. Was Sylvia Hull sewing when you went over there?

A. Yes.

Q. Did she have on an International Ladies' Garment Workers' button when you went over there?

A. If she did, I didn't see it.

Q. Did she have on a Loyalty League button when you went over there? A. I didn't see that.

Q. Do you remember how long girls continued to go over to Sylvia Hull's machine that morning?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Were you working in section 414 all during March, as well as April, 1937?

A. Well, I don't remember. I went over to work in 412, but I don't remember whether it was during those two months or not. I couldn't say.

Q. Who was the instructor of 414 at that time?

A. If I remember right, it was Ada Vining.

Q. When did you join the Loyalty League?

[fol. 5505] A. Well, it was sometime after it was organized, but I don't remember how long.

Q. Where were you when you joined? A. I was in 413.

Q. Did you join at a meeting or did you join in your section? A. I was in my section.

* * * * * * *

Q. Do you know who the officers of the Loyalty League were?

[fol. 5506] A. Well, Rose Todd was the chairman; I know that.

Q. Did you know of any other officers of the Loyalty League? A. No, I don't recall any others.

Q. Did your section have a representative in the Loyalty League?

A. I think it did, but I don't remember who it was.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5507] Q. Prior to July 15, 1939, did you ever see a notice passed through the section announcing a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No.

Q. When you signed the Loyalty petition of March 2, 1935, was more than one sheet presented to you?

A. I don't remember. I know there was one long sheet, but I don't remember whether there was more than one there or not; it seems to me like there were, and they were pinned together. I wouldn't say for sure.

Q. Was it passed through your section?

A. I don't know that. She gave it to me, one of the girls did.

[fol. 5508] Q. Had you seen anyone else sign it prior to your signing it?

A. I saw the girl next to me signing something, but I didn't know what it was until she handed it to me.

Q. Did Mary Sprofera or Inez Warren stand there and hand it to each girl down the section?

A. I don't know if they did before they came to me or not. After they handed it to me they went down the line with it.

Q. Did you notice whether there was the date March 2, 1937, on the sheet you signed?

A. I don't remember that at all.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5509] Q. I would like to have you look at International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union exhibit No. 10, at page 5966 of the record, which is also in the record at 5380, and state whether or not the name Lydia Phillips, which appears in the second column of that page, about two-thirds of the way down, is your signature.

A. That looks like my writing.

Q. That is your signature?

A. That is my signature.

Q. Did you notice the other names on this sheet when you signed it? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Would you know who Oscar Steinborn is, being the sixth signature in the first column of the same page?

A. No, I don't.

Q. You don't know Oscar Steinborn? A. No, I don't.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5512] Q. Did you sometimes have to make repairs on your own time?

A. Well, I might have sometimes, but I can't recall any [fol 5513] one certain time.

Q. Do you know whether you were usually paid when you made repairs?

A. Well, if I didn't quite make my guarantee by having repairs, I got my guarantee, so I figured I was paid for it.

Q. If you were making your guarantee anyway—making more than your guarantee, as you sometimes did, didn't you? A. Oh, yes, most of the time I did.

Q. On those occasions when your had to make repairs, did you get paid piece rate prices for the time you spent making the repairs? A. No.

Q. Did you get paid anything for making the repairs?

A. That would just depend on whether it was really my fault or the fault of something else.

Q. What other cause might there have been for having to make a repair?

A. Well, if the notches were wrong, or if it was cut wrong, or something—you know—on that order.

Q. Who determined whether you got paid for making the repairs? A. Mr. Baty did at that time.

Q. Who brought you the repairs when you had to make them? A. The instructor brought them.

Q. Who handed you your weekly pay check?

A. It was handed to me by the thread girl or the instructor.

[fol. 5514] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you have a special operation which you performed?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What was it?

A. Setting collars.

Q. Did you sometimes do other work than setting collars, or, prior to July 15, 1939, did you just set collars?

A. I did other work, too.

Q. When would you do other work?

A. Well, when collars run out we would do other work.

Q. Who determined what other work you did when the collars ran out?

A. The instructor.

Q. You stated this morning that certain articles which contained accounts of strikes influenced you in forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

[fol. 5515] Q. And you also stated that a certain article which contained a statement by Mr. Reed about Mr. Dubinsky did not influence you?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You didn't state that?

A. I didn't say it.

Q. You said you had read some articles containing speeches of Mr. Reed's about Mr. Dubinsky, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. And you say now they did or did not influence you?

A. They didn't influence me.

Q. They did not?

A. They did not.

Q. How do you explain that certain articles did influence you and certain other articles did not influence you?

A. Well, because those other articles, of the strike at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants—we didn't want to have any strikes up there where we were, and I signed to join our union to keep them out.

Q. How do you know that the articles which you read containing speeches by Mr. Reed about Mr. Dubinsky did not influence you?

A. Because I figured that was a quarrel or fuss, or whatever you want to call it, between Mr. Reed and Mr. Dubinsky that didn't concern us, because Mr. Reed didn't [fol. 5516] have anything to do with our factory.

Q. Can you remember back now and remember how you felt when you read each of the articles which you have discussed here?

A. Well, I don't know that I can— It's kind of hard to put it in words. You mean the writing in there on Mr. Dubinsky and Mr. Reed?

Q. Each of the articles, I have reference to; not distinguishing now about strikes and violence and the ones that contained the speeches. What is there to make you remember how you felt when you read those articles?

A. Do you want me to tell you?

Q. Yes.

A. I remember this: When that came up about Mr. Reed and Mr. Dubinsky, I figured if Mr. Reed and Mr. Dubinsky couldn't get along, why did Mr. Dubinsky want to get through our factory to get to him and take his spite out on us?

Q. Did that influence you at all, that way of thinking about it?

A. It didn't influence me, because we wanted a union of our own, but it did make me mad, that Mr. Dubinsky wanted to take his spite out on us to get at Mr. Reed.

Q. Did it influence you, that Mr Reed had said Mr. Dubinsky wanted to organize the plant solely because of political animus?

A. No.

[fol. 5517] Q. You said that made you mad, didn't you?

A. It made me mad that way, yes.

Q. That didn't have anything to do with your feeling about the union?

A. No.

Q. But it made you mad?

A. It made me mad. Lots of things made me mad that didn't have anything to do with the union.

Q. When you got mad about the other articles, about the strikes, how did that have anything to do with how you felt about the union?

A. Because they were referring to the factories, and our factory was one of the factories in Kansas City.

Q. Wasn't the idea you expressed, that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was trying to organize the Donnelly Garment Company because of a feud between Mr. Reed and Mr. Dubinsky, something that affected the garment factory, too?

Mr. Reed: I object to that as an improper question. It has all been gone over and canvassed thoroughly. It is incompetent and immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question, Miss Witness?

The Witness: I don't believe I got it.

Mr. Reed: I object to it as incompetent and immaterial [fol. 5518] and not proper cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Wasn't the idea you expressed, that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was trying to organize the Donnelly Garment Company because of a feud between Mr. Reed and Mr. Dubinsky, something that affected the garment factory, too?").

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you say you didn't understand it?

Mr. Reed: I don't understand the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let's find out if the witness does.

The Witness: I don't quite get it, no.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you restate the question, Miss Weyand.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Wasn't the idea you expressed, that you understood from these articles that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was trying to organize the Donnelly Garment Company to get even with Mr. Reed, a matter that had to do with your garment company?

A. Now, a matter of what to do with the garment company—

Trial Examiner Batten: I think you had better break [fol. 5519] your question up into two or three questions, Miss Weyand.

Miss Weyand: She expressed before that she thought violence—

Trial Examiner Batten: I realize that, but I don't believe the witness can follow a question of that kind and answer it for you. That is the reason why I think you should break the question up.

Miss Weyand: All right.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. You stated, did you not, that these articles about Mr. Reed's speeches led you to believe that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was trying to organize your company to get even with Mr. Reed? Is that correct?

A. I did think on that point, all right. I wondered if that was why, because it did mention in the paper about him getting at Mr. Reed through the factory, or something like that.

Q. You got the idea from the paper that the union was trying to organize to get even with Mr. Reed; is that correct?

A. That's the way I took that particular piece in the writing in the paper.

Q. And that made you mad?

A. Yes, to think that he wanted to take his spite out on us to get at Mr. Reed.

Mr. Reed: I didn't hear the answer.

[fol. 5520] Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read it, please?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Yes, to think that he wanted to take his spite out on us to get at Mr. Reed.")

By Miss Weyand:

Q. You said the articles about the strikes and violence influenced you because that had something to do with the garment company you worked at; is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Didn't you think the statement that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was trying to organize your company to get even with Mr. Reed also had something to do with the garment company you were working at?

Mr. Reed: I object to that as incompetent and immaterial and a mere attempt at argument and not proper cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

Will you read the question to the witness?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed. Now,—

Trial Examiner Batten: I have overruled your objection. Do you have another one, Senator?

Mr. Reed: All right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question, Mrs. Phillips?

[fol. 5521] The Witness: Yes, I understand the question. I was just trying to figure out how to answer it.

A. I thought if the I. L. G. W. U. wanted to organize us, why didn't they come at us the other way, instead of going through our factory to get at Mr. Reed; why didn't they have a different way of getting us?

[fol. 5522] Q. I believe you stated there were some meetings at which you did wear your uniform, is that correct?

A. Yes, there were some.

Q. Do you remember what meetings those were?

A. No, I don't remember just what meetings they were.

Q. Was that in the spring of 1937?

A. If I remember right, it was.

Q. Do you remember any meeting in which there were no chairs?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. Did you attend meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union quite regularly?

A. Well, no, I didn't.

Q. When was the next meeting after April 27 that you recall attending?

A. Well, I don't remember; it was during the summer.

Trial Examiner Batten: With five children you had other things to do, didn't you?

A. I sure did.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you have any way of recalling what time of day the April 27 meeting was held?

A. Well, it was around five o'clock, five or 5:10, I forget.

Q. Do you know how you remember that?

A. Well, I remember that because I remember either the girl next to me speaking about it or me talking to her, saying, "Are you going to dress before we go or wait un-[fol. 5523] til after the meeting," and we both made up our minds we would go, so we went so we could get a seat, or get up in front, I don't remember just which it was.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mrs. Phillips, will you name all of those whom, in March and April 1937, you considered representatives of the management?

A. Well, I'll name as many as I can recall at that time; it would be Mr. Baty and Ella Mae Hyde, and Mrs. Reeves —I am not sure about Mrs. Reeves, but I think—

[fol. 5524] Q. (Interrupting) You aren't sure about what?

A. Mrs. Reeves. There is Mrs. Reed—

Q. (Interrupting) You mean you aren't sure Mrs. Reeves represented the management?

A. I think she did.

Q. Go ahead.

A. And—let's see. I said Mr. Baty and Ella Mae Hyde, didn't I?

Q. Yes.

A. Mr. Green—well, I don't remember. There are others, but I don't remember, because those ones were the—

Q. (Interrupting) Were there any others that you knew or ever came in contact with that you considered representing the management?

A. Mr. Baty.

Q. Mr. who?

A. Mr. Baty.

Q. Well, you have mentioned Mr. Baty already.

A. What you say were there any more?

Q. No, that you knew or came in contact with.

A. No, as far as I can recollect now, there weren't; I can't remember.

Q. So, when you answered questions by Mr. Ingraham and Mr. Lane to the effect that no one representing the management had done or said anything, you had in mind [fol. 5525] these people whom you have named, is that correct?

A. That is correct; but I said there could have been others.

Q. But do you know of any others?

A. I can't recall of any.

Q. Well, you didn't have any others in mind when you answered the questions of Mr. Ingraham and Mr. Lane, about representatives of the management, did you?

A. Well, when he spoke those names, I remembered them being there, and remembered them being the representatives of the factory, but now I can't remember only just those.

Q. Well, let's see, then; you understood Mr. Ingraham, when he named those whom he did name. Was there anyone else in March and April whom you considered representatives of the management?

A. I don't remember any others.

Q. At the meeting of March 18, when there was an address by Mrs. Reed, was there a letter read?

A. I don't remember of any letter being read.

Q. Did you hear any letter read?

A. I don't remember it.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed request that someone read a letter that had been sent to the Donnelly Garment Company by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Now, let me understand you. You don't remember, [fol. 5526] or you say that no such letter was read?

A. As far as I know there was no such letter read, but I just don't remember whether it was or not, because I don't remember anything like that.

Q. Will you examine this signature, and tell the Examiner whether or not that is your signature?

A. No, that is not my signature.

Q. Is there another Lydia Phillips there except you?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. And you say that is not your signature?

A. Well, if I had signed anything like that I ought to remember it.

Q. I am not asking you whether you ever signed anything or not. I am asking you if that is your signature.

A. It don't look like it.

Q. You say it is not?

A. Well, if I ever signed it, I don't remember signing it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, look at your signature: Can you tell whether you wrote it or not?

Mr. Langsdale: I am not asking her to read what is up there, I am asking her if that is her signature.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question is, is that your signature?

A. I don't believe it is.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you hand me the other signature [fol. 5527] of the—

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) Now, I submit that a witness who is asked whether they attached their name to a document, or not, is entitled to see the document for the purpose of helping them to identify their signature. I have signed my name so many different times, and so many different ways, because I can't write very well, that frequently I can't tell by looking at the signature alone whether it was mine or somebody had imitated it; and I submit, as a matter of fairness the witness should now be allowed to see the documents which are handed to her.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think so, for the purpose of identifying a signature, Senator, at least preliminary.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You identified this signature on the petition that you signed on March 2, 1935, as yours, did you not?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, look at this signature, and see then if that helps you identify this signature that I am now showing you as yours.

A. Well, that don't—I wouldn't say whether I signed that or not, whether that was my signature or not, because I— it don't look like it.

Q. You say it is not?

A. I won't say it is not, but I don't know, but it don't look like it. I could tell if I could read what I signed.

[fol. 5528] Q. You mean that you can't identify your signature without seeing what your signature is appended to?

A. Oh, I can sometimes, but that don't look like my signature.

Q. You said that you didn't want to join the I. L. G. W. U. because the minimum that they had announced was less than the minimum you were already getting. What minimum had the I. L. G. W. U. announced for the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Well, I read in one piece where they said that $13.00 was the minimum.

Q. Where did you read that?

Mr. Reed: In what company? Now, the sentence was confusing. Let's have the preceding question read.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question and the answer?

(Thereupon the preceding question was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. You said that you didn't want to join the I. L. G. W. U. because the minimum that they had announced was less than the minimum you were already getting. What minimum had the I. L. G. W. U. announced for the Donnelly Garment Company?

"A. Well, I read in one piece where they said that $13.00 was the minimum.")

Mr. Reed: Nobody claims they announced the minimum for the Donnelly Garment Company.

[fol. 5529] Trial Examiner Batten: The question was, what minimum had been announced for the Donnelly Garment Company.

Mr. Langsdale: By the I. L. G. W. U.

Mr. Reed: But he implies by that statement that this minimum was less than the Donnelly Garment Company was getting, and he adds this to it; and I object to it as a double barreled question.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, what minimum was announced for the Donnelly Garment Company by the I. L. G. W. U.

Mr. Reed: That assumes—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) It doesn't assume anything. My question is pure and simple.

Mr. Reed: That question assumes one had been announced, and there is no evidence one had been announced for the Donnelly Garment Company, and I object to it.

Mr. Langsdale: I understood this witness to say she didn't want to join the I. L. G. W. U. because the minimum which the I. L. G. W. U. had announced for the Donnelly Garment Company in its campaign was less than what they already were getting.

Mr. Langsdale: Did you say that or not?

A. That was one of the things.

Mr. Reed: I object to that because the witness didn't say—

[fol. 5530] Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) The witness just said that was one of the things.

Mr. Langsdale: She said it again.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, when did you understand the I. L. G. W. U. had announced any minimum for the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I didn't mean it, that the $13 was announced for the Donnelly Garment Company; I read that in the paper where it was the minimum. I understood what the I. L. G. W. U. would pay as a minimum to organize those three plants down there; now, that is the way I remember reading it.

Q. Where did you read that?

A. Well, if I remember right, it was in the Kansas City Star, or some piece in the paper.

Q. Did you read it in any of those articles that have been shown you by Mr. Ingraham and Mr. Lane?

A. I read something at that time, and I don't know whether—but I remember that, that was in my mind thoroughly at that time, that that was one of the things, why I didn't want the I. L. G. W. U. in there as a whole.

Q. Then you didn't mean to say that you had understood that the I. L. G. W. U. had announced a minimum for the Donnelly Garment Company?

Mr. Reed: I submit the witness has explained that and fully answered it.

[fol. 5531] Trial Examiner Batten: Please read the question.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Then you didn't mean to say that you had understood that the I. L. G. W. U. had announced a minimum for the Donnelly Garment Company?")

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. I didn't read it in that way, but I figured if they organized us that that is all the minimum we would get if that is all the minimum they were going to give in the other factories.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, this article on February 26, did you read there what the I. L. G. W. U. announced as the minimum for workers in silk dresses?

A. I don't remember reading that—I read that in one of those other articles, but I didn't read that then, I don't remember reading it then.

Q. Did they make any silk dresses down at the Donnelly Garment Company during that period?

A. I don't remember whether I did or not, at that period.

Q. Well, did anybody, to your knowledge?

A. I don't know whether you call it silks or not, but I guess you would.

Q. Speak a little louder; will you read her answer?

A. I don't know whether you call them silks or not, [fol. 5532] but I guess you would.

Q. Well, did you read in that article that the I. L. G. W. U. had announced that the minimum was $22.50 a week for silk dresses? A. I didn't read that then.

Q. What did you say?

A. I didn't read that at that time.

Q. Well, have you read it since? A. I read it since.

Q. Didn't you tell Mr. Ingraham you had read this article when it came out? A. I don't believe I did.

Q. Now, do you know what article you are referring to when you say that the minimum was less than the Donnelly Garment Company was getting?

A. I didn't read any place where they said it was less, but in the writing it didn't say less than the Donnelly Garment Company, but I knew it was less.

Q. Do you know who called a meeting on March 18?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Don't you know that it was Rose Todd and Hobart Atherton?

A. I knew it was Rose Todd that was the leader of that meeting.

Q. Let me show you this document which precedes the [fol. 5533] signature that I showed you of Lydia Phillips which appears in intervener's offer of proof, and is designated as 1-quadruple R, and ask you to read it and see if you remember signing it.

Mr. Reed: Is that the same paper shown the witness before?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

Mr. Reed: You didn't show it to the witness before?

Mr. Langsdale: I showed her her signature.

Mr. Reed: Yes.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you now remember that you did sign that document?

A. Well, I remember something of this sort, but I still can't remember just exactly when the time was, but it could have been, because something like that I could have signed.

Q. Well, what do you now say about—just a moment. Let me state—

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) The witness started to say something.

Trial Examiner Batten: Had you finished, Mrs. Phillips?

Mr. Langsdale: I want to identify these documents as accurately as I can, and then she can say whatever she wants to.

Mr. Reed: She was trying to answer the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, and we will have the answer thus far read, and we will see whether [fol. 5534] she finished it or not.

Will you read the answer?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter, as follows:

"A. Well, I remember something of this sort, but I still can't remember just exactly when the time was, but it could have been because something like that I could have signed.")

Mr. Langsdale: Now, let me state for the purpose of the record—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Well, had you finished?

A. Oh, what I started to say didn't amount to anything.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it ends there, "I could have signed." Had you finished your answer?

A. Yes. I could have signed it; I finished it.

Mr. Langsdale: The document which I have just shown the witness is one of the offers of proof of the intervener and appears at pages 3484, 3485 and 3486 of the Court of Appeals record in this case.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, does reading this document refresh your memory as to some of the things that happened at that March 18 meeting? Let me ask you, you stated in answer to Mr. Ingraham's question that you didn't know why Mrs. Reed happened to come to the meeting. In this document, which has what purports to be your signature on it: [fol. 5535] "Mrs. Neil Donnelly Reed, came after the meeting had been in progress for some time, as hereinafter stated." Do you remember that?

A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. Now, do you now remember that the meeting had been called by Rose Todd, Hobart Atherton and some others? A. I remember Rose Todd being there.

Q. And Hobart Atherton?

A. I can't remember Hobart Atherton.

Q. Well, you say you didn't read this, or know it, when you signed this document?

A. If I signed it, I read it, because I never sign anything unless I read it.

Q. Well, it does say that Rose Todd and Hobart Atherton and some others called a meeting, doesn't it?

A. It says that in there.

Q. And then as to whether you knew why Mrs. Reed came to the meeting, let's see if this refreshes your memory: "Two or three employees, at the suggestion of the chairman, left the room to go after Mrs. Reed, and in a little while, Mrs. Reed came into the meeting." Is that true?

A. Well, I can't remember who went after her.

Q. Well, you do remember that someone went after her? A. I remember she was there.

Q. Do you remember that someone went after her? [fol. 5536] A. I don't remember that.

Q. Well, do you remember signing this statement that someone went after her?

A. I can't remember that far back. If I signed that, I don't remember when it was passed around or where or how.

Q. Do you know where you signed it or at whose request? A. No, I don't.

Q. Did you ever go to the offices of a Mr. Tyler and Mr. Lane, and sign any documents?

A. I don't remember.

Mr. Lane: Now, if the Examiner pleases, when I started to inquire the other day with respect to one of the offers of proof, as to when and where it was signed, and so forth, I was cut off because Your Honor said that that, in your opinion, was not material.

Mr. Langsdale: I am not offering it as to materiality, but simply to try to refresh this witness's memory.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I assume that the present examination is merely a matter of identification of the signature, as I understand it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Let's see if this is your memory about a letter having been read at the meeting.

Mr. Ingraham: I want to call attention in the record it is now 5:07.

Mr. Langsdale: Let me ask this one question, and I [fol. 5537] think I am through.

Mr. Ingraham: Go ahead, if you will finish with the witness.

Mr. Langsdale: I want to ask one more question, and then I am perfectly willing to quit.

Trial Examiner Batten: I realize it is after 5, but my only purpose was if you can dispose of this lady, who has five children, and also works—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) I think after this question I will be through. I had some more questions, but—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) I prefer she don't have to come back here in the morning.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, you are working at the plant, aren't you?

A. Yes.

Q. And you are either going to the plant or coming back here in the morning.

Trial Examiner Batten: It doesn't make any difference whether she comes here or goes to the plant. The important thing is to go to the plant. Respondent has made a showing heretofore that they are doing defense work, and if they are doing defense work, and if we can dispose of this lady tonight, there is just no reason for her to come back here in the morning, Mr. Langsdale.

Mr. Langsdale: It is all right with me to stay here [fol. 5538] until we dispose of her. I want to look at my notes, but I think this is the last question.

Trial Examiner Batten: If it is a matter of a question or two, we will continue with the witness.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Let's see; to refresh your recollection, "Two or three employees, at the suggestion of the chairman, left the room to go after Mrs. Reed, and in a little while Mrs. Reed came into the meeting. She had someone to read to the meeting a letter that had been received from Meyer Perlstein of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union." Does that refresh your memory on that point?

A. I don't remember that; I don't remember that letter being read.

Q. And you don't remember Mrs. Reed having someone read it? A. No, I don't remember that.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5545] Louise Garrett, a witness called by and on behalf of the Respondent, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you please state your name?

A. Louise Garrett.

Q. Where do you live, Mrs. Garrett?

A. 4421 Woodland.

Q. Are you employed? A. Yes.

Q. Where? A. Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. How long have you been employed at the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Since April, 1936.

Q. In what capacity are you employed?

A. As an operator.

Q. Do you do any particular kind of sewing?

A. Pockets is what I usually do.—

Q. Are they made on a special machine?

A. No, a single needle.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were you employed at the company in the spring [fol. 5546] of 1937? A. I was.

Q. Do you recall strikes at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants, during the spring of that year?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you read in the paper about the strikes?

A. Yes.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit 16, which is the front page of the Kansas City Times for March 18, 1937, and it contains pictures at the foot of the page; and I will ask you if you recall seeing those pictures there in the paper? A. Yes, I remember them.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibits 18 through 38, and ask you if you will look at those exhibits, and state whether or not you recall reading the articles that refer to the strikes.

* * * * * * *

A. I remember reading No. 18; I do remember reading No. 19; I remember reading No. 20; also 21; I read 22; I read 23; I remember 24; I remember 25; I remember 26; I remember 27; I remember 28; I remember 29; I remember 30; I don't remember reading 31; 32, I remember; and I remember 33; and I remember 34; and I remember 35; I remember 36, and I remember 37; I remember reading 38.

[fol. 5547] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. State what effect, if any, the reading of the articles that referred to violence at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants had upon you.

A. It made me very nervous and uneasy, I was afraid to go to and from work, really.

Q. Did you personally see any violence at the Missouri, Gernes and Gordon plants? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Were these articles generally discussed by the employees of the Donnelly plant? A. Yes.

Q. What effect, if any, so far as you could observe, did those articles have on other employees at the Donnelly plant?

A. As far as I could see, everyone resented it, and felt about the same way I did, afraid and uneasy.

Q. Did you hear that threats were made to use the same sort of violence against the Donnelly employees?

A. I heard that.

Q. Are you a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. Yes, I am.

Q. Were you one of the employees that joined the union when it was formed? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall about when it was that the Donnelly [fol. 5548] Garment Workers' Union was formed?

A. Well, it was about the same time the strike was going on over there, in April, I believe.

Q. Do you recall if it was about April 27?

A. I think so.

Q. Do you recall where the meeting was held at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, what part of the building? A. On the second floor.

Q. Do you recall what time of day that meeting was held?

A. I don't remember exactly what time, but it was after I finished my work, but I don't remember exactly what time the meeting was held—that we started the meeting, rather.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Green, Miss Spilsbury, Mr. Keyes, Mrs. Keyes, Mr. Bachofer or Ella Mae Hyde discuss the holding of this meeting with you?

A. They didn't.

Q. Did the instructor in the section in which you worked discuss the holding of the meeting with you?

A. No, she didn't.

Q. Did the thread girl discuss the holding of the meeting with you? A. No.

Q. Did anyone that you thought represented the management discuss the holding of this meeting with you?

[fol. 5549] A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did you believe that Rose Todd had authority to speak for the management with reference to labor matters?

A. I didn't believe that, no.

Q. Did you consider Rose Todd a boss? A. No.

Q. Did you consider instructors bosses?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you consider thread girls as bosses? A. No.

Q. Did any of the people that I have named suggest or request that you attend that meeting?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did any of the people that I have named suggest or request that you vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did you vote in favor of the forming of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Why did you vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Because I thought it was better for us, the employees, and because I felt safer if we had a union of our own.

Q. I believe you stated that you read respondent's ex-

[fol. 5550] hibit 35, which was an article in the Journal-Post with the heading, "Donnelly Worker will be sent to Union Convention." A. Yes, I read that.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did that influence you in any way in voting in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, it made me sure that I wanted to, more than before.

Q. State whether or not you wanted Sylvia Hull or the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to represent you. A. No, I didn't.

Q. State whether or not you considered this meeting where the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed a Loyalty League meeting.

A. No, I thought it had nothing to do with the Loyalty League.

Q. Did anybody tell you that that was a Loyalty League meeting? A. No.

Q. Do you recall whether or not Rose Todd presided at the meeting? A. Where our union was formed?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, she did.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd presided at the meeting [fol 5551] or took any part in the meeting lead you to believe that it was a Loyalty League meeting? A. No.

Q. Did you see Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Green, Mr. Keyes, Mrs. Keyes, Mr. Bachofer or Ella Mae Hyde at that meeting? A. No, I didn't.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you see Miss Spilsbury at the meeting.

A. No.

Q. Did you see anybody at that meeting that you thought represented the management? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you consider instructors or thread girls supervisors or bosses? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Was there any pressure or coercion of any kind brought to bear by anybody on you to force you to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I did it because I wanted to.

Q. Did you do it of your own free will?

A. Yes, I did.

[fol. 5552] Q. I believe you stated that you recall seeing the pictures that are in the Kansas City Times March 18, 1937, which is respondent's exhibit 16.

A. Yes, I remembered them.

Q. I believe you stated that you read the article that appeared in the Kansas City Star of March 17, which is respondent's exhibit 27; the article is entitled: "Sitters Block a Door."

A. Yes, I read that.

Q. Now, do you recall on or about that time, March 17 or 18, whether or not the employees held a meeting?

A. Yes; I couldn't say it was just at that time, I don't remember the dates, but it was around that time that that was happening.

Q. And the strikes had started at these other plants?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall why the employees held the meeting?

A. Well, we felt that we wanted to do something, and we didn't know exactly what we wanted to do, and we had a meeting to—different people expressed their feelings about it; I don't remember exactly what was said, or anything like that, but that was the reason.

Q. Will you state whether or not there was a discussion of the violence at these other strikes?

A. That was the main discussion at that meeting.

[fol. 5853] Q. Was anything said about the employees taking action to protect themselves?

A. We wanted to, but we didn't know exactly how to go about it, but we talked about it.

Q. Now, do you recall where that meeting was held?

A. On the second floor.

Q. Do you recall the time of day?

A. No, not exactly. It was after I finished work, and I was working then—I got off at 4:30, and it was after I finished work, but I went down before I dressed.

Q. In any event, it was after you had finished your work for the day?

A. After I had finished my work for the day, yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, then, you went down in your uniform?

A. I went down in my uniform so I could get a better seat. Some of the girls were getting off earlier than I was at that time.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mr. Green, Mrs. Reeves, Miss Spilsbury, Mr. Bachofer, Mr. or Mrs. Keyes, or Ella Mae Hyde discuss with you the holding of that meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did your instructor discuss the holding of that meet-
[fol. 5554] ing with you? A. No, she didn't.

Q. Did the thread girl discuss the holding of the meeting with you? A. No.

Q. Do you recall how you happened to go to the meeting?

A. I don't remember. I don't remember who told me there was a meeting or how I happened to go, but, however, I knew that there was a meeting.

Q. Do you recall whether or not Mrs. Reed was called down to that meeting?

A. That is the first meeting that we had while this violence was going on?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, someone went after Mrs. Reed; I don't know who it was.

Q. Do you recall Mrs. Reed making a talk?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed state that the plant would be closed if it was unionized?

A. I'm sure she didn't say that.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed state that she would not let Dubinsky tell her how to run her business?

A. I don't remember her saying that.

Q. Do you recall anything that Mrs. Reed said with reference to the rights employees had to join or not join a [fol. 5555] labor organization?

A. She said something like that, about we had a right to do as we pleased, but I don't remember the words that she said.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit 12, and ask you if you will read that exhibit.

* * * * * * *

A. I remember her speech that she made that day.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall Mrs. Reed stating, "If you want to belong, that is your own business and it is up to you to decide."

A. I remember her saying that.

Q. Do you recall her saying: "I will say that neither Dubinsky nor any other Buttinsky is going to intimidate me or the company into forcing you to join the International against your will."

A. I remember that.

Q. Do you recall Mrs. Reed stating: "We are trying to make arrangements with the street car company for its buses to go to certain points and to pick you people up and [fol. 5556] bring you to the plant. We will let you know about this as soon as arrangements can be made."

Mr. Langsdale: Just a minute; before she answers I wish to object to this method of examination, showing the witness the purported transcript of what Mrs. Reed said, and having her read it over, and then taking the purported transcript back to his own chair and asking her if the things she just read in that transcript were true and were said. It is leading and suggestive, and an improper method of examination of his own witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you recall the question, Mrs. Garrett?

Mr. Ingraham: Will you read the question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Do you recall Mrs. Reed stating: "We are trying to make arrangements with the street car company for its buses to go to certain points and to pick you people up and bring you to the plant. We will let you know about this as soon as arrangements can be made.")

A. Yes, I remember that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, is this exhibit, respondent's exhibit 12, a correct transcript of what Mrs. Reed said, so far as you can remember?

. . . . . .

[fol. 5557] A. As far as I can remember, yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did Mrs. Reed read any letter at that meeting?

A. I don't recall it.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit 41 and ask you if you recall this circular being distributed by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union girls in front of the plant? Will you please read it?

A. I remember reading something to this effect, I don't know just whether it was handed to me outside of the plant or some girl gave it to me the next day, or just how, but I read something like that.

[fol. 5558] Q. That was in the form of a circular like this?

A. I am sure that it was.

Q. Did you always take the circulars that the International girls handed out?

A. I always have when they handed me one as I went out.

Q. Do you recall whether anybody read this circular at this meeting on March 18?

A. No, I never heard anyone read it.

Q. Did you hear any letter read?

A. No.

Q. Did the employees take any kind of action at that meeting of March 18, with respect to getting protection or doing anything about protecting themselves?

A. Well, it seems to me we appointed a committee or something, to—it was discussed at the meeting, I don't just exactly remember what we did do.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5559] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall whether a committee was designated to obtain legal advice?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5560] A. I can't say for sure, but it seems to me that there was; we had discussed it, I do know that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Garrett, was there any meeting held between this meeting of March 18 and the meeting of April 27 at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Do you remember about when that meeting was held?

A. Oh, I think it was along about the first of March, or something like that.

Q. Do you mean the first of April?

[fol. 5561] A. The first of April, I mean the last of March or the first of April.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mr. Green, Miss Spilsbury, Mr. and Mrs. Keyes, Mr. Bachofer, or Ella Mae Hyde discuss the holding of that meeting with you?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did any instructor or thread girl discuss the holding of that meeting with you?

A. No.

Q. Did any of these people I have just named suggest, or request that you attend the meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did you go to that meeting of your own free will?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you recall where the meeting was held?

A. On the second floor.

Q. And do you recall what time of day?

A. Well, it was after my working hours, and after the first meeting I always dressed before I went down, so I was in my street clothes at that meeting.

Q. Now, do you recall what was done at that meeting?

A. Well, we discussed money for a retaining fee for an attorney, and decided how much each would give.

Q. Do you recall how much it was decided each would give?

A. 50¢ each.

[fol. 5562] Q. Did you give 50¢ at that meeting?

A. Not that night.

Q. When did you give your 50¢?

A. The next day.

Q. Did you consider this meeting a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, it was not.

Q. Did anybody discuss with you the fact that this was a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, I never heard that.

Q. Did you make your contribution of 50¢ to the Loyalty League?

A. No, I gave it to some girl in the section, I have forgotten who she was now.

Q. Well, did you intend that the 50¢ be used for any Loyalty League purpose?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did any of the people I have named request you to make a contribution of 50¢?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did you do that of your own free will?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you feel that you would be penalized by the company if you did not attend that meeting?

A. Well, I didn't stop to think about being penalized by the company, I thought it was for my own benefit to [fol. 5563] attend it, so I attended it.

Q. Did you feel that you would be penalized by the company if you did not give the 50¢?

A. No.

Q. Have you felt that if you did not attend any meeting that you have testified about, that you would be penalized by the company?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You attended the meeting of your own free will?

A. Always.

Q. Are you a member of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall when you joined the Loyalty League?

A. Shortly after I went to work there.

Q. Did you feel that you would be penalized by the company if you did not join the Loyalty League?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you join the Loyalty League of your own free will?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall whether or not you paid any dues in the Loyalty League?

A. I never did.

Q. Did you authorize the Loyalty League to represent you in any labor matters?

A. No.

[fol. 5564] Q. Did you ever hear of the Loyalt League dealing with the company in regard to terms and conditions of labor?

A. I never did.

Q. Did you ever understand that the Loyalty League sponsored the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No.

[fol. 5565] Q. Do you recall any meeting of the Loyalty League that immediately preceded or immediately followed a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall at any Donnelly Garment Workers' meeting discussing raising money for the Loyalty League?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall of any business of the Loyalty League ever being discussed at a Donnelly Garment Workers' meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd was president of the Loyalty League at the time that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed lead you to believe that the Loyalty League was promoting the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, it didn't.

Q. What activities did the Loyalty League engage in?

A. Well, social affairs, and things like that, as far as I know. That's all I ever knew of them doing.

Q. What do you mean by "social affairs"?

A. Such as picnics, dances, carnivals, and things like that.

Q. Was any pressure or coercion brought to bear on you by the Loyalty League or anyone representing it to cause you to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No.

[fol. 5566] Q. Was any pressure of any kind ever brought to bear on you by the Loyalty League or anyone representing the Loyalty League to cause you not to join the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. No.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 6 and ask you to read this exhibit, which is an article that appeared in the Kansas City Times of February 26, 1937.

* * * * * *

Q. Do you recall reading that article?

A. I remember reading it.

Q. Do you recall any part of the article that stated, "The union claims only 25 members among the Donnelly workers but officials said hundreds of others are related to union members. 'Within a year we will have it completely organized,' Perlstein said. 'As soon as we have enough members, we will call a strike.' "?

A. I remember reading that.

Q. What did you think about that statement with reference to calling a strike?

A. Well, I didn't like the idea of the strike and I didn't think we would ever strike.

Q. Did you want to strike?

A. I wouldn't, no.

Q. Did you want the International to call a strike?

[fol. 5567] A. No, I didn't.

Q. Why didn't you?

A. Well, just because there was always violence at all of these strikes, and I didn't care for that, and then, I didn't—I was afraid, in other words, that if they came and called a strike we would have the same violence they had had at other places.

Q. (Reading) "He also stated, 'This will be in addition to carrying our side to the consumers.' "

Did you want that done?

A. No.

Q. What did you think he meant by that threat?

A. Well, I didn't know exactly.

Q. State whether or not you thought that Mr. Perlstein meant to cause the Donnelly products to be boycotted when he stated, "Part of the union's campaign against the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union will be to send six women to cities and towns where its garments are sold".

A. What did I think of that?

Q. Did you consider that was a boycott, the threat of a boycott?

A. That's what I would call it.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What is a boycott?

A. Well, it's where you go and tell someone else that you don't like what someone else is doing, I think, and ask [fol. 5568] them not to patronize them.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Was that article generally discussed by the employees of the Donnelly plant?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. What effect, if any, did that article have on other employees, so far as you observed?

A. Well, they felt the same way I did about it, as far as I could observe. They didn't like it any better than I did.

Q. Do you recall a petition being circulated among the Donnelly employees a few days after that article appeared in the paper?

A. I don't remember right now.

Q. I will hand you L. L. G. W. U.'s exhibit No. 10 and ask you if you recall signing a petition that had the same language at the top of the page that appears on this exhibit, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at 5961.

A. Yes, I signed that.

Q. Do you recall whether or not you signed that on or about March 2, 1937?

A. It was before Mrs. Reed spoke to us that day.

Q. Do you recall whether it was on or about March 2?

A. Sometime along there.

Q. Who presented you with the petition?

A. There were two girls; one of them handed it to me. I [fol. 5569] don't know their last names. I know they were Mary and Inez, but I don't know their last names.

Q. Where were you when the petition was presented to you?

A. I was working.

Q. Did the girls say anything to you?

A. They asked me to read it and asked me if I would like to sign it.

Q. Did you want to sign it?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did you sign it of your own free will?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Green, Miss Spilsbury, Mr. or Mrs. Keyes, Mr. Bachofer, or Ella Mae Hyde request you to sign this petition?

A. No one did, except the two girls asked me if I would like to.

Q. Did you feel you would be penalized if you did not sign the petition?

A. No.

Q. Did the petition express your feelings?

A. It did.

Q. Did you want Mrs. Reed to know your feelings?

A. I wanted her to, yes.

Q. Did any instructor or thread girl discuss with you in any way this petition?

A. No.

[fol. 5570] Q. Did you believe that this petition was being circulated by the Loyalty League?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you hear anybody say that the petition was circulated by the Loyalty League?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you understand or gain the impression in any way that this petition was circulated by the company?

A. No.

Q. Going back to the meetings that you have testified about, did you feel that because instructors or thread girls attended any of those meetings, that that meant that the company was sponsoring the meetings?

A. No, I didn't feel that way at all.

Q. Did you feel that because instructors or thread girls joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, that meant that the company was sponsoring the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did the attendance or presence of instructors, or thread girls at the meeting of April 27, where the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, cause you to feel any compulsion to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No.

Q. Did the article which is contained in exhibit No. 6 [fol. 5571] and purported to quote Mr. Perlstein—did that article have anything to do with your desire to sign the petition of March 2 which I just showed you?

A. Well, it really made me want to.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 7, which is an article which appeared in the Kansas City Journal-Post of March 6, 1937, and appears on page 4865 of the Circuit Court record, and ask you to please read that exhibit.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall ever reading that article?

A. Yes, I read it.

Q. Did the fact that Mr. Dubinsky said, "Mr. Reed said many harsh things about me during the recent political campaign." cause you to be influenced in any way against the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. No. I thought that was purely a difference between the two men.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Reed make any political speeches in the 1936 campaign?

A. I heard some of them, yes.

Q. Did you ever hear him say anything about Mr. [fol. 5572] Dubinsky in any of those speeches?

A. I don't recall it.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will hand you Board's exhibit No. 27, which is an article that appeared in the Kansas City Times of May 11, 1937, and ask you if you will just glance at that and state whether or not you read that article.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5573] A. I read this article.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did anything that Senator Reed said with reference to Mr. Dubinsky or the I. L. G. W. U. influence you in any way against the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. No, it didn't.

Q. I want to direct your attention to the article that appeared in the paper, stating "Donnelly worker will be sent to union convention." That is respondent's exhibit No. 35. It appeared in the Journal-Post of April 22, 1937. Did you work the day following the 22d?

A. Yes, I did.
Q. What floor did you work on?
A. Seven.
Q. Was there a general discussion of that article among the employees?
A. There was. Some girls brought the article in to work with them.
Q. Did you know Sylvia Hull?
A. No. I never saw Sylvia Hull.
Q. Did you know Fern Sigler?
A. No.
Q. Did you go up on the eighth floor that morning?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. Did you go down to the sixth floor?
A. No.
[fol. 5574] Q. You didn't see either of those girls?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. Have you continued to remain a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will? A. Yes, I have.

Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Lane:
Q. Mrs. Garrett, what section were you working in in March and April of 1937?
A. I don't know the number of the section, but it was on the seventh floor. I don't remember the number.
Q. Do you remember who your instructor was?
A. Grace Gnotta.
Q. Was that a special section? A. No.
Q. What kind of work were you doing in that section at that time? A. Single-needle operations.
Q. Straight sewing? A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember approximately how long you worked in that section at that period?
A. How long I had worked?
[fol. 5575] Q. Yes.
A. At that time, I think about a year.
Q. Did you continue working in that section for some time after March and April, 1937?
A. About a year afterwards.

Q. Was Grace Gnotta your instructor during that whole two-year period? A. Yes, she was.

Q. Do you know who the thread girl was?

A. I had three different ones while I was in that section. Q. Who were they?

A. I don't remember their last names.

Q. Give me their first names.

A. Anna, Mary, and Edna.

Q. What did Grace Gnotta do as instructor of that section?

A. When we didn't understand how to make a certain garment, she showed us how to do it.

Q. Did she, so far as you know, ever hire anybody to work in that section, any operators? A. No.

Q. Did she ever fire any operators, so far as you know? A. No.

Q. Did you ever see her discipline any girls in that section? A. I can't say I ever did.

[fol. 5576] Q. Did you consider Grace Gnotta your boss or supervisor? A. No.

Q. What did these thread girls do?

A. Matched the thread with materials and gave us the right kind of thread.

Q. Did you consider any of those thread girls your boss or supervisor? A. No.

Q. Did you consider Grace Gnotta or any one of these thread girls was held out by the company as a representative of the management or spokesman for the management in connection with any labor matters?

A. No, I didn't consider them that at all.

Q. Did you know Rose Todd in March and April of 1937? A. I knew her by seeing her there.

Q. How long had you known her?

A. Since I had been working for the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. And you started there in 1936, I believe? A. Yes.

Q. What had you observed Rose Todd doing?

A. Well, she would come into our section and get an old bundle that had been laid back for a long time and matched it up so that it could be completed.

Q. Was there anything else you saw her doing in your section?

[fol. 5577] A. Not in our section.

Q. Did you see her doing anything else at any other place in the plant?

A. No. I only saw her when she came into our section.

Q. Did Rose Todd ever say anything to you that indicated that she held herself out as being a supervisory employee or a superior employee? A. No, she didn't.

Q. Did anybody on the part of the management, or anybody else, ever say anything to you to indicate that Rose Todd was a supervisor? A. No.

Q. Did you know Hobart Atherton?

A. I knew him by seeing him around there.

Q. Did you know what his job was in March and April of 1937? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Was there anything he ever did to give you the impression that he was a supervisor of the company.

A. No.

Q. Did you know Sally Ormsby?

A. I knew her just by seeing her, at that time.

Q. Did you know what she did?

A. She was an operator.

Q. Do you know where she worked? A. No, I don't.

[fol. 5578] Q. Did you know Ethel Riegel in March and April of 1937? A. Only by seeing her.

Q. Do you know what she did?

A. She was an operator.

Q. Did you know Arch Lile? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you know Lena Faulconer? A. No.

Q. Did you know Eva Liebermann? A. Yes.

Q. What did she do? A. She was an operator.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Riggs, on the ninth floor?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you know Lyle Jeter? A. Yes.

Q. What did he do? A. A mechanic.

Q. Did you know Carl Crawford? A. Yes.

Q. What was his job?

A. In the cutting department.

Q. Did you know Cordelia Taylor? A. No.

[fol. 5579] Q. Leona Moore? A. No.

Q. Did you know Ellen Nokes? A. No.

Q. Virginia White? A. No.

Q. Fred Brown? A. I knew him.

Q. Did you know what he did? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you know Mamie Riddle? A. I knew her.

Q. What did she do? A. An operator.
Q. Did you know Anna Richards? A. No.
Q. Marjorie Green? A. I knew her, but not well.
Q. Did you know where she worked?
A. In the office, I'm pretty sure.
Q. Did you know Jack McConaughey? A. Yes.
Q. Where did he work? A. In the mechanics' cage.
Q. Did you know Charlotte Casey? A. No.
[fol. 5580] Q. Hazel Saucke? A. Yes.
Q. What did she do? A. An operator.
Q. Did you know Anna Reese? A. Yes.
Q. What did she do? A. An operator.
Q. Was there anybody whom I have named or anybody who participated in any way in the meeting of April 27, at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, that you consider to be a supervisory employee?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment.

Will you read that question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the question for the reason that it assumes she knew everyone who was there and what they did and what their ability was. That is not based upon those she knew, but the question says, "Was there anybody there that in any way had any authority?"

Mr. Reed: Let's have the question read again, please.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question again.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5581] Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.
A. There was not.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Lane:
Q. Was there anybody who participated in that meeting that you considered to have a superior position over other employees?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment.

I object to the question for the reason that it is indefinite and uncertain as to what he means by "participated in that meeting." Does that mean, attended the meeting?

Mr. Lane: Either by speaking at the meeting or by attending the meeting.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the question for the same reason that I objected to the last question. It assumes this witness knew everybody who was there at that meeting and what their authority was.

Mr. Lane: Of course, the witness can only answer as to what her observation and knowledge was.

Mr. Langsdale: You didn't base it on her knowledge.

Mr. Lane: That was my question whether there was [fol. 5582] anybody she considered that. She can answer what she considered—

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume a question of that type, if it is answered, it is on the basis of what the witness may know.

Mr. Lane: I am inquiring as to this witness' knowledge or information.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, on cross-examination you may determine what her knowledge is of it—how extensive it is.

Mr. Lane: Now, will you read the question, please, Miss Reporter?

(Thereupon the last question was reread by the reporter, as follows:

"Was there anybody who participated in that meeting that you considered to have a superior position over other employees?")

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Well, I wouldn't say that they were superior. They probably drew more money, some of them, but I wouldn't say they were superior.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Well, there were many operators who got more money than other operators, weren't there? A. Yes.

Q. You didn't consider the operators who got more [fol. 5583] money as having a superior position, as far as the company was concerned, than the other operators who got less money? A. No.

Q. You voted at that meeting in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. I did.

Q. Did you at the time you cast that vote think you were doing so of your own free will? A. I did.

Q. Was that your voluntary choice at that time?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Did you believe when you cast that vote that you were in any way being dominated, influenced, or coerced by the company in coming to that decision? A. I did not.

Q. Was it your feeling that you were doing what you were doing because you, as an employee, wanted to do that thing? A. Yes.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5584] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Can you state any instance or fact that you know of, anything said or done by any official of the company that led you to act one way or another at that meeting with regard to forming a union?

A. No.

Q. Had you, prior to that meeting of April 27th, given any thought, yourself, to the matter of forming an independent plant union?

A. Well, I had thought about it but I didn't know whether it was possible to be done or not.

Q. Had you discussed that with any other employees?

A. We had talked about it, several of us.

Q. Did you attend meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union after its formation on April 27, 1937?

A. Did I attend meetings?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. I will show you Board's exhibit 8-12 beginning at page 4406 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record and ask you to look briefly at the minutes of May the 11th, 1937, and state whether or not you attended that meeting?

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you attend that meeting?

[fol. 5585] A. I attended this meeting.

Mr. Reed: What is the date of that meeting?

Trial Examiner Batten: May 11th.

Mr. Lane: May 11th, 1937.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. I will ask you whether or not you would recall Rose Todd said substantially this at that meeting, "You realize now Mr. Tyler is representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and he will have to be paid. I expect a good many of you are wondering what he is going to charge. I talked to him in some detail and I am sure you will feel that he is quite right in the answer he gave me. He doesn't know what his answer will be because it depends on how much trouble we cause him and how much work he will have to do for us. The union does have to be self-supporting in every detail. Being a thoroughly reliable group of employees we can take care of our own financial obligations."

Mr. Langsdale: Just a minute before she answers that question. I object to this method of examination, counsel having shown the witness the minutes of May the 11th and having her read them over and then going back to the counsel table and reading over those minutes and asking the witness after he has shown her what was done, whether or not that thing happened; it certainly is leading and suggestive to the nth degree.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5587] A. Yes, I remember her saying that.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you personally believe that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union should be self-supporting?

A. I certainly did.

Q. Was there, so far as you know, any financial contribution made by anybody to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union other than by the dues of the members and the assessments of the members?

[fol. 5588] A. Not that I ever knew of.

Q. Was there ever a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting at which you discussed the matter of raising funds for the Loyalty League?

A. No.

Q. Was there ever any time that you can recall when a meeting of the Donnelly Union was immediately preceded or immediately followed by a meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. No, there never was.

Q. Was there ever any occasion when Rose Todd said that a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was going to be two meetings, one of the union and another meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. No, she never said that.

Q. Would you look just briefly now at these minutes of May 25th, being Board's exhibit 8-21, appearing at page 4415 of the Circuit Court record and state whether or not you attended that meeting of May 25th?

Mr. Langsdale: Will you read that question, please?

Mr. Langsdale: Now, I object to the question, he having handed to this witness certain purported minutes with the assumption they are genuine; she should be asked to read them herself and tell. There is a very decided dispute as to whether these are the correct minutes or the ones Miss Greenhaw reported; when he takes his own witness and [fol. 5589] hands her the minutes and says, "These are the minutes of that meeting you attended," I say that is leading and suggestive.

Trial Examiner Batten: But the question to the witness now is, did you attend this meeting.

Mr. Langsdale: Yes, those minutes of this meeting which they say are the correct minutes.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may look at them. Do you know, did you attend that meeting?

A. I think I did, as much as I have read of it; I remember it anyway.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Well, read as much as you need to to refresh your recollection as to whether you attended it or not.

A. Yes, I remember I did attend this meeting.

Q. Where was that meeting held?

A. On the second floor.

Q. Were there any employees of the Donnelly Company at work during the time that meeting was held on the second floor?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that question as immaterial. There isn't anything in the minutes even that have been shown her, or in the Elsie Greenhaw minutes that indicates the fact that there was anyone working on that floor. Of course, that is a misinterpretation of the minutes of Elsie Greenhaw, and also of the minutes that he has shown her.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question to the witness is, was there anybody working on that floor at the [fol. 5590] time of the meeting; is that it?

Mr. Lane: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she may answer.

A. There was not.

[fol. 5591] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Well, I will now show you the so-called Greenhaw minutes, being Board's exhibit 18-A, beginning on page 4709 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record and ask you to read that.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the characterization of counsel of the minutes which tells the witness before she reads them that they are not genuine in his opinion.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I think it would be better if the words "so-called" were left out.

Mr. Lane: All right, I will say the Greenhaw minutes, leave out the words "so-called".

Trial Examiner Batten: Let's proceed. Of course I don't suppose any counsels' characterizations of an exhibit or the witnesses' testimony is evidence that would be binding upon anybody.

Mr. Lane: Well, isn't that the phrase that is used for identification of this instrument, the so-called Greenhaw minutes?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's proceed.

Mr. Lane: Does "so-called" imply anything?

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, I wasn't directing my remarks at you, I was directing my remarks at all counsel. You counsel can make any statement you want, and if you [fol. 5592] want to testify I will have you be sworn and come up here.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you attend any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in May 1937 that convened at 3:30 or 3:45 in the afternoon?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever attend any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on May 25, 1937, at which Hobart Atherton said: "As Miss Todd has already told you we have only one debt of the Loyalty League. A good many of you seem to be under the impression we have accumulated quite a lot of bills as we have gone along, but we have only one." Did Hobart Atherton ever say that at a union meeting that you attended?

A. I couldn't have known just what was said there.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. At the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union which you said you have attended on May 25, 1937, was there any discussion by anybody about raising money for any purpose of the Loyalty League?

A. Oh, no, there never was.

[fol. 5593] Q. Did Hobart Atherton at that meeting say this: "As Miss Todd has already told you, we have only one debt of the Loyalty League. A good many of you seem to be under the impression we have accumulated quite a lot of bills as we have gone along, but we have only one."?

A. I don't remember him saying that.

Q. Did Rose Todd say at that meeting: "I want to tell you this is going to be two meetings, the first being a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and after that a meeting of the Loyalty League."?

A. No, she didn't say that.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. I will ask you to state whether at the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on that date Hobart Atherton said this: "You all realize when this agitation first started, we didn't have any union started and it was up to some organization to take the initial step to protect our rights as employees of the Donnelly Garment Company. So the Loyalty League had a meeting of the representatives and were authorized by the representatives to retain legal counsel. We retained Mr. Tyler, as you all know. He came down here and talked to us. That debt, the bill of Mr. Tyler is the only debt the Loyalty League has which has not [fol. 5594] been paid and as Miss Todd told you, that is not pressing." Did Hobart Atherton ever say that at a Union meeting?

A. I never heard Hobart Atherton say that.

Q. Was there, at the union meeting of May 25th a motion made that the union meeting be adjourned and that a Loyalty League meeting be immediately opened?

A. No.

Q. Did you, in March or April of 1937, have any section club that you belonged to?

A. Yes, we did have.

Q. What was it called?

A. I don't remember the name of it; I belonged to the club in our section, I know.

Q. Did you have officers?

A. Yes, we did have.

Q. Did you pay any dues?

A. No.

Q. What did you do?

A. Oh, we would just go out to dinner and to a show sometimes.

Q. Was that club in existence when you began working there in 1936?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Did it continue in existence after April, 1937?

A. Yes, I am sure it did.

[fol. 5595] Q. Was it still in existence in July 1939, as far as you know?

A. I don't know, I wasn't on that floor any more.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Tyhurst in April 1937?

A. Yes, I knew her.

Q. What did she do?

A. Well, I would call her an inspector, she would go through the sections and examine the work as it went through.

Q. Did you consider her a boss or a supervisor?

A. No.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Bogart?

A. No, I didn't know her.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Gray?

A. Yes, I knew her.

Q. What did she do?

A. She was a clerk in the store.

Q. How frequently were you in that store yourself?

A. Oh, just about every day.

Q. What did you see Mrs. Gray doing?

A. Waiting on the girls.

Q. Did you consider Mrs. Gray a supervisor of the company?

A. No.

Q. Or a boss over anybody?

A. No.

Q. Did you know Marvin Price?

[fol. 5596] A. Yes, I knew him.

Q. What did he do?

A. I don't know exactly, something mechanically, I think.

Q. Did you consider him a boss or a supervisor?

A. No.

Q. Did you know Ted Scoles?

A. No, I didn't know him.

Q. Did you consider any of the persons I have named that you say you knew, as persons who were held out by the company as being representatives of the management in connection with labor matters?

A. No.

Q. Or entitled to speak for the management?

A. No.

Q. Did you know Miss Strickland?

A. Yes, I knew her.

Q. What was her job?

A. She worked in the patterns.

Q. Did you consider her a supervisor or a boss?

A. No.

Q. Did you belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union from the time of its formation down to July 15, 1939, of your own volition and your own free will?

A. I did.

[fol. 5597] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was Rose Todd wearing a uniform at the April 27th meeting?

A. No, she was not.

Q. Did you ever see Rose Todd wear a uniform?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Who asked you to join the Loyalty League?

A. Some girl in my section, I don't remember who she was.

Q. Whom did you consider a representative of the management?

A. I considered Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Green, and Mr. Baty and Mrs. Hyde, that is all I can think of now.

Q. Those are the only persons you consider representatives of the management that you can think of at the present time?

A. At the present time, yes.

Q. Did you attend any meetings of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you remember who presided at those meetings?

A. I believe Rose Todd did.

Q. Where were those meetings held?

A. I don't remember now where they were held.

Q. Were they in some vacant floor of the building in which the plant is located?

A. I don't remember that, I never went to but one or two meetings, and I don't remember.

Q. Was it in some other building?

A. No, it was in the building, our building.

[fol. 5598] Q. How long after you went to work was it before you joined the Loyalty League?

A. Oh, I couldn't say exactly; I imagine it was maybe a month or something like that.

Q. Do you know any officers of the Loyalty League other than Rose Todd?

A. Well, we had a representative in the section.

Q. Do you know who the representative in your section was?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember how the representative in your section was chosen?

A. Through votes by the girls in our section.

Q. Was it by passing a ballot around among the girls at their machines?

A. They would suggest — as they would pass it around each girl would suggest a representative that she thought she would like, and it was passed all around and each one would vote which one they preferred.

Q. That is, first they passed a paper around and each girl would write the name of the one she wanted to nominate, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And the same paper went around, and you marked on it your vote, is that correct?

A. That's right.

[fol. 5599] Q. And that was while you were at your machines in your section; is that correct?

Mr. Reed: Just a moment. I couldn't hear the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. I don't remember whether we came back from lunch to do that or whether we were at our machines. I don't remember that.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you have a representative from your section in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Do we have?

Q. Did you have prior to July 15, 1939?

A. Yes, we did have.

Q. How were those chosen?

A. Through ballot voting.

Q. Just by your section?

A. I don't know whether that was the way or -- I don't remember.

Q. Was it the same way the Loyalty League representative was chosen?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you remember ever choosing a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union representative in the same manner you have described as used to choose the Loyalty League representative?

[fol. 5600] A. I don't remember it now.

Q. You don't know one way or the other?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever attend any meeting of any sort while you were employed by the Donnelly Garment Company prior to July 15, 1939, during working hours?

A. I don't think you would call it a meeting. I have gone down in my uniform during working hours to fashion shows and things like that, but that's all I remember.

Q. Did you ever hear Mrs. Reed speak except at the meeting of March [illegible], 1937?

A. Yes; when we would have our style shows she would always speak about something.

Q. Do you remember whether she ever mentioned labor matters in any of those speeches?

A. I can't recall that she did.

Q. At the March 18 meeting did you hear Mrs. Reed say:

"I want to say that I am awfully happy to have this opportunity to tell you how proud I was when those girls brought the petition out and—well, I have had a lot of nice things happen to me in my lifetime, but I have never had anything that made me so proud and so happy as that list of names that came to my house."?

A. I remember her saying something like that. I wouldn't say that those were the exact words.

[fol. 5601] Q. But you remember her saying she was happy to get the petition; is that correct?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Had you seen the picture in the newspaper of Mrs. Reed receiving that petition?

A. I saw it.

Q. Did you see any of the other girls sign the petition?

A. Yes, I saw the girls around me sign it.

Q. Where were you working at that time?

A. Where was I working?

Q. Yes.

A. On the seventh floor.

Q. And that was in Grace Gnotta's section?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who the thread girl was at that time?

A. No.

Q. If I mentioned the last names of some girls who were thread girls at sometime, and you had the first names you have given, do you think you would know whether those were the last names of the thread girls?

A. I might. I'm not sure.

Q. You mentioned an Anna. Could that have been Anna Barthal?

A. I don't remember whether that was her last name or not.

Q. You mentioned a Mary. Could that have been Mary Copowycz?

[fol. 5602] A. I don't know.

Q. You wouldn't remember the last names, yourself, at all, of these girls?

A. Well, I remember Mary's last name now, but I don't know what her last name was at that time.

Q. What is it now?

A. Mary Snedder.

Q. Snedden?

A. Snedder. And I don't know how to spell it.

Q. There is a Snedden—S-n-e-d-d-e-n—on the list here.

A. Maybe that's it.

Q. There is an Edna Binert. Would that be the Edna you mentioned?

A. Something similar to that was her last name, but I wouldn't say that was it.

Q. Did you ever hear it said around the plant by anyone that Mrs. Reed would close down her business before she would have the I. L. G. W. U. in her plant?

A. I never heard anyone say that.

Q. Did you ride the busses which the company provided?

A. Only one morning.

Q. Did you have a bus pass?

A. Yes. Well, I don't know whether I did or not. It seems to me I had something to show when I got on the bus—I'm pretty sure I did. But I only rode it one morning.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5603] Q. Do you know whether anyone who attended the meeting of April 27, at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, failed to join that organization at that time?

A. I didn't know of anyone, no.

Q. Do you know whether the instructors were present at that meeting?

A. I think that they were. I think that my instructor was, at least.

Q. Do you know whether Lena Tyhurst was at that meeting?

A. I don't remember. I don't know whether she was or not.

[fol. 5604] Q. Did you have any understanding about whether instructors were allowed to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I think they were. I don't know for sure, though.

Q. It was your impression that they were members; is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And that is true as to thread girls, too, is it?

A. At that time, yes.

Q. You said this morning that you had heard threats made that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union would use the same sort of violence at the Donnelly Garment Company. Could you tell us what threats you heard and who made them?

A. I don't remember who made them. It has been so long ago, I don't know whether I read it or whether I [fol. 5605] heard it, but I heard they were going to use the same methods of organizing us that they did the other garment plants here.

Q. You also testified that you felt it would be safer to have a union of your own. What did you mean by that?

A. I thought it would be protection for us. I thought that as a group we could protect ourselves better than each one individually.

Q. What protection do you have reference to?

A. I mean, that another union couldn't come in if we were organized.

* * * * * *

Q. You testified this morning that you thought the meeting of April 27 had nothing to do with the Loyalty League. When did you mean you thought that?

A. Was that the meeting where our union was formed?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I never considered the Loyalty League ever having anything to do with the union; I never even thought of it.

Q. Did you know who was calling the meeting before you went to the meeting?

[fol. 5506] A. I don't remember whether I knew it or not—whether I knew who was calling it or not.

Q. Was Rose Todd presiding when you got to the meeting? A. No, but she did after I got there.

* * * * * *

Q. Had you ever attended a meeting before that Rose Todd presided at, that was not a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No.

Q. All of the other meetings which you had attended at which she presided were Loyalty League meetings?

A. The Loyalty League meetings and union meetings are the only meetings I ever attended there.

Q. Do you remember how Loyalty League meetings were called? A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Do you know how Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings were called? A. Yes, I do.

Q. How were they?

A. By an i.d.m. sent to us by Miss Todd.

Q. And was that true of the first meetings you attended?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. But after the first few meetings you remember you [fol. 5607] got an i. d. m. from Miss Todd; is that correct?

A. I think so.

Q. Do you remember any officer of the Loyalty League at any time other than Rose Todd?

A. I remember Thelma Huffaker.

Q. Were you at the meeting at which she was elected?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Do you remember whether Rose Todd had her come up and say a few words after she was elected?

A. I don't know whether it was Rose Todd or someone else. I remember she came up and spoke after she was elected.

Q. Do you remember attending any meeting at which Thelma Huffaker presided? A. No, I don't.

Q. Did you ever attend a meeting at the Donnelly Garment Company of any sort at which there were no chairs?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. If your instructor was absent from your section for a period of time, who was in charge?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that question as improper. It has no foundation in the evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled. You may answer.

A. What do you mean, who was in charge?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. If the instructor was absent, who handed you your [fol. 5608] work?

A. If she was absent for a very short period?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, the thread girl handed us our work.

Q. And if the instructor was absent for a day or a week, who took her place?

A. Some other instructor—someone who could instruct, rather.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5609] Q. Do you know whether the union had a [fol. 5610] committee which passed on piecework prices for the union? A. I don't know that.

Q. You are a piecework worker, aren't you?
A. Yes.
Q. And you work substantially all of your time at piece rates; is that correct?
A. The bigger part of my time, yes.

* * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:
Q. And that was true from the time you went to work in 1936 until July 15, 1939; is that correct? A. That is.
Q. Referring to the period prior to July 15, 1939, do you remember any votes on matters at the Donnelly Gar-
[fol. 5611] ment Company which were not unanimous?
A. No, I can't remember any.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:
Q. Mrs.—is it Mrs. Garrett? A. Yes.
Q. You are a married woman? A. Yes.
Q. You have heard other witnesses testify in this hearing? A. Yes.
Q. What other witnesses?
A. Lydia Phillips and Ethel Riegel.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5612] Q. At the meeting you thought was about the first of April 1937—that is where you said you agreed to give 50 cents apiece—was Mrs. Reeves at that meeting?
A. Mrs. who?
Q. Mrs. Reeves. A. No, I didn't see her.
Q. Do you know whether she was there or not?
A. The only way I would have of knowing would be to see her, and I didn't see her.
Q. She could have been there and you didn't see her?
A. She could have been, but I don't think so.
Q. Was Mr. Baty there? A. I didn't see him.
Q. But you don't know whether he was there or not?
A. No, I don't.
Q. Was Ella Mae Hyde there?
[fol. 5613] A. I didn't see her.
Q. She might have been there and you not see her?
A. Possibly, but not probably.
Q. Do you know?

A. I don't know. I didn't see her.

Q. Were any of these people that were named by Mr. Ingraham—Mr. Green, was he there?

A. I didn't see him.

Q. You don't know whether he was there or not?

A. No, I don't know.

Q. Was Mr. Keyes there?

A. I didn't see him either.

Q. Was Mrs. Keyes there?

A. I didn't know Mrs. Keyes.

Q. Was Mr. Bachofer there? A. I didn't see him.

Q. Was Miss Spilsbury there? A. I didn't see her.

Q. But they may all have been there and you not see them?

A. If I didn't see them, I wouldn't have any way of knowing whether or not they were there.

Q. That's what I mean. Take the meeting of April 27, do you know whether any of these people whom I have named were at that meeting? A. April 27?

[fol. 5614] Q. Yes. That is the one when the union was formed, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

A. I didn't see any of those people there at that time.

Q. But you can't say they were not there?

A. Not definitely that they were not there, but I didn't see them.

Q. Now, at the meeting of April 1, was your instructor there? A. April 1?

Q. Well, the meeting where you say you agreed to give 50 cents apiece.

A. I don't remember whether she was there at that time or not.

Q. But you do remember she was at the meeting of April 27, when the union was formed?

A. I think she was, yes.

Q. Now, at this meeting of March 18, do you remember everything Mrs. Reed said?

A. No, I don't remember everything 5 years ago. I couldn't possibly remember everything she said.

Q. Wasn't she talking to you about the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union threatening violence to the employees of the Donnelly Company?

A. I don't remember that she said that. The part I remember that she did say concerning that was giving us safe transportation to and from work.

[fol. 5615] Q. Didn't she tell you you have been hearing of the strikes of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and threatening of violence?

A. I don't remember her saying exactly those words.

Q. Anything like that?

A. I remember she said something about she knew we were all upset, but I don't know whether she mentioned the violence or not. She said she would try to see about getting us safe transportation.

Q. Did her speech further upset you about the violence? A. No.

Q. Now, when you read of Senator Reed's calling Mr. Dubinsky a Bolshevist and Communist, did you believe Mr. Dubinsky was a Bolshevist or a Communist?

A. I didn't think a lot about that, because I thought that was just a difference between those two men and that was their own argument.

Q. But did you conclude that he was a Bolshevist or a Communist? A. I didn't think about it.

Q. You didn't give that any thought at all? A. No.

Q. Even though it was said by the attorney for the company you were working for?

A. I just didn't consider the matter any further.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5622] Q. What did Rose Todd say to you at the meeting which you have said was about April 1 about Mr. Tyler's fee?

A. I don't remember. She said that we would need some money for counsel, so— I don't remember just what she said.

Q. Did she tell you what the fee was?

A. I don't think she knew.

Q. On April 1? A. That's what I mean, yes.

Q. She didn't at that time know how much it was going to be? A. She said we would need about $500.

Q. Did she tell you how she knew that?

A. No. I don't know whether she did or not. I don't remember.

Q. She didn't tell you she had already paid Mr. Tyler, on the first of April, did she?

A. I don't remember her saying anything like that.

Q. Did you know she had? A. No.

Q. Rose Todd didn't tell the workers assembled there on that night that Mr. Tyler had already been paid?

A. I don't remember her telling us that.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5625] Q. Now, Lena Tyhurst, where did you come in contact with her? A. At my machine.

Q. How did you happen to do that?

A. She was looking at some work that we were doing that we didn't know exactly how to put together. She was looking at it—going to take it up and measure it with the pattern and see if it was right.

Q. How did she happen to come to your machine, do you know?

A. Because I wanted to know how to do it. My instructor wasn't just sure.

Q. Who sent for Mrs. Tyhurst? A. I don't know that.

Q. Your instructor? A. I don't know.

Q. Have you any recollection at all?

A. I suppose she called her to take the dresses to the patterns to see if they were right—I don't know.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5627] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you ever send for her when she wasn't on your floor? A. No.

Q. Now, do you know why anyone sent for Lena Tyhurst to come to your machine and look at your work?

A. Well, because if it isn't right and a lot of it goes through, it causes an awful lot of trouble, and if we don't think it is right it is taken to the patterns to see if it is exactly right, and then there is no more trouble about it.

* * * * * *

Q. Now, Marvin Price, where did you come in contact with him?

A. I have just seen Marvin Price round there.

Q. You didn't know what he was doing?

A. I knew he had something to do with the mechanics, but I didn't know what.

Q. You didn't know whether he was the boss down in [fol. 5628] the mechanical department or not?

A. Well, he didn't act like one, but I don't know what he was.

Q. What do you mean, "he didn't act like one"?

A. He didn't seem to be bossing anyone around.

Q. You were not in the mechanical department, were you?

A. No, but I never did see him come up and tell someone they had this to do when they were working on my machine or something.

Q. You were not down in his department at any time when he was there, were you?

A. I have been up to the cage when he was in there working.

Q. Do you know where his office was—where his desk was?

A. I didn't know he had an office or a desk.

* * * * * * *

Q. Now, when Mr. Lane asked you if any certain people were held out by the management to speak on labor matters, what did you understand him to mean?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5629] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. What did you understand Mr. Lane to mean by that question?

A. Someone I would consider a boss.

Q. Would you think that all bosses would be speaking for the management in labor matters?

A. I don't know what I would think about that.

Q. Did you know what he meant then,—Mr. Lane?

A. Just what I said is what I thought he meant?

Q. That is, you thought he was using that as synonymous with "boss"? A. Yes.

Q. You said you knew Lyle Jeter and that he was a mechanic? A. Yes, I said that.

Q. You didn't know whether he had the right to boss anybody else or not, did you?

A. No. I knew he worked on my machine; that's all I knew.

Q. But you don't know what he did when he wasn't working on your machine, do you?

A. Working on someone else's machine, is all I ever saw him do.

Q. That is all you ever saw him do? A. Yes.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5630] Q. Do you know Lulu Nichols? A. No.

Q. You never heard of Lulu Nichols?

A. No. I know a Mrs. Nichols, I think, but I don't know who she is. I have heard of her, but—

Q. Did you know she fixed prices for the company?

A. No, I didn't know it.

Q. You have never learned that since you have been there?

A. I know a Mike Nichols, but I don't know what she does.

Q. You haven't any idea what she does?

A. I really don't.

Q. Did you know Dewey Atchison?

A. I know Dewey Atchison, yes.

Q. Did you know what he was doing in April, 1937?

[fol. 5631] A. I haven't any idea.

Q. Was he at the meeting where your union was formed? A. I don't know that.

Q. Did you learn that he had become a member of your union on April 27, 1937? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Was he at the meeting you have described as having been held about the first of April, 1937?

A. I don't remember that. If he was, I don't know it.

Q. You don't know whether he gave 50 cents or not?

A. No, I don't.

Q. I think you testified that you had attended the meeting of May 11, 1937?

A. What did we do at that meeting? I don't remember the dates.

Q. That was the first meeting following the organization meeting.

A. I attended all of the meetings after that—most of the meetings after that.

Q. Well, just to be sure, I will show you a photostat of the minutes of that meeting. I don't mean for you to read them all through, but just take a glance at them and see if you read them this morning and said you had attended that meeting.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that 8-12?

[fol. 5632] Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Page 4406 of the Circuit Court record?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

A. (Referring to minutes.) I would have to read it a little more before I could remember.

Mr. Langsdale: All right. You just read to your heart's content.

(Thereupon the minutes above indicated were read by the witness.)

A. It seems to me I remember some of this. I don't remember all of it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you recall that in answer to Mr. Lane's question you said you had read those minutes and that they correctly reflected what had happened at that meeting?

A. I remember some of this. I can't remember it word for word like it is here.

Q. I don't mean that. But you remember the substance of it? A. Yes.

Q. You stayed throughout the meeting, didn't you?

A. I think so.

Q. Now, let me ask you if you remember this occurred at the meeting—if you remember that this question was [fol. 5633] asked by Miss Todd:

"If a new employee comes in, are you going to set a time before they have to become a member of the union?"

Do you remember that question?

A. I can't remember it.

Q. Do you remember Miss Todd saying:

"Anybody coming to work for us will join the union immediately and if there is any doubt in their mind about whether or not they want to join our union, then there is some doubt in their mind as to whether or not they want to work here."?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Do you remember she said something like that?

A. I don't remember anything like that at all.

Q. You don't remember that. But you do remember that she said, just prior to that, "You realize now that Mr. Tyler is representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and he will have to be paid." You remember all of that, do you?

A. Well, I remember— Was that May 11?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I remember something to that effect.

Q. And you remember she said, "I expect a good many of you are wondering what he is going to charge."

A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. You remember all of that? A. Well, that was—

[fol. 5634] Q. That was what?

A. That was to my interest.

Q. Was it to your interest that Rose Todd could say to the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company, "You will join this union or you will get out."?

A. I never heard Miss Todd say that.

Q. Do you say she didn't say it?

A. If she said it, I say I didn't hear her.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5636] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well now, do you remember, Miss Witness, whether you said this morning that correctly reflected the meeting?

A. I don't remember reading this article this morning.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you remember reading any part of it this morning?

A. I remember reading something about Miss Todd saying that it would cost something to have an attorney, and I remember I said that I read that, and remembered it.

Q. Now, didn't Mr. Lane give you the minutes and tell you to read them through? A. I don't know.

Trial Examiner Batten: If I remember correctly, Mr. Lane gave her the minutes and said he had had her look at them before, and said, "Will you look at them briefly and tell whether you attended this meeting." I think you used the word "briefly", if I recall correctly.

Mr. Lane: I think that's right.

By Mr. Langsdale:

[fol. 5637] Q. Well, had you read these minutes before you took the witness stand?

A. I don't know, I don't remember whether I had or not.

Q. Did you answer this morning, Mr. Lane's question that you had read them before?

Mr. Lane: That was not the question.

Mr. Reed: Now, we object to that because if she did answer, it is in the record, and I think the witness has now pretty plainly stated she did not read all of those minutes.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, if we are going to stall here—

Mr. Reed (Interrupting): I think the question asked by the Examiner himself clarified that very much.

Mr. Langsdale (Continuing): I call for the record there as to what she said in answer to Mr. Lane's question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you recall what you answered this morning, Miss Witness?

A. I don't recall. I think I just glanced at this this morning. I don't remember exactly whether I said I had read them or not, but I don't think I read this part this morning.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you read that part anywhere or any time before you took the witness stand this morning?

A. I don't remember it.

Q. Now, you don't remember it? A. No.

Q. You don't remember whether you told Mr. Lane this morning you had read these minutes?

[fol. 5638] A. I don't think I told him I had.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5641] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you, this morning, identify your signature on this petition, which occurs on page 5380 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Will you look at it and see?

Mr. Reed: If the Examiner please, there is no use taking any time identifying that signature. We admit it is her signature.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't care for the admission. Yesterday they wouldn't admit one.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let's proceed. The question to the witness is whether that is her signature.

A. Yes, that is.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Read the petition. Do you remember that wording of the petition that you signed on March 2?

A. Yes, I remember it.

Q. (Reading) "We, the undersigned, as members of the Donnelly Garment Company, wish to make it known we are positively happy and contented with the positions which we hold with this organization. We are thankful for the real humanitarian interest extended by our employer, Mrs. Reed." You remember that, do you?

A. Yes, I remember it.

[fol. 5642] Q. Now, did you really think you had any chance to refuse to sign that petition and stay on the job?

A. I didn't think it made a lot of difference whether I signed it or not.

Q. Well, did you think it might interfere with your position if you didn't sign it?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. It was passed to you down where your machine was?

A. That's right.

* * * * * * *

Q. And you knew it was going out to Mrs. Reed?

A. I suppose it was.

Q. You said you signed it because you wanted Mrs. Reed to know that?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, did you think every girl that signed this petition thought that if she failed to sign it she would lose her job?

. . . . . .

A. I only knew how I felt.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5644] Q. Now, let me call your attention to this part: "The employees of this company aren't only satisfied but on their own motion some months ago organized a Loyalty League to resist the activities of Mr. Dubinsky and his crowd." Do you remember reading that?

A. I don't remember just that part; I didn't read the complete thing this morning.

Q. Oh, I see. All you read was just the part Mr. Ingraham asked you about, is that it?

A. This morning I only read part of it.

Q. But I am talking about when you read it when it came out on May 11. Do you remember reading that part?

A. If that is the statement in the May 11 issue, I read all of it.

[fol. 5645] Q. Now, do you recall that part where Mr. Reed said the Loyalty League was organized to resist the activities of Mr. Dubinsky and his crowd?

A. I probably remembered that at the time, but I don't remember it now.

Q. Well, is that true, as far as you knew?

A. I never thought of the Loyalty League as that; I just thought of it as a club or something.

Q. Well, when you read this interview by Mr. Reed, did that cause you to think about it?

A. I don't remember whether it did or not.

Q. Do you have any reason to doubt it?

A. You mean any reason to doubt what Mr. Reed said?

Q. Yes.

Mr. Reed: I object to that as an improper question, and it is incompetent and immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

A. I don't remember what I thought about it.

Mr. Langsdale: You just don't have any recollection, but you do remember you read all about Mr. Reed saying harsh things about Mr. Dubinsky, calling him a Communist and a Bolshevist; you recalled that when Mr. Ingraham asked you the question?

A. I remember reading the speech, but I don't remember all about it.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5646] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You didn't know Rose Todd had been to the bank and borrowed a thousand dollars from the First National Bank in the name of the Loyalty League on the 30th of [fol. 5647] March, 1937, did you?

A. I didn't know that.

Q. She didn't tell you that on the night she was raising 50¢ per head?

A. Not that I heard, no.

Q. And you never did hear about that until you came to this trial, did you?

A. That's right, I never did.

Q. And you didn't know that on the next day, April 1st, the day you said this meeting was held, that Rose Todd had paid Mr. Tyler $500 by check on the First National Bank on the thousand dollars she borrowed from that bank; you didn't know that, did you?

A. I didn't know that, no.

Q. So you just went ahead and collected the 50¢ apiece as though Mr. Tyler hadn't been paid, is that correct?

A. We collected—we gave our 50¢.

Q. Yes. Now, could it be possible that you could be mistaken about the date and the time that the 50¢ was voted on, May 25 instead of on April 1st?

A. No, I am sure that it was before May 25.

Q. Why?

A. Well, I remember along about that time our union was formed, and I certainly remember it was not in May, it was in April.

[fol. 5648] Q. Now, do you know who the treasurer of the Loyalty League was at that time?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Do your know Pauline Hartman?

A. I don't know her personally, but I did know her.

Q. Didn't you know she was treasurer of the Loyalty League?

A. No, I didn't know that.

Q. And didn't you know that she collected all these 50¢ pieces that all of you contributed and took it to herself to keep?

A. Did I know that?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I didn't know that.

Q. And do you know she didn't put any of those 50¢ pieces in the bank until July 13, 1937?

A. No, I didn't know that.

Q. Did you know that on July 19, with those 50¢ pieces that you all gave, she paid $750 on that note?

A. No, I didn't know that.

Q. You didn't know any of those things?

A. No.

Q. So, of ecurse, you don't know anything about what the Loyalty League had to do with paying Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Lane: That is objected to as an assumption, a misstatement of the evidence.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5649] Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question, Mrs. Garrett?

A. Yes, I didn't know, I didn't know about that.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you know that Rose Todd had given a check to Mr. Tyler for $500 on the first of April, signed Donnelly Loyalty League, by Rose Todd, President, and Pauline Hartman, Treasurer?

A. No.

Q. You never learned that?

A. No.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5650] Redirect Examination.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Garrett, I believe you stated this morning that you did not consider the meeting of March 18, the meeting where Mrs. Reed spoke, a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, I didn't consider it a Loyalty League meeting.

Q. Did you consider the meeting that was held the last of March or the first of April a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No.

Q. I believe Miss Weyand asked you a question to the effect that, did Rose Todd preside at any meeting that was not a Loyalty League meeting or a union meeting, a Donnelly Garment Workers' meeting, and I believe you answered "no." Did you mean to include the meeting of March 18 and the meeting that took place the latter part of March?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that question as an effort to rehabilitate a witness after she has made an answer; it is his witness. She absolutely said she never had been at any meeting presided over by Rose Todd, which was not either a union meeting or a Loyalty League meeting.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question is—to leave it without asking whether she referred to two meetings—now, do you understand the question, Mrs. Garrett?

A. Yes, I understand.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

[fol. 5651] A. I didn't consider those meetings either Loyalty League or union.

Mr. Ingraham: I have just asked her that and she testified that she did not consider the March 18 or the March 30 meetings Loyalty League meetings, and I just wanted to know—

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you asking a question?

Mr. Ingraham: No, I am just explaining. You said you thought it shouldn't be asked that way.

Trial Examiner Batten: Oh, I simply said I didn't think —whether you should have asked her whether she meant to include those meetings. I thought you should have called it to her attention, what she had testified to, clearly, and asked her what she meant. I have no objection to your question. I think it was Mr. Langsdale that objected to it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. When was the union, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, organized?

A. It was organized sometime in April.

Q. After this meeting that you say occurred the latter part of March or the first of April?

A. Yes.

* * * * * * *

Recross Examination.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Was it the custom of employees to send slips of paper through the section giving notices about their per[fol. 5652] sonal affairs?

A. We had the privilege to do that.

Q. Well, was it customary to do that, for the employees to do that?

* * * * * * *

A. Well, the only way I could answer that, if we wanted someone to know something we could send a slip of paper to them.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Well, on what occasions do you recall notices were sent by the employees through the section by writing on a slip of paper?

A. In regard to our club—for instance, if we were planning something about our club, we could send that through our section; one girl could hand it on down the line.

Q. You didn't consider that was a notice sent out by the company?

A. Certainly not.

Q. Did any of the employees send notices for other purposes, making announcements about anything, that you can recall?

A. As far as I know, it has always been our privilege to send anything through that we wanted to.

Q. Well, state whether or not it was the custom or prac-
[fol. 5653] tice among the employees to simply designate all those notices that went through as i. d. m.'s?

* * * * * * *

A. I don't know just what they would be called. That is what I would think they were.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Well, when you said this morning a meeting was announced by an i. d. m. sent through the section by Miss Todd, did you believe that notice was a notice that had been circulated by the company?

A. No, I never thought of it as that.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5654] ALICE FREED, a witness called by and on behalf of the respondent, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

Mr. Ingraham: Where do you live, Mrs. Freed?

A. 3031 Troost.

Mr. Langsdale: What was that address?

A. 3031 Troost.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Are you employed? A. I am.

Q. Where? A. The Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. How long have you been employed at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I went there in July, 1936.

* * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: In what capacity were you employed?

A. As an operator.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5655] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were you working at the Donnelly Garment Company in the spring of 1937? A. I was.

Q. Do you recall strikes at the Missouri, Gernes, and Gordon plants that spring? A. I do.

Q. Do you recall reading in the newspaper about those strikes? A. I do.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit 16 and ask you if you recall seeing the front page of the Kansas City Times of March 18, and saw the pictures that appear at the bottom of that page? A. Yes, I saw them.

Q. I will now hand you respondent's exhibits 18 through 38 inclusive, and ask you if you will state whether or not you recall reading the articles that appear in those exhibits, and as you look through, will you please state the exhibits—whether or not you read the particular exhibit.

A. I remember reading exhibit 18; and I read 19; I [fol. 5656] don't remember for certain whether I read 20 or not; I think I read 21; I don't think I read 22; nor 23; I read 24; and I think I read 25; I read 26; also 27; I am not sure about 28; I think I read 29; and 30 I read; I don't remember whether I read 31 or not; I think I read 32; I know I read 33; and 34; in fact I was quite interested, I think I read most of them; and I read 35; also 36; and 37; and I read 38.

Q. You stated that you believed you read most of them because you were quite interested? A. I did.

Q. What did you mean by that?

A. Well, I was employed in a garment company and I was very interested in what was going on.

Q. Had you been up to the strikes at these other plants at that time? A. No, I had not.

Q. What effect, if any, did the reading of these articles that referred to strikes, have on you?

A. Well, they made me rather uneasy on account of the violence.

[fol. 5657] Q. Had you heard of any threats being made against Donnelly employees to use the same sort of violence against them?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that question as leading and suggestive.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think it is leading, but she may answer.

Mr. Langsdale: I wish to have a continuing objection to that form of questions of this witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection, Mr. Langsdale. Of course, I presume Mr. Ingraham is proceeding on the same basis as before, that where a witness has an independent recollection, he will pursue it, and if it appears she hasn't, he can then follow the other method.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

. . . . . .

A. Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were the strikes at these other plants discussed among the Donnelly employees? A. They were.

Q. What was the effect, so far as you could observe, on these other employees of these strikes?

A. Well, we all seemed to be under a rather nervous [fol. 5658] tension and wondering just what was going to happen.

Q. What caused you to believe that anything was going to happen?

A. Well, I thought if they were trying to organize those companies, they possibly would try to organize ours.

Q. With the same methods? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I did.

Q. Do you recall when you joined the union?

A. Well, I think it was about the last of April when we formed our union.

Q. You joined it when the union was formed?

A. That's right.

Q. Did the strikes and violence at these other plants have anything to do with your joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, I preferred to have a union of our own instead of an outsider.

Q. Well, did the strikes at these other plants cause you to want to have a union of your own? A. Yes.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Green, Mr. Baty, Mr. or Mrs. Keyes, Miss Spilsbury, Mr. Bachofer, or Ella Mae Hyde discuss with you the formation of a plant union? A. No.

[fol. 5659] Q. Did they discuss with you the holding of the meeting of April 27? A. No.

Q. Did any of those people I have mentioned request you to attend the meeting? A. They did not.

Q. Did any of the people that I have mentioned request you to vote to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. They did not.

Q. Do you recall the time of day that the meeting of April 27 was held?

Miss Weyand: I object to the question as purely cumulative. I think we have heard enough witnesses on this. It is my position that no other witnesses should be asked the time of day; any further questions on that is cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: Why is that any more cumulative than other questions?

Miss Weyand: I intend to object to questions if not entirely personal to the witness from now on as cumulative.

Mr. Reed: Are we to understand that these facts are to be taken as facts, then, and not controverted?

Miss Weyand: No. They are still controverted. I am saying, it is my position that any further questions that are not of a personal—

Mr. Lane: May I ask whether Board's counsel would be [fol. 5660] willing to stipulate that if the witnesses were asked such questions they would so testify?

Miss Weyand: No, I am not willing to so stipulate.

Trial Examiner Batten: My question is, if that is cumulative, there are a good many of these other matters that are. If that is cumulative, isn't any further testimony with respect to the meeting of April 27 cumulative?

Miss Weyand: Except insofar as the personal reactions of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Isn't that equally true of March 18?

Miss Weyand: That is true, in my view.

Trial Examiner Batten: Isn't it equally true of the meeting the last of March?

Miss Weyand: That is true, in my view.

Trial Examiner Batten: Isn't that true of May 11 and May 25?

Miss Weyand: Everything that is factual in the case, except the witness' own reaction, which is peculiar to the witness herself, is, in my view, cumulative; that is, as to the questions that have been asked, of course. They might have other questions—

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. I am referring, of course, to the questions that have been asked.

How about these newspaper articles, and so forth?

[fol. 5661] Miss Weyand: If the witness read them herself, it isn't cumulative. After all, she is the only Alice Freed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Her reaction to those articles, of course, is her own—

Miss Weyand: —her own personal reaction. But any further questions as to the facts are, in my view, cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, what is your position?

Mr. Ingraham: I am not clear on just what Miss Weyand means by "matters that are purely personal to the witness." I am now asking this witness about the time of the meeting of April 27.

Do I understand that your position is, Miss Weyand, that any further evidence would be cumulative and that any further witnesses that we would put on the stand would testify that the meeting was held after working hours?

Miss Weyand: It would be purely cumulative, in my opinion.

Mr. Ingraham: But do you admit that the witnesses would so testify?

Miss Weyand: No, I don't admit that they would so testify.

Trial Examiner Batten: Irrespective of how they would testify, your position is that any further testimony—

Miss Weyand: —by the company to prove that it oc-
[fol. 5662] curred after working hours is purely cumulative.

Mr. Ingraham: Then, it is Miss Weyand's position that she objects, after a number of witnesses have taken the stand and testified about, for instance, the time of day of this meeting—that any further evidence would be cumulative? And I suppose she will present evidence to the contrary. And then it will be said that there were so many witnesses on one side and so many on the other.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's assume she will—Let's assume that if I were to stop it now, she would present some witnesses; is it your position that 1,200 witnesses should state that was held after working hours?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, it is my position that unless Miss Weyand concedes that additional witnesses would testify as these witnesses have testified, we should then be permitted to put on further witnesses, if we so desire.

Trial Examiner Batten: My question is, 1,200?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I think from what you stated the other day, we are going to have to determine that. You said you wouldn't.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. I am asking you now.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, we haven't determined that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I want to know what your position is. I can't rule on this unless I know what your position is.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, we would have to have time to [fol. 5663] consider that.

Trial Examiner Batten: All right. I will give you 15 minutes.

Mr. Ingraham: Oh, I don't know that we could decide that in 15 minutes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will give you a half an hour.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, it seems to me that this is a very important matter in this case and—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Ingraham, it is surely a matter you have given some thought to before this.

Mr. Ingraham: We have not determined how many witnesses we intend to call.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not asking you how many. I am asking you whether or not in opposing Miss Weyand's motion, unless she will concede what they will testify to, you have a right to call 1,200 people.

Mr. Ingraham: I think we would.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you mean, in any hearing or lawsuit that that would be proper?

Mr. Ingraham: I think you could stop us.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's concede I could. Let's concede I will. Let's concede that I want to, even. I still want to know from you what you think about it. You certainly have some idea about it.

[fol. 5664] Mr. Ingraham: Our position is that we have other witnesses and—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, proceed with your witnesses. Proceed with them, certainly. If you have no theory on this of any kind and can't give me any light of any kind—

Mr. Ingraham: I am not saying that.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is the way I take it, directly, Mr. Ingraham. I understand your statement right now to be that you don't care to even indicate what your position is on this question, that you have other witnesses to present, and that is all you care to say. Now, I say, you go ahead and present your witnesses. I expected I would get some help from all counsel on this matter, but—

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, may I make these observations?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mr. Lane.

Mr. Ingraham: The position that I understand you are trying to place respondent in is that respondent is to state that Miss Weyand's objection is proper and—

Trial Examiner Batten: Certainly not.

Mr. Ingraham: —that it is cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not trying to place you in any position. I simply asked you a direct question: Is it your position on this matter that you have a right, as you stated, to present 1,200 witnesses on this matter and that it would not be cumulative?

[fol. 5665] Mr. Ingraham: No, I wouldn't say it would not be cumulative. But I think that if it is going to be left up to counsel to determine the number of witnesses— As I understood the position that you took the other day, you were not going to determine how many witnesses—

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. I asked all of you counsel to get together and try to work out something.

Mr. Ingraham: Then, I think it is certainly up to counsel for the respective parties to determine that.

Trial Examiner Batten: All right. Have any of you talked about it since I mentioned it?

Mr. Ingraham: We have not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Have you, Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: I talked to Mr. Ingraham and made a suggestion that I think is a good one.

Trial Examiner Batten: Have you discussed it with any counsel, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: No, I have not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Have you, Mr. Lane?

Mr. Lane: No, I have not.

Mr. Langsdale: Let me state the suggestion I made to Mr. Ingraham only, and maybe somebody will think it is all right. I haven't talked to Miss Weyand about it and I don't know if she would agree with it or not.

Now, of course Mr. Ingraham would like to have us admit [fol. 5666] that a thousand witnesses whom he will name would testify to the same thing, and maybe we know that a hundred on that list will not so testify, and then if we would say that, we would tell him who our witnesses are, and we are not going to do that.

I did say to Mr. Ingraham this: As far as the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is concerned, whenever he gets ready to quit there will be no unfavorable inference drawn from his failure to put on any more witnesses. If he puts on 25, 50, or 100, we will not say to the Board, "He said he would put on 1,200 witnesses and then didn't do it." In other words, we will take no such position in this.

I am not going to agree that any list of witnesses he names will all testify any one way.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, counsel, I will deny the motion at this time.

Mr. Lane: May I make this observation at this time:

Miss Weyand says that, with reference to the establishment of the fact of the hour of the beginning of that meeting, that further testimony would be cumulative. I think, as far as the intervener is concerned, that is not the only purpose of directing the witnesses' attention to that meeting. The ultimate issue here is: Whether or not these witnesses were dominated, coerced, or controlled, and whether the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was a union formed [fol. 5667] under the domination of the Donnelly Garment Company.

Now, whether the witness attended a meeting at 5 o'clock in the afternoon or at 3:30 in the afternoon has some bearing upon that witness' personal reaction as to whether he was under domination or control by the company; and therefore, the conclusion that the witness comes to upon these ultimate facts is in some respect determined by what Miss Weyand says is a purely factual issue in the case, as to which there is sufficient evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Mr. Lane, you are not in the same position as the respondent in your offers of proof. You have named very few people in some of your offers.

Mr. Lane: I think there are about 700 in one of the offers, and that's a good many witnesses.

Trial Examiner Batten: In some of the offers there are only a few.

Mr. Lane: Of course, you understand we are not bound by any number we have named, or that there might not be other witnesses—

Trial Examiner Batten: Whether you are or not—Assume, for this question, that you are; is it your position that you have a right to call every person you have named on your offers of proof and, as you have just stated, perhaps additional ones, whether it is cumulative or not?

Mr. Lane: I think we have the legal right to do so, [fol. 5668] certainly. I think the Examiner, being in charge of the conduct of the trial, has a right to say at any time when in his judgment a sufficient number of witnesses have been presented, so that additional testimony would be cumulative—to say we have gone far enough. Whether that is the exercise of sound discretion is another matter.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I don't agree with you on that. What I am concerned about in asking my question, as I said to Mr. Ingraham, is whether or not you have any suggestion to make that will be helpful to me. Now, it isn't very helpful to me if all of counsel here simply say, "Well, that's your job. We just haven't anything to say about it."

Mr. Lane: You were asking me whether we have the legal right to do so.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Lane: I say, in the absence of any stricture on the part of the person in charge of the trial, we do have that legal right; and also, in the absence of any suggestion or restriction, I think counsel for any particular party must necessarily determine when he thinks the interests of his own client have been sufficiently presented.

Trial Examiner Batten: Don't misunderstand me. Any of you lawyers. That is your job; I agree with you thoroughly on that, Mr. Lane, that you have to determine that in your own mind, every one of you.

Mr. Lane: In that connection, of course, since the inter-
[fol. 5669] vener has presented no witnesses yet, I am not prepared to say at what point the intervener would want to stop presenting witnesses, whether we would present 20, 50, or more, but I can say I certainly don't want to present 600 or 700 witnesses here.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will say this: As far as the intervener and respondent are concerned, I suppose the witnesses have been presented by both of you.

You are a proponent here, Mr. Lane.

Mr. Lane: Well, we do not mean to duplicate by calling back the same witnesses.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I understand that. You are, as far as the further hearing is concerned, as I understand it, in the position of a proponent, because you made offers also. Now, I do not mean by that that you are not going to be permitted to put on any witnesses.

Mr. Lane: I am merely saying I can't say at this time numerically how many witnesses we would want to present. That is a matter of experience. We can't tell until we get into our case and have gone some time where we would want to stop.

Trial Examiner Batten: How long do you think it is going to take you to get into your case?

Mr. Lane: I have no idea what the respondent has in mind.

Trial Examiner Batten: How long do you think it might [fol. 5670] be, Mr. Ingraham, before Mr. Lane could get into his case?

Mr. Ingraham: We can't tell.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean you haven't the faintest idea what your plans are?

Mr. Ingraham: We intend to put on as many witnesses as you will hear.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you bring them on, certainly, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Langsdale: It occurs to me it would be dangerous for the Examiner to shut them off, and then have them object to it and then take an exception.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, I can tell you now, as far as I can see at the present time, I haven't the faintest idea, not even a hope, of ruling on anything with respect to cumulative matters.

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: I think, Mr. Langsdale, it is important, if the respondent believes that a lot of this testimony, which I don't hesitate to say I consider to be cumulative—repetitious—will be from now on—if the respondent believes that that type of testimony should be [fol. 5671] presented in this hearing, I am going to receive it; I am not going to exclude it.

. . . . . .

Mr. Lane: May I say this, Mr. Examiner: I think it isn't fair to any of the parties here now to compel them to state unequivocally what their positions are—

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't want it unequivocally. If they will give me a rough estimate—

Mr. Lane: (Continuing) —without having conferred together as to what kind of an estimate might be reached. I think everybody wants to be adequately heard and to adequately present his case, but I don't think there is anybody here who wants to needlessly prolong the case.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I don't think so, Mr. Lane, but I will say now, if there is any counsel in this hearing now that hasn't a pretty definite idea about what his plans are, by this time, when we have been going for two and a [fol. 5672] half weeks, I would say he has been negligent to some extent. Now, whether he wants to disclose it to me is another thing. I don't mean you may not have a plan and a very definite plan, which you are entitled to have, but which you feel you should not disclose.

Mr. Ingraham: I will say this: Until the statement that the Examiner has just made, that in his opinion certain of this evidence is cumulative, we had no idea that you—

Trial Examiner Batten: I said, beginning now, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, beginning now—certain evidence would be cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: I said, repetitious and cumulative.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, we didn't know, of course, that that was your view.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course you didn't.

Mr. Ingraham: And we were not going to reach any conclusion until you have indicated that you consider that evidence cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: And you don't know now what I am referring to. Therefore, you can only proceed in the manner in which you have been proceeding, because I have not disclosed to any of you, and at the present time I haven't any idea of disclosing to you whether I think it [fol. 5673] is or isn't.

Mr. Ingraham: I understood you to say you thought that there was certain evidence that from now on would be cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think so, in my own personal opinion—and repetitious.

Mr. Ingraham: Don't you think counsel should be advised as to what evidence you refer to?

Trial Examiner Batten: No. I don't believe I want to take that responsibility at the present time at all.

Mr. Reed: Let me make just this one observation:

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Reed: The situation presented is this: We put on seven or eight witnesses, and now it is said that anything from now on is cumulative—

Trial Examiner Batten: It isn't so said. There is no such statement in the record, Senator.

Mr. Reed: Well, I put my own construction on what was said.

On the other side, the prosecution here say they have a lot of witnesses and—

Trial Examiner Batten: I haven't heard any such statement. I have never heard it.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, that's off the record.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't know they had even [fol. 5674] a single witness.

Mr. Reed: I can't make a statement, as I am interrupted at every sentence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, you proceed. I am very sorry.

Mr. Reed: I understand Mr. Langsdale's proposition that he recited here, and I don't suppose that that is off the record, that there be a limit on the number of witnesses that we will use, but, he doesn't put a limit on his witnesses, and he has expressly stated here he does not propose to give us the names of the witnesses. So, we must proceed, then, without that knowledge. Therefore, the only thing we can do is to continue to offer our witnesses. When that is stopped, either by a stipulation or by the ruling of the Examiner, of course we will have to stop, but we are proceeding in the dark entirely as to what they intend to do. They know what we have done and they hold back any statement or any knowledge from us as to what they intend to do or what "they have up their sleeve," to use a slang phrase.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, you would have an opportunity later to meet it.

I can tell you, as far as the Board and the intervener are concerned, they may offer it, but I am not going to receive any testimony in this hearing unless it is in rebuttal of the testimony which has been offered by the respondent and [fol. 5675] intervener in accordance with the offers of proof. As far as this first part of the hearing is concerned, it would be limited very definitely to that.

Mr. Langsdale: I think the Senator misunderstood my hallroom talk with Mr. Ingraham. That was, that when they thought they wanted to stop, we would cast no unfavorable inference on their quitting at that time. Now, that does not necessarily involve my having to tell them who my witnesses are. When they think they have put on their 20 best or 100 best, or whether they are best or not, then if they want to quit, I will never raise my voice as to whether they should put on more.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will recess until 5 minutes after 4, and maybe you men and women can talk—

Mr. Reed: (Addressing Mr. Ingraham) We can't "show our hand" if they don't tell us what they have.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Senator, I am not asking you to "show your hand." I don't think you should indicate to Mr. Langsdale or Miss Weyand how many witnesses you intend to call, but I do think that somewhere along the line there must be some general principle upon which you people can agree.

Now, don't misunderstand me, for one minute. I am not asking you people to assume the burden of what I have to do, because anytime in this hearing I come to the [fol. 5676] conclusion that there is something I must do, I shall do it, and it will be on my shoulders and no one else's.

Mr. Reed: I am very unfortunate, it seems, in having a voice that carries. I thought I was whispering to Mr. Ingraham.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I am sorry, Senator, if I—

* * * * * *

[fol. 5677] Trial Examiner Batten: Before you read the question, I want to ask all counsel now, you may advise me in the morning, I want to make the request and you can think it over between now and morning, that any witnesses to be presented from now on, as far as the respondent and intervener is concerned, whether it is possible for you to jointly present them, both being proponents covering the same matters, at least some of the same matters; and whether or not the Board and the Lady Garment Workers' Union cannot do the same thing.

I don't mean by that that we cannot proceed in about the same manner we have been proceeding, but Mr. Lane's statement that they have not started to put in their case raises the question as to whether or not they were going to have four cases here, I mean four distinct parties putting in evidence; now, I want you to give some thought to that tonight.

I see no reason at all why the respondent and the intervener cannot cooperate in that respect, and why the Board and the Lady Garment Workers' Union counsel can't cooperate in that respect; so you may advise me in the morning, after you have given some thought to it, on that particular matter.

Now, will you read the question?

Miss Weyand: I would like a continuing exception to your ruling.

Trial Examiner Batten: What ruling is that?

Miss Weyand: That this question can be answered by [fol. 5678] this witness. Do you wish me to state each time an objection as to the cumulative matter in the record, or may I have a continuing objection?

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection, because, as I very definitely stated, I haven't any idea at this time that I am going to grant any motion of any kind, with respect to any such motion; and if the time comes when I feel that I want to give further consideration to it, Miss Weyand, I will let you know; however, if you have objections to other questions, other types of questions, I would suggest that you make your objection each time.

Miss Weyand: All right. I could do that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, as long as you have brought that up let me understand you; as far as your motion is concerned it is only with respect to this question, although in my statement or question to you, you indicated that practically all of these meetings were now becoming cumulative, at least the meetings of March 18th, the meeting the last of March, the 27th of April, May 11th and May 25th, or any other union meetings.

Miss Weyand: I intend, after you have heard ten witnesses on any given questions, to object to those questions thereafter as being cumulative; as they come up I will object to the question, but will not restate it unless asked on further repetition of the same questions, but each time a question is asked I shall object to it that time as cumu-[fol. 5679] - lative, as being a factual matter.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may have a continuing objection to those questions.

Mr. Langsdale: Let me be sure I understand. You want counsel to report on matters — that is, as I get it now, Miss Weyand and I should confer together and see if we can prevent duplication?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, whether or not you can't jointly present anything you have to present, say for instance as the respondent will put in its case then the intervener will put in a case, then the Board will put in any other testimony it has, and then you will follow with your testimony. In other words, is it possible for us to work out any sort of a plan where we have, in substance, one party or two parties jointly putting in one case?

Mr. Langsdale: In fact, that is what it is anyway.

Trial Examiner Batten: I know, but in view of Mr. Lane's remark a few moments ago it doesn't appear to be that. Mr. Lane said, "We haven't yet offered any of our witnesses."

Now, that is the reason I want you all to give some thought to it, so tomorrow morning, if you care to —

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) I thought Mr. Lane understood that neither the Board nor the International Lady Garment Workers' Union is going to draw any unfavorable inference about collaboration between him and counsel for the company.

[fol. 5680] Trial Examiner Batten: I understood that, but that doesn't dispose of the matters I just brought up. So, I want you all to give some thought to that.

Mr. Langsdale: Unless that was a defensive remark to keep anyone from knowing how many witnesses you are going to put on, I would think your witnesses and the company's witnesses would be the same, other than you could put on any one of the witnesses, because the objective is the same.

Trial Examiner Batten: How about you people?

Mr. Langsdale: The same.

Trial Examiner Batten: Would you think the same with respect to you people?

Mr. Lane: Yes. I will say we certainly don't intend to put on the same witnesses the respondent puts on. Now, we may put on some witnesses the respondent has not presented, and so far as it is possible for us to do so any witnesses we offer we will avoid any duplication of the matter on any presented by the respondent. I think there are some interests of the intervener that are in contrast to that of the respondent.

Trial Examiner Batten: I understand; but your remark that you hadn't put your case in yet, I just didn't want to be confronted, when we finished with the respondent some time in the future, with being presented with a second case by a proponent, which would be unlimited almost, so I am just asking you to talk it over, and if you [fol. 5681] can tell me anything in the morning, all right; if you can't, all right.

Mr. Reed: I think it is a mistake to characterize either the plant union or the company as proponents, they are not proponents.

Trial Examiner Batten: I simply meant as far as —

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting). They are defendants.

Trial Examiner Batten: That's right, but I meant simply as far as this hearing is concerned with respect to the matters we are upon, Senator. I said that before recess.

Mr. Reed: Well, I didn't understand you.

* * * * * *

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter as follows:

"Do you recall the time of day that the meeting of April 27th was held?")

A. It was after my working hours.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall where the meeting was held?

A. On the second floor.

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: I assume our remarks with respect to the prior one are applicable here, and you may have a continuing objection.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5682] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you vote at that meeting in favor of forming the Donnelly Union?

A. Now, it is the May 27th meeting you are talking about?

Q. The April 27th meeting. A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will? A. I did.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Baty, Mr. Green, Mr. and Mrs. Keyes, Miss Spilsbury, Mr. Bachofer or Eila Mae Hyde suggest or direct that you vote in favor of form-[fol. 5683] ing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Did any instructor request you or suggest to you that you vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. They did not.

Q. Did any thread girl— A. (Interrupting) No.

Q. (Continuing) Request that you vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Did you understand or have the impression that if you did not vote to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that you would be penalized by the company?

A. No, I never had that feeling.

Q. Was there any pressure brought to bear by anybody on you to vote in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. There was not.

Q. Was there any pressure brought to bear by anybody to cause you to attend that meeting?

A. No, I went with my own free will.

Q. Was that a meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. No.

Q. Did that meeting have any connection with the Loyalty League so far as you knew?

[fol. 5684] A. No, it did not.

Q. Was the meeting generally attended by employees?

A. Yes.

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the witness has answered it. The answer may stand. You may have a continuing objection to that question.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you state whether or not, in your conversations with other employees of the company, if you ever heard anything said that indicated that the company was bringing pressure to bear on employees to form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I never heard anyone say that.

Q. I believe you stated that you read the article that appeared in the Kansas City Star of March 17th, which is respondent's exhibit 27, the article is entitled "Sitters Block a Door."? A. Yes, I read that.

Q. Now, do you recall whether or not a meeting was held shortly after the date that this article appeared in the paper on March 17th? A. Yes.

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5685] A. Yes, there was.

Trial Examiner Batten: I'll make the same ruling. I will permit the witness to answer, and you may have a continuing objection to that question.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you state whether or not—strike that—do you know why the meeting was held?

A. Well, it was more or less conversation about all this violence that was going on, and this article that was in the paper, and we wondered what we could do to protect ourselves, and we thought we would have a meeting and talk it over.

Q. Do you recall when—strike that—do you recall what [fol. 5686] time of day that meeting was held?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: I make the same ruling. You may have a continuing objection.

A. Well, it was after working hours, I would say about 5 o'clock.

Mr. Ingraham: Do you recall where the meeting was held?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling, and you may have a continuing objection.

A. On the second floor.

Mr. Ingraham: Did Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Reeves, Mr. Baty, Mr. Green, Mr. and Mrs. Keyes, Miss Spilsbury, Mr. Bachofer, or Ella Mae Hyde suggest—

Mr Reed: (Interrupting) Or any of them.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. (Continuing) Or any of them suggest to you that this meeting should be held? A. No.

Q. Did any of those persons named request you to go to the meeting? A. They did not.

Q. Did you understand that you would be penalized by the company if you did not attend the meeting? A. No.

[fol. 5687] Q. Do you recall whether or not Mrs. Reed came to the meeting?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling. You may have a continuing objection.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You may answer.

A. Yes, she came to the meeting.

Q. Did you hear Mrs. Reed state that if the plant was unionized, it would be—strike that question.

Did you hear Mrs. Reed make a talk?

A. Yes, I heard her.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed in her talk make a statement to the effect that if the International unionized the plant it would be closed?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection. The same ruling.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You may answer.

A. No, she didn't make that statement.

Q. Did your hear Mrs. Reed make any statement to the effect that she was not going to let Dubinsky tell her how to run her business?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection. The same ruling.

[fol. 5688] A. No, she did not.

Mr. Ingraham: Did Mrs. Reed make any statements with reference to the right of employees to organize or not organize as they so wished?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

A. Yes, she said we were free to do as we wished to do.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall if Mrs. Reed made any statement with respect to providing transportation for employees to work?

A. Yes, she said they were taking the matter up to see if they couldn't furnish us safe transportation to and from work.

Q. Do you recall anything that Mrs. Reed said with reference to the International or Dubinsky? A. Yes.

Q. What do you recall that she said?

A. That she was not going to let anyone intimidate her employees, that they were not to be forced to join any organization; that we could do as we wished.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed make any statement with reference to permitting the International or Dubinsky force her to do anything?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

[fol. 5689] Mr. Langsdale: I object to it as leading and suggestive.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Did Mrs. Reed make any statement with reference to permitting the International or Dubinsky force her to do anything?")

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. No.

Mr. Ingraham: Do you recall anything else that Mrs. Reed said in that speech?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

Mr. Ingraham: Did you answer that question?

A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. May I have the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Do you recall anything else that Mrs. Reed said in that speech?")

A. She thanked us for the petition that we had all signed and sent her.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall anything else? A. No, I don't.

[fol. 5690] Q. Do you recall whether or not Mrs. Reed made this statement: "I know you are thinking about the threats of violence that the union is making against you and the company. I want to say that the company and I intend to do everything possible to protect you in case of any violence."

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

* * * * * * *

A. Well, I don't just recall her exact words. I do remember about her saying about the transportation.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall this, following that that I have just read: "We are now trying to make arrangements with the street car company for its buses to go to certain points and pick you people up and bring you to the plant. We will let you know about this as soon as arrangements can be made." A. Yes, I remember that.

[fol. 5691] Q. Do you recall Mrs. Reed making the statement: "Many of you have been here for a number of years, and you know that you have never been asked whether or not you belonged to a union. The company has not discriminated against anyone on that account, and Mr. Dubinsky is not going to make me discriminate against the employees because they would not belong to his union."

A. No, I don't recall that.

Q. Do you recall that Mrs. Reed said: "If you want to belong that is your own business and it is up to you to decide."

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative and repetitious as to this witness in addition.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

* * * * * * *

A. Yes, I remember.

Mr. Ingraham: Do you remember Mrs. Reed making this statement, "I will say that neither Dubinsky or any other buttinsky is going to intimidate me or the company [fol. 5692] into forcing you to join the International against your will."

Mr. Langsdale: May I have the continuing objection to the form of this question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Miss Weyand: I object to the question as cumulative, and in addition it is repetitious as to this witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, as to your objection because of it being cumulative, I will make the same ruling. The witness may answer, and you may have a continuing objection as to the other.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You may answer.

A. Yes, she said that she didn't feel we should be intimidated, to be forced to do anything against our own will.

Q. Did the employees take any action at this meeting with respect to designating or appointing a committee?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

A. Yes, we talked it over and we appointed a committee to see what could be done.

Mr. Ingraham: Do you recall who was appointed on that committee?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

A. Well, I am not right sure, but I think it was Rose Todd and Sallie Ormsby and Hobart Atherton, as well as I remember.

[fol. 5693] Mr. Ingraham: Do you recall what the committee was to do?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

A. They were to obtain legal advice for us so we would know what we could do legally.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, between the meeting of March 18 and the meeting of April 27, when the union was formed, did the employees hold another meeting?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

A. Yes, we had another meeting the last of March, sometime.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, at that meeting, did Mrs. Reed and the people I named in my previous questions, or any one of those people, discuss with you the holding of that meeting?

A. They did not.

Q. Did any one of those people suggest to you that you attend that meeting?

A. They did not.

Q. What occurred at that meeting?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

A. Well, the committee reported that they had seen a lawyer for counsel so we could go ahead with this lawfully [fol. 5694] and be in the right; and I think that was the meeting where they reported they had consulted Mr. Tyler, and naturally a lawyer has to have retaining fees, so it was discussed and we decided that 50¢ each would be enough to make up the $500 which was his retaining fee.

Q. Did you contribute 50¢?

A. I did.

Q. Did you do it at that meeting?

A. No, I did it the next day.

Q. Did you make that contribution of 50¢ to the Loyalty League?

A. I did not.

Q. Was that a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No, sir.

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

Mr. Ingraham: Going back to the first meeting, the meeting of March 18, was that a Loyalty League meeting?

A. No.

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

A. No, it was not.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did the fact that Rose Todd took an active part in the three meetings that you have testified about, cause you to believe that these meetings, the meeting of March 18, the [fol. 5695] meeting the last of March, and the meeting of April 27, were Loyalty League meetings?

A. No, it did not.

Q. Did any instructor suggest or direct that you attend any of these meetings?

A. No.

Q. Did any thread girl suggest or discuss with you anything in connection with the attending of these meetings?

A. They did not.

Q. Did you consider an instructor a boss?

A. No.

Q. Did you consider a thread girl a boss?

A. No.

Q. Did the fact that instructors and thread girls may have attended the meeting of April 27, at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, cause you to believe that the company was sponsoring the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, it did not.

Q. Did the fact that instructors or thread girls attended the meeting of March 18, and the meeting the last of March, cause you to believe that the company was sponsoring those meetings?

A. No.

Q. Did you know of any connection between the Loyalty [fol. 5696] League and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, I didn't; they were entirely two different organizations.

Q. Were, at any time, meetings of the Loyalty League held immediately preceding or immediately following meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

A. No, they never were.

Mr. Ingraham: Do you recall any business of the Loyalty League being discussed at any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer. The same ruling.

A. No, I do not.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were you a member of the Loyalty League?

A. I was.

Q. What were the activities of the Loyalty League?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer. The same ruling.

A. They were purely social such as dances and maybe a carnival and some home talent plays.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you pay any dues to the Loyalty League?

A. No.

[fol. 5697] Q. Did the Loyalty League or anybody representing the Loyalty League ever bring any pressure on you to cause you to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Did you join the Loyalty League of your own free will?

A. I did.

Q. Did anybody bring any pressure on you to cause you to join the Loyalty League?

A. No.

Q. Did you pay dues to the Loyalty League?

A. No.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 6, which appears in the Circuit Court record at 4864, and ask you to state whether or not you read that article that appeared in the Kansas City Times of February 26, 1937. Will you please read the article? Do you recall reading that article?

A. Yes, I read that article.

Q. Do you recall the statement attributed to Mr. Perlstein, stating: "the union claims only 25 members among the Donnelly workers, but officials said hundreds of others are related to union members. Within a year we will have it completely organized, Mr. Perlstein said. As soon as we have enough members we will call a strike." Do you recall that in the article?

A. Yes, I remember that very definitely.

[fol. 5698] Q. Did you want a strike at the Donnelly plant?

A. I did not.

Q. What did you think would happen if the International called a strike at the Donnelly plant?

A. Well, my reaction to that part of that statement was that I didn't see how they could call it if they didn't have members there.

Q. Well, if a strike was called, did you believe it would be the same kind of a strike that they had at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants?

* * * * * * *

A. Yes, that is what I thought.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What did you think that meant?

A. I thought that would mean the same methods that they used in other places, which was violence.

Q. Do you recall the statement in this article stating that part of the union's campaign as directed against the Donnelly Garment Company, "will be to send six women to [fol. 5699] cities and towns where its garments are sold." Do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you think that meant?

A. Well, I thought that they were going to try to get people to boycott our products or our dresses.

Q. State whether or not you thought that might affect your job.

A. Yes, of course I did, to a certain extent.

Q. Now, shortly after this article appeared in the paper on February 26, 1937, there was a petition circulated among the employees?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling.

A. Yes, there was.

[fol. 5700] Q. Did this article that you just read have anything to do with your signing that petition?

A. Well, I suppose it did, to a certain extent. That petition that we signed was— I can't quote it word for word, but it was that we were happy and contented with our work, and that was the way I felt about it.

Q. This article I have called your attention to, was that discussed by other employees in the plant?

A. Yes. We discussed everything that came out in the paper, I think.

Q. What effect, if any, as far as you could observe, did that article have on other employees?

A. Well, we all just felt that we had to really find out what we could do for ourselves and look after our own interests.

Q. Did you want to join the I. L. G. W. U.?

A No, I did not.

Q. Did you know of any other employees that wanted to join the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. I never heard any say that they did.

Q. I will hand you I. L. G. W. U. Exhibit No. 10 and ask you if the petition you signed had the language at the top of it that appears on the first page of this exhibit, which is page 5961 of the Circuit Court record.

A. Yes, that's what it was.

Q. Did you sign that petition of your own free will?

[fol. 5701] A. I did.

Q. Did you know that the petition was going to be sent to Mrs. Reed? A. Yes.

Q. Who presented the petition to you?

A. Mary—I can't remember just her last name.

Q. Where were you when she handed you the petition?

A. I was sitting at my machine working.

Q. Did she say anything to you?

A. She just handed me the paper and asked me to read it, and if I cared to sign it, all right.

Q. And you stated you would sign the petition?

A. I did.

Q. Did you want Mrs. Reed to know you were happy and contented in your position with the company?

A. Yes. That is the way I felt and I wanted her to know it.

Q. Did you want her to know that you were "thankful for the real humanitarian interest extended by our employer, Mrs. Reed."? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you want Mrs. Reed to know, "and refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization."?

A. That's right.

Q. Did you have any particular union in mind at that time?

[fol. 5702] A. Well, I didn't care about any other organization coming in there and organizing us.

Q. What do you mean, "other"?

A. Well, I had the I. L. G. W. U. in mind at that time, I guess, because that seemed to be the topic of the day, mostly.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. How did you know that Mrs. Reed would know that? A. Well,—

Q. How did you know that she would know what you had in mind, except from reading the petition?

A. Well, the petition said "any other union labor organization." That was the one we talked about all of the time, but as far as that goes, it just meant any other union labor organization. I didn't want any of them.

Mr. Ingraham: Was there any other union attempting to organize you at that time besides the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. Not that I know of.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think, then, we will adjourn until 9:30 in the morning.

Before closing, don't forget, I would like to have all of you give some thought to the suggestion I made, and also give some thought to whether or not tomorrow morning you [fol. 5703] can give me some idea of what your plans are. And when I say "plans," I mean, in accordance with my statement today. I do not expect you to disclose your programs to each other. That isn't what I have in mind. But it seems to me you would be able to give me some sort of a general idea. So, I will call on you in the morning for that.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5708] Trial Examiner Batten: The hearing will be in order. We will proceed.

Mrs. Freed.

I think we are ready to proceed.

I think I suggested last evening the possibility of counsel discussing some matters between last evening and this morning, and whether or not they could give me any information.

Mr. Ingraham, can you—

Mr. Ingraham: I haven't had a chance to discuss with Mr. Tyler anything concrete. The position of the respondent is that we are putting on our case, and so far as being bound by anything that the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, presents in the way of evidence, we don't want to have any understanding that would bind us.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I don't think I even intimated that.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, if the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, desires to adopt our evidence, of course, we haven't anything to say about that.

Trial Examiner Batten: And I presume it works the other way also.

Mr. Ingraham: I would think so.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, but my point was, have [fol. 5709] you given any thought at all to the number of witnesses or the length of time? It seems to me I ought to be able to get some sort of a general idea from counsel.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Hogsett, as you know, is in the case with us, and that matter is a matter of considerable importance, and we did discuss it and we do want to take the matter up with Mr. Hogsett.

Now, he will be home Tuesday, as I understand from his office; and before that time we don't want to even indicate something that Mr. Hogsett might not agree with us about, and we might have different ideas after talking with him.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean you haven't discussed this matter with him at all up to this time?

Mr. Ingraham: No, we have not

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean even in the preparation of your case?

Mr. Ingraham: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, I assume that, not having discussed the matter in any way with Mr. Tyler, I don't believe you, Mr. Tyler, have any ideas on the matter, have you?

Mr. Tyler: If the Examiner please, Mr. Lane and I discussed the situation of some method of limiting the length of testimony, or of the entire case, last night. Personally I am hopeful that it can be done, and I have in my mind the possibility of a suggestion or two, provided it is [fol. 5710] mutually agreed to by all parties, or a ruling is made applying to all parties, limiting their testimony; but Mr. Lane and I haven't come to any agreement, nor have I had an opportunity this morning of discussing it with Mr. Ingraham.

I shall endeavor to do so. I think it has possibilities, and I think it ought to be done.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, you understand, Mr. Tyler, I stated yesterday—I don't presume you have seen the record—my idea in getting from counsel their ideas as to whether something could be worked out is not that I want to avoid making any ruling, which I should make. I'll make it when I think it should be made. That was not my purpose.

My purpose was to see whether or not there isn't some basis upon which all counsel can get together on some sort of a plan. In other words, your plan would be better than any suggestion I could possibly make, and that was my thought. It was also my thought, as I stated yesterday, as far as the respondent and the intervener are concerned, certainly there doesn't need to be duplication.

I stated also, as far as the Board is concerned, and the Ladies' Garment Workers, we didn't need to go over the same ground twice. Now, that, of course, is within reasonable limits.

As Mr. Ingraham just stated, the respondent may want to adopt part of the testimony and it may not. You may [fol. 5711] feel that part of the testimony of the respondent covers some of your points, and you may feel some of it does not. Now, I am not trying to limit you on that. I am simply trying to find out whether or not there is any basis, common basis, on which something can be anticipated.

Now, I think you all realize that, of course, the Circuit Court didn't even have in mind 1200 witnesses, at least from reading it I didn't contemplate they even had that in mind, because if they did, they, of course, would realize that no administrative hearing nor judicial tribunal could ever function—I mean, it would be just beyond ordinary possible comprehension; so that I am looking for suggestions.

Now, after you have all talked it over, if none of you have any suggestions, why, of course, I will consider ways and means of equitably adjusting the matter. But I am only concerned with what you men think you can do.

Mr. Tyler: Well, I'll state that the intervener doesn't feel that it is necessary to make any formal motion adopting the evidence of the respondent.

Trial Examiner Batten: That's right, that isn't necessary.

Mr. Tyler: Any evidence it produces that assists in proving our contention is already to our benefit without a specific motion.

Trial Examiner Batten: That's right, Mr. Tyler. No [fol. 5712] one would even contemplate you would go through the record, or Mr. Ingraham would, or Mr. Langs-dale would, or Miss Weyand would, and say, "We adopt that and reject that," that is not even under contemplation.

Mr Tyler: And I will say further the intervenor doesn't feel there is any obligation on it, or even would it be proper for it to endeavor to put on as many witnesses as the respondent, just to show it is carrying its end of the case.

I don't think there is any such obligation, and I don't think that is proper.

I will add that I will agree with you that the Court of Appeals said 1200 witnesses shall not be heard, in effect; they said, of course, it isn't necessary to hear 1200 witnesses; there are means of handling cumulative testimony, and I think it would be error for the Examiner to assume that the Court of Appeals was even willing that any such number of witnesses would be put on.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will appreciate it, of course, if you men will give it further thought, and I will probably call upon you again tomorrow and again Monday, to see whether or not you have discussed it amongst yourselves.

In fact, I think I shall recess right now until 10:30 for the purpose of all counsel to get together and discuss this amongst yourselves, the Board, Mr. Langsdale, Mr. Ingraham, Mr. Tyler, all of you; so we will adjourn right now [fol. 5713] until 10:30, and you counsel may all, right here, discuss this matter, whether or not there is any possibility of arriving at anything.

So, until 10:30, we are recessed.

Mr. Langsdale: I suggest, Mr. Examiner, that the witnesses be excluded from the room during the discussion of any counsel.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think that is advisable. So, if the witnesses will find some other place to retire to.

(Thereupon a recess was taken from 10 o'clock a. m. to 2 p. m.)

After Recess

(Thereupon the hearing was resumed, pursuant to recess, at 2 p. m., and the following proceedings were had:)

Trial Examiner Batten: The hearing will be in order. Mrs. Freed.

We will proceed, Mr. Ingraham.

ALICE FREED, a witness heretofore called by and on behalf of the respondent, having been previously sworn, was examined and testified further as follows:

Direct Examination (Continued)

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 7 and ask you if you recall reading this article that appeared in the Journal-Post of March 6, 1937?

* * * * * *

[fol. 5714] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall whether or not you read that article?

A. Yes, I read that.

Q. Did the statement attributed to Mr. Dubinsky in this article, which was: "Mr. Reed said many harsh things about me during the recent political campaign," did that influence you in any way, that Mr. Reed had said anything about Dubinsky?

A. No, it did not.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Reed make any political speeches in the 1936 campaign?

A. No.

Q. Did anything that Senator Reed ever said that you heard of with regard to Dubinsky influence you in any way?

A. Not in the least.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I believe you stated that you read respondent's exhibit 35, which was an article that appeared in the Journal-Post on April 22, 1937, entitled, "Donnelly Worker will be sent to Union Convention"?

[fol. 5715] A. Yes, I read that.

Q. Were you at work the following morning, after that newspaper article was published?

A. I was.

Q. What floor did you work on?

A. I was on the seventh floor.

Q. Did you hear that article discussed among other employees?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What effect did that article have on other employees?

A. Well, they felt the same as I did, they were rather indignant because they hadn't authorized anyone to represent them.

Q. State whether or not they — strike that.

Did the employees discuss the statement attributed to Mr. Perlstein: "Perlstein said the Donnelly Committee desired one of their number to appear at the convention and ask the International to endorse and support a strike against their employer." Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

Q. State whether or not the employees wanted a strike.

A. No.

Q. Did you see Sylvia Hull on the morning of the 23rd?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you see her?

A. As she came down to her locker when she went [fol. 5716] home. Her locker was on the seventh floor, not very far from where I was working.

Q. I see. Did you leave your work?

A. No.

Q. Did you know a girl named Fern Sigler?

A. No.

Q. You didn't see her that morning?

A. No.

Q. Did you hear any employees make the statement they did not want to work if Sylvia Hull remained there at work?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that as leading and suggestive. The witness ought to be asked to say what she heard without telling her what she heard.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Langsdale: May I have a continuing objection?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: Leading questions to this witness?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

A. Will you read that again, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. I don't remember hearing anyone say that.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5717] Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Freed, how long did you work on the seventh floor during 1937?

A. I was there all the time.

Q. What section were you in?

A. 519.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. In March and April of that year who was your instructor?

A. Rosetta Cook.

Q. Will you describe what Rosetta Cook did as an instructor of that section?

A. Well, she would instruct we girls in the making of dresses.

Q. Did she ever, so far as you know, hire or fire any of the operators in section 519 when you were there?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see her or hear her discipline an operator?

A. No.

Q. Did you regard her as a supervisor?

A. No.

Q. Or a supervisory employee of the company?

A. No.

Q. Did you regard her as having a superior position to your own?

[fol. 5718] A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you think of her as being your boss?

A. No.

Q. Who was your thread girl in March and April 1937?

A. Well, I can't exactly remember, but I do think it was Marie Ashley at that time.

Q. What did she do as thread girl?

A. Well, she would bring we girls the thread to match the material we were working on, and labels and shoulder tapes.

Q. Did she ever hire or fire any operator that you know of?

A. No.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you ever hear her or see her discipline any operators?

A. No, I never did.

[fol. 5719] Q. Did you regard the thread girl as a supervisory employee?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you regard her as your boss?

A. No.

Q. Did you think that her position was superior to your position?

A. I did not.

Q. Now, is what you have said of Rosetta Cook, your instructor, true of all the other instructors in the plant, so far as you know?

A. That's right.

Q. And is what you have said of Marie Ashley, the thread girl, true of all the other thread girls in the plant, as far as you know?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you regard any instructor or any thread girl as a boss or as a supervisory employee?

A. No.

Q. Did you know Rose Todd in March and April of 1937?

A. I saw her through the building.

Q. Did you have a speaking acquaintance with her?

A. No.

Q. Did you know her by name?

A. I knew what her name was, yes.

Q. Did you observe her doing anything around the plant?

[fol. 5720] A. She would come into the section and take care of the bundles that would have recuts off, that had been off for some time, or something that had been lost off of it, take care of it so the work could go on.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Will you explain what you mean by taking care of bundles that had recuts off of them, or something of that kind?

A. Well, sometimes we had a bundle that come to us where there may be a flaw in the material, and then we have to send for a recut, and of course we got to hold the bundle until the recut comes back.

Q. Do you mean by that that you sent that same garment down to match the bundle you have?

A. That's right.

Q. That the garment you have has some flaw in it?

A. That's right.

Q. Is that all you ever heard of Rose Todd doing?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you regard Rose Todd as a boss?

A. No.

Q. Did Rose Todd, so far as you know, have any employees working under her, whose activities she supervised?

[fol. 5721] A. Not that I ever knew of.

Q. Did you ever hear Rose Todd say anything that indicated she regarded that she was a supervisory employee of the company?

A. I never did.

Q. Did you ever hear anybody say that Rose Todd was a supervisor or a boss?

A. No.

Q. Did you know Hobart Atherton?

A. I knew who he was.

Q. Did you know what he did in March and April of 1937?

A. No.

Q. Did you see him occasionally around the plant?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see what he was doing?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Did he ever do anything that you observed that made you believe that he was a supervisory employee of the company?
A. No.
Q. Did you know Sallie Ormsby?
A. Yes.
Q. What did she do?
A. She was an operator.
Q. Do you know what section she was in?
A. I think at that time she was on the eighth floor, I am not sure.
[fol. 5722] Q. Did you know Ethel Riegel?
A. No.

Mr. Langsdale: Who was that?

Mr. Lane: Ethel Riegel.

By Mr. Lane:
Q. Did you know Arch Lyle?
A. No.
Q. Did you know Lena Faulconer?
A. No.
Q. Or Eva Lieberman?
A. No.
Q. Did you know Mrs. Riggs?
A. No.
Q. Or Lyle Jeter?
A. Yes.
Q. What did he do?
A. He was a mechanic.
Q. What did you observe him doing around the plant?
A. Fixing the machines.
Q. Did you ever see him doing anything else?
A. No, I never did.
Q. Did you regard him as a boss or as a supervisor of the company?
A. No.
Q. Did he have any employees working under him who acted as he directed as a supervisor, as far as you know?

[fol. 5723] A. No, none that I knew of.
Q. Did you know Cordelia Taylor? A. No.
Q. Or Leona Moore? A. Yes.
Q. What did she do? A. She was an operator.
Q. Did you know Ellen Nokes? A. No.
Q. Or Virginia White? A. No.
Q. Did you know Fred Brown?
A. I knew who he was.
Q. Did you know where he worked?
A. In the cutting department, I think.
Q. Did you know Mamie Riddle? A. No.
Q. Did you know Anna Richards? A. No.
Q. Or Marjorie Green? A. I knew who she was.
Q. Where did she work? A. In the office.
Q. Did you know Jack McConaughey? A. Yes.
[fol. 5724] Q. Where did he work?
A. He was in the mechanics' cage.
Q. Did you know Charlie Casey? A. No.
Q. Did you know Hazel Saucke? A. No.
Q. Or Anna Reece? A. No.
Q. Was there anybody who attended the meeting of April 27, 1937, at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, that you regarded as a supervisory employee or a boss or a representative of the management?
A. Not that I saw.
Q. Was there anybody who participated in the meeting by talking or making a motion, or taking any other part in the meeting, that you regarded as being a boss or a supervisor of the company? A. No.
Q. You voted at that meeting, I believe you said, in favor of forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?
A. I did.
Q. You cast that vote of your own free will, did you?
A. I did.
Q. When you voted that way, did you think that you were doing a voluntary act on your part, exercising your [fol. 5725] own right to express preference?
A. I certainly did.
Q. Was there anything in your mind at that time that you thought amounted to domination or coercion or intimidation on the part of the company?
A. There was not.

Q. Was there any instance or any fact that you can think of that to your mind indicated that the company was endeavoring to persuade you or any other employees about joining or forming any union or staying out of any union?

A. No.

Q. For the purpose of refreshing your recollection, I will show you Board's exhibit 8-12, appearing at page 4406 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, being the minutes of the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of May 11, 1937. Will you look at those sufficiently to tell whether or not you attended that meeting?

. . . . . .

[fol. 5726] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you attend that meeting? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you attend the union meetings after April 27, 1937, fairly regularly? A. I did.

Q. Do you recall any discussion at the May 11 meeting with regard to payment of Mr. Tyler for his services to the union?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to the question as leading and suggestive. She has been shown what Mr. Lane has told her are the minutes of the meeting of May 11 of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, which she has spent considerable time reading—I assume, from beginning to end. Thereafter Mr. Lane takes the document which she has just read back to the counsel table and proceeds to ask her whether or not she remembers this, that, and the other happening, from the minutes he has told her were the genuine minutes of the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of May 11, 1937.

I object to it as leading and suggestive and an improper method of examining this witness.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5727] Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Yes, we discussed the payment.

Mr. Lane: Did you understand or believe, yourself, that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union had to be self-supporting?

A. Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: May I have a continuing objection to that form of question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Lane: Do you know of any contribution, any financial contribution, that was ever made to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union by anybody, other than by dues and assessments of its members?

* * * * * * *

A. No, I don't.

Q. Was there ever an occasion in May, or thereabouts, in 1937, at which a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was immediately followed by a meeting of the Loyalty League?

[fol. 5728] A. There was not.

Q. Was there ever an occasion when Rose Todd said at a union meeting that it was, in fact, going to be two meetings, one a union meeting and the other a Loyalty League meeting? A. No.

Q. Did you ever discuss at a union meeting in 1937 the matter of raising money for the Loyalty League? A. No.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Lane: I will hand you Board's exhibit No. 8-21, beginning on page 4415 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, and ask you to look at that briefly, just sufficiently to state whether you attended that meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on May 25.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the question as assuming that the document which he has handed her recites the happenings of the meeting on May 25, 1937, there being a sharp controversy as to whether or not the document he has handed her is the genuine minutes or whether the document which was introduced by Elsa Greenhaw is the genuine minutes of that meeting. I think it is extremely leading and suggestive for him to hand to her a document which he claims to be the genuine minutes of the meeting, at [fol. 5729] the same time telling her they are the genuine minutes, and then asking her if she attended the meeting.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection.

As I have stated before, I am not going to attempt to tell any counsel how to ask their questions. If they want to proceed in that manner, or any other manner, they may do so. But, of course, as I previously said, the type of question, I presume, will be taken into consideration when you consider the weight which will be given the testimony.

You may proceed.

Was there a question?

Mr. Lane: Yes, there is a question pending.

(Thereupon Board's exhibit No. 8-21 was read by the witness.)

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you attend that meeting? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, in view of Mr. Langsdale's statement, I will show you Board's exhibit No. 18-A, beginning on page 4709 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, and ask you to look at these minutes purported to have been kept by Elsa Graham Greenhaw.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that question for the same reason, that he is, in effect, telling her that they are not the genuine minutes which he is showing her, when he describes them as "purported minutes." He handed her what he said were the genuine minutes of the meeting before. It [fol. 5730] is entirely leading and suggestive and an unfair method of examination of his own witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection.

Will you read the question, please?

Mr. Lane: There is no question pending. I just asked her to read the notes.

Trial Examiner Batten: You want her to read them in their entirety?

Mr. Lane: I want her to read Board's exhibit No. 18-A, yes, in view of what Mr. Langsdale said about the minutes.

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume, then, these have never been referred to before—she has not looked at them before?

Mr. Lane: I believe not. I didn't have access to them, and I believe this witness has not read them; I'm not sure.

Trial Examiner Batten: I thought the other day we were going to have these witnesses look at the documents ahead of time.

Mr. Lane: I have endeavored to do that with the witnesses, but we have been spending time in consultation and I simply have not had the time to do that with this witness.

I would like the record to show, Mr. Examiner, when I said we had been in consulation, I meant Board's counsel, Mr. Langsdale, and we had been in consultation. That was the consultation I was referring to, pursuant to Your Honor's suggestion.

[fol. 5731] Trial Examiner Batten: Would you mind letting me know if you accomplished anything, as long as you have brought the matter up?

Mr. Lane: Are you asking me that question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Lane: I think we didn't come to any specific agreement yet as to how we could present our case.

Trial Examiner Batten: I hadn't intended to ask you, unless someone volunteered, but as long as you brought the matter up, I thought—

Mr. Lane: I didn't bring it up other than to refer to the conference.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. During April and May of 1937, what was the quitting time of your section?

A. I think at that time it was 4:20.

Q. Was there ever any time in April or May of 1937 that a union meeting began at 3:30 or 3:45 in the afternoon? A. No.

Q. Did you generally get to the union meetings before the meeting had actually begun? A. I did.

Q. Did you get to the meeting on May 25 before it started?

A. I must have, because I was never late to any of them.

[fol. 5732] Q. I will ask you to state whether or not at the union meeting held on May 25 Rose Todd said, "I want to tell you this is going to be two meetings, the first being a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and after that a meeting of the Loyalty League."

Mr. Langsdale: I object to this line of cross-examination for the same reasons I objected to the manner of cross-examination about the document he showed her just prior to this, which he said was the genuine minutes of the meeting of May 25.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection.

You may answer.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did Rose Todd say that in the union meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did Hobart Atherton say at that meeting, "There seems to be a little misunderstanding as to why the Loyalty League needs this money, and a little later on I will explain that to you."? A. No.

Q. I will ask you if this was said at that meeting: "A motion has been made that we adjourn our union meeting and immediately open our Loyalty League meeting."?

A. None of our union meetings were followed or preceded by a Loyalty League meeting.

[fol. 5733] Q. Was that motion made at that meeting?

A. No.

Q. I will ask you whether at that union meeting or at the meeting held on that day Hobart Atherton said this, "As Miss Todd has already told you, we have only one debt of the Loyalty League. A good many of you seem to be under the impression that we have accumulated quite a lot of bills as we have gone along, but we have only one. You all realize when this agitation first started we didn't have any union started and it was up to some organization to take the initial steps to protect the rights of employees of the Donnelly Company, so the Loyalty League had a meeting of the representatives and was authorized by the representatives to retain legal counsel. We retained Mr. Tyler, as you all know. He came down here and talked to us. That debt, the bill to Mr. Tyler, is the only bill the Loyalty League has and, as Miss Todd told you, that is not pressing."

Was anything like that said at the meeting on May 25?

A. No.

Q. I will show you Board's exhibit No. 1-RRRR, beginning at page 3471 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record, being the offer of proof made by intervener, and will direct your attention to page 3480 of that offer and to the—Now, I was going to say the 14th signature in the right-hand column, but in the copy which the Board has made of [fol. 5734] the photostat which we offered they haven't got the names—they are either not in the same sequence or they haven't the same number of names in the column, so in the typewritten copy of the record it is the 22d name in the right-hand column and in the photostatic copy of the record it is the 14th name.

I will ask you to state whether or not that (indicating) is your signature.

A. That is.

Q. Will you look briefly at that exhibit?

(Thereupon the exhibit referred to was read by the witness.)

Q. Did you sign that offer of proof?

A. I did.

Q. I will ask you whether or not at the meeting of March 18, 1937, at which Mrs. Reed spoke, Mrs. Reed said she would not allow members of the International Garment Workers' Union to work at the Donnelly Garment Company.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to this manner of cross-examination. Counsel shows her an offer of proof which she signed, containing certain statements, and she reads it. Then he takes the document back to the counsel table and reads from it, asking her if certain portions of it are true. She signed it and evidently she intended to convey the impression that it was true when she signed it.

I object to it for the reason that it is improper examina-[fol. 5735] tion of this witness and it is repetition because the offer of proof—the fact that she says she signed it is not a statement of fact that that thing happened; and for the further reason that the question contains conclusions of law that are matters for this Board to decide and not for this witness to state in this hearing.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule your objection, Mr. Langsdale, because I think we are proceeding here on the theory that these employees may express their conclusions and opinions, and so forth.

She may answer, and; if you want to, on cross-examination you may determine what the basis of her opinion or conclusion is.

Mr. Langsdale: There was another element of my objection, and that was that it is repetition. She said she signed it, and it is in evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, you wouldn't want me to accept the offer of proof as evidence, would you, because someone signed it?

Mr. Langsdale: She said she signed it. Doesn't that make it evidence?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you think so? If so, I might suggest that we receive affidavits from all of these people, and you won't have to bring them in here.

Mr. Langsdale: That isn't so at all. This is a docu-[fol. 5736] ment she read and says she signed. Isn't it repetition to take it back then and say, "Did you?—"Is that true?"

Trial Examiner Batten: I would say it would be repetition if this were evidence.

Let's proceed.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. The question is, did Mrs. Reed in the meeting of March 18, at which she spoke, say she would not allow members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to work in the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I don't remember hearing Mrs. Reed say that.

Q. Did she say that the I. L. G. W. U. would never be allowed in her plant?

A. I didn't hear that.

Q. Did she say she wanted the names of anybody who joined the I. L. G. W. U. reported to her?

A. No.

Q. Did you from April 27, 1937, the date when the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, up to July 15, 1939, belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will?

A. I did.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5737] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you know Lena Tyhurst?

A. I did.

Q. What did she do?

A. Well, she would come in the section and inspect the work as it went—well, as it went through the section, the quality of it and the workmanship.

[fol. 5738] Q. Was she, in your opinion, a supervisory official of the company in 1937?

A. No.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Bogart?

A. No.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Gray?

A. Yes.

Q. What did she do?

A. She worked in the store.

Q. How frequently were you in the store in that period, in 1937?

A. Oh, I went in most every noon.

Q. What did you observe Mrs. Gray doing?

A. Waiting on the girls.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with her?

A. Not that I remember of.

Q. Did you regard Mrs. Gray as a supervisory official of the company?

A. No.

Q. Did you know Marvin Price?

A. I just knew who he was.

Q. What did he do?

A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Did you know Ted Scoles?
A. I knew who he was.
[fol. 5739] Q. Did you know what he did?
A. He was in the cutting room.
Q. Did you regard him as a supervisory official of the company?
A. No.
Q. Did you know Mrs. Strickland?
A. No.
Q. Did you regard Hobart Atherton as a supervisory official of the company?
A. I did not.
Q. Did you belong to any section club?
A. I did.
Q. Do you know the name of it?
A. I don't know whether we had a name for our club in our section or not. I don't recall it.
Q. Was that in section 519?
A. It was.
Q. Did you have any officers?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you pay dues?
A. Yes, we girls paid 5 cents a week.
Q. What did that club do?
A. Oh, we would have a dinner now and then, and go to the show, and things like that.
Q. Was that club in existence prior to April 27, 1937?
[fol. 5740] A. Yes.
Q. Did it continue in existence after April 27, 1937?
A. Yes.
Q. Was it still in existence on July 15, 1939?
A. Yes.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5741] Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand.

By Miss Weyand:
Q. Did you work at other garment companies before you went to work at the Donnelly Garment Company?
A. I did.
Q. What other garment companies did you work at?
A. The Tilden Manufacturing Company, at Ames, Iowa.

Q. Is that the only other garment company you worked for?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your period of employment with them?

A. Well, I was there from 1931 until in the spring of 1936.

Q. What was your job with them?

A. As an operator.

Q. When did you join the Loyalty League?

A. Soon after I came to work at the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Who asked you to join the Loyalty League?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you join at a meeting?

A. No.

Q. Were you in your section when you joined?

A. I couldn't say as to that.

Q. Do you know who the officers of the Loyalty League were at the time you joined?

A. Rose Todd was chairman.

Q. Did you know any of the other officers of the Loyalty League at that time?

[fol. 5742] A. No, I did not.

Q. Do you know any officers of the Loyalty League at any time?

A. Well, after Rose Todd, Thelma Huffaker.

Q. Were you present at any meeting when Thelma Huffaker presided?

A. No, I was not.

Q. Were you present at any meeting where Rose Todd introduced Thelma Huffaker and had her say a few words?

A. No.

Q. Did your section have a representative in the Loyalty League?

A. I don't remember whether they did or not.

Q. Do you know whether your section has had, prior to July 15, 1939, a representative in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I don't remember whether they had one in the section on that floor or not.

Q. Did you work continuously on the seventh floor from the time you went to work in 1936 to July 15, 1939?

A. I did.

Q. Did you work continuously in section 519?

A. When I first went there it was 517 and then they moved in a new section and moved our section over and it was called 519.

Q. But otherwise you continued to work in the same [fol. 5743] section throughout that period?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Rosetta Cook your instructor throughout that period?

A. You mean from —

Q. (Interrupting) From the time you first went into the section until July 15, 1939?

A. No.

Q. What other instructors did the section have?

A. Pearl Collins.

Q. Is she the only other instructor the section had?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know when she was the instructor of the section?

A. Well, as near as I can recall it was in the spring of 1938 until, I think, in August 1939, or around there sometime.

Q. Was Marie Ashley the only thread girl the section had during that period?

A. No.

Q. What other thread girl did the section have?

A. Jessie Mudd and Thelma Huffaker.

Q. Can you tell me the period of time which Jessie Mudd was the thread girl in that section?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Was it subsequent to March and April 1937?

A. Well, I don't think so. As near as I can remember, Marie Ashley was.

[fol. 5744] Q. I was asking whether it was subsequent to that time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Was it after that time?

A. That Jessie Mudd was?

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Yes.

A. As near as I can remember, yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When was Thelma Huffaker the thread girl in that section?

A. Well, I can't remember that.

Q. Do you know the order in which you had those thread girls?

A. No, I don't. I do remember that Marie Ashley was the first one.

Q. You don't remember whether Jessie Mudd was the second or third, or Thelma Huffaker the second or third?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know when Marie Ashley ceased to be the thread girl in that section?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. Do you have any approximation of the date?

A. No.

Q. Did you know that continuously from the latter part of May, 1937, until July 15, 1939, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union had a closed shop contract with the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I knew we had a closed shop, but I don't remember just when that did take effect.

[fol. 5745] Q. Do you have any idea when it did take effect, what year, how long after you were organized?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you have any idea whether it was in effect a year or two years prior to July 15, 1939?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you know that the contract between the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Company had always had a closed shop provision in it?

A. No.

Q. Did you know that at all times subsequent to May 27, 1937, if you had ceased to be a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, by the terms of the contract the company would have had to discharge you?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You didn't know that?

A. I suppose I knew it at the time, but I didn't dwell on the subject, I don't remember of it.

Q. Did you know at any time during that period that there was a closed shop contract?

A. Yes.

Q. You testified here that continuously from the time you joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, until July 15, 1939, you remained a member of your own free will, is that true?

A. That's true.

[fol. 5746] Q. Can you explain how you believed it was of your own free will that you were a member during that period, when the company would have discharged you if you had ceased to be a member?

A. Well, no one intimidated me in any way to join it. I did it of my own free will and I continued to belong to it because in the first place I joined it because it was what I wanted, and felt it was what I wanted, and I continued to belong to it.

Q. But within a month of the time you joined it, the company agreed to fire any girl who didn't belong to it. If you had ceased to belong to it, you would have lost your job. And you say, still, it was of your own free will that you remained a member?

Mr. Reed: That is objected to as only an argument and not a question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

Mr. Lane: It is objected to further because she doesn't know when the closed shop agreement went into effect.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Reed: The company didn't make any such agreement.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Yes, I continued to remain a member of my own free will.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. You considered the manner of your conduct a matter [fol. 5747] of free will, when you knew if you had done something different you would have lost your job?

Mr. Reed: Well, I object to that as a hypothetical question.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is hypothetical but very practical, Senator.

Mr. Reed: How is that?

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is hypothetical but very practical.

Mr. Reed: Well, we object to it as an improper question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon, the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed: That simply means nothing, that question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, will you let the witness determine that question, please?

Mr. Reed: I am making an objection to you.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will overrule that. I don't think that is an objection. The thing is whether or not the witness understands the question, Senator.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you understand the question, Miss Witness?

A. Well, if he will read it again, please. The discussion comes up and I want to be sure of the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, we will have it read to [fol. 5748] you and you think about it a moment.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. You considered the manner of your conduct a matter of free will, when you knew if you had done something different you would have lost your job?")

Mr. Reed: Now, I object to that as incompetent and immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, will you please let the witness think a minute? I suggested that, and I will instruct her not to answer until you permit her to answer.

Mr. Reed: Well, very well, we will do it your way.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, will you read the question?

A. No, I remember the question.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you recall it now?

A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. Now, Senator, do you have an objection?

Mr. Reed: I object to it as incompetent and immaterial and speculative, and as throwing no light on the issues in this case, and as a meaningless question.

A. Yes, I felt that I was at my own free will.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What would you consider something not of your own free will?

Mr. Reed: I can't hear that question.

[fol. 5749] Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read it, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. What would you consider something not of your own free will?")

Mr. Reed: I object to that as incompetent and immaterial and meaningless.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, under present conditions—

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) And it is speculative.

Trial Examiner Batten: Under present conditions I would wonder what—I don't believe that is—that might lead us off into a philosophical discussion of any subject. I don't believe, unless it is restated—

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you consider the loss of your job as something undesirable?

A. Why, yes, I would not consider that desirable.

Q. Would you have felt free to join the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union after the closed shop contract was signed?

A. I wasn't interested in any other union. I am quite sure our union asked for the closed shop; that is what I wanted.

Q. Did you sign a check-off authorization?

A. A what?

Q. A check-off authorization.

A. Not that I remember of.

[fol. 5750] Q. Does the company check—or did the company, prior to July 15, 1939, check-off from your pay check the dues of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, they were collected.

Q. Continuously until July 15, 1939, no dues were checked off from your pay check, is that correct?

A. As near as I remember right now, it is.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, don't you remember whether on the check you got there was a deduction for union dues?

A. Well, my insurance is deducted, but I can't say right now all that time that anything else was or not, but I remember that our dues were collected at the beginning of our union.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How long do you remember them being collected?

A. I just don't remember because I never gave it a thought; I know I always paid mine.

Q. Is it your belief that they were collected continuously from the time the union was formed until July 15, 1939, by some individual from you?

A. I just don't remember.

Q. Did you ever hear of the company, prior to July 15, 1939, checking off the dues of any employee?

A. I wouldn't know about anyone else's check but my own.

Q. Do you have your check stubs for that period?
[fol. 5751] A. I do.

Q. Can you look at them tonight and report back tomorrow with them here and state to us whether the dues were checked off, and bring the check stubs in?

A. I can.

Q. Will you do that?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember how many times prior to July 15, 1939, the amounts were collected around the plant to pay fees to Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Ingraham: Will you read that question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Lane: I object to it because it is indefinite. Is she talking about—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Well, it seems to me it is very definite, and a very simple question. The question is, how many times were amounts collected around the plant to pay fees to Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Lane: What did she mean by "around the plant"?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the Donnelly Garment Company plant, of course.

You may answer.

Mr. Lane: There is no evidence—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Just a moment, Mr. Lane. If you have made your objection, I will overrule [fol. 5752] it. Will you permit the witness to answer?

Mr. Langsdale: She doesn't mean out in the alley.

Mr. Lane: Well, I am objecting to it because the question implies, as a fact, something that is not in evidence. That is the basis of my objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled. You may answer.

A. Why, we had one or two special assessments, I don't remember just how many, but there weren't more than one or two, I am sure.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember when those assessments occurred?

A. Not after the first one, no.

Q. Do you remember the amount of those assessments?

A. Well, one was a dollar, but I just couldn't say.

Q. Do you know when the dollar assessment was paid?

A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. Do you remember how it was collected?

A. There was someone appointed to take that money up.

Q. Do you remember whether you paid the dollar assessment in one lump sum or in installments?

A. I paid it all at one time.

Q. Besides the dollar which you have just now mentioned paying, did you pay any other sums for Mr. Tyler's fee?

A. If there were other assessments, I did.

Q. You have no recollection?

[fol. 5753] A. I can't remember at the present time or recall just when they were.

Q. And you are speaking [illegible] mounts you paid any time for Mr. Tyler's fee?

A. I said we had one or two assessments, I don't remember just exactly.

Q. During the period prior to July 15, 1939, where were meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union held?

A. On the second floor.

Q. Were all meetings prior to July 15, 1939, held on the second floor?

A. That's right.

Q. Was the question raised at any meeting as to whether or not the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union had the right to meet on the second floor?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Was any question raised as to what was a proper meeting place?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Did you read the minutes of the meeting of May 11, 1937, this morning, when Mr. Lane—or this afternoon—when Mr. Lane handed them to you?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you notice in those minutes any question raised as to where was a proper meeting place?

[fol. 5754] A. Well, I can't recall everything that was in those minutes, by just reading them here hurriedly.

Q. You have no recollection now from any meeting, or from reading the minutes, of any such matter with regard to any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I suppose naturally we discussed the proper place to hold the meetings, but I don't just recall when or where.

Q. Do you recall anyone asking whether it was proper to meet on company premises?

A. The company was not using that floor.

Q. Do you know whether or not the company was leasing that floor at any time prior to July 15, 1939?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid rent to the company for that floor at any time prior to July 15, 1939?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know how notices of meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union were mimeographed or dittoed?

A. You mean how they—

Q. (Interrupting) Who did it, where it was done?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you know whether the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union used facilities of the company in preparing the notices of meetings?

[fol. 5755] A. No.

Q. Do you know whether the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid the company for the use of facilities to get out its notices?

Mr. Lane: That is objected to for the witness testified she didn't know how they were prepared. The question assumes they were prepared by the use of company facilities.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, the witness has testified she doesn't know whether they were prepared by company facilities. Of course, if she doesn't know, I don't presume she would be able to say whether they were paid for or not paid for.

Mr. Tyler: I object to it further because unless this witness was shown to be charged with some of the business dealings of the union, it is wholly incompetent, or unless she knows the business that is carried on.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, Mr. Tyler, thus far in the hearing, if I had eliminated all the testimony on the basis of your objection, I am afraid that a good share of it wouldn't be in here. I will overrule the objection; but I don't think it is a proper question, because the witness said that she doesn't know, so how could she say they were paid or weren't paid, if she doesn't know?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know whether the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union used any facilities of the company for any [fol. 5756] purpose?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you know whether the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union ever paid the company for any facilities?

Mr. Reed: Well, now, that is the same question. I renew the objection just made, in view of the comment of the Examiner. It seems to me it is highly improper to press that question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the prior question to the last one, please?

(Thereupon, the question requested was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Do you know whether the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union used any facilities of the company for any purpose?")

Trial Examiner Batten: What is the answer?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think in substance it is the same thing. If she doesn't know whether they used them, how would she know whether they paid for them or not?

Miss Weyand: Do you know whether, when the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union had social affairs, salesmen or officers or executives of the Donnelly Garment Company ever bought large blocks of tickets?

A. No, I do not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you just speak a little [fol. 5757] louder, Mrs. Freed, please?

A. No, I do not.

Miss Weyand: When you testified earlier that you did not know of any financial support to the union except by assessments and dues, you did not know whether or not there might have been such financial support, did you?

Mr. Lane: That is objected to as speculative, what might have been.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think it is. Of course, I think it is proper to ask this witness whether there might have been, without her knowledge. That would be, it seems to me, just as complete as the question, "So far as you know."

Miss Weyand: I will withdraw the question and ask you to state, do you know whether or not the company did give any financial support to the union?

Mr. Ingraham: Just a minute. That is repetition. The previous question back was that same question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may answer.

A. Well, we were a self-supporting organization.

Miss Weyand: You don't know yourself one way or the other whether or not the company did give financial support to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, no; but we were a self-supporting organization and raised our own money and our own dues.

Trial Examiner Batten: As a matter of fact, Miss [fol. 5758] Witness, you don't know one way or the other for certain, do you? A. No. How could I?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, that is the answer.

Miss Weyand: And the same answer would apply to support other than financial support, would it, by granting its facilities or use of the room?

Mr. Reed: I object to that as repetition. It has been gone over and over again.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she has testified she didn't know anything about it.

Trial Examiner Batten: You wouldn't know whether the company had given to the Independent or plant union the use of its room, free of charge, you wouldn't know that, would you?

A. Why, no, I wasn't in charge of that part of it.

Miss Weyand: Whom do you regard as the bosses?

A. Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty, Mr. Green, Mrs. Reeves.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5759] A (Continuing) —and Mrs. Hyde—Ella Mae Hyde.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was that all you regarded as bosses?

A. At that time that was about the only ones I knew the names of.

Q. Do you regard those persons as representatives of the management? A. I do.

Q. Do you regard any other persons as representatives of the management, having regard to the year 1937?

Mr. Reed: Pardon me, but I couldn't hear the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. Yes, there are other people, but I don't know who they are, because I haven't come in contact with them in any way.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Those are the only ones whose names you know of, are they?

A. The only ones I can think of at the present time.

Q. Whom do you regard as a supervisory employee?

A. Mr. Baty.

Q. Any other persons? A. Mrs. Hyde.

Q. Any other persons?

[fol. 5760] A. I would regard all of the management of the company.

Q. Would that include other persons than those you have named, that you know the names of?

A. The ones that are in the management of the company.

Q. You have named the names of every person you regard as a boss or representative of the management, or as a supervisory employee, whom you knew the name of; is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And when you answered questions this morning in which the words "boss," "representative of the management," or "supervisory employee" were used, you had regard only to these persons?

A. No. I had regard to the entire management.

Q. But you know the names of no other person in that group? A. Well, Mrs. Strickland.

Q. Who else?

A. And Miss Spilsbury. I don't recall any others.

Q. Those were the only persons whose names you knew or had in mind when you answered the questions this morning that had the words "boss," "representative of the management," or "supervisory employee;" is that correct?

The Witness: Will you repeat the question, please?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. Those are the only names that I know, yes.

Miss Weyand: Or had in mind, when you answered those questions?

[fol. 5761] Mr. Reed: I couldn't hear the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Or had in mind, when you answered those questions?")

A. No. I had in mind—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, those were the only names you had in mind?

The Witness: Those were the only names.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that what you meant?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know whether any of those persons were present at the meeting of March 18 or April 27?

A. I didn't see any of them there.

Q. Do you know whether or not they were present?

A. Without seeing them, I wouldn't know, but I am sure they were not or I would have seen them.

Miss Weyand: That is all of the questions I have.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale?

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. When did you first hear of the meeting of March 18?

A. That day.

Q. From whom?

[fol. 5762] A. I don't remember.

Q. What time of day?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Where were you?

A. I couldn't say where I was at.

Q. Did you talk to anybody about the meeting before you got to the meeting?

A. Well, it was by word of mouth that there was to be a meeting.

Q. That's what I wondered. Who by word of mouth told you about it?

A. Well, after five years I couldn't remember just who. We all talked about it.

Q. Have you any recollection at all of anybody you talked to? A. No.

Q. Did you know anything about the meeting until you got there, except that there was to be a meeting?

A. Well, I knew we were going to have one before I went to it, of course.

Q. Did you talk to anyone about the meeting, what the meeting was for, or anything of that sort, before you got there? A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember to whom you gave your 50 cents the day after the meeting that you say was the latter part of March?

[fol. 5763] A. No, I don't remember. There was a girl who was to take it up, and I gave it to her.

Q. Do you remember hearing Rose Todd say, "You can give it to the representative in your section."?

A. No.

Q. You don't remember that?

A. Girls were appointed in each section to collect the money.

Q. Where were they appointed?

A. I don't remember.

Q. How do you know they were appointed?

A. Well, someone had to collect the money, so—

Q. I know that. And someone did. But how did you know to whom to give your money?

A. Well, it was discussed that we were giving 50 cents and that there would be someone to take up the money.

Q. How did you find out who was to take up your money?

A. Well, I don't remember, at the time. I suppose I learned her name, or when she came and asked me for it—I don't remember.

Q. Do you know? A. Do I know who the girl was?

Mr. Reed: Now, the witness has answered, she doesn't remember. The next question, "Do you know?" is an improper question.

Mr. Langsdale: She said she supposes, and I am asking [fol. 5764] her if she knows.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you know whom you gave your money to? A. No, I don't.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, that is the answer, if you don't know.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. And you don't know how you happened to give it to the girl you did give it to?

A. Yes, because she was to take up the 50 cents in our section.

Q. Who? A. The girl I gave it to.

Q. How did you know she was to take it up?

A. I know there wouldn't have been anybody else taking it up.

Q. Anybody else than whom?

A. Than the girl who was appointed to.

Q. Appointed by whom? A. I don't know.

Q. You say you saw Sylvia Hull when she came to her locker on her way out of the building on the morning of the 23d of April? A. I did.

Q. Where was her locker?

A. On the seventh floor, not far from where I was working.

[fol. 5765] Q. Did you talk with her?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you learn from any source that she had been told to go home?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you learn from any source she had appeared that morning with an International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union pin on?

A. No.

Q. And you didn't know why she was leaving?

A. No, I didn't know why she was leaving.

Q. You didn't hear that from anybody?

A. No. I was busy at my work.

Q. You didn't hear from anybody why she was leaving?

A. No.

Q. Did it occur to you as unusual that she was leaving at that time of the morning?

A. Why, no. Sometimes the girls have something they might want to do that day and they ask to be excused. She had a perfect right to leave. I thought nothing of it.

Q. You suspected nothing unusual about her leaving?

A. No.

Q. How long have you known Sylvia Hull?

A. I didn't know her. That was the first time I ever saw her.

Q. How did you know it was she, then?

[fol. 5766] A. Someone said that was Sylvia Hull.

Q. Who said that?

A. I don't know who said it.

Q. Do you know how they happened to say, "That's Sylvia Hull."?

A. I don't know. I suppose someone said, "Who is that girl going home?" and someone said. I don't know.

Q. You say there is nothing unusual about a girl coming and getting her belongings out of the locker and leaving; is that true?

A. That happens once in a while, if you have something you have to attend to and ask to be excused.

Q. But someone did say to you, "That's Sylvia Hull."?

A. That's right.

Q. Did that mean anything to you at all?

A. Yes. I had read the article in the paper the night before.

Q. About Sylvia Hull's going to the convention?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that person tell you, who told you "That's Sylvia Hull," that she read that article, too?

A. I don't know.

Q. You said Rosetta Cook was your instructor?

A. Yes.

Q. You went to work there in 1936?

[fol. 5767] A. That's right.

Q. I believe you answered you knew Rose Todd by sight only; is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. You had never talked with her?

A. Not at that time.

Q. At what time? Up to July 15, 1939?

A. No.

Q. You just knew who she was as she would pass through your section?

A. I hadn't talked to her before.

Q. Now, let's get you right. You had never talked to Sylvia Hull up to July 15, 1939?

A. I never talked with Sylvia Hull in my life.

Q. You say you saw her there doing something with reference to bundles?

Mr. Ingraham: Just a minute.

Trial Examiner Batten: You said "Rose Todd," and now you are talking about Sylvia Hull.

Mr. Langsdale: I beg your pardon. That was a mistake. I meant Rose Todd.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You said you had never talked to Rose Todd?

A. Not up to that time.

Q. Up to July 15, 1939?

[fol. 5768] A. Oh, I talked to her before then.

Q. When?

A. Oh, I couldn't say, but I know I hadn't talked to her in the spring of 1937.

Q. You didn't talk to her in March or April of 1937?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. And you did say you had seen her in your section doing something with reference to bundles?

A. That's right.

Q. Did she do anything with reference to any of your bundles?

A. Not that I ever remember of.

Q. Did you ask her what she was doing with reference to any bundles?

A. No.

Q. Did you find out what she was doing with reference to any bundles?

A. Well, I suppose that I had heard the girls say that was what she did, and that is what it seemed to me she was doing.

Q. What?

A. Taking care of the lost bundles.

Q. Did you see her take care of any lost bundles?

A. Yes. She used to come in there and get the lost bundles and take care of them.

[fol. 5769] Q. What do you mean "lost bundles"?

A. They have recuts out of them and wouldn't be complete.

Q. Would that be a bundle some girl in the section would have been working on?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell me who had been working on any bundle you saw Rose Todd come in and take care of?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know of any occasion upon which you saw Rose Todd come on this floor and take care of any bundle?

A. I have seen her come and go, but I had my work to do and I couldn't—

Q. You didn't pay any attention to her; is that right?

A. Why, no.

Q. You don't know what she was doing, then, do you?

A. I know what her duties were.

Q. What were they?

A. Checking up the bundles that had recuts out of them.

Q. How do you know that?

A. Well, naturally, you learn what people do.

Q. Did you learn what she was doing?

A. Yes.

Q. From whom?

A. Well, from hearing the girls say that that was what she was supposed to do, and that's what she did.

[fol. 5770] Q. What girls?

A. The girls in the section I worked with. In fact, I think I asked some girl what she did.

Q. What girl did you ask?

A. I don't remember, after five years.

Q. You say you knew Hobart Atherton?

A. I knew who he was.

Q. Did you ever see him about the plant?

A. Yes.

Q. Doing what?

A. Just passing through on my floor. I would happen to look up and see him.

Q. How did you know it was Hobart Atherton?

A. Well, you just learn the names of people when you work there.

Q. Is that all you ever saw of him, just walking through your floor?

A. That's all I ever saw him doing.

Q. And why he was walking through the floor you don't know?

A. No. I suppose he was on his way to take care of his duties.

Q. But what his duties were he was on his way to take care of you don't know?

A. I don't know.

[fol. 5771] Q. You say you knew Lyle Jeter?

A. That's right.

Q. Where did you ever come in contact with him?

A. In fixing my machine.

Q. Any other place?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever talk with him?

A. Well, I might have said a word or two while he was at my machine. I know I told him it was all right when he fixed it and I tried it out.

Q. How did he happen to come to your machine?

A. There was something wrong with it.

Q. Do you know how he found that out?

A. I put in a call for someone to come and fix it and he would come.

Q. You put in a call?

A. Yes.

Q. And he responded?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, you read the minutes of the May 11 meeting this morning, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said you attended that meeting?

A. That's right.

Q. You read the minutes from beginning to end, did you?

[fol. 5772] A. I looked through them quite thoroughly.

Q. What was the answer?

A. I said I looked through them quite thoroughly.

Q. Did the minutes shown you, the minutes of May 11, 1937, correctly state what had been done at that meeting?

A. As near as I can remember, yes.

Q. And correctly stated what had been said at that meeting?

. . . . . .

A. Yes.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. When you read those minutes through, when they were presented to you by Mr. Tyler or Mr. Lane, did you see anything that did not correctly state what was done or said?

A. Well, I couldn't remember, after all of these years, exactly every little detail that took place in the meeting.

Q. But they appeared to you to be correct, did they?

A. That's right.

Q. Did you attend the organization meeting?

A. You mean, when we formed our union?

Q. On April 27.

A. I attended the meeting where we organized our union.

Q. That's what I mean.

A. That's right.

[fol. 5773] Q. Do you remember what occurred there at that meeting?

A. Well, we had had legal counsel and knew that we were within our rights to form our own organization.

Q. Well, I am going to show you the minutes of that meeting, Mrs. Freed, and ask you to read the first five pages of them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that 8-1?

Mr. Langsdale: 8-1, 2, 3, 4, and 5.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you have the Circuit Court page number?

Mr. Langsdale: I haven't. Miss Weyand, will you find it?

Miss Weyand: 4395, through 4399.

(Thereupon the pages of the exhibit specified in the last question were read by the witness.)

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mrs. Freed, you have read the first five pages, have you not, of the minutes of April 27, 1937?

A. That's right.

Q. And those pages contain a report of remarks made by Rose Todd and Mr. Tyler? A. Yes.

Q. Do they correctly report what Rose Todd said, as far as they go, and what Mr. Tyler said, as far as they go? A. As near as I remember, they do.

Q. You stated that this 50 cents that you contributed on [fol. 5774] the day after the meeting which you think was the latter part of March or the first of April you did not contribute to the Loyalty League? A. I did not.

Q. Did you know that the money was collected by a Miss Hartman, the treasurer of the Loyalty League?

A. No.

Q. Did you know the money was put in the First National Bank in an account of the Loyalty League?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you know the money was paid to the First National Bank on a note that had been signed by Rose Todd, president of the Loyalty League, upon which she had borrowed $1,000? A. I did not.

Q. Now, before you went to the meeting on March 27 did you know what the meeting was for?

Mr. Lane: Did you say "March 27"?

Mr. Langsdale: I didn't mean that. I meant April 27. That is, the organization meeting.

A. I knew Mr. Tyler was to be there to talk to us.

Q. Did you know it was a meeting at which there was to be a plant union formed, before you got there?

A. I don't recall now whether I did or not.

Q. You listened to the speeches of Rose Todd and Mr. Tyler, did you?

[fol. 5775] A. I did.

Q. And you believed what they said? A. Yes.

Q. Did the speeches help you to make up your mind about wanting the plant union?

A. No. I had my mind made up.

Q. You didn't pay any attention to the speeches?

A. Yes, I paid attention to them. I listened very closely.

Q. You believed them, did you? A. Why, yes.

Q. You say Lena Tyhurst came into your section to inspect work?

A. She looked at the work as it would go through, at the quality and the workmanship of it.

Q. How frequently did she do that in your section?

A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Every day?

A. I wouldn't know that.

Q. You were there, weren't you?

A. I was there, but I'm busy. I don't see everyone who comes and goes.

Q. Did she inspect your work?

A. I don't recall any instance when she did.

Q. Not ever? A. I just don't remember.

[fol. 5776] Q. Do you know whose work she did inspect?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Can you tell us any occasion on which she came into the section to inspect anybody's work?

(No answer.)

Q. Do you know whether she came into the section on an average of once a day, once a week, or—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. Was the prior question answered?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question?

(Thereupon the next to the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Langsdale: The answer was "No."

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you have an answer to it, Miss Reporter?

The Reporter: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: I certainly didn't hear it.

Mr. Langsdale: Maybe I just caught the shake of her head. She did shake her head.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you know how often she came into your section?

A. No, I couldn't say.

Q. Do you know whether it was as much as once a week, once a month, or—

[fol. 5777] A. I suppose she did. I had my work to do—

Q. I know, but—

Mr. Reed: Let her finish.

A. (Continuing) I have my work to do and I can't be watching what other people are doing.

Trial Examiner Batten: You don't know, Mrs. Freed?

A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, that is the answer.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You saw Mrs. Gray down in what you call the store; is that right? A. That's right.

Q. And you saw her there on occasions when you went to make a purchase? A. Yes.

Q. Did she wait on you? A. She has, yes.

Q. Did you talk with her?

A. If I did, I might have said, "It's a nice day," or something like that, but I don't remember anything outside of that.

Q. You never asked her what her duties were, did you?

A. No.

Q. And she never told you? A. No.

Q. And no one else ever did?

[fol. 5778] A. Why, no.

Q. Now, you said you knew Ted Scoles and that he was in the cutting department. Did you ever see him in the cutting department? A. No.

Q. Did you ever talk to him about what his duties were?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever talk to anyone else about what his duties were?

A. I heard people say he was in the cutting department.

Q. Anything else? A. No.

Q. You just heard people say he was in the cutting department? A. Yes.

Q. And you never heard anybody say anything else about him? A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: If you will just speak up, Mrs. Freed, please,—

The Witness: All right.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, you said that Rose Todd was the chairman or president of the Loyalty League when you joined?

A. That's right.

Q. That was in 1936?

[fol. 5779] A. That's right.

Q. Did you go to any meetings of the Loyalty League presided over by Rose Todd?

A. I don't remember ever attending a Loyalty League meeting.

Q. How did you know she was president?

A. Well, when you join something you, naturally, ask who the officers are.

Q. Did you? A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember whom you asked?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Now, I think you said Thelma Huffaker succeeded Rose Todd? A. I did.

Q. How did you know that?

A. Well, you hear of the activities, whether you attend the meetings or not.

Q. Did you ever attend a meeting presided over by Thelma Huffaker? A. No.

Q. Do you know when she succeeded Rose Todd?

A. I do not.

[fol. 5780] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Do you remember when the auditorium was built there in that building in which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union held its meetings? A. No.

Q. They did construct such an auditorium, did they not, or someone did?

A. Why, they had one down on the first floor where they held fashion shows.

Q. Well, was that before they formed the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union ever hold any meetings in that auditorium? You said something about the second floor.

A. We held our meetings on the second floor.

Q. Yes, and they never held any meetings in the auditorium? A. Not that I ever remember of.

Q. When you said that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was a self supporting organization, did you know that Mr. Tyler had been paid by check given by the Loyalty League, for drawing up by-laws and assisting with your working agreement?

Mr. Lane: That is objected to as assuming facts not in evidence, that is stating matters of fact not in evidence.

Mr. Reed: I would like—

Trial Examiner Batten: What is your objection, Senator?

[fol. 5781] Mr. Reed: I would like to hear the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. When you said that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was a self supporting organization, did you know that Mr. Tyler had been paid by check given by the Loyalty League, for drawing up by-laws and assisting with your working agreement?")

Mr. Reed: The first part of it is objected to as matter that has been gone over, the payment to Mr. Tyler; and the second objection is that it assumes as a fact that Mr. Tyler was employed and paid for drawing up by-laws and a working agreement. Now, there is no evidence to sustain that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll overrule the objection.

The question is, does she know whether or not Mr. Tyler was paid for these two matters by the check from the Loyalty League.

A. No, I do not.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you know on June 15, 1937, in one of the board's meetings, Rose Todd stated the following:

"Q. I understand people are saying we paid Mr. Tyler $500 to organize our union.

"Rose Todd: A. As you know and as we have explained quite thoroughly, we paid Mr. Tyler $500 retainer fee; he helped us write up our by-laws and working agree-[fol. 5782] ment and will advise us and help us when we need it."

Did you know that Rose Todd said that in the board meeting on the 15th of June, 1937?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that for the reason that question is indefinite. We don't know what board meeting Mr. Langsdale is referring to.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it is apparently — you are referring to the exhibit there?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes, I am referring to Board's exhibit 9-23.

Trial Examiner Batten: And you read from it, is that it?

Mr. Langsdale: I read from it, and it is purported to be the minutes of the group chairmen of June 15, 1937.

Trial Examiner Batten: It seems to me that is clear enough.

Mr. Langsdale: Board's Exhibit 9-23.

Mr. Ingraham: I know, but Mr. Langsdale said "a board meeting."

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it is a board of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, isn't it?

Mr. Ingraham: They never called it a board meeting.

Mr. Langsdale: I'll reframe the question.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you know that at a meeting of the group chairmen on June 15, 1937, the following occurred, as shown by Board's Exhibit 9-23, "Q: I understand people are say-[fol. 5783] ing that we paid Mr. Tyler $500 to organize our union.

"Rose Todd: As you know and as we have explained quite thoroughly we paid Mr. Tyler $500 retainer fee. He helped us write up our by-laws and working agreement, and advises us and helps us when we need it."

Did you know that Rose Todd had said that at the meeting of the group chairmen on June 15, 1937?

A. No, I wasn't on that committee and I wasn't there.

Q. You never heard it?

A. No.

Q. Did you know that that $500 was paid to Mr. Tyler in a check signed "Rose Todd, President; Pauline Hartman, Treasurer of the Loyalty League," drawn on the First National Bank on the first day of April, 1937?

Mr. Lane: That is objected to as repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it is all repetitious except the date, April 1.

Mr. Lane: Yes, I think he added that, but as far as the objection is concerned, it is repetitious.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed: That has been gone into, and it is objected to as repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you know that?

A. No, I did not.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5784] Redirect Examination.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you ever work in any department that Mrs. Strickland worked in?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever work on the ninth floor?

A. You mean during that period?

Q. Yes, during that period.

A. No.

[fol. 5785] Q. Now, prior to July, 1939, did you know that Mrs. Strickland had any authority to speak for the management?

* * * * * *

A. I didn't know what Mrs. Strickland's duties were exactly.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. So, when you mentioned her name with Mrs. Reed and Mr. Baty, and so forth, you didn't know of any authority that Mrs. Strickland had to represent the management?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever see Mrs. Strickland giving any orders to anybody, directions?

A. No.

Q. Will you state whether or not you recall sometime [fol. 5785a] after the plant union was formed, signing an authorization to the company in connection with your union dues?

. . . . . .

A. Well, I can't recall just right now whether I did during that period or not.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5786] Mr. Ingraham: Mrs. Smith.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think we need to start with any other witness, Mr. Ingraham. I think I should advise all counsel that tomorrow morning at 9:30 I shall make my own ruling on various matters which are pending, and I would suggest that, Mr. Ingraham, you be prepared to proceed with Mrs. Reed; and Mr. Langsdale, will you [fol. 5787] have Miss Tobin here?

Mr. Langsdale: I don't know w ether Miss Tobin can come or not.

Mr. Reed: Mr. Examiner, before you adjourn, I have a statement I want to make. An hour or two ago I was called out by word that my son, a boy of 11 years of age, is very sick in northern Michigan, and Mrs. Reed immediately rushed to a plane to go up and take care of him; so that is the reason I left the room; so Mrs. Reed cannot be here in the morning.

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, I am glad you said that, because I have a mother that is perhaps in worse shape than your son.

But irrespective of that, I want you to be ready to proceed in the morning with some witnesses.

Mr. Reed: Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: He is just saying why Mrs. Reed can't be here.

Mr. Reed: Yes, I want you to understand why Mrs. Reed can't be here.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I understand perfectly well, Senator Reed.

Mr. Langsdale: And do you want Miss Tobin here tomorrow morning?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I think if you can have [fol. 5788] Miss Tobin here, you'd better have her here.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5792] Trial Examiner Batten: The hearing will be in order. I think we are ready to proceed.

I think I indicated yesterday to counsel just before we adjourned that I had about come to the conclusion that I would have to assume the responsibility for determining to what further extent testimony will be received through employee witnesses.

And then, after the hearing adjourned, I indicated to counsel, I think rather clearly, so that we might have the night to think it over, that I was inclined to make a ruling that I would not receive any further testimony of employee witnesses. I think I indicated to Mr. Lane that I considered the intervener in the same category, except that I would give some consideration to whether or not I felt that perhaps some few additional witnesses might be presented by the intervener.

I think everyone certainly is familiar with the fact that at least for the last few days I have made some efforts and suggestions for some sort of an understanding or suggestions from counsel, believing that if counsel themselves could work out some plan, that that would perhaps be more satisfactory to all of the parties; and I think I also indicated that I was not doing that because I wanted to avoid the duty which I have of ruling upon these matters when [fol. 5793] they are presented to me.

I think, further, that it must be obvious to all of counsel that there are several reasons why the employee testimony at this point in the proceedings is cumulative, and I think the record will indicate other reasons why some disposition of the matter must be made.

Now, it seems to me that the testimony of the employee witnesses at this point are purely cumulative as to why and how the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized, and especially so when you consider the witnesses which we heard in the prior hearing, all of which, of course, must be considered.

I think we all realized, too, that under the Circuit Court opinion the Court stated that the main and controlling issue is the formation and administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Now, before making a definite ruling on any of these matters, I want an expression of opinion from counsel. I think I have indicated pretty clearly how I feel about it at this point.

Now, Mr. Ingraham, what is the position of the respondent, that is, with respect to the employee witnesses?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, we are prepared to continue offering testimony of employee witnesses.

Trial Examiner Batten: To what extent?

[fol. 5794] Mr. Ingraham: Well, until Your Honor —

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Well, until I stop you, is that it?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, what is your position in the matter?

Mr. Tyler: The intervener will expect to offer witnesses unless the Examiner declares that it is useless to offer them; but we will consider that the witnesses that the respondent has offered apply on whatever is a reasonable number, so that what we offer will probably be less, and it will almost certainly be less in number, and it will depend largely on how many the respondent offers.

But how to determine what is a reasonable number, I can't declare and rule on, and I haven't made up my mind; and I don't know just how we will reach the decision of what is a reasonable cross section or a reasonable number.

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, you can't give me any idea what your position is with respect to either numbers or amount, is that it?

Mr. Tyler: Roughly, the intervener will expect to add some witnesses to those offered by the respondent. If the respondent offers a large number, we will expect to offer comparatively few; but I am unable to determine at this time, under the circumstances, what is a reasonable cross section.

[fol. 5795] Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, that is what I am trying to determine. I think you all understand what is a reasonable number or amount, and, of course, I would like to have counsel indicate if they have any idea of what is reasonable.

After all, you are the men who are going to have to handle this matter from the hearing on. You are the men who are going to present the matter to the Circuit Court and to the Board in oral argument.

Now, as I have said before, I am perfectly willing to assume the responsibility, but I would like some help on it if I could get it. And you feel that you couldn't indicate other than you have, is that it, Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: I feel that I can't indicate at this time. When the respondent has finished, in view of the length of time it has taken, and in view of the number of witnesses it has put on the stand, I think I can then make an estimate of how many I feel should be added from our standpoint; but before they finish, before I know how many they put on, before I know how long they take, I don't feel I should venture a statement as to how many the intervener would ask to put on.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand.

Miss Weyand: I quite agree with the Trial Examiner's view that enough witnesses have been heard to get a fair sampling of what is the view of the employee witnesses [fol. 5796] which the company has offered and what they have testified to. I think that further witnesses are unnecessary, especially when considered in connection with the number of witnesses whose testimony appeared in the record before we started the hearing on the remand.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, what is your position?

Mr. Langsdale: Well, it occurs to me that nothing could be added to the view of the respondent or the intervener either by witness after witness. I think they have put on 11 employee witnesses, didn't you, Bob?

Mr. Ingraham: I think so.

Mr. Langsdale: And the testimony of each one of them is about the same. Now, what can be gained by putting on 11 more or 100 more, or 200 more, I don't see. Of course, that is their problem.

We are ready to do whatever the Examiner thinks should be done, and we are ready to cooperate in any way we can. I mean by "we" the I. L. G. W. U. I think everybody should want to see that done, particularly when the kind and type of evidence is exhausted by a number of witnesses.

Whatever the Examiner thinks will be all right with us. We have no desire to put on a large number of witnesses unless they do; however, I can't see that to the trial of fact the number of witnesses is going to be the guide-post.

[fol. 5797] Now, as far as the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is concerned, if we should quit here we should have very few witnesses.

That is about all I care to say. We will do whatever the Examiner thinks should be done.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is there anything further?

Well, if not, I think I shall rule at this time that as far as the offers of proof are concerned, and the employee witnesses are concerned, with respect to the respondent, that I have heard sufficient; that anything further would be cumulative, and any addition wouldn't enable the Examiner or the Board or the Circuit Court to get any better picture of the entire situation, the light of the entire hearing, the entire record and exhibits.

Now, Mr. Tyler, with that ruling, what is the position of the intervener?

Mr. Tyler: Under that ruling the intervener will desire to present a reasonable number of witnesses. I don't feel that I could commit myself at this time to the exact number, and I should like to add this suggestion, I understand that last night you indicated that the intervener wouldn't be expected to have its witnesses present today. Monday is Labor Day, and some of our witnesses I know are planning to leave town tonight and not be back until Tuesday morning.

I don't want to be in the position—I don't know how [fol. 5798] many—I don't know whether Your Honor, whether the Examiner expects to hold court Monday. If so, I should like to be able to telephone them this morning and see that some of them are here on Monday.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Tyler, there have been either 10 or 11 witnesses. Can you give me any sort of an idea of what you expect to call?

Mr. Tyler: How many we expect to call?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, to supplement the testimony which now—

Mr. Tyler: (Interrupting) I think that will depend somewhat on the length of time they are on the stand, how much time it takes.

Trial Examiner Batten: That won't have anything to do with the number, will it, Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: Yes; if a witness is on the stand a day at a time, I think it will take fewer witnesses than if they are on 15 minutes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, you understand, Mr. Tyler, that as far as my ruling is concerned, I consider all of the matters which you and Mr. Lane have examined these witnesses on as cumulative also; in other words, the record will indicate clearly, of course, that you have examined them with respect to these matters which were in your offers of proof, and so forth, so you, of course, might [fol. 5799] feel it was your duty to cover those matters again.

But under my ruling I would not permit it, so that would, it seems to me, further reduce the time and amount, as far as you are concerned.

Mr. Tyler: It seems to me the only safe method is for the intervenor to proceed to put on witnesses, and when the Examiner says anything further will be cumulative, he stops them, and if he doesn't, when the intervener feels we have now presented a further cross section, the intervener should stop. I don't think I should be asked to state in advance how may witnesses the intervener wants to put on.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I only asked you that because you stated in your first talk it would depend somewhat on the number the respondent presented, and, of course, your presentation would be a small percent of those.

Now, that was my only reason for asking you, because I don't believe, Mr. Tyler, that numbers is the important factor.

In other words, I am certain that if I have anything to do with a decision in this case, and I am certain if the Board writes an order, it is not going to base it upon the one who presented the questions or the largest number of witnesses.

Mr. Tyler: Well, in view of that statement, I think I can say to Your Honor that the intervener will not be overlengthy; but I insist that the responsibility of determining [fol. 5800] when it is cumulative is still on the Examiner, unless the intervener comes to the point when it feels: "Well, we think we have put on a fair cross section."

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I feel, Mr. Tyler, if you want me to determine the question entirely myself, I take it that is in substance the same position which the respondent takes.

Then, I will now determine that I have heard enough employee witnesses, both as to the respondent and the intervener.

So, that disposes of that matter.

Now, there are two or three other matters that I think I should dispose of with respect to Mrs. Reed. I am now striking out all of her testimony which pertains to the period subsequent to July, 1939, in accordance with a ruling which I made after Mrs. Reed testified.

Mr. Reed: All after July—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) 1939, Senator. I think that is—let's see. I believe the respondent agreed with me on that point, not as to Mrs. Reed, but in general as to the period after July, 1939. I may be incorrect in that.

I believe Mr. Tyler took the position that all testimony, even down to date, is proper. I believe, Miss Weyand, the Board took the position that testimony subsequent to July, [fol. 5801] 1939, should be received, where it had any bearing on events prior to July, 1939. I believe, Mr. Langsdale, you took the position that you, as attorney for the International Ladies' Garment Workers, was ready and willing to proceed on the basis of taking testimony down to and including the date of the present hearing.

Now, I don't mean, by stating those matters, that I am attempting for one moment to correctly state your position. I am simply giving that purely from recollection.

Mr. Langsdale: That is correct as far as the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is concerned.

Trial Examiner Batten: So, any matters after that are stricken.

Now, unfortunately, as Senator Reed indicated, Mrs. Reed, of course, isn't here, unavoidably, and I want to say that I take the same position with respect to that that I did when Mrs. Reed testified in the first instance; that is, the last time we had the hearing, she was unavoidably out of the city for a good reason, and is at the present time.

I haven't changed my position one bit, which I made clear, I believe, the first day that Mrs. Reed testified, and that is that I was going to permit her to testify, not upon the basis of the offer of proof, but she is, I presume, the general manager and directing head of the company, and therefore I received her testimony in its entirety.

[fol. 5802] Now, some provision, of course, will have to be made of some kind for completing Mrs. Reed's testimony. As I understand it, all that is left is the redirect, is that correct, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: And, of course, the amount of examination by Mr. Tyler and Miss Weyand and Mr. Langsdale will be governed by the amount of redirect.

So it is impossible to tell what that may be.

Mr. Langsdale: May I ask a question of counsel here?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: Do you expect to put her on at a later date in redirect?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I think there is one other matter, the matter with respect to Wave Tobin. I believe at the time that matter came up Mr. Ingraham presented an offer of proof and a protest against the ruling of the Examiner, which I made on August 19, 1942, which is Board's Exhibit 1-SSSSS. Now, as far as the offer of proof is concerned, I have gone over Board's Exhibit 1-SSSSS, and I don't consider that there are any matters in there which are material in the hearing, and therefore I reject the offer of proof; and, furthermore—

* * * * * *

[fol. 5803] Trial Examiner Batten: And furthermore, with respect to the testimony which Wave Tobin has thus far given, I have reviewed that, and I do not consider that it is material or relevant to the issues in this case and accordingly it is stricken.

Now, with these rulings I think, Mr. Ingraham, we are ready to proceed.

* * * * * *

Mr. Reed: Respondent objects and excepts to all of the rulings just made by the Examiner, and to each of them separately. I presume that can be considered as a good objection as to all of them without my spreading them out and repeating the objection as to each paragraph.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I am certain, Senator, that that objection is good to them generally and specifically and separately and individually.

Mr. Reed: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: And, of course, in addition to your objection you are entitled to an automatic exception.

Mr. Tyler: The same is true as to the intervener, as I understand it.

Trial Examiner Batten: That's right, Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Langsdale: I believe I understood the Examiner to [fol. 5804] mean that when and if Mrs. Reed returns to Kansas City during the pendency of this hearing, she may testify on redirect?

Trial Examiner Batten: That's right. And if she doesn't return, if anything happens she is unavoidably detained, we will make very definite arrangements so that we may complete her testimony.

Mr. Reed: I am going to ask to have Mr. Langsdale's remarks and Your Honor's remarks in reply read, because I was talking, and I didn't hear what was said.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read them, please?

(Thereupon the remarks asked for by Senator Reed were read by the reporter, as follows:

"Mr. Langsdale: I believe I understood the Examiner to mean that when and if Mrs. Reed returns to Kansas City during the pendency of this hearing, she may testify on redirect?

"Trial Examiner Batten: That's right. And if she doesn't return, if anything happens she is unavoidably detained, we will make very definite arrangements so that we may complete her testimony.")

Mr. Reed: Thank you very much for that. I say to counsel perhaps there is a way we can avoid that. We will talk about that.

Miss Weyand: I would like to state an exception in the record to so much of the Trial Examiner's ruling as strikes such portions of Mrs. Reed's testimony pertaining to events [fol. 5805] subsequent to July, 1939, as are material to determining conditions in the plant prior to July 1939.

* * * * * *

Mr. Reed: Now, Your Honor says for us to proceed, and I don't now know the course to pursue unless we know whether the evidence is to be strictly limited to matters that are set forth in the offers of proof by the proponents of those offers.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, I think you have a pretty good idea of what you think the Circuit Court's opinion means. We discussed it on several occasions. I don't believe I shall attempt to make any ruling in advance.

[fol. 5806] Mr. Reed: I want to be understood. Your Honor has held us strictly to our offers of proof, and, as I understand, they have been to the effect that no evidence is to be offered except by the party who has made offers of proof; and then to offer the evidence within the limits — evidence within the limits of that offer, am I correct about that?

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't believe that that is quite correct, Senator, although if you can indicate to me, or if you desire to, whether you have any other evidence to present, and if so, what it is, I think I would then be able to indicate to you what my position would be. Let me say this, Senator, before we go any further, so there will not be any misunderstanding about the position in which this leave the Board and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and as far as the hearing to this point is concerned, which I think perhaps you would like to know. Any evidence which they present, and I am going to make the same request that I have previously made — that they jointly present those matters wherever possible — their testimony will be limited strictly to rebuttal.

Now, you may wonder why I say rebuttal; I say rebuttal because my idea of the situation to this point is this: I have received certain testimony which the Circuit Court of Appeals feel I should receive in accordance with certain offers of proof. Now, had I received that testimony at the [fol. 5807] original hearing, the Board then would have been, and the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union would have been in the position of a party presenting rebuttal; and I don't assume that this further hearing, in substance, changes the position of the parties.

So, I thought I ought to let you all know that I considered and will follow that rule, that it will be rebuttal, and I think I stated in the prior hearing that when I stated rebuttal, I meant rebuttal.

Now, Senator, I think I interrupted you.

Mr. Reed: Well, in view of the ruling, limiting the number of witnesses that can be produced either by the respondent or by the intervener, it is very important whether or not the prosecution is to be allowed now to go into this case and undertake, by an equal number of witnesses, or by some other means, to try to balance the testimony which they offer. Now, if we are denied the privilege of going on because we were limited to the offer of proof, as they have no offer of proof, I don't think they are entitled to put a witness on.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, I simply indicated my position to you because I thought I should, with respect to rebuttal. I think I covered it thoroughly when I said rebuttal, not rebuttal of all the issues in the case, not rebuttal of matters which were in the prior hearing, but [fol. 5808] rebuttal of matters presented here.

I think I have previously stated that numbers aren't the important factor. I don't believe any of you people, as lawyers, would attempt for one moment to balance any matter of testimony by counting up the numbers of witnesses; now, that would be just absurd.

I strongly emphasized the fact which, of course, doesn't show in the record, that when I said rebuttal, I mean rebuttal, so there shouldn't be any misunderstanding.

Mr. Reed: I still — and I don't want to be importunate about this.

Trial Examiner Batten: No.

Mr. Reed: Under the indicated ruling, since we on our part have introduced evidence which covers the whole field of organization and proceedings, if you call it rebuttal, or whatever you call it, they would be entitled under that ruling to go into all of the evidence which they think refutes, and therefore the whole field is open to them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, I would say this: that is a very definite possibility. If I were to accept your idea of it, I think I would apply the same rule which I indicated a moment ago, that when I take into consideration the testimony in this hearing, which is roughly now the same number of pages at this point as was received in the prior hearing, I; of course, would consider the [fol. 5809] witnesses in the prior hearing. The fact is that all of the parties at this time, in my opinion, had a full opportunity, except with respect to the matters which the Circuit Court sent the case back for; therefore, I would consider that the Board and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union must come within that same rule, within that same idea.

Now, I don't know whether I make myself clear to you or not, Senator.

Mr. Reed: Then, if I catch your view, they would be limited on the other side here on putting on evidence to rebut new matter that we have brought into the case now, and if they had gone into those questions before, they wouldn't be entitled to come in now and produce witnesses in rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think, generally speaking, I could agree with that except for this, that of course, I would feel, Senator, that there had been extremely few, if any, new matters presented, when you consider the other record. Do you understand what I mean? I don't know as I understand exactly your use of the word "new." Now, do you mean —

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) Something additional, that was not in before; that is to say, to try to illustrate, if I may try to, suppose the prosecution produces evidence to sustain their charges, that is their case. We undertook to answer it, and Your Honor excluded certain evidence. Now, you have merely received that evidence.

[fol. 5810] Trial Examiner Batten: That's right.

Mr. Reed: Which then would mean that the prosecution would not be entitled to rebut that evidence unless that evidence brings into the case some new matter, some matter that was not touched on in the previous hearing of this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, I don't believe I could go with you that far. All I can say is that it would be my purpose to very definitely and strictly confine them to what I consider to be rebuttal testimony. We have received in this further hearing — and that doesn't mean that it opens up all of the issues in the case, and neither does it open up all the matters that are in the case to this point — now, I simply told you that at this point, Senator, because I wanted you to know what I had in mind with respect to that matter.

Now, that, of course, depends to some extent on what further testimony, if any, is received from the respondent and the intervener.

Now, that might open up matters which haven't thus far been opened up, I don't know. I mean, that is a conjecture, so I wouldn't want to say, Senator, except that they will be confined strictly to rebuttal, it will be strictly applied as far as any testimony which is offered.

Mr. Langsdale: What about Mrs. Reed's testimony, [fol. 5811] which didn't follow the offers of proof? Should we be permitted to answer that?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Langsdale, that depends largely on what you mean by "answer".

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I understand your distinction between answer and rebuttal. As I understand it, we put on our case and the Board put on its case in the former hearing, the respondent and intervener came along and offered certain testimony which you refused. Now, had you received it then, we would have been entitled to rebut it.

Now then, you are receiving it.

Trial Examiner Batten: That's right.

Mr. Langsdale: And you now say we have the opportunity to rebut it as we would have had if it had been received in the first instance.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let me say this: you are in no worse position now.

Mr. Langsdale: Than we would have been then.

Trial Examiner Batten: So far as Mrs. Reed's testimony is concerned, it is the same at this point as if it had been given at that time. In other words, your only opportunity, as I understand it, is rebuttal, which is rebuttal. I want to emphasize that because, for some unknown reason, in many of these hearings — at least it has been my experience — attorneys apparently don't seem to under[fol. 5812] stand the word "rebuttal". Now, I am sure all of you men do, and far be it from me to indicate to any of you, all of whom have a much wider knowledge of those matters than I do.

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, the respondent's and intervener's testimony is in the nature of an answer to the Board's testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: That's right.

Mr. Langsdale: Now then, if there is anything new brought out, we have an opportunity to rebut it.

Trial Examiner Batten: That's right.

Mr. Langsdale: But Mrs. Reed's testimony is in the same category, however, she was not confined to the offers of proof. I think the Board and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, if that evidence is going to stand, should have the opportunity to reply to it in the same manner that we would have replied to it, had she been to the former hearing.

Trial Examiner Batten: I agree with you, and you apparently agree with Senator Reed in principle, because you say anything "new".

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I think this: If the State puts on evidence that a certain man committed a murder, I say "yes, he did," and all the defendant says is "no," he didn't; well, there is nothing to rebut, is there? But if he says, "I was out at 58th and Holmes Street," and estab-
[fol. 5813] lishes an alibi in his answer to the State's charge, then that brings something in which the State has a right to rebut. But if it is just "no" against "yes—"

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't intend to rule on it in advance. All I can tell you is, as I said before, as far as I am concerned I don't care to discuss it any further, that anything you present, as far as the Board and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is concerned, will be rebuttal, and I mean rebuttal.

Now, that is all I can say.

Mr. Langsdale: What I want to know is what you mean by rebuttal. Is it a reply to what they have put on, isn't that rebuttal?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Langsdale, would you mean by that, supposing I were to say "yes," you mean then you would reply to everything?

Mr. Langsdale: Oh, no.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, then, you can see how futile it is to set those lines into a discussion.

Mr. Reed: If you will pardon me, and you have been very indulgent, and if Mr. Tyler will pardon me, I want to just say this one thing: I understand the record in the whole case being that the prosecution put in its case, the respondent put in evidence of witnesses, a number of them, that covered the same matter, or substantially the same [fol. 5814] matter, that was introduced through the mouths of witnesses here, so that issue was there, and the opportunity was given to the prosecution to answer it by witnesses, to rebut it at that time.

Now, the only change in the situation is that under the order of the Court you have admitted the same character of evidence here, but more of it, so I think that they are limited to a rebuttal of those things that are brought in here, if any, that weren't touched upon in the former hearing.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Tyler: The intervener understands that this hearing is a continuance of the hearing held in 1939, and that what occurred in that hearing may be considered in connection with this evidence, and that offers of proof made in 1939 are still active, valid offers of proof at this time.

But in order to avoid any mistake of my own, on that part, the intervener here and now renews all of the offers of proof which it made in the 1939 hearing.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I consider, Mr. Tyler, that that would be unnecessary, although if you want to provide for it, you may do so, and you have.

Mr. Tyler: I agree with Your Honor that this is merely a precaution in case I am wrong in my understanding.

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, I assume that all of these people who were named in these offers of proof, I have again rejected the offers insofar as those [fol. 5815] names are on the list and haven't testified.

Mr. Reed: We desire on behalf of the respondent to adopt or to make the same offers of proof that we have made before in the trial of the case. I think they are in the case anyway, but I desire to leave no doubt.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, that's all right.

Mr. Reed: Now, Your Honor said for us to proceed. We would now like to recall Wave Tobin, we haven't finished her examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think, Senator, I disposed of that matter by my ruling on the offer of proof, and so forth.

Mr. Reed: Very well. Now, we expected, as you undoubtedly know, to take the rest of the day in putting on witnesses. Our witnesses aren't here.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think I told Mr. Ingraham last night, Senator: In other words, you weren't up here, but I wanted to let all counsel know what I had in mind, so that you wouldn't be inconvenienced by bringing them down here, and I think I told Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: That I felt it would be unwise to bring these people out of the plant down here again this morning. So, I will take the blame for those people not being here.

[fol. 5816] Mr. Reed: We thought Wave Tobin would be here, and we expected to spend considerable time with her examination; and you have ruled on the offer of proof which we made, and I would like to have some time to prepare—it was an oral offer made in the heat of the trial, a formal offer of proof. It seems to me that under the circumstances the wise thing to do is to adjourn this hearing over until Tuesday morning, and in the meantime we can all be prepared, in the light of these rulings, to proceed; if there is anything further to proceed on.

Mr. Langsdale: I understand there has been a written offer of proof presented to the Examiner as to Wave Tobin's testimony. I haven't received a copy of that.

Trial Examiner Batten: That's right. It is Board's 1-SSSSS.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: As far as the Senator's request is concerned, if he wants to present another offer of proof with regard to Wave Tobin, I will receive it.

Mr. Reed: Of course, in explanation of the situation, while you made a preliminary statement or tentative statement last night to counsel, we had no very definite idea of what your ruling might be this morning, and I say, with all respect in the world that I am still in the nebulous belf [fol. 5817] as to just what Your Honor means. I would like to have some time to consider this matter, and see what we can do. Perhaps we can close this case very speedily unless the other side wants to put on witnesses.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5821] Mr. Ingraham: I want to make this statement:

In preparing the respondent's offer of proof at the last hearing—I believe it is Board's exhibit No. 1-OOOO—I inadvertently included the name of Eila Mae Hyde. She testified in the N. R. A. hearing and I intended to offer her testimony from that hearing. She was one of the company's principal witnesses. But through some sort of misunderstanding her testimony was not offered, and the stenographers in preparing this exhibit, this offer of proof, included her name. I did not intend to include her name in the offer of proof and I would like to withdraw her name. It was done by mistake.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is there any objection to that?

Miss Weyand: I object to the withdrawal. The Board, [fol. 5822] of course, in its last decision used that as an admission against interest and believed it was put there with full knowledge of the facts. I do not think it should be withdrawn at this time.

Mr. Ingraham: If the Examiner will recall, Mrs. Hyde testified, and I stated at the beginning of the hearing, that she was one of the supervisory employees. She was on the stand. And all of us assumed that there wasn't any question but what she was not a member of the union. She never has been a member.

Now, if there is any question about this, I would like to call Mrs. Hyde and have her testify that she was not a member of the union and never had been.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't think there is any doubt about that being the fact.

Mr. Reed: What's that?

Mr. Langsdale: Ella Mae Hyde was never thought by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' to be a member of the plant union, and it was never so claimed. It was always understood by our union that she was the supervisory agent.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it was a matter of general understanding that she was not a member of the union.

Mr. Langsdale: As to the motion to withdraw, I will not take any part in that. But I will state, for the integrity of [fol. 5823] the record, it was never claimed by anybody that Ella Mae Hyde was a member of the union.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will dispose of the matter at our next session, but it will not be necessary for you to have her here. In other words, I am not going to get into any collateral matter of that sort.

Mr. Ingraham, have you folks had any further discussion since this morning by which you can enlighten me in any way on any matters?

Mr. Ingraham: I believe that the only additional evidence that we expect to offer will probably be offers of proof.

Mr. Reed: In view of the rulings.

Mr. Ingraham: In view of the rulings this morning, yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, not that I am accepting it or feeling that you are bound by your statement, all I can say now is, of course, that the Board and the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union should be ready to proceed at our next session.

Now, in saying that, as I just stated, Mr. Ingrahain, I do not mean that you are bound by that.

Mr. Ingraham: I think that is correct, that they had better be prepared.

Mr. Langsdale: There may be some of the offers of [fol. 5824] proof which the Examiner will not reject.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's not cross that bridge until we get to it.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5829] Trial Examiner Batten: The hearing will be in order. I think we are ready to proceed.

Mr. Stottle has given me four offers of proof. I assume, Mr. Stottle, you had better have the originals and one copy marked by the reporter. Let's see; I think we made the offers of proof part of Board's Exhibit 1.

* * * * * *

(Thereupon documents above referred to were marked as "Board's Exhibits Nos. 1-TTTTT, 1-UUUUU, 1-VVVVV and 1-WWWWW," for identification.)

Trial Examiner Batten: With respect to these offers of proof, Mr. Ingraham, I notice one is marked "Supplemental offer" and the other just "Offer of proof." Does that indicate the one, 1-TTTTT, supplemental offer of proof, supplements what?

Mr. Ingraham: Supplements the offer that we made at the time that Wave Tobin, her testimony was stopped.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, then, you mean that to be supplemental of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSSS, is that right?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, that is right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, the other offers of proof, are they, Mr. Ingraham, new matters, or are they matters that are covered in prior offers of proof, or what is the [fol. 5830] status of those?

Mr. Ingraham: They are in connection with the same testimony that we were offering to prove by Wave Tobin, except, I believe, one— the offer of proof of 1-UUUUU and 1-WWWWW are offers that are in line with the testimony that you said you would not receive in connection with Wave Tobin.

Trial Examiner Batten: So, then, the Wave Tobin testimony and the 1-WWWWW and the 1-UUUUU all pertain to the matter of showing the International Ladies' Garment Workers' contracts, and the matters indicated in the offers of proof?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: That would be 1-SSSSS, 1-TTTTT, 1-UUUUU, and 1-WWWWW, is that right?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, 1-VVVVV, what is that?

Mr. Ingraham: That offers to prove the charges that were being made by the I. L. G. W. U. prior to the effective date of the Wagner Act.

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, that refers to—

Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) N. R. A.

Trial Examiner Batten: The so-called background that we have discussed in this hearing before?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: And this offer of proof, to prove, is, in fact then, supplemental to the parts of the [fol. 5831] record which were offered by the various parties in the original hearing, is that it?

Mr. Ingraham: That's correct. I would like to say this: I believe in the offers that were made at the previous hearing on behalf of the employees, and you have received the testimony of certain of those employees, of course, at this time there is probably—oh, a hundred to 150 of those employees that no longer are employed by the company, but we were still offering to prove by those employees, the matters set out in the offers of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I don't presume, Mr. Ingraham, the fact they don't happen to be with the company now would have any effect upon the offer of proof.

Mr. Ingraham: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Tyler: I think the stenographer didn't catch my statement a few moments ago. I have an offer of proof in preparation, which will be here in the course of 1 hour or less, I think in half an hour, the substance of which is an offer to prove the successful operation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union since July 15, 1939. I wish to file it when it gets here, it won't be long delayed.

I also wish to make sure that the exhibits which were rejected in the 1939 hearing, which were made as offers of proof, and in case there was any exception, I now offer the [fol. 5832] rejected exhibits in the 1939 hearing as offers of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: What rejected exhibits, Mr. Tyler; I don't understand.

Mr. Tyler: The ones the intervener offered, including 20-A to 20-KK.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent also wants to reoffer rejected respondent's exhibit No. 2, which was rejected in the former hearing, and which is several of the contracts made between the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and certain garment companies in the Kansas City area.

And we offer—want to reoffer, offer or reoffer, intervener's exhibit 20, which is contained in the supplemental certificate of the Board in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at pages 6056 to 6094 inclusive.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5833] Mr. Stottle: I might say that respondent's exhibit No. 2, which has just been reoffered, appears in the supplemental certificate of the Board at pages 5991 to 6014 inclusive.

We also want to offer in evidence the judgment, findings of fact and conclusions of law of Judge Miller in the injunction suit which has been previously referred to in the pleadings and evidence.

(Thereupon the document above referred to was marked as "Respondent's Exhibit No. 43," for identification.)

[fol. 5835] Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, if you recall, you stated, I believe, that arrangements would be made to take Mrs. Reed's testimony, if necessary. Well, after court adjourned, Mr. Reed spoke to Mr. Langsdale and Miss Weyand, about the possibility of agreeing on what Mrs. Reed would say, and if I recall right, they said that if the Senator would prepare what he had in mind—he thought there was just several points—they would consider whether or not they could agree to it. We have been checking her testimony, and haven't completed it yet.

Now, we are prepared to close, subject to that, to either bringing Mrs. Reed in or agreeing with all parties that she would testify about certain matters.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, how long do you think it would take you to go over those matters and determine?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, if we have time—

Mr. Hogsett: (Interrupting) A couple of days, 48 hours, something like that.

[fol. 5836] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think that would be all right. I think I said that we would make proper arrangements for Mrs. Reed's testimony. Is that satisfactory to other counsel?

Mr. Langsdale: I didn't hear the last remark.

Mr. Hogsett: Senator Reed can complete his examination of the testimony of Mrs. Reed with a view to such a statement as Mr. Ingraham referred to, within 48 hours.

Mr. Langsdale: My recollection was Mr. Ingraham had just two matters in mind when he talked to me and Miss Weyand, and one was with reference to a date she had given in 1935, and the other was in reference to the Wage and Hour exhibits that were offered.

Will you read what I have just said?

(Thereupon the statement asked for by Mr. Langsdale was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Ingraham: That's correct, and we are just checking through her testimony to see if there would be anything else.

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, I personally will not be willing unless the Examiner tells me to do so.

Trial Examiner Batten: I was going to suggest this, that we recess until 2 o'clock and you attorneys get together and see if you can settle this matter.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, the Senator says that is not contemplated, and I assume what you originally stated will be [fol. 5837] also true, and we ought to agree on that very easily.

Here is something I want to say before we close, at the end of the testimony of Mrs. Reed, when the Examiner announced that he was going to not permit any more witnesses to be put on by the respondent or the intervener, for the reason that he believed it would be cumulative; I asked Mr. Ingraham if he had any one witness, who, in his mind, is any more important to his case that would testify to anything materially different from what the 11 would testify to, and my recollection is he said "no." I told him I would join in urging the Examiner to permit him to put on any such witness if he had one. Is that correct, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, you said that to me. I said, "no," Clif; I hadn't checked the testimony of each of these witnesses. I think I joked about it, I think these witnesses are very strong witnesses. Have you anything in mind in particular?

Mr. Langsdale: No. I thought you might have been caught napping with one witness you were holding back, and if you wanted to put that one witness on I would urge the Examiner to permit you to put them on, and you told me "no."

Mr. Reed: Well, we were holding back a multitude of witnesses and we were prepared to put them on. When I say a multitude I mean at least a hundred.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, I gather there was no particular one which was outstanding, as Mr. Langsdale [fol. 5838] has suggested.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, there were certain witnesses, for instance, that might add something; for instance, witnesses that worked in May Fike's section. However, you limited the testimony and we stopped. The witnesses, in general, would testify as to what these other witnesses so testified.

Mr. Langsdale: I would like to know if Mr. Tyler has any one witness or two witnesses that he deems more important than any of those who took the stand, on any particular point, or generally.

Mr. Tyler: In view of the Examiner's ruling as to hearing no more testimony from the employees, and no testimony as to the operation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union since July 15, 1939, I would say that the intervener has no star witness.

We do not say that we have one witness who would combine all or substantially all of the knowledge about the situation. We have a substantial number of both employees and ex-employees, and I would say no one of them or no two or three of them are any outstanding witnesses in importance as compared to the others.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, in view of my ruling, Mr. Tyler, have you anything further?

Mr. Tyler: Nothing more, in view of your ruling.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, am I correct in asking if [fol. 5839] the respondent and intervener rest, taking their exceptions of my rulings? Is that correct?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, as to the offers of proof which have been made this morning, Board's exhibits 1-TTTTT to 1-WWWWW inclusive, I will reserve my decision on those and I will reserve my decision on Mr. Stottle's offer of respondent's exhibit No. 2, intervener's exhibit No. 20, and the Judge Miller findings, which I believe were marked respondent's exhibit No. 43.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5840] Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, are you ready to proceed?

Miss Weyand: I am, but before proceeding I would like to ask about the statement that Mr. Ingraham undertook to prepare of the matters in which the firm of which Mr. Tyler is a partner, represented the Donnelly Garment Company, or Mrs. Reed. As the record now stands—I have checked it recently—Mr. Ingraham undertook to prepare such a statement and to submit it to the Trial Examiner, and the Trial Examiner was to say whether or not there was anything in the statement material to the case.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I'll have that at 2 o'clock.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5841] ETTA DORSEY, a witness called by and on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you please state your name?

A. Etta Dorsey.

Q. Where do you reside? A. 3919 Troost.

Q. When did you begin to work at the Donnelly Garment Company? A. October, '25.

Q. Are you still working there? A. I am not.

Q. When you first went to work for the Donnelly Garment Company, what did you do?

A. I was an embroidery machine operator.

Q. How long did you continue to do that work?

A. About two years.

Q. What did you do next?

A. I was an instructor, for the same work.

Q. Were you continuously an instructor from 1927 to July 15, 1939?

[fol. 5842] A. I was.

Q. Do you know Ruby Clayton? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did she ever work in your section?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. Did you know Ethel Riegel?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did she ever work in your section?

A. She has.

Q. Do you know Mary Warth? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Has she ever worked in your section?

A. Yes, she has.

Q. Do you know Oma Lee Cooper? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Has she ever worked in your section?

A. Yes, she has.

Q. Do you know Edith Dean? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did she ever work in your section?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. Do you know Lydia Phillips?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did she ever work in your section?

A. Yes, she has.

[fol. 5843] Q. What section were you instructor of in March and April, 1937? A. 415.

Q. On what floor was that section located?

A. The eighth floor.

Q. What kind of work was done in that section?

A. Well, we had different machines, hemstitching—that section was changed around quite a lot, but I instructed hemstitching and zigzagging and eyelets and pinking and blind stitching, embroidery.

Q. And that is all the machines? A. I think so.

Q. Where on the floor was that section located at that time? A. Where on the floor?

Q. Yes.

A. Right in front as you come into the door at the entrance.

Mr. Reed: What was the number of that section?

Mr. Langsdale: 415.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. And that is at the north end of the building, is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. And it consisted of rows of machines stretching east and west across the north end of the building, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Did you attend the meeting at which the Donnelly [fol. 5844] Garment Workers' Union was organized?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you know before you got to that meeting that such a union was going to be formed?

A. Well, I don't know, but we sort of surmised something.

Q. How did you learn of that meeting?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that. It is not proper rebuttal.

Miss Weyand: This is a preliminary question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if it is preliminary, she may answer.

* * * * * * *

A. No, that's all right. Well, I don't remember, but it was either by telephone or by Mrs. Wherry telling us; she usually went around and told the instructors.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I move that the answer be stricken out; it is not a preliminary question, it is an attempt to prove the Board's case in chief, not proper rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll determine whether it is preliminary. You may proceed.

* * * * * * *

Miss Weyand: Do you know how the girls working in [fol. 5845] your section learned of the meeting?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that question as not proper rebuttal.

Miss Weyand: I insist it is proper rebuttal, because four girls were called as witnesses by the company and said they were working in section 415 at that time. I think the witness's answer will rebut their testimony as to the manner in which they learned of the meeting.

Mr. Reed: That will not rebut, the way they learned of the meetings. It just shows how this lady learned of the meeting; and Your Honor said rebuttal—when you ordered the close of our case you said that this evidence on rebuttal would have to be actual rebuttal, and repeated it several times.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, and I still say that when it is rebuttal I mean rebuttal.

Mr. Reed: Yes. Now, we object to this as not rebuttal.

Mr. Langsdale: It certainly is rebuttal, to have this witness, as instructor of those girls, who said they weren't notified by their instructor, to say, if she will, that she notified them; and they all said that.

Mr. Ingraham: That was the Board's case in chief, and they put on May Fike, and she testified the instructor notified her, that that was the way they were notified of the meetings. Now, they try to come in on rebuttal and bolster up the Board's case in chief by this type of testimony, and [fol. 5846] it is their case in chief to prove the instructors notified the girls of the meetings and asked them to go; therefore that was their charge.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, there was nothing in the ruling in the first case to prevent them putting on all they had to the contrary on that, but they did come here with a number of witnesses, this time, and have them testify in direct examination that they were not notified by the instructor. Now, if that was a part of the Board's case in chief, it was part of their defense in chief, and there is no ruling against that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I think I agree with Mr. Ingraham thus far, that if this lady were an instructor in some other section or was not here to testify with respect to those people who have here actually testified about how they were notified, that I would reject the testimony, but under these circumstances, I think it is rebuttal, because these certain named people testified here.

Why wouldn't it be, as to this instructor, without reference to other people, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: This evidence was evidence that the Board offered in their case in chief, that instructors were supervisory employees; that was the position they took, and that instructors ordered the girls to go to meetings.

Now, they put on witnesses to that effect. Now, they come in and attempt to put on additional testimony to [fol. 5847] prove the same thing. I don't think that that is rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: No; I think I can distinguish, Mr. Ingraham, between putting on testimony, general testimony, without reference to particular individuals who have testified here. Now, isn't there a difference there.

Mr. Ingraham: I don't see that there is a difference. If it was the Board's case in chief, to prove that instructors did certain things, then I don't see that it makes any difference to prove that an instructor did it with a particular girl.

Mr. Reed: The matter presents itself to me in this way, the Board undertook to establish its case and one of the elements that it undertook to establish was that the instructors sent its employees to the meetings. Now, they should have put in all their case on that. We sought to meet that evidence and it was excluded.

Now, we come in and seek to meet it, have sought to meet it, and we think have met it. Now, they come in and say, "Since you have met our testimony, we are going to introduce subject matter which was a part of our case in chief, and call it rebuttal."

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, don't you distinguish either between testimony, for instance, of this witness, with respect to specific statements that several of these witnesses made and the testimony of an instructor or other person that is general in nature?

[fol. 5848] Mr. Reed: If a witness made a statement here that she was not sent to a meeting by her instructor and this witness's testimony was to be limited to that particular thing, to show that that did not occur, that might be called rebuttal of that testimony, but it is plain that there is an attempt to open the doors now and put on witnesses to deny everything that was testified to in the defense and call it rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, all I can say is, Senator, I am going to require that Miss Weyand confine it to rebuttal. I further want to say that this undoubtedly is preliminary in nature. Now, if this lady, who was there at the time, is in position to testify concerning these definite things which these people testified to, I think it is rebuttal.

Now, I have no idea, and will say so now, of permitting Miss Weyand or Mr. Langsdale to go into this entire subject matter in any form or fashion, and it is confined to rebuttal.

Mr. Tyler: If the Examiner please, the intervener wishes to suggest that mere contradiction is not rebuttal.. The Board had the burden of putting on all the evidence it had as to the people being forced or intimidated into going to or attending meetings, in its case in chief. The respondent and intervener had the opportunity to answer that, and some day somebody will weigh the comparative weight of the evidence; but merely for the Board to undertake to contradict the evidence which the respondnt placed is not proper rebuttal.

[fol. 5849] The contradiction is already made by the people who said it was not true. Their rebuttal should be limited to some subject which they had no opportunity properly to present in their original case, because it was brought up as something new by the respondent. Now, this is nothing now but just repetition of "I say it did," and "I say it didn't."

It is just merely a contradiction which I say isn't rebuttal at all.

Mr. Reed: I think this is a pretty good test. If you will indulge me a moment. Will not this lady's testimony, which she starts to give here, have been proper testimony to give by the prosecution on the first trial?

Plainly it would be, and therefore it cannot be called rebuttal, because we have some testimony to the contrary. They had the full right to call in that hearing this lady, and if she had testified, as she evidently is, and if she should have testified as she evidently is now, then that was part of their case in chief and they should have put it on and we should have had an opportunity at that time to put on our evidence in denial.

Now, we were cut off from that right by the ruling, and we have now been, under the Court of Appeals' decision, accorded the right to put on some of our witnesses showing our side of this case. Then comes the prosecution and proposes now to put in a lot of evidence that was proper for them to have put in in the trial of the first case.

[fol. 5850] So that is not rebuttal, it is a continuance of their evidence, brought here by the prosecution under the pretext that they have a right to bring it in because we put in some evidence to the contrary.

Mr. Hogsett: May I suggest a thought? Everything the respondent has proven in a month or more of hearing has denied something or perhaps admitted something that the Board has proved. In other words, the proof that the respondent has brought has covered the whole field, but it has been defensive, it has been in negation of something that the Board proved or undertook to prove in its case in chief.

Now, let's see where it would lead if this is rebuttal. Well, if this is rebuttal, then everything that they proved in their case in chief can again be produced here and held as rebuttal, because it would be in negation of something that the respondent has proved. Well, that is not my conception of rebuttal testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll say to you that that is not my idea of rebuttal either.

Mr. Hogsett: No. I don't think it could be logical, legally it won't stand up. I think this is a typical case of rebuttal that I am going to suggest; suppose a witness in the defense in the respondent's case had, in the course of the testimony, said they were, at a given time, at the meeting, say, of March 18, and heard what was said, and Mrs. [fol. 5851] Reed said this and not that; now, suppose they could show that that witness was working in a factory in Detroit on that day; that would be a perfect instance of rebuttal.

But for them to produce this lady to say she was sitting right next to Miss Mary Jones, respondent's witness, "It happened I was sitting right next to her, I heard Mrs. Reed's speech that day and what Miss Mary Jones said about it was wrong, Mrs. Reed said this and not that," well, that is all ancient history, we have been debating that subject, among others, for 3 or 4 years. I think that makes a perfect—not perfect, but maybe a crude but at least an illustration of what is and what is not rebuttal.

This lady is about, I gather from the purport and trend of the question, to say she, as the instructor, gave instructions or told these people in her section there was going to be a meeting. Well, how many times have you heard that already in their case in chief? That doesn't rebut anything, that isn't rebuttal, it is just some more testimony for the Board, in chief.

I think this is pretty fundamental, because I gather from the trend of the questioning so far that they are just going over their whole case again, and try to justify it on the ground—they pick out some witness, Ethel Riegel—I haven't been here to hear this, but I know something about what had gone on since I have been away—they may pick [fol. 5852] out a witness and say "Ruby Clayton said so-and-so, and now we want to prove that isn't so." If you let them get away with that—and I use that language without offense—then you are throwing the door wide open to about two or three more weeks, to the case in chief.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, were you going to say something?

Mr. Langsdale: Unfortunately for Mr. Hogsett, with regard to the argument, he wasn't here in this hearing nor the hearing of 1939, so he doesn't know what occurred, only what he read or someone told him.

Now, we had, in the 1939 hearing, one witness, May Fike, who said the girls in her section were sent to this meeting by their instructors. They bring along four in this lady's section who said that the instructor didn't send them to that meeting, "We learned of it out in the halls or by word from the girl next to me," or something of that sort. Now, when we say the instructor sent these girls to that meeting of April 27, and they come back to meet that and they put on Ethel Riegel and Jennie Smith, or whatever the names are, and they say, "That isn't so, she didn't send us," certainly we have a right to show that that is so, and, "We sent you and you and you and you;" what could rebuttal be?

There was nobody that objected to any question they asked in the 1939 hearing along that line, the Examiner [fol. 5853] didn't deny them the right to prove whatever they had along that line. That isn't what the Court of Appeals sent it back specifically to prove, one of their offers of proof. They sent it back to show why and how they joined this Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Now then, they choose to put this evidence on in direct, and say that the instructor did not send them to the meeting, that is, four particular witnesses, and along they come and say, "You four witnesses were sent by the instructor."

Now, I believe that is just as perfect a case of rebuttal as Mr. Hogsett's illustration about somebody in Detroit. We will say one of those girls had said, "The instructor did send us to the meeting," and we had the proof they were in Detroit. Is there any greater variance in the testimony under that condition than there is to sit here and say, "Mrs. Dorsey didn't send me to the meeting," and Mrs. Dorsey comes along and says, "I did send that very girl to the meeting;" certainly that is rebuttal.

Now, they raise that in their offer of proof, and then put on some witnesses who swear to that, and we come along and show that those very witnesses aren't telling the truth about it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: I might point out that the witness on the stand is a witness that has been offered by the company [fol. 5854] themselves, and is named in their offer of proof for the purpose of proving something quite different from what she is prepared to testify.

I think, aside from the arguments here made on rebuttal, it is perfectly proper to put on one of the people that they offer in evidence, and have her testify to what her true understanding of the facts was. I think it is very important that the Circuit Court of Appeals should have here in the record the evidence, the testimony of the people on their offer, who are not willing to testify in accordance with their offer, and particularly so when that witness was the instructor at the plant for a long, long period of years, had girls in her section who have testified here, and who can tell for the Circuit Court of Appeals' benefit and the Board's benefit, exactly what did occur.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Miss Weyand. Surely that is not rebuttal.

Miss Weyand: No, I was —

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Then, let us — I can tell you now I don't propose to accept that type of testimony.

Miss Weyand: Well, I was making it quite general, of course. This woman was the instructor for many years, of this section.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, irrespective of that, I can [fol. 5855] tell you now I don't propose to accept any testimony on that basis.

Miss Weyand: I want the record to show I am going to offer a number of persons on their offer —

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) What I am concerned about is the matter of rebuttal. I am glad you mentioned the other point, however, because I am not going to receive it, so you might just as well prepare your offers of proof, and confine the testimony of these people to rebuttal.

Miss Weyand: Now, on the rebuttal point, I consider it rebuttal to put on any person who worked in a section there as an instructor or as a thread girl, or as a girl who sat next to one of the witnesses who testified here, when the witness I put on is prepared to state what she did, what she heard said in the presence of the other girl, that would refute the statements made by witnesses called by the company under their offer of proof and adduced here under the remand of the Court; and I am offering this witness on that basis. I think this witness is a particularly important witness because si[illegible]itnesses called by the company worked in section 415. Many of those witnesses mentioned Mrs. Dorsey by name, and it is certainly rebuttal to have Mrs. Dorsey herself come here and tell, for the benefit of the Board and the Court, exactly what happened when those girls were present. Her remarks were directed to the girls in her section, which included those girls, and [fol. 5856] I submit that is proper rebuttal.

Mr. Reed: Let me put it this way. Suppose we go back to the time when you were trying this case at first. The Board undertook to show that the plant union was a dominated union, by showing, by claiming that the instructors were persons in authority, and by showing that the instructors directed the employees to go to that meeting.

Now, they were allowed to go into that, they did go into that. Suppose they had then called this lady and she had testified to just what, evidently, she is going to testify to here. That evidence would have been competent, if any of it was competent.

Then we, on our side, would have had the right, with our witnesses at that trial and at that time, to have denied that testimony. Then, would you have said that if we, because we denied, we did not admit it, that the Board could again put on some more witnesses to the exact tenor it had produced, and say, "This is now rebuttal, because since we put our testimony in you put in your side of the case." If that is true, then what happens is this: the plaintiff puts in his case, the defendant puts in evidence contrary, then the plaintiff can go back and start to prove his case all over again.

Now, rebuttal must be a new matter that was not touched upon in the evidence in chief. So that what we are having here is a witness put on the stand to testify to the [fol. 5857] very things that she could have testified to in chief, and which they ought to have had her testify to in chief.

So that if we try it on that theory, they put on some evidence and they call it rebuttal, but it is part of their main case; we put on some evidence on the other side, and we call that — and immediately they say they want to rebut that, and they put on evidence, and we come in with surrebuttal, and we just try this case four or five times over.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, there is possibility of that, Senator, providing I were to permit it. Now, we may differ as to just what is rebuttal. I think clearly Miss Weyand's first statement is entirely out of line, as far as I am concerned. I mean by that that you aren't going to try all the issues of this case over again, but I am still convinced in my own mind that if this witness testifies about these matters, which these four or five or six girls testified about here, that were in her section, and about specific matters in their testimony in the record, I don't see why that isn't rebuttal.

Now, with this understanding, of course, having tried the case once, and had it come back, I agree with you, Senator, in fact we did agree several days ago on this, that when a case of this kind comes back for further hearing, it certainly complicates the situation, it complicates it for everybody, because when it comes back you are just presented with the question of just why it was sent back, [fol. 5858] how far should you go, and that is only the first complication, and the further you go with a further hearing, the more complicated it becomes. Now, I am convinced that it is proper rebuttal, as I indicated to Miss Weyand in the first instance.

Now, I don't agree that we are here for the purpose of taking testimony, as stated by Miss Weyand a moment ago, because I think Miss Weyand admits herself that isn't rebuttal.

Now, I think, in order to get this matter worked out in my own mind, and I want to say I don't have it clearly in mind right now — I think I shall recess until 2 o'clock. And I want all of counsel to think it over in the meantime.

Mr. Langsdale: Before you actually recess, give me about two minutes, to read from the respondent's offer of proof, on page 15: "That he—" meaning the employee,— "was never directed, ordered by anyone, either the instructor employed by the Donnelly Garment Company or any officer, executive, supervisory employee of the Donnelly Garment Company or Donnelly Garment Sales Company, to attend the meeting of April 27, 1937."

They made that offer of proof, which was denied, and they went up to the Court of Appeals, and the Court of Appeals said they should have been permitted to make that proof, and they came back here and made it, and now they want to preclude us from showing that the very [fol. 5859] witnesses put on the stand aren't telling the truth about it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Langsdale, I think my statement that I have made two or three times, about what is rebuttal, would cover, perhaps, that matter. Where a specific witness — you had several specific witnesses say that they worked in section 415 during March and April, that the instructor did not tell them to go to this meeting, nor did she say anything to them.

Now, I am inclined to believe that under the circumstances here, that is proper rebuttal.

Mr. Langsdale: I just wanted to call your attention to their offer of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: I haven't worked the thing out fully in my own mind as yet, and that is the reason I want to recess until 2 o'clock.

Mr. Hogsett: I think that is a wise thing, because while this particular question is relatively unimportant, you are going to have it occurring again and again and again.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it isn't unimportant, because if I can get it straightened out and settled in my own mind, whether you accept my ruling or not, from now on you can proceed with the testimony.

Mr. Hogsett: That is what I think, that you get the legal scope of the rebuttal settled now, and I think I can get some legal aid for you on that.

[fol. 5860] There is one thing that Mr. Langsdale and Miss Weyand have each referred to and I want to make a comment about it. They each seem to be laboring under the opinion — I was about to say delusion, because I think it is a delusion legally — that they are entitled to disprove something that is stated in an offer of proof.

Well, that is not the law. An offer of proof is not proof. It is a mere showing on the record by a party whose proof has been rejected, as to what it would be if he were permitted to offer it.

Now, offers have been made — Mr. Langsdale read from one, but that offer was rejected. Now, the Court of Appeals held that it was improperly rejected, and sent it back, but the point I make is that because something appears in an offer of proof doesn't mean that they, under the guise of rebuttal, can take up that statement and disprove it.

It is just wrong, 100% wrong, as a matter of law.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think, Mr. Hogsett, that I disposed of that.

Mr. Hogsett: I thought you did too.

Trial Examiner Batten: I mean that general question, when I said to Miss Weyand that I didn't think that the offers of proof meant that Board's counsel could proceed to disprove the offers of proof.

Mr. Hogsett: That's right.

[fol. 5861] Trial Examiner Batten: And neither does it mean, clearly, that if there is testimony that should have been offered by the Board in the original hearing, it doesn't mean that it can now be offered and received.

Mr. Hogsett: I agree with both of those statements.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, the only question in my mind is, what is rebuttal, and whatever conclusion I come to on it, I am going to limit the discussion to rebuttal.

Now, that is the only question, and I think at 2 o'clock I'll do this — I'll give you each 15 minutes at 2 o'clock to tell me anything further you want to tell me about rebuttal.

Mr. Reed: While you are thinking it over, I wish you would think of this situation, if I may ask you to do that, the prosecution put on witnesses who said that the instructors had sent them to this meeting. That was regarded as proper.

Now, they had a right to put on as many witnesses to that as they wanted to put on. This lady could have testified then, and if they had her, she should have testified then and they should have made their complete case.

Now, we come to our side of it, and we put on witnesses that rebut this testimony that has been put in, to deny or controvert this testimony that they had put in, to the effect that the instructors had sent the employees down to the meeting. So, there is their evidence on one side, here [fol. 5862] is our evidence on the other side, in direct denial. Now—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) But I am convinced of this, Senator, that if these people who testified in this hearing had testified in the original hearing, and the Board had then offered some testimony in line with the suggestion which I have made—and it is not yet a ruling—I am convinced at that time I would have received that type of testimony.

Mr. Reed: That is to say, if there were 50 witnesses that knew a certain fact, and the Board put on 10 of them and stopped, then if we, on our side, put on 10 witnesses to controvert what had been offered and nothing else, then the Board comes in and says, "Well, I want to bolster my case, I want some more evidence, you swore to a certain set of facts here, and I want to rebut the facts," although those facts which we put in were in rebuttal of the case in chief.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I don't think I could go along with you on that, Senator.

Mr. Langsdale: That is not this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: As far as this particular ruling is concerned, I couldn't. I agree with you heartily that as a general proposition I think you are absolutely right, it is not a question—it is somewhat similar, although not entirely so, to this matter of cross-examination. You have direct examination, then cross, then redirect, then [fol. 5863] recross, and it can get to the point where all you do is to pass witnesses back and forth to where there is never a stopping point. Now, I don't have any such thing in mind as that, and don't propose to proceed on any such basis as that.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5864] Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, the intervener has his offer of proof ready to present.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: That will be 1-XXXXX.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5865] Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, in reading this, this offer is—while it makes reference to matters prior to July 15, 1939, do I understand from the heading that it is supposed to cover that period subsequent to July 15—

Mr. Lane: That is correct. I did refer, in that one paragraph, to ". . . continuously from its organization . . ."—

Trial Examiner Batten: As long as it is understood that it is an offer of proof pertaining to the organization subsequent to July 15, 1939,—

Mr. Langsdale: I move to strike out the other part of that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Reporter, will you mark this?

(Thereupon the offer of proof above referred to was marked "Board's Exhibit No. 1-XXXXX" for identification.)

Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Examiner, in view of the statement as to the understanding, I can see no point to leaving the language in the offer of proof, ". . . continuously from its organization on April 27, 1937, to July 15, 1939, . . ." I don't think that should be in that offer of proof and I move to strike it out.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not going to pass on the offer today, so I will not pass upon your objection today, Mr. Langsdale.

[fol. 5866] Mr. Langsdale: My thought was this: someone reading this record might not read this little colloquy, so if they do not mean to make the offer as between those dates, it should not be in their offer of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I don't know whether we have the right to assume that the people charged with the responsibility of passing upon these matters are not going to read the record or not. But I will reserve my decision upon the offer of proof, as well as the motion to strike, at this time.

Mr. Hogsett: May I have the number of that?

Trial Examiner Batten: No. 1-XXXXX.

Mr. Langsdale: I want the record to show now that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union has no objection to this offer and stands ready to meet it with witnesses.

Mr. Hogsett: The respondent joins in the offer of proof designated Board's exhibit No. 1-XXXXX.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I understood the respondent took the position thus far in the hearing that they didn't believe the matters were material from July down to the present, Mr. Hogsett.

Mr. Hogsett: That is not an accurate statement of the position of the respondent, as I understand it. The position of the respondent is that the Board is not entitled nor is the International entitled to offer evidence of acts by the [fol. 5867] respondent other than those alleged in the complaint but that circumstances, evidential facts, which may have occurred yesterday may be admissible if they throw light upon the issues framed by the complaint.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I didn't understand that to be Mr. Ingraham's position.

Did I misunderstand you, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Hogsett: That is the respondent's position, as I understand it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did I misunderstand you, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: The other day when I struck Mrs. Reed's testimony as to matters after July, Miss Weyand objected to that if those facts reflected the situation prior to that date. I understood that the respondent at that time was in opposition to Miss Weyand's position.

Mr. Hogsett: In that part of the record which I have is a statement by Senator Reed which quite clearly, to my mind, indicates he was taking the position that the Board should be held to the issues framed by the complaint, but that any circumstance which may have occurred at any time within reasonable proximity to the facts and circumstances in issue is admissible if it throws any light on the issues, either one way of the other.

[fol. 5868] Mr. Langsdale: On the Board's part or—

Mr. Hogsett: Oh, on anybody's part, that throws light on the issues, and has a reasonable tendency to prove or disprove the facts in issue, is admissible. I do not understand how you can draw a line anywhere and say that nothing that happened after this date is admissible at all. If something that happened after that time throws light upon the facts in issue, then I think it is admissible.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question arose, Mr. Hogsett, in the first instance, when we were going to try out the situation from July, 1939, down to the present time.

Mr. Hogsett: I understand that. And Senator Reed took the position, and, I think, with complete validity, that the Board cannot litigate facts or alleged facts that are not in issue; in other words, not long since, or long prior, for that matter. But there is a distinction between that and the right of a party, either the Board or ourselves, or anybody else, to prove an evidential fact which reflects light, one way or the other, upon the issues.

Now, to my mind that is perfectly clear. It seems to me there is not only a distinction that is sound formally but substantially.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, we are not here to discuss that. Of course, it may be a distinction without a difference.

[fol. 5869] Mr. Hogsett: That is possible, but I think not

Trial Examiner Batten: I believe that the position he took is not only sound but proper, and the question now before us is with respect to the rebuttal testimony.

Mr. Hogsett: Yes, sir. Now, I would like to be heard briefly on that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Hogsett: I said, Your Honor, I would attempt to get some law which would aid you in formulating a workable program in the rulings upon evidence with respect to whether it is proper rebuttal or not. Now, I have found, or Mr. Stottle has found, and I am now presenting the decision in Light v. Toledo, St. L. & W. R. Company. (District Court, N. D. Ohio, W. D.) 208 Federal 158. I will read very briefly from the opinion.

Mr. Langsdale: What Court?

Mr. Hogsett: Federal District Court in Ohio, Judge Killits.

(Reading) "We propose to notice particularly the position of counsel for plaintiff that the Court erred in excluding the testimony of the two Pratts (two witnesses) offered by plaintiff in rebuttal. It is very plain, and in fact not disputed by counsel for plaintiff, as we understand them, that this testimon was competent in chief. In our judgment, it went beyond the fact of mere competency; it be-[fol. 5870] came, considered in the light of the allegations of the petition, a substantive part of the plaintiff's case in chief."

Now, note, please, this language which follows:

"The fact that, as it was offered to be testified to, it would tend to contradict the evidence of the defendant does not make it proper rebuttal under the circumstances, because the testimony which it was offered to contradict was itself contradictory of the testimony in chief. The authorities cited to us are principally cases in which the Court's discretion in admitting testimony in rebuttal, which was competent in chief, was not criticized."

Now, I pause there for a moment, and then I will come back to this opinion.

This says, in better language than I used, the thought that I was somewhat awkwardly attempting to present to you before the adjournment.

You had in mind, and perhaps you now have in mind, that because the testimony of this lady might contradict something that the respondent has offered, that ipso facto and alone—

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't have that in mind, Mr. Hogsett.

Mr. Hogsett: You did not? Well, I gathered that you might.

—that the fact that it would contradict what Witness Jennie Jones or Mary Smith, offered by respondent, might have [fol. 5871] said made it competent, but this is to the contrary.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, Mr. Hogsett, I don't think the matter of contradiction has anything to do with it.

Mr. Hogsett: I am glad to hear you say that, because—

Trial Examiner Batten: I mean, from the standpoint of my ruling on the matter.

Mr. Hogsett: Well, I am glad to hear you say that.

You did say this:— I am not, of course, trying to pin you down to anything, except for purposes of illustrating the legal question I am now presenting. I believe you did say this, that this lady apparently would contradict something that some four or five or six witnesses said. Now, I gathered from that, that you had in your mind that the mere fact of contradiction automatically made it proper rebuttal, and I respectfully differ from that. I believe this case differs from that. The fact that if it was offered to be testified to, it would tend to contradict the evidence of the defendant does not make it proper rebuttal because—

Now, the Court doesn't just give you that and then leave it there; it gives the reason:

"... because the testimony which it was offered to contradict was itself contradictory of the testimony in chief."

I didn't put it in that form, but that is what I was driving at, that the evidence that you heard here in this last month has itself been contradictory in part. Here and [fol. 5872] there, there has been agreement, of course, but the aim has been to disprove the Board's case.

Now, comes along the Board and puts on a witness and is now going to contradict what we have shown. Now, there would be no end to that, if that theory should prevail with complete freedom; there would just be no end to it, because the logic of it would compel you to rule that after this series of proof is received, anything this lady should say, that we would have a right to again come on and contradict her. So, then, in surrebuttal—or maybe it is sur-surrebuttal—they would have, in turn, the right to come on and contradict what our people have said. There has to be an end.

The rule is, I believe, that any evidence that is competent in chief—and this clearly is—is not proper rebuttal, and the fact that it contradicts the evidence of the defendant does not add to its character or does not validate it as rebuttal:

Now, this Court goes on:

"We do not think that there is any soundness in the proposition that this alleged rebuttal testimony was competent by way of impeachment. Impeachment, to be competent in rebuttal, must be something more than a mere contradiction which is of the same character as the affirmation in chief to which the testimony in defense is offered in contradiction."

Now, when you ravel that language out— I'll confess, [fol. 5873] the first time I read it—and it may be the first time you have read it—you don't get it, but when you ravel it out, it has the philosophy of this thing better stated, more clearly stated, more precisely stated, than any case I have found.

Now, Stone against the Milwaukee, in the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals, says:

"The evidence offered in rebuttal was clearly a part—"

Mr. Langsdale: What page and what book?

Mr. Hogsett: I beg your pardon. 53 Federal, 2d Series, 813 local, citation 860.

(Continuing) "—was clearly a part of the plaintiff's main case on these issues. (This was a negligence case.) Plaintiff should have introduced all his evidence in chief in the first instance, and not reserve a part of it for rebuttal. Rebuttal testimony should be directed to a rebuttal of the testimony brought out by the defendant. The rule requires that plaintiff must try his case out when he commences, and cannot divide up his evidence so as to give part of it in chief and hold back part of it for rebuttal."

I pause there to inject this: The court then goes on and states a rule which, I am frank to admit to you, is that the admission of testimony not strictly rebuttal is discretionary. Now, they no doubt will argue that; I expect it, and admit it. But I am assuming that you meant what you said, when you said, "This rebuttal is going to be rebuttal. [fol. 5874] And when I say 'rebuttal,' I mean 'rebuttal.'"

In other words, this discretion that is lodged in you, you are not going to resolve it in favor of the admission. I take it that is what that language means, when you say, "And when I say 'rebuttal,' I mean 'rebuttal.'" In other words, you are not going to stretch the rule to admit but you are going to apply it as it is.

"True, the Court may, in its discretion, admit in rebuttal evidence which properly should have been introduced in chief, but any relaxation of the rule is an appeal to the sound discretion of the Court."

Then, citations of cases.

"The testimony offered in rebuttal was as available when the plaintiff put in her testimony in chief as it was later in the trial. There was nothing to appeal to the Court's discretion, and the exclusion of the testimony was not error."

I could go on with cases from now until 5'oclock, but those two tell you all that I can give you to aid you in reaching a proper solution of this law question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: Mr. Examiner, I find quite often that on the question of evidence there is no better basis for fundamental theories than Prof. Wigmore, and I note that he says on the subject of rebuttal evidence:

[fol. 5875] "Certainly evidence which would, should or could have been a part of the case in chief is not properly a part of rebuttal evidence."

It goes on, Volume 4, page 24:—

Mr. Langsdale: What—

Mr. Tyler: Wigmore on Evidence, Second Edition.

"In the next place, the evidence offered thus tardily may consist in new facts which ought to have been put in before or in a repetition (either by a new witness or by the same former witness) of former facts already once evidenced. The customary rule will equally forbid both."

That is, neither may the prosecution add to the nature of evidence which it has already introduced in its primary case nor may it introduce new evidence which it could but did not introduce in its original case.

Now, in 1939 the Board built its case as it saw best. It had unlimited opportunities and it could have "concentrated its fire" on the meeting of April 27 or on any other subject—

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Tyler, on that point —You say it had "unlimited opportunities"—

Mr. Tyler: I think so.

Trial Examiner Batten: If I recall correctly, I think the Board was stopped on several occasions, also. In fact, I think all of the attorneys in this case, both in the 1939 case and the present one, are all inclined to the belief that [fol. 5876] they should be permitted to present more than I have been inclined to receive.

Mr. Tyler: I didn't mean to refer to rulings on evidence, but they had an opportunity to bring in to Court any facts they thought were persuasive and offer them. Now, they could have concentrated on one set of facts or another. They did go into the question of whether instructors told girls to attend meetings.

Now, the respondent and intervener built their case according to the case of the plaintiff's. If the prosecutors had taken an entirely different fact and used different evidence, undoubtedly the defense evidence would have been built to meet it, but the defense is in and has committed itself, relying on the case made by the prosecution, and to now add to that case, even in the weight of one particular part of it, is to destroy the fairness of trial to the defendant, which has a right to rely on the presumption of law that all of the evidence in chief on which the prosecution relied was presented.

Trial Examiner Batten: What would happen, Mr. Tyler, if you were presented with this: supposing I were to accept Mr. Hogsett's statement of a moment ago that any circumstances that occurred since that throw any light on the situation as we heard it in 1939 are relevant? I mean—

Mr. Tyler: I presume if there was something they couldn't present at that time—had no opportunity to [fol. 5877] present at that time—some new subject came up, then I think it would be within Your Honor's discretion, but I think you have already indicated what your discretion is.

I think the difficulty we are in here is from a feeling which we all have, which is not the fact, that the testimony of this witness in some way tends to impeach the testimony of the other girls in section 514. We have a sort of a feeling that if they say, "We were not told by the instructor to go to the meeting," then if the instructor might say they were, that would in some way impeach these witnesses. That is not a fact. If the president and the board of directors and every officer of the company contradicted that girl, it would not impeach her—it would not impeach these witnesses from section 514; it would merely go to the weight of the evidence, and it would still be a part of the case in chief. Corpus Juris says impeachment does not include that kind of evidence. It says:

"It has been laid down that there are but four modes of impeaching the credit of a witness: One, by cross-examination; two, by proving previous contradictory statements or acts." The others are not applicable here.

Now, I agree that if the witness on the stand offered to say she heard these witnesses who say they were not told by the instructor to attend the meetings say positively at another time that they were so told—I would think that would be impeachment, but merely for this witness to say [fol. 5878] —if that is what she intends to say—they were so told, or even "I told them," is not impeachment, it is merely evidence on the other side of the case.

There are other methods of impeachment that have no bearing here, such as to show the conviction for some infamous crime, general lack of credibility, and so on. But the thing that is important here is that the only method of impeachment which, by any stretch of the imagination, could apply here is that the evidence was that these witnesses who said they were not told to go to the meeting themselves at some time said that they were; in other words, contradicting themselves.

But I care not how many of the other employees, board of directors, president, or mayor, or city council, or anybody, say that they were told to do so, that does not impeach the witness, and therefore, is merely additional evidence in chief which should have been presented when the Board presented its case and is wholly incompetent as rebuttal evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: All of the cases which have been cited by counsel for the company are cases where an appellate court said the Trial Examiner did not err in refusing to hear rebuttal—all of them clearly say it is within the discretion of a court to hear rebuttal on any matter which con- [fol. 5879] tradicts a matter raised in defense, even though it might have been presented in chief.

The usual rule for determining what is appropriate rebuttal is whether or not—and this appears from the quotations from the cases, both of the Federal cases cited by counsel for the company—whether or not rebuttal is a repetition of what occurred in chief. Now, in the case in chief here there was no direct proof as to whether or not any instructor on the eighth floor or the seventh floor sent any person to the meeting or notified any person of the meeting, as I recall. May Fike was either on the fifth or sixth. There was none as to the floor from which most of the witnesses called by the company came.

When you put on a case in chief and make out a prima facie case by putting on a witness who says on her floor, in her section, the instructor sent her to the meeting, you assume, unless there is something in answer, that that stands for the whole plant. Then, when in answer the company comes in and shows by specific girls, in specific sections, that they were not sent by their instructors, then it becomes proper rebuttal to show that on that floor, in that section, they were sent to the meeting. I think that is proper rebuttal. We couldn't anticipate what section or what part of the floor they were going to call the girl from.

It requires proof of the complete facts—everybody who could testify in contradiction of anything they might put in. [fol. 5880] That is not the rule as to a case in chief.

For that reason I submit that it is entirely proper for the Board to present in rebuttal the testimony here offered.

I want to point out that I have never heard of a single case in my life where any court reversed any lower court, trial court, for allowing any matter to be put in in rebuttal that contradicted anything that was put in in defense. The cases come up on the question of whether or not it was reversible error to refuse that evidence in rebuttal. And there are many cases that hold that there was reversible error for a trial court to refuse matters in the case of witnesses put on for the defense where the matter offered is not entirely a repetition, as to exactly the same circumstances that were given in the case in chief. If it is the same witness that saw the same incident, in the same room, that you want to put on, then that is a repetition of the case in chief. That is not what we are trying to do here. Where it is a matter that has not been put on in chief and contradicts evidence put on in defense, the courts have reversed the trial courts for not allowing that sort of rebuttal.

Mr. Langsdale: If it please the Examiner, the matter which the Board seeks to offer evidence on here is in reply; at any rate, to evidence that was offered, and received, by the respondent and the intervener. Now, why was that evidence received? If it is true that the Board and the In[fol. 5881] ternational Ladies' Garment Workers' Union covered the matter in their main case, then it was the duty of the respondent and the intervener to answer it in the main case. Certainly, if that rule works against the Board and the International, it works against the respondent and the intervener.

Why were they offering it here? They were offering it here only upon the theory that the Examiner excluded it in the last trial, and of course the Examiner excluded nothing in the last trial that was in answer to anything the Board or the International put on. So, you should strike out that evidence of theirs as not being within the scope of the remand or you should permit the Board and the International to reply to it. It has no place in this case on the remand, as it should have been answered, and they had an opportunity to do it without any contrary order, in 1939. But the respondent and the intervener assert that that matter was not covered in the 1939 hearing, that it is something new. If it had been covered, it was their duty then to answer it, and not now.

Now, as to the question of whether or not it is rebuttal, of course, as Miss Weyand pointed out, their cases hold that the trier of the fact did not exceed his discretion by refusing it or admitting it, but, as was also pointed out by Miss Weyand, there are many cases that hold that the trier of the fact may be reversed when he refuses admission of such testimony as an abuse of discretion.

[fol. 5882] I have here the case of Ankersmit et al. v. Tuch, in the 20th Northeastern Reporter, at page 819. It is in the New York Court of Appeals case. I will just read the syllabus because it covers the law and facts:

"In an action to recover the possession of certain goods alleged to have been purchased by the defendant's assignor by means of false and fraudulent representations as to his solvency, where the assignor, on being called as a witness by the defendant, had testified, on cross examination, that he had not made certain statements to one B. with regard to his solvency, it was competent for the plaintiff to show by B. after the defendant had rested that the assignor had made such statements to him for the purpose of impeaching the credibility of the assignor, although the evidence of B. would have been competent on the direct examination by plaintiff; and the fact that it was not then introduced did not make it discretionary with the trial court to subsequently exclude it."

I think that is on all-fours with this case.

We, they say, could have offered this testimony in our case in chief. But along they come and say these instructors did not send the girls down to the meeting. Now, we had one witness who said she was sent to the meeting, and that was May Fike. They come along with ten or eleven to say that they were not and it wasn't done.

[fol. 5883] Now, what is the purpose of their offering that testimony? Do they hope by eleven witnesses against one, the trier of the fact will hold that the balance is overwhelmingly in their favor? That must be their reason, because they had an opportunity to reply to that evidence in their defense in 1939 and they didn't do it. Now they come along, under the offer of proof, which is based upon the theory that you refused that evidence in 1939, and offer it.

Now, if you did refuse it in 1939, we certainly had no opportunity then to reply to it. The first chance we have is now, when they offer this testimony.

I think that goes not only to this testimony in answer to the question Miss Weyand asked, but in answer to other questions she may ask.

They covered the duties of an instructor. I don't know why they did that this time. The last time they put Mr. Baty on, who went the full route and testified no instructor had any authority at all, that he was the only supervisor over some 1,200 or 1,300 people. They answered it then; why not now? And if they answer it now, we have a right to reply to it. If they had put on these witnesses when they had the opportunity in 1939, we could have done it then, but they wait until now.

Mind you, that is a field that was fully covered by them, by Mr. Baty and other witnesses, but here, under this offer [fol. 5884] of proof, they offer a number of other witnesses.

What are we to do, just say they have eleven and we only had one, or are we to reply to the evidence they put on under the guise that they had no opportunity to do it in 1939?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Langsdale, let's assume that in 1939 they didn't have an opportunity to put it on; that wouldn't change the situation particularly, would it? The only question here is whether or not—

Mr. Langsdale: —whether it is rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: —whether or not it is rebuttal or reply testimony.

Mr. Langsdale: Whether it is rebuttal of anything properly in the record in this hearing. If we are excluded from producing that kind of testimony because we had the opportunity in 1939, then why are they permitted to put it on, when they had the same opportunity to answer it?

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I indicated this morning, and I am still of that opinion, that any ruling I make in the matter is not governed, Mr. Langsdale, by that particular factor. I do not consider that an important factor. It may be one of the factors; that is, whether everybody had the opportunity before. The fact remains, however, they didn't have the opportunity before, because the circuit court sent it back.

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, I say this language contained [fol. 5885] in that offer of proof—I think that should have been in a separate offer— The offer of proof of why and how they joined this union is not corollary to the offer that the instructors did not send people down to this meeting. If it is, then they replied to it in 1939—had the opportunity to reply to it, and did reply to it. Then, they are opening the case up again on that proposition.

This hearing is for the purpose of permitting them to put in testimony the Examiner wouldn't permit them to put in in 1939. Isn't that right?

Trial Examiner Batten: That is the fundamental basis of it.

Mr. Langsdale: What right do they have to introduce evidence on these points they did put on in 1939, and say to us, "We are going to pile up witnesses and you will have to keep your mouth shut."?

I want to refer to the case of Stanley v. Beckham. 153 Federal Reporter, page 152. This is an Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals case. I will read one paragraph of the syllabus:

"In an action for broker's services, defendant sought, on cross examination of plaintiff, to prove an agreement to accept an employment and certain stock, in full for his services; but this, on objection, was excluded as not proper cross examination, as being matter of defense. As a part of the defense, one of defendant's witnesses testified that, [fol. 5886] after the services had been rendered, plaintiff in a stated conversation, accepted as full compensation a position as salesman and defendant's agreement to carry for him, on certain terms, certain capital stock of a corporation. Held, that it was error, after the admission of such evidence, to refuse to permit plaintiff in rebuttal to give his version of such conversation, so plaintiff had previously in such cross examination testified to certain phases thereof."

Trial Examiner Batten: I think that particular matter is in line with the suggestion which I indicated this morning, without having given any thought to the matter. As a matter of fact, I am more certain now, after having given the matter some thought, that my statement this morning concerning it is correct, and I am equally certain that my statement to Miss Weyand this morning about her first proposition is correct. So, as the result of two hours or two and a half hours of giving it some thought and listening to all counsel, I am still of the opinion that my statement on it this morning was substantially correct.

Mr. Reed: If Your Honor will indulge me for a few moments,—

I think that the theory of the other table basically has been well expressed by Miss Weyand. Her theory is—and she said it very clearly—that when a party starts to try a case, all the plaintiff has to do is to make out a prima facie case. Then, if that is denied by the defendant, the plaintiff [fol. 5887] can go and make out his full case.

Now, that isn't the law anywhere. If it was, and there was a case here involving a controversy of great importance, and one witness would be put on and swore to enough to sustain the charge, and there were no witnesses on the other side, the charge could be sustained. All they would need to do is put that witness on and say, "Now, there is your prima facie case. It isn't our case—oh, no,—but that is our prima facie case. And when you come in to deny it, then we will put in all of our case."

Now, that— I cannot characterize it in any other way than to say that that is a mistake. That isn't the law anywhere in this country. The law is that the plaintiff must put in his full case and rest, and that the defendant shall put in his full case and rest.

Now, if the defendant has introduced into his defense an entirely new subject matter, then the plaintiff can rebut it, and if in rebutting it he brings in an entirely new subject matter, that can be met by surrebuttal.

Now, let's see— I don't think I need mention this, for the Examiner has already put his finger on it. Let's see what our situation is.

I will call these people the plaintiff over here (indicating Miss Weyand and Mr. Langsdale); it is more polite than "prosecutors."

[fol. 5888] The plaintiff makes a charge. We are summoned here. And the plaintiff's—the prosecution's duty is to make its case, to prove those charges. If they do not put in evidence to prove those charges, the case, of course, falls by the wayside. But if they do, like any other litigant, they must put in all of the evidence they have to sustain those charges.

Now, they put in their evidence, and a part of that evidence was, and a part of their argument here and before the Board and before the Circuit Court of Appeals was that the instructors marshalled these employees and marched them down to the meeting at which the union was to be organized, or the preceding meeting. They put that in evidence, and they rested with that point, so far as they were concerned, proven. That was prima facie, as Miss Weyand said.

We then came forward and sought to rebut that evidence—to disprove it and put in our side, and when we got to a certain point Your Honor sustained objections to all of the evidence which we sought to introduce to rebut and overthrow what had been offered by the prosecution.

Thereupon, in order to save the point, we made elaborate offers of proof, but we were not allowed and we did not have the opportunity to put that evidence in. Your Honor was of the opinion that it should not go in. We, therefore, were denied the opportunity at that time to prove our side of the case and meet the charges and the evidence against us.

[fol. 5889] Now, the case went to the Circuit Court of Appeals and the Circuit Court of Appeals said that evidence is competent, that that evidence must be received, must be weighed and considered, and until that has been done there has not been a trial according to the law.

Now, we come back here to carry out the mandate of the Circuit Court of Appeals. There has been some difference here in our arguments as to what the scope of this hearing should be, which is a mere continuance of the other case. It is exactly the same as though we were trying that other case, as though this evidence had been admitted, as though the prosecution had rested, and as though we had come in then and offered all of this evidence that we have now offered. It is a mere continuance of that hearing, and that has been the import of Your Honor's ruling. That record, you say, is in the case, and we are here now to enjoy the opportunity which we would have had at that time if your ruling had been otherwise.

We, therefore, put in the rest of our defense, and we put in nothing new. We have simply put in more evidence to prove that the charge that the instructors were in control down there and that they bossed these people around and intimidated and coerced these people, is not the fact. So, we meet them squarely head-on.

Then, they turn around— I guess, under Miss Weyand's [fol. 5890] theory, and say, "We were only obliged to put in a smattering of evidence to start with, and now we can go on and retry our case."

Now, I submit any ruling permitting that would be wrong, unfair, and would put any defendant—if that ruling were to be invoked or established, put him in a position so that he must go to trial and expose all he has and, because the prosecution has only put in, according to their theory, a prima facie case, he has to frame his evidence to meet a prima facie case, and that's all. Then, when you get through demolishing the prima facie case, they come back and say, "That isn't our case. We are now going on and put in a multitude of other evidence." Then, as has been said by Mr. Hogsett, comes the question of trying the case all over again.

Now, that is not orderly justice.

Now, I want to urge just one thing further:

Your Honor made a ruling— We were here with witnesses, a large number of them, and prepared to bring more—

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, the day I ruled?

Mr. Reed: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. I think you had—about what—four?

Mr. Reed. Yes. And about forty ready to come.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, but I am speaking of those who were actually here.

[fol. 5891] Mr. Reed: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: You had a reserve.

Mr. Reed: Yes. We were getting out war orders and keeping everybody down there working, so—

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. I think I suggested that to you, as a matter of fact, not to have them all here.

Mr. Reed: Yes, you very kindly did.

Now, we were prepared to go ahead and put on a great deal more testimony. Your Honor has said, "It is cumulative and I am going to rule that no evidence is to be offered that is part of the case in chief of the prosecution. That isn't to be offered. I am not going to open that up. I am going to limit you now to rebuttal, and I mean rebuttal." And you said that with some emphasis.

Trial Examiner Batten: And I still mean it.

Mr. Reed: I think you do.

Now, if you were to open up this case and go into all of those other matters that have no relation to the charges, then, in that case, we would have been limited in the number of our witnesses, and the prosecution could come in perhaps with an equal number, but nothing like the number we could have presented, and we would try the case, then, in that haphazard way.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Senator, I think I indicated the other day the number of witnesses is not the [fol. 5892] important factor.

Mr. Reed: That is true.

Trial Examiner Batten: We have done a lot of talking here about, someone has had ten witnesses, and somebody else has had five witnesses, and so on. That is not the criterion we use—

Mr. Reed: No. The greater weight of the evidence, and not the greater number of witnesses is—

Trial Examiner Batten: But, Senator, there is one question I would like to ask you, if you care to answer it:

Under the situation in which we now find ourselves here, is it your opinion that the Board would be entitled to any rebuttal? I mean, do you take the position that we are at the point now where we should stop?

Mr. Reed: If there is any new matter that we have brought out, they can put in evidence in rebuttal of that, I grant you.

Trial Examiner Batten: How about the testimony of Mrs. Reed?

Mr. Reed: You struck it nearly all out.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just since July 1939, Senator. But I took the position with Mrs. Reed that I was going to exercise my discretion, because, due to matters over which she had no control, she wasn't here last time. I didn't do that because I felt that the Circuit Court had ordered me [fol. 5893] in its decision to take the testimony of Mrs. Reed; I did it because I thought it was fair that Mrs. Reed should have an opportunity to testify.

Now, certainly, in Mrs. Reed's testimony there were some matters which I would say might require a reply.

Mr. Reed: If she brought out a new matter which is material in this case, which hadn't been brought out by the prosecution. They do have the right on any matter of that kind to offer evidence to the contrary.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think we have spent enough time on the discussion of it. I think we probably would all enjoy a ten-minute recess at this time, and then I will make my ruling on it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, you may proceed, in line with the suggestions which I made this morning, and if you have any other testimony in line with your other suggestion, you make it as an offer.

Miss Weyand: All right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Because I don't propose to go into all those matters, and the examination will be limited in what I consider to be rebuttal, in line with the suggestions I made this morning.

Now, I have had the reporter read to me the last two or three questions, and the last question was answered. I presume everybody would like to have the last three or four questions and answers read, so Mr. Reporter, will you read them?

(Thereupon the last questions and answers were read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. Did you attend the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

"A. Yes, I did.

"Q. Did you know before you got to that meeting that such a union was going to be formed?

[fol. 5895] "A. Well, I don't know, but we sort of surmised something.

"Q. How did you learn of that meeting?

"A. Well, I don't remember, but it was either by telephone or by Mrs. Wherry telling us; she usually went around and told the instructors.")

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

Miss Weyand: Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of the meeting at which the union was organized?

Mr. Hogsett: That is objected to for all of the reasons heretofore asserted as not proper rebuttal and particularly unless the question is limited to the particular witnesses heretofore offered by respondent, by name.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may answer the question, and then you may proceed, Miss Weyand, to bring it within the ruling which I have made.

Mr. Reed: May I hear the question, please?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Hogsett: Just yes or no.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute, Mr. Hogsett.

Mr. Hogsett (Interrupting): I am suggesting that that calls for merely a yes or no answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I never required a witness to say yes or no.

[fol. 5896] Mr. Hogsett: But, that is all that that question calls for, isn't it?

Trial Examiner Batten: I know, but I have placed no limitations on it. Prior hereto I have given witnesses unlimited latitude, as I have indicated to several witnesses we had while you were away. If they would answer yes or no, or answer definitely, then we didn't get into a sort of endless discussion.

Mr. Hogsett: I wasn't trying to say anything improper, but I thought the question called for, "Do you know or don't you know," and that necessarily would be yes or no.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't require yes or no answers.

Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was reread by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of the meeting at which the union was organized?").

A. Yes, I do.

Miss Weyand: How did they learn that?

A. I told the girls.

Mr. Hogsett: That is objected to, unless the question is confined to witnesses offered by respondent who were working there in her section.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question again?

[fol. 5897] (Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. How did they learn that?")

A. How did the girls learn that?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Yes.

A. I told them.

Q. Now, at that time how many rows of machines were in your section? A. How many rows?

Q. Yes.

A. They were clear across the room.

Q. That is from the west wall of the building to the east wall of the building?

A. Yes, there was a dividing line, an aisle.

Q. And you had rows of girls on each side of the aisle? A. I did.

Q. And was Ruby Clayton working in that section at that time? A. Yes, she was.

Q. And she was among the girls you told to go to the meeting?

A. Yes, she was working for me and I told all the girls at the same time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question is, was she one of the girls you told, Ruby Clayton?

[fol. 5898] A. Yes, she was.

Miss Weyand: Was Oma Lee Cooper working in your section at that time?

Mr. Reed: I make the same objection.

A. Oma Lee?

Miss Weyand: Yes, her name was Oma Lee Holloway.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, I assume we may have the same arrangement we have pursued here all the time, a continuing objection if you so desire.

Mr. Hogsett: Yes, we do.

Trial Examiner Batten: In order that you don't have to object to every question, that will continue through with this witness. Of course, it will be necessary to renew it on the next witness.

Mr. Tyler: The same objection will be allowed for the intervener, as to this witness, I take it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, that is correct. Let me say this, we will get started here pretty soon, I guess. You may have a continuing objection.

Now, that means to either the respondent or the intervener I am granting a continuing objection to Miss Weyand's examining this witness within the bounds of what I indicated that I thought was proper.

Now, if Miss Weyand exceeds the bounds, I of course would expect counsel to object, not upon the basis of my [fol. 5899] ruling, but upon the basis of my statement to Miss Weyand that I don't propose to go into all inclusive matters.

Mr. Hogsett: Yes, sir, that's right.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

Miss Weyand: And your answer is true with reference to Oma Lee Cooper, is that correct, the same, that you told her among the other girls? A. Yes.

Q. And that is true as to Edith Dean, is that correct?

Mr. Reed: We object to that as leading.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, it would be. It would be more proper to state the question, rather than in that manner, I think, Miss Weyand.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was Edith Dean working in your section at that time? A. Yes.

Q. Was she among the girls that you told about the meeting? A. Yes.

Q. Was Ethel Riegel working in your section at that time?

A. Yes, I believe she was, but I am not just so sure; but I really think she was.

Q. And you think she was among the girls that you told of the meeting? A. Yes, I do.

Q. What time of day was that meeting held?

[fol. 5900] A. Well, I don't remember.

Q. Was it during working hours or after working hours?

A. Well, it was during working hours, but I don't remember the time, because we went down in our white aprons.

* * * * * *

Miss Weyand: Were the girls in your section paid for the time they spent at that meeting?

Mr. Reed: I object to that as incompetent and immaterial, and not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't recall whether any of these witnesses were asked the question.

Miss Weyand: Yes, they all claimed it was after hours and on their own time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may answer, if you know.

A. What was the question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Miss Weyand: Were your girls paid for the time they spent at the meeting?

A. Yes, they were paid for the meetings.

Q. Did the girls know before they went to the meeting that they would be paid for the time they spent there?

Mr. Reed: Now, we object to that as incompetent and [fol. 5901] irrelevant, and manifestly not rebuttal, and calls for a conclusion.

Miss Weyand: I asked if she knew.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you know?

Mr. Tyler: I object. The only way she could know would be hearsay.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I don't think at this late date, Mr. Tyler, we will attempt to eliminate hearsay.

Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon, the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Did the girls know before they went to the meeting that they would be paid for the time they spent there?")

Mr. Reed: How could she know that?

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, did she know?

Mr. Stottle: The question is, did the girls know.

A. I don't remember that particular meeting, but after we had some meetings—

Trial Examiner Batten: But you were asked about this meeting, Mrs. Dorsey. Do you know about this one?

A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you know whether they knew in advance?

A. That they were going to be paid?

[fol. 5902] Q. Yes.

A. Well, this meeting, I don't remember if they knew, because there was quite a few meetings, and I don't remember just this meeting.

Mr. Reed: Wait a minute. I insist the witness had answered the question and then went on to make some comment, and I asked to have it stopped.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course the comment, I don't think is harmful to anyone, her last phrase. You may proceed, Miss Weyand.

Miss Weyand: Did you ever tell the girls in your section they would be paid for time spent at meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, they were to be paid.

Mr. Hogsett: That is objected to as not rebuttal of anything.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Yes, I told them they were to be paid.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember how many meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union occurred during working hours? A. No, I don't.

Q. Was it more than one? A. Yes.

Q. How many do you think it was?

[fol. 5903] Mr. Reed: Well, I object to that, how many she thinks it was. She says it was more than one, but she doesn't know.

Miss Weyand: I will withdraw that question.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. State what is your best recollection as to the number of meetings held during working hours.

Mr. Reed: I make the same objection; it is not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Well, I'll say — oh, 4 or 5 anyway.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Were those the first 4 or 5 meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Were they the first —

Q. (Interrupting) 4 or 5 in order, meetings following April 27?

A. I don't remember concerning that or the Loyalty League. We had meetings that way too.

Mr. Lane: I can't hear the witness.

A. I said I didn't remember whether it was Loyalty League meetings or the union meetings, but we had those meetings, but I don't remember.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed and Mr. Tyler came, whether that was during working hours?

A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. Do you remember whether the next meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was during working hours?

[fol. 5904] A. When was it?

Q. Whether the next one following the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized was during working hours.

Mr. Reed: We object, because the witness already has said she couldn't tell which meetings were held, whether Loyalty League or Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: The objection is overruled. Of course, this is a definite question, whether she does know whether the next one was held during working hours.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you remember, Miss Witness?

A. The next meeting?

Q. After the one at which it was formed, was it held during working hours, do you remember that?

A. No, I don't.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you go to the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed with the girls in your section?

Mr. Reed: Wait a minute. I object to that as leading and suggestive.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may answer.

A. Yes, I went with my girls.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you sit with any of the girls in your section at that meeting?

A. Well, yes, I did.

[fol. 5905] Q. Did the other instructors and thread girls go to that meeting?

A. Well, I'll say they did. We all were there.

Q. I just want what you know they did.

A. I can't say all of them, I don't know whether all of them went or not, but some of them went because I seen them.

Q. Had the employees raised a fund to pay Mr. Tyler a retainer fee prior to the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

A. I don't remember.

Mr. Tyler: I object to that —

Mr. Hogsett: She said she doesn't remember.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. You mean you don't remember whether they raised one before that meeting or you don't remember whether or not it was raised at that time? What recollection do you have on the fees raised for Mr. Tyler?

A. The fees raised?

Q. Yes. What I was getting at, when you said you didn't remember, you mean you don't remember of one being raised before that meeting, is that what you mean?

A. Yes, I don't remember.

Mr. Lane: Now, I object to that and move to strike the answer out.

Mr. Hogsett: She says she doesn't remember; that was the answer.

[fol. 5906] Mr. Lane: Well, I am objecting to the form of the question, because it is cross-examination of her own witness.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Had you heard of Mr. Tyler before you saw him at the meeting of April 27, at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

A. No.

Mr. Tyler: I object to that as not rebuttal, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Had I heard of him?

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Yes, had you heard of Mr. Tyler?

A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Can you hear the witness, Mr. Lane?

Mr. Lane: Not very well. She ought to turn her chair a little.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Witness, will you speak a little louder, please?

A. All right.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you attend meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union at any time after the first meeting?

A. Yes, I attended some of them.

[fol. 5907] Q. Did you wear your uniform to those meetings?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that. It is not proper rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Some of them.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you sit with any girls in your section at those meetings?

A. Yes, I usually did.

Q. Do you know whether the girls felt that they were not free to express themselves when instructors were present at the meetings?

Mr. Hogsett: Just a minute. We object to that for the reason it is not rebuttal, and for the further reason that it calls for a pure guess; it is worse than a conclusion, it is a pure guess, and asks the witness to read the minds of the girls and say whether she thinks they understood something.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Hogsett, I think it is exactly on a par with many questions that we had here in the last two weeks, in which witnesses freely expressed their opinions and conclusions about how everybody else in the plant felt.

Mr. Tyler: I don't agree with Your Honor. I think the question has been largely —.

Trial Examiner Batten: If you will wait until I get through, Mr. Tyler.

[fol. 5908] Mr. Tyler: Very well.

Trial Examiner Batten: As a matter of fact, I don't believe I put any limit on — to be perfectly frank about it, I permitted the witnesses to say in answer to questions, "Well, how did the girls generally in the plant feel," why, some of the witnesses testified as to how the girls in general felt.

Mr. Hogsett: We stand on the objection as made.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll overrule the objection.

Mr. Reed: Well, I wanted to make — I think I can point out a distinction to you. I would like to do it. So many times —

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I withdraw my statement on that. I thought Mr. Hogsett was ready to have me rule, so I did, but Senator —

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) We introduced evidence that there was a state of disturbance, and of unrest at the plant, and witnesses were permitted to testify how the girls acted, and that there was a general discussion in regard to the conditions, and danger which they might be in.

Now, that was a mere proof as to a general fact and could be proven in no other way. Now, the questions that are now sought to be propounded and answered are of an entirely different character. This goes to the question of whether these girls were coerced or driven by their employer, or whether they were afraid of their employer. [fol. 5909] Now, that is a concrete thing, and is the very essence of the charge here.

Trial Examiner Batten: Many of those witnesses, in fact every one of them, were asked — I don't remember whether it was Mr. Ingraham, but I am sure Mr. Lane asked many of those witnesses about coercion, influence, not only as to themselves, but whether they knew about whether anyone else was.

Mr. Tyler: Mr. Examiner, I think if you will review the testimony you will find the questions asked in the evidence, "Did you feel any sense of compulsion, did you know of any incidents of any girl being ordered or told, or any girl saying she was under compulsion, did you see any outward sign of compulsion," but they have not been asked, "Do you think those other girls were under compulsion." And that question is obviously invading the province of the Court, and obviously improper, and hasn't been part of our examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Do you know whether the girls felt that they were not free to express themselves when instructors were present at meetings?")

Mr. Langsdale: If the Examiner please, Mr. Tyler is like a great many lawyers who leave a hearing and then come back, and not know what went on in their absence.

[fol. 5910] Mr. Tyler: I have had access to the daily records.

Mr. Langsdale: Yes, but that hasn't told you much. Mr. Lane and Mr. Ingraham frequently said, "Did you read the article of March 17th?" "Yes." "What effect did it have on you," and the girl would say, and "What effect did it have on the other girls in the plant," and I objected very strenuously to the form of that question, because it asked the girl to speculate, and so forth, just as now; and if they were permitted to answer, "It made them all mad, it made them all fearful," and that kind of a question was asked and answered, not once, but at least 50 times in this record; and if Mr. Tyler had read the record carefully, he would have found that out.

Now, If the question is improper now, it was improper then. The Examiner will remember, of course, that frequently they got an answer that it made them all mad.

Now, this question is based upon, "If you know." If she does know, she probably has some basis for her knowledge.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

Mr. Tyler: Mr. Examiner, the situation Mr. Lane called attention to is plainly distinguishable; outward signs of anger may be testified to by a witness, but inward states of mind that don't express themselves, like anger and intoxication, cannot. The question is whether this witness knows how the girls felt, if they were free to speak; it is [fol. 5911] improper. You can't pass on this question, but on the other, I think it is admissible on the ground of suggestion.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Do you know whether the girls felt that they were not free to express themselves when instructors were present at the meetings?")

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. No, I think they felt that way.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did any girl ever tell you she felt that way?

A. Well, I have heard comments on that, yes, several ones.

Q. And those comments were made to you by operators? A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember any specific comment you could tell us about?

Mr. Reed: Well, we object to that as incompetent and immaterial, and not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Yes, one time one of my girls wanted to know why we didn't go to meetings, and so I said—well, I said, "You girls don't feel free—"

Mr. Ingraham: Just a minute—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Wait until we [fol. 5912] get the answer.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, she is testifying about matters that occurred after July, 1939; by what she was saying, that is plain.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, did you mention any date?

A. No, I didn't.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't think so.

Will you read the answer thus far?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter, as follows:

"A. Yes, one time one of my girls wanted to know why we didn't go to meetings, and so I said—well, I said, 'You girls don't feel free—' ")

Trial Examiner Batten: Complete your answer.

Mr. Langsdale: Let her finish her answer.

Mr. Lane: I object to the question—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Just a minute, Mr. Lane. The question is being answered now. Please either object at the end of the question or at the end of the answer. Let's don't interrupt the witness on every question.

Mr. Lane: May I state my objection for the record now?

Trial Examiner Batten: No, not now. I want the answer completed and then you may state your objection.

A. Well, I told her the girls didn't feel free to talk and to express their grief, and things like that, and she said, "Well, that's right, but it wouldn't make any difference to [fol. 5913] me if you were there, I would just say what I wanted to anyway."

Mr. Reed: I move to strike the answer out as not responsive. It is incompetent and immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

Mr. Ingraham: I would like to ask at this time a preliminary question as to whether or not she is referring to matters that occurred after July, 1939.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Ingraham, I assume that all you attorneys are proceeding on the basis that it is prior to July, 1939.

Now, just a minute; you shook your head there, Senator.

I can turn back here to several questions Mr. Ingraham asked without any time specified. Let's don't all of a sudden get so technical about everything; and furthermore, I want to say now that I want one counsel from each party to make the objections, from now on, if we are going to have as many objections as we have had thus far.

Now, I don't consider, Mr. Ingraham, that this question of bringing up the time—if you will wait until Miss Weyand has an opportunity to bring out the further facts concerning this conversation, as you did on several occasions.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, if I recall right, when the question came up when I was examining a witness, you immediately turned to the witness and inquired—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) No; no, I have [fol. 5914] several of them marked on here where I didn't but you, later brought it out. Now, give Miss Weyand the same opportunity.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I object to the denial of my request.

Mr. Reed: I would like to say to the Examiner that I beg his pardon for having indulged in a shaking of my head. I didn't say a word, and I want you to know it is not meant to be offensive.

Trial Examiner Batten: Not a bit, Senator, not in the least.

Now, Mr. Lane, do you have an objection to the question?

Mr. Lane: Mr. Ingraham has stated the same ground of an objection, but this witness has no means of knowing we are talking about a period prior to July 15, 1939, because the question hasn't brought out the time specified.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed, Mr. Lane.

Mr. Lane: My objection was, there is no limitation of time put on it, therefore it is improper.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed, Miss Weyand.

Miss Weyand: When did you cease going to meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that question. It is not proper rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Let's see. It was in 1939.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you attend meetings regularly from the time it was formed until 1939?

[fol. 5915] A. No, I didn't.

Q. What meetings did you attend? A. My meetings?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, a few, but I don't remember all of them.

Q. And you didn't attend them regularly after—

A. (Interrupting) After it was formed?

Q. After it was formed? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Is there any way you could tell us which meetings you went to and which you didn't go to?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Do you remember whom you had this conversation with? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Would you mind telling us the name of the girl?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you determine the date, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: That is what I am going to do.

A. It was Nina Gilardi.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know when the conversation occurred?

A. When?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I don't remember the day or anything about that. I remember that remark. The question was asked me [fol. 5916] and I answered as best I could.

Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, do you remember, Miss Witness, whether it was before July, 1939, or after?

A. Before 1939?

Q. Yes or after? A. Oh, yes, it was before.

Q. Before July, 1939, sometime? A. Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you ever hear of any other girls making any comments about instructors attending meetings?

A. Well, I have heard some, but I can't recall their names. I just heard comments and I just passed them up, I didn't hardly pay a lot of attention to it, you know.

Q. Did you regard yourself as a supervisory employee?

Mr. Reed: We object to that as calling for her conclusion and not for facts, and not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer it.

A. Yes, I did.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Why? A. Why?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, because we instructed the girls and we sort of led them right and wrong, and told them what they should do and like that.

Q. Could you state specifically what you were told by [fol. 5917] any representative of the company as to your status as a supervisory employee?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that unless it is limited as to time.

Mr. Reed: And it is not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Yes, at one time there was a person told us that we should carry ourselves as their superior, and that they sort of held us on a pedestal, and we could just well, shouldn't be just one of them, should be up above them and carry ourselves that way.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Who was that?

A. Elizabeth Gates Reeves.

Q. Did you know whether the girls in your section regarded you as a supervisory employee?

A. I think they did.

Mr. Tyler: I object to that as calling for a conclusion. She don't know how the girls regarded her without seeing in their minds.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you go over the pay roll cards weekly with the office prior to July 15, 1939? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was it part of your duty to recommend transfers of girls from one section to another?

[fol. 5918] A. What do you mean? How transfers?

Q. When one of the girls was moved over from one section to another, did some representative of the company discuss with you whether or not the girl could be transferred?

A. Well, Mrs. Wherry talked to the instructor, and if we could give her up and it wouldn't cripple the section and help this other section out, then we would help each other out that way.

Q. What effect on a girl's earnings did the instructor's power to divide the work have?

Mr. Reed: Pardon me. I couldn't hear the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed: We object to that as not rebuttal, incompetent and immaterial, and a mere general question that could not be answered.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Reed: Because the effect might be a certain way in one instance, and might be another way in another instance.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Well, in my instance I knew that an instructor could divide the work equally, or else she could cripple a girl if she wanted to, if that is what you want to know.

Trial Examiner Batten: What do you mean by that?

A. Well, I mean cripple, like there was a whole lot of [fol. 5919] little bitty bundles, and if the instructor would give that to a particular girl, that little bitty bundle, it takes practically as long to open up a small bundle as it does a large bundle, and they can go right through a large bundle—I won't say in half the time, I don't know—but they can go right through a bundle real quick, and they make more money on big bundles.

Mr. Reed: I move to strike the answer out as not responsive, and it is not rebuttal.

A. It is so, though.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was the thread girl in charge during the absence of the instructor?

A. Well, I guess she was. Usually my girl, when I had one, I put her in charge.

Q. When you had a thread girl did you talk over with her assignments of work or division of work?

A. Yes; always.

Q. Who was your thread girl in March and April, 1937?
A. Well, I believe it was Vera Marshall.

Mr. Reed: Our objection, I suppose, stands to all these questions of this kind?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did the duties of an instructor change at any time prior to July, 1939?

A. What do you mean, change?

Q. Was there a change in your responsibility and in [fol. 5920] your work at any time prior to July 15, 1939, or did you do the same sort of work from the time you became an instructor until July 15, 1939?

Mr. Tyler: Just a minute. The first part of the question asked I object to, because as I understand it it is referred to as general, and the last part referred to this lady personally.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question to this witness is whether or not there was any change in your duties, or responsibilities, prior to July, 1939; in other words, from the time you started to work as an instructor to July, 1939, was there any change in your duties or responsibilities that you recall?

Mr. Tyler: Now, may I have the question read, please?

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you mean my last statement?

Mr. Tyler: No, Miss Weyand's question.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, but I am restating it. I just stated it. Will you read the question I just stated, Mr. Reporter?

(Thereupon the question asked for was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Well, the question to this witness is whether or not there was any change in your duties or responsibilities prior to July, 1939; in other words, from the time you started to work as an instructor, to July, 1939, was there any change in your duties or responsibilities that you recall?")

[fol. 5921] A. No, I don't think so.

Mr. Tyler: I move it be stricken out because the evidence is the change was made after 1939.

Mr. Langsdale: What was that motion? Will you read it, please?

(Thereupon the last motion was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Langsdale: I ask that the motion be stricken out for the reason there isn't any credible evidence there ever was any such a change at any time.

Trial Examiner Batten: The motion to strike is denied.

Let's proceed.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember a meeting of employees at which Mrs. Reed spoke in March 1937?

A. A meeting?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. How did you learn of that meeting?

A. Well, it was either by telephone or by Mrs. Wherry, like I told you before.

Q. Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of that meeting?

A. Yes, I told them; I told them there was going to be a meeting.

Q. Do you know who called the meeting?

A. You mean called me on the phone?

[fol. 5922] Q. Yes, or called the meeting. Did you ever hear who arranged the meeting?

A. No, I did not.

Q. What time of day was that meeting held?

A. I'm sorry, but I don't remember.

Q. Was it during working hours or after?

A. Well, I know it was that, yes; it was during working hours, but I don't remember the time.

Q. Did the girls in your section time out before going to the meeting?

A. No.

Q. Did the girls in your section return to the section after the meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the girls in your section sit together at the meeting?

A. Some of them did and some of them didn't; I don't know. We didn't all sit together.

Q. Did you sit with some of them at the meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Were the girls in your section paid for the time they spent at that meeting?

Mr. Reed: I object to that because this witness couldn't possibly know, and because it is not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

[fol. 5923] A. Yes, they were paid, because it was on the cards when we went over them, and we saw it.

Mr. Reed: You saw all the cards?

A. I saw my girls' cards.

Mr. Reed: You did?

A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, please. You answer the questions that Miss Weyand asks you, please.

A. Well, I was telling him what I knew.

Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, if you will wait a few moments to ask your questions.

Mr. Reed: I stand corrected, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. And did you see it at the time of the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

A. See it on the cards?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, not that certain way; it was just added on there, and it just said they were allowed that for the meeting, that allowance was made for the meeting.

Q. And you testified they were paid for the time they spent at the meeting at which Mrs. Reed spoke?

A. Yes, they got paid.

Q. And at the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment [fol. 5924] Workers' Union was organized?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I wanted to know if you saw the same entries on their cards for that meeting as you saw on the cards for this meeting at which Mrs. Reed spoke.

A. Well, at all meetings I saw it.

Q. What did Mrs. Reed say at that meeting, if you recall?

Mr. Hogsett: Now, if the Court please, I now respectfully object, that that is not rebuttal. Now, I put it to you, if that is rebuttal, anything is. What becomes of your ruling that you are going to invoke the rules as to rebuttal, if you permit this reinvasion of the case in chief?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, Mr. Hogset, Mrs. Reed testified here about what she said in that meeting.

Mr. Hogsett: Exactly, in defense of the—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Each one of the girls who testified, testified very definitely about what she said at the meeting. Now, my only point is this: I am not saying, you understand, that it is or is not in this discussion. All I am saying, if that is not, then it seems to me that few, if any, questions which Miss Weyand has thus far asked are proper, because they all pertain, as I recall them, to the testimony which these last few witnesses have given. In other words, my only point is: what is the distinction between this and some of those other questions?

[fol. 5925] Of course, I understand you object to all of them.

Mr. Hogsett: Yes, that's right.

Trial Examiner Batten: And you have. But the thing I don't know is; what is the distinction between these and some of those other questions?

Mr. Hogsett: Well, I can suggest this much, now, there is some toehold connection with our case when Miss Weyand asks whether this witness told Ruby Clayton to go to this meeting. That is in one category. But here she just goes back to the March 18 meeting, as an original proposition.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, how about that?

Miss Weyand: I wanted to identify the meeting that this witness remembers.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if that is your question,—

Mr. Hogsett: (Interrupting) But she is asking what Mrs. Reed said.

Miss Weyand: Yes, and if she tells what Mrs. Reed said at this meeting, it fixes it in her mind.

Mr. Hogsett: That is a very indirect way to go about it.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean to tell me you asked that for the purpose of having the witness identify this meeting?

Miss Weyand: When we spoke of it, she generally, in my discussion with her, referred to it in that fashion, the meeting when such-and-such a thing was said.

[fol. 5926] Trial Examiner Batten: Then, it seems to me that unless you want her to say what Mrs. Reed said, you would accomplish the same thing by asking the witness: "Do you recall the meeting in which Mrs. Reed spoke in March 1937?"

Miss Weyand: I would like to have her answer the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: What question?

Miss Weyand: What she recalls Mrs. Reed saying at the meeting which she is now describing and speaking of.

Mr. Hogsett: And we object to that as not rebuttal; and I say to you sincerely that if that question is rebuttal, if an answer to it is rebuttal, then we might as well forget—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Mr. Hogsett, can you show me the difference between that and some of those other questions?

Mr. Hogsett: Didn't I suggest one? I again suggest there is some toehold for the contention that it rebuts what Ruby Clayton says, to ask this witness what she told Ruby Clayton; I can see some possibility in that. But there is utterly none in saying to this witness, "Will you please tell what Mrs. Reed said at that meeting," that that rebuts what Ruby Clayton or anybody else says. It is just going into the plaintiff's case in chief again; and if that is it, why, then we might as well know it.

Mr. Langsdale: If the Examiner please, I would like for Mr. Hogsett to tell the Examiner why the respondent [fol. 5927] was permitted at this hearing to prove what Mrs. Reed said or didn't say. We had some witnesses as to what she said at the meeting, in the 1939 hearing, they had evidence she didn't say that, they even produced a document which they said was a transcript of Mrs. Reed's speech, made by Mrs. Frances Strine; so if that matter was a closed book so far as the Board is concerned, and the International is concerned, then it was a closed book so far as the respondent and intervener were concerned. So why did they open it up again?

Certainly it was not in the purview of the remand for them, if it was not in the purview of the remand for us.

Mr. Hogsett: The simple answer is that the subject was in the offer of proof which had been rejected.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, Mrs. Reed also testified at length about it.

Mr. Hogsett: That's right, purely as a defensive matter.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"What did Mrs. Reed say at that meeting, if you recall?")

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us.

A. Well, I remember Mrs. Reed saying that she didn't—that she wasn't going to have any Dubinsky or any 'sky to tell her how to run her business, and if we would stand by [fol. 5928] her she would stand by us. Now, I didn't blame her.

Mr. Reed: Now, I want to make an observation, because I want to get this clear. As I understood, Mrs. Reed's testimony was admitted here because she could not be at the last trial, and it was admitted on the same basis as though she had testified at the last trial; and the prosecution went into all that took place at that meeting. Her testimony there was merely cumulative, and admitted on the basis I have said.

Now, if you are to take the view that because she testified out of order, that that opens that whole question up again, then we might as well say the whole case is open.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, I didn't make any such statement as that.

Mr. Reed: That is what I didn't understand.

Trial Examiner Batten: No statement such as you have just stated.

Mr. Reed: That the whole case was open?

Trial Examiner Batten: No. I think you just stated something about Mrs. Reed, didn't you?

Mr. Reed: Well, I didn't follow it. I am trying to—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Pardon me, I interrupted you. Proceed.

Mr. Reed: I was through. I say again that that testimony was admitted, and I understood it, as though it had [fol. 5929] been delivered at the last trial, and so I assumed, because Mrs. Reed was not able to come and testify at that time, that it was simply additional evidence received as though it had been offered at the last trial.

Now, if, because she testified to various things, that permits rebuttal, although the subject matter had been gone fully into, I don't know where the limitation is going to be.

Trial Examiner Batten: I simply stated to Mr. Hogsett that I see no distinction between this question and any of the others which I have permitted with respect to these witnesses who testified on the basis of the offers of proof.

So you may proceed, Miss Weyand.

Mr. Reed: Now, let me say this, of course we claim that this question cannot be justified by any ruling you have heretofore made on this same line of questions, because we insist your ruling is erroneous on those, and we can't bury one error under a mass of what we consider other errors.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is true, Senator, and it makes it quite impossible for you to distinguish between the two; you claim they are all wrong, therefore it is impossible to distinguish between this and the others, if they are all in error.

You may proceed, Miss Weyand.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I hand you I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 10, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page [fol.5930] 5961, and following, and also at 5375 and following, and ask you if that was circulated through your section.

A. Well, I remember this going through, but I didn't pass it through.

Q. Did you know it was going through at the time it went through?

A. Well, I just sort of seen it, because we just wasn't supposed to know, and I didn't pay any attention to it, a whole lot, I just seen something was going through the section.

Mr. Reed: Can we have the answer read?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: The question to you was, did you know this was going through your section?

A. Why, yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is the question.

A. I knew it, because I couldn't help but see it and afterwards I signed it myself.

Mr. Tyler: I move the first part of the answer be stricken.

Trial Examiner Batten: The first part of the answer may be stricken.

Mr. Tyler: That part about "We wasn't supposed to know," be stricken.

Mr. Langsdale: The International objects to that being stricken, because that may be open and subject to elucidation.

[fol. 5931] Trial Examiner Batten: Elucidation before I get the information she may make on her other statement, Mr. Langsdale.

You may proceed, Miss Weyand.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Why did you say you weren't supposed to know it went through your section?

A. Why did I say that?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, somebody told me that we weren't supposed to have anything to do with it.

Q. When you say "we weren't supposed to have anything to do with it," whom are you referring to?

A. Well, just the instructors; they mentioned the instructors.

Mr. Reed: Now, I move to strike out the answer of the witness as being pure hearsay, it is incompetent and immaterial, and not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you remember when you signed it?

A. No, I don't remember the date.

Q. Was it the same day the girls in your section signed it? A. No, it was afterwards.

Q. I ask you to look at the first name which appears on page 5974 and 5388, and ask you whether that is your signature? A. Yes, it is.

Q. Do you recall anything you were told at the time [fol. 5932] you signed it?

A. Well, yes, I recall that I was told that it was for the cornerstone of her new building, and Mrs. Reed wanted the instructor's name on it.

Mr. Reed: Now, we move to strike that out as mere hearsay, and as not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Who told you that?

A. I can't remember who told me that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you have any recollection at all who brought it up to you at the time you signed it?

A. Well, it kind of seems like it was Mr. Wherry.

Mr. Reed: Now, I move to strike that out because that is mere speculation, manifestly.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Were you a member of the Loyalty League?
A. Yes, I was.
Q. Who formed the Loyalty League?
A. Who formed it?
Q. Yes. A. Mrs. Gray.
Q. What was Mrs. Gray's position at that time?
A. She had charge of the outlet store.

Mr. Reed: Our objection stands for this line of questions?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

[fol. 5933] Mr. Hogsett: Would Miss Weyand suggest anything that this rebuts? What does it rebut? Haven't we completely lost our moorings?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean the question about the Loyalty League?

Mr. Hogsett: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, all those other witnesses have testified about the Loyalty League.

Mr. Langsdale: Mrs. Reed testified—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): On the first one or two questions, I don't know as I can determine what the purpose of it is.

Mr. Langsdale: Mrs. Reed testified that Mrs. Gray was just a clerk in the store. It certainly is rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did you attend meetings of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What time of day were those meetings held?

A. That I don't remember the time of day.

Q. Were they during working hours or after working hours? A. During working hours.

Q. Were the girls in your section paid for the time they spent at those meetings?

A. Well, like I said before, they were paid for all meetings.

[fol. 5934] Q. How were the girls in your section notified when a Loyalty League meeting was called?

A. The same way; by me.

Q. And how did you learn of it?

A. Like I say, either by telephone or Mrs. Wherry, or someone called up.

Q. Did you know Sylvia Hull?

A. Yes, I knew her when I seen her.

Q. Do you know what floor she worked on in April 1937?

A. I don't remember that date; I don't know what you have reference to—oh, in 1937—let's see.

Q. The last day she worked for the Donnelly Garment Company, do you know what floor she was working on?

A. Oh, yes, it was on eight.

Q. Where was her machine located on the eighth floor?

A. Well, I can't tell you exactly where her machine was located; but it was in that corner, in the east and south corner of the section, but I don't remember where her machine was.

Mr. Reed: Now, we make the objection that all this is put in about Sylvia Hull in the case in chief by the prosecution, and that this is not rebuttal.

Miss Weyand: Those are purely preliminary questions, and the further questions that I have, I can identify as strictly rebuttal.

[fol. 5935] Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if they are preliminary, all I can say about the Senator's objection is:

I think we discussed Sylvia Hull and May Fike, and at that time Mr. Langsdale took the position that the Senator does now, that that had all been gone over before, and it was a closed book; so apparently, as I have frequently said, thus far in the hearing we haven't yet found any one matter on which any two lawyers seem to agree, but if you want to proceed—if these are preliminary questions, Miss Weyand, you proceed.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How many doors into the eighth floor were there at that time? A. How many doors?

Q. Yes.

A. You mean entrances?

Q. Yes.

A. That we came in?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, there was one, and there was the elevators.

Q. Now, where were those located?

Mr. Reed: I submit that that is not rebuttal, and that whole question; the description of the premises, has been gone into.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Reed: We simply are going over the same ground we went over last week.

[fol. 5936] Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. The door we usually came in was the north—the north and east of the building, and the elevator doors were north and west.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Which elevators are you speaking of there?

A. The elevators on the eighth floor.

Q. In the northwest corner, are you speaking of passenger elevators or the freight elevators?

A. No, they are freight; the passengers are in the lobby outside of the door.

Q. And that is in which corner of the building?

A. That is north and east.

Q. And the only other means of getting to the eighth floor is by the freight elevators which were in the northwest corner, is that correct?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. Now, is there a stairway anywhere? A. Yes.

Q. Where does that stairway enter the eighth floor?

A. Well, the stairway enters from the hall by the elevator, the north and east.

Q. So you have to come through the door that leads out to the passenger elevators, to come—

A. (Interrupting) To get to the stairs?

[fol. 5937] Q. To get to the stairs, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So the only way any persons can come to the eighth floor is through the door that leads to the passenger elevators, and the stairs, or by the freight elevators, is that correct?

A. That's right, unless they want to climb the exit.

Q. And where is the exit?

A. West and north.

Q. And by "exit" you mean what?

A. The fire escape.

Q. Are there any rooms or walls on the eighth floor?

A. Any what?

Q. Rooms cut off of the eighth floor, or walls, or partitions dividing sections, or is it just one open floor?

Trial Examiner Batten: One big room?

A. Just one big room.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. And your section at that time was right in front of the passenger elevators and the freight elevators, isn't that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. There was no other section between your section and the door and the elevators?

A. No.

Q. Do you remember the last day that Sylvia Hull worked at the Donnelly Garment Company?

[fol. 3938] A. No, I don't remember the last day. I remember—yes, it was her last day that time.

Mr. Reed: I can't understand the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer, please?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

Miss Weyand: Do you remember what happened that day?

A. Well, there was just a commotion and girls going through the section and around; I didn't go over myself.

Mr. Reed: I move to strike out the answer as not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, are you still on preliminary questions?

Miss Weyand: No. I think this is rebuttal. We had several girls in her section who claimed not to have heard or seen anything at that time, and I wish to show by this witness what she said and heard, without going over, and I will also go into—

Mr. Reed: I thought that was part of their case in chief.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute, Senator. My question to you was: are these still preliminary questions?

Miss Weyand: No, these aren't preliminary questions. This is the essence of what I consider the rebuttal in the matter. I have further questions, however, in rebuttal to the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the last question and answer, please?

[fol. 5939] (Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Do you remember what happened that day?

"A. Well, there was just a commotion and girls going through the section and around; I didn't go over myself.")

Mr. Reed: Now, I would like to go back to this question that Miss Weyand said was preliminary. I don't think she has in any way connected it up with anything. Yet she was allowed to get an answer that may and may not be important, on the ground that she was asking a preliminary question. I didn't know, when she asked the question, what she was going into was preliminary.

Miss Weyand: I said I had not finished developing the testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may proceed with your questions.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you know what caused the commotion you spoke of, what it was about?

A. Just only by hearing what some of the girls talked about, what was in the paper, that she was a union girl and they weren't going to have her there.

Q. Did girls from your section go over to Sylvia Hull's machine?

A. No, I am sure they didn't, but I don't know for sure, because I told the girls, I just said, "Well, I wouldn't go [fol. 5940] over, I would just stay at my machine." I told some of my girls that, some of them might have gone over, but I don't think so.

Q. Did people come up to the eighth floor at that time from other places?

Mr. Reed: Now, I make the objection to that that it has all been gone over, it is not rebuttal, and it is not a follow-up on any preliminary question,

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you know whether people came up from other floors or not?

A. No, I don't remember any of the other girls in the other sections coming up. I can't remember that.

Miss Weyand: Did you see Miss Blodgett there?

Mr. Reed: Pardon me, I couldn't hear the question at all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read it, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Yes, I believe I saw Miss Blodgett there, because this Sylvia, when they brought her through the section and to the door, she was crying, and Miss Blodgett had her with her.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did the Loyalty League continue to exist after the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, so far as you know?

A. Well, I think it did, but there wasn't very much to it.
[fol. 5941] Q. What did you know of its activities after that?

Mr. Reed: I move to strike out the last part of the previous answer as not responsive.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When you said there wasn't much to it, what did you mean?

A. I mean it kind of died down, I didn't hear much about it.

Q. Did the girls in your section use the department phones to make telephone calls?

A. No.

Q. What do the words "department phones" mean?

A. Inside phones, to call from one section to the other or from one floor to the other.

Q. What telephones could the girls use?

A. The outside phones, which was on seven, and there was one in the lobby, several phones around.

Q. Could the girls get up and go to the phone at any time during working hours, without asking your permission?

A. Well, they didn't, they usually asked my permission.

Q. What are i. d. m.'s?

A. Well, i. d. m.'s, I always said, "I demand motion," that is the way I thought it was.

Mr. Hogsett: "I demand motion"?

A. Yes, you wanted action. When you got one of those i. d. m.'s you wanted to do something about it.

[fol. 5942] By Miss Weyand:

Q. When the girls passed notes in the section, were those notes called i.d.m.'s?

A. Well, they were all referred to as i. d. m.'s.

Q. If a girl passed a note to a friend?

A. No, no note.

Q. They weren't called i. d. m.'s?

A. No, they were just notes.

Mr. Hogsett: No motion was demanded on those occasions?

A. I don't think so.

Miss Weyand: Did those girls ever use their machines for family sewing?

A. They did not, but they sometimes did.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

A. On the sly we will call it.

Miss Weyand: Do you know of any girl ever being reprimanded for using a machine—

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) I object to that—

Trial Examiner Batten: You objected in the middle of the question, Senator.

Mr. Reed: I didn't think I did.

Trial Examiner Batten: The reporter just told me he didn't get it because of your interrupting. Now, Mr. Reporter, will you read what you have?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

[fol. 5943] A. No, not one particular girl. I just heard of it, not any of my girls.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. When you said they weren't supposed to, what did you mean by that?

A. Well, they were just not supposed to take up company time in sewing for themselves.

Q. Were they free to use the machines after company time for their own sewing?

Mr. Reed: One moment. Now, I object to that as incompetent and immaterial, and not rebuttal; it is all part of the case in chief.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think the first time in this hearing, Senator, that I have any recollection of that question coming up, was in Mrs. Reed's testimony. I don't recall prior to that time it was ever mentioned.

Mr. Reed: Well, I think you are mistaken.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may read it, please.

(Thereupon the last question was reread by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Were the girls free?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, after working time, after they quit work could they go back and use the machines if [fol. 5944] they wanted to?

A. No, not in the factory.

Miss Weyand: That is all the questions I have.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale.

[fol. 5945] Cross-Examination

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Who was Mrs. Wherry?

A. I beg your pardon?

Q. Who was Mrs. Wherry, whom you have mentioned in your testimony?

A. Who was she?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, we considered her as the head of the instructors.

Q. Who was Miss Blodgett?

A. Our nurse.

Mr. Langsdale: That's all.

Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Mrs. Dorsey, you began with the company in October 1925, I believe you said?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, what was your first work then?

A. It was an embroidery machine operator.

Q. How long did you continue in that work?

A. Around a year or so. It might have been 2 years. I don't remember the exact time.

Q. That would take it up to about 1927 or 1928?
A. Yes.
Q. What section were you in then?
[fol. 5946] A. Let's see. I was in— It was Mrs. Allison's section.
Q. I mean, the number?
A. I don't remember the number.
Q. What floor were you on?
A. We were in the Coca-Cola building at that time.
Q. From 1927 or 1928 on what was the next work that you did?
A. Instructing.
Q. For how long were you an instructor?
A. Up until March this year.
Q. Up until March of 1942?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, that would be an interval of— Between 1942, as the end, and 1927, we will say, as the beginning, that would be 15 years that you were an instructor; is that right?
A. Close to that.
Q. Yes. Of course I am not trying to pin you down to that, because you did say 2 or 3 years.
A. Yes. I wasn't there very long until I became—
Q. —an instructor?
A. That's right.
Q. In what section did you first work as an instructor? Give me the number.
A. I don't think it had a number. It was just a little group of embroidery machines. We didn't have very many [fol. 5947] at that time. I taught girls the embroidery work.
Q. When did you first work in a section that had a number?
A. I don't remember the year.
Q. Can you give me even approximately the year?
A. Well, it was when we moved over in the Corrigan Building.
Q. About when was that, what year?
A. I don't know. I would have to find out when—
Q. I am testing your memory. Have you any conception of when? Can you give it to us within a year or two, or even within 5 years?

A. No.

Q. Even though you cannot give it within 5 years, can you give the number of the section in which you worked as an instructor the first time you had a numbered section?

A. Well, we will say 415.

Q. On what floor did you work in 415?

A. I worked on the eighth floor the biggest part of the time. I won't say it was just that, but—

Q. Please, Madam, I want to take it a step at a time, to see how clear your memory is on the matter. At some indefinite time, which you cannot fix, within 5 years, you began working in section 415 on the eighth floor? Have I got that straight?

A. I think so.

Q. How many years from that indefinite beginning point did you work in that numbered section on the eighth floor?

[fol. 5948] A. Well, I'll tell you— I was changed around an awful lot, and that section was changed from floor to floor, and I couldn't tell you how many years it was.

Q. Can you tell me if it was as much as 1 year?

A. It was over that.

Q. Or 2 years?

A. It was over that.

Q. Or 3 years?

A. Well, we'll say 2 years.

Q. During that 2 years, at some indefinite time—

Mr. Langsdale: I object to this constant repetition of "some indefinite time"—

Mr. Hogsett: It is indefinite.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. It is an effort on the part of counsel to terrify and intimidate this witness. She said she couldn't remember whether it was 2—

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think the witness is being intimidated, Mr. Langsdale. If I thought for a moment she were, I would move her a little farther away, but I think Mr. Hogsett's reference to "indefinite time"— Of course, there may become a limit to the use of that term in his questions, but we will proceed.

Will you read the question that is pending, please?

Mr. Hogsett: Let me say to the witness, first:

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Are you terrified at all?

[fol. 5949] A. Not at all.

Q. Well, if you will not terrify me, I will not terrify you, and we will just get along fine.

A. All right.

Trial Examiner Batten: I doubt if either of you would get very far.

Will you read the question?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"During that 2 years, at some indefinite time—")

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you complete it, please?

Mr. Hogsett: Yes. I apparently had not completed it.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. During that 2 years that you worked in section 415, it was always on the eighth floor, was it?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, from the end of that time what was the next numbered section you worked in?

A. Well, I was changed around an awful lot.

Q. Yes. I believe you said that.

A. And when you change around as many times as I was, you can't remember just the dates and the sections and everything, but I can tell you the sections I had.

Q. Very well.

A. I had 5[illegible]. Let's see. They divided the 415 section at one time and it was 415-A and 415-B, and I had 415-A [fol. 5950] part of the time, and part of the time 415-B, and part of the time both of them.

Q. Any other numbered sections?

A. Well, I'll tell you— This last year I have been changed around a lot. I did floor work there for a while in 522, but just for a short while.

Q. Any other numbers?

A. I was in the notions department for a short while.

Q. Has that a number?
A. That was in 1940.
Q. Has that a number?
A. It's all the notions department.
Q. It has no number?
A. I think it does.
Q. What is the number?
A. Number 93, I think.
Q. Number 93, which is the notions?
A. "I think," I said.
Q. Now, have you given all of the numbered sections in which you worked as an instructor at any time?
A. Now, when I was down there in the notions I wasn't an instructor.
Q. All right. I will cross that off, because I am only dealing with your status as an instructor. Now, have you given me all of the numbered sections in which you have [fol. 5951] ever worked as an instructor, to the best of your memory?
A. Yes.
Q. To be accurate, I will read them to you. You said you started in 415, as the first numbered section, and you were in 523, 415-A, 415-B, and 522?
A. Not 522. I wasn't an instructor there.
Q. All right. I will cross that off. I will read them again. The only numbered sections in which you worked as an instructor were sections 415, 523, 415-A, and 415-B; is that right?
A. I think it was, as far as I can recall.
Q. Can you give me the floor on which you worked in section 523?
A. Let's see. That's down on two.
Q. I beg your pardon?
A. Number two—second floor.
Q. The floor, please, in which you worked in section 415-A?
A. What?
Q. The floor?
A. On eight.
Q. And on what floor was 415-B?
A. The same floor.
Q. On eight?
A. Yes.

Q. Then, your entire work as an instructor has at all [fol. 5952] times during the 15 years of time been on either the second or eighth floor, according to what you have said. Is that right?

A. The second and—what?

Q. I am only taking your word for it. You said 523 was on the second floor, and that 415-A—

A. Well, I worked on seven.

Q. In what numbered section did you work on seven?

A. Let's see. 523 was on seven.

Q. Then, I should correct that.

A. Yes.

Q. Instead of two, 523 was on seven; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Has all of your work as an instructor during the 15 years of your service as such been on either the seventh or eighth floor?

A. No. I was down on the second.

Q. In what numbered section there?

A. Let's see. What did they call that? I don't remember what section that was.

Q. I will have to put a blank, then, for that. But it was some section which had a number, and it was on the second floor; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, have you covered all of the floors on which you ever worked in numbered sections as an instructor— [fol. 5953] two, seven and eight?

A. I think so.

Q. Now, can you give me the length of time in which you worked in section 523 as an instructor and—I will add to it, in the interest of brevity—when you worked there?

A. You mean, what date I worked there?

Q. Oh, not dates. I am just asking for years, approximately.

A. Well, I've been just changed around like that. I was in 415, and then I would go down to 523. I've changed around from two, seven, and eight, but I was, the biggest part, on the eighth floor.

Q. Can you give me the length of time in which you have worked as an instructor in any of these other numbered sections, namely, 523, on the seventh floor, 415-A, on the eighth floor, and 415-B, on the eighth floor, and this numbered section that you cannot identify on the second floor? Can you give me the length of time and the time during which you have worked in any one of those sections?

A. I'll just say it's seasonal— We have seasonal work on the special, and that's what I did; I did special machine instructing, and it was as long as the season would last. Maybe we would have enough work for the second season, and maybe I would be there or maybe I would be someplace else.

Q. Other than that, you cannot tell me anything about [fol. 5954] the length of time or the time—

A. I told you, in 415, on the eighth floor, I spent the biggest part of my time there.

* * * * * *

Mr. Hogsett: Let's deal with this March 18 meeting, of 1937. Did you undertake to say that you told Ruby Clayton, Oma Lee Cooper, Edith Dean, and Ethel Riegel to go to that meeting?

Miss Weyand: She did not say that with reference to the March 18 meeting. I object to your misleading the witness on that. She said, the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized.

Mr. Langsdale: April 27.

Mr. Hogsett: All right, I will go to that.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Do you say you told these four girls on April 27, 1937, to go to that meeting?

A. I told the whole section. I didn't go to them in person.

Q. But you did say— And of course I am not trying to mislead you; I hope you know that. You did say, did you not, you told these three first named, Ruby Clayton, Oma Lee Cooper, and Edith Dean, and you thought you told Ethel Riegel? Didn't you say that?

* * * * * *

[fol. 5955] (Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter as follows:

"But you did say— And of course I am not trying to mislead you; I hope you know that. You did say, did you not, you told these three first named, Ruby Clayton, Oma Lee Cooper, and Edith Dean, and you thought you told Ethel Riegel? Didn't you say that?"

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Did you so testify?

A. I said I didn't go to them personally. I told all of the girls.

Q. But you identified—you picked out those particular girls— A. Those girls were in my section.

Q. But you identified them as being there on that day?

A. They were. I know the girls that were there.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5956] Mr. Hogsett: It was about 5½ years ago that that meeting was held, and you recall that those three girls, Ruby Clayton, Oma Lee Cooper, and Edith Dean, were there on that day, and you think you recall that Ethel Riegel was; is that right?

* * * * * *

[fol. 5957] A. I said I told the section. I did not go to any particular girl. I never go to a particular girl—

* * * * * *

A. (Continuing) I said I did not go to those particular girls. I went to the whole section. I never told one girl at a time.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. How do you know Ruby Clayton was there the day you tell about? A. How do I know?

Q. Yes. A. Those girls worked for me then.

Q. How do you know Oma Lee Cooper was there that day?

A. Because those girls were all there.

Q. Were they there the day before?

A. Yes, because that was the busy season.

Q. Were they there the day after?

A. I won't say yes or no to that question.

[fol. 5958] Q. But you will pick out this particular day and say they were there, won't you?

A. I said— I didn't pick out any particular day.

Q. But Miss Weyand did. She directed your attention to a particular day, and you quite freely testified they were there and you remembered it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment. I don't think that is quite the testimony. I think the first question to the witness was, whether she told the girls, and she said she told her whole section. And then, Miss Weyand asked her about each one of these individuals, "Do you recall whether they were there?" and the witness, as I recall, then recalled that the first three were there and the fourth one she wasn't sure about.

Mr. Hogsett: That is exactly correct. And now I am asking her, how she is able to be sure that the first three were there, picking out that particular day, just so the testimony will be rebuttal.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5959] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. All I am asking you to tell me, if you can, is how you are able to say those particular girls were there on that particular day in 1937?

A. Well, they worked for me then—they worked for me.

Q. They didn't work every day, of course?

A. Well, no, not just every day, but—

Q. So, as a matter of fact, you have no independent memory of the girls that were there on that day, or any other particular day, 5 years ago?

A. They worked for me, but maybe not that particular day.

[fol. 5960] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What you mean is, in the ordinary course of events they would be working for you, unless they were out on vacation, or sick, or it was on Sunday, or—

A. Yes.

Q. That is, you told Mr. Hogsett you have no independent recollection that on a certain day, at a certain time, a certain girl was there at her machine? A. No.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. And in like manner, you cannot tell what particular girls were present in your section on March 18, 1937, the day of the meeting at which Mrs. Reed spoke? You can't remember just who was there that day, can you?

A. No, and no one else, that far back, but I remember I had a section and I told the girls that were there.

Q. Now, let's get it again. I think you made this clear, but I want to be sure; give me the number of the section and the floor on which you were working on each of these two dates, namely, March 18, 1937, and April 27, 1937?

A. On the eighth floor, in section 415.

Q. You are positive of that, are you? A. Yes.

Q. Now, in what section were you working on the day of the Sylvia Hull incident?

A. I was on the eighth floor, in 415.

[fol. 5961] Q. So that all three of these occasions found you in the same numbered section and on the same floor, namely, 415, on the eighth floor? A. Yes.

Q. Are you sure of that?

A. I am sure of that because, like I told you before, I spent the biggest part of my time on the eighth floor.

Q. Yes, but—

A. I changed around, but I don't know the years and times, and like that. I just worked—well, where they could put us. If they needed that for other machines, or something, they just moved us around. They moved us around a whole lot.

Q. But you saw the nurse take Sylvia Hull, you said,—

A. Yes. That was on the eighth floor.

Q. You know that was on the eighth floor? A. Yes.

Q. And you know you were in section 415, you say?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, let's take another date, March 2, 1937. In what numbered section were you working, and on what floor? A. I don't remember.

Q. Could you have made a change between March 2 and March 18, 1937?

A. Well, I could have, but I don't know as I did.

Q. Then, to the best of your memory were you still in [fol. 5962] section 415 and on the eighth floor from March 2, also? A. To the best of my memory.

Q. But these other dates you are sure about. You have made that very clear, haven't you? A. Yes.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact, Mrs. Dorsey, that your memory of the number of the section and the floor on which you worked on each of these three dates, namely, March 18, 1937, April 27, 1937, and the date of the Sylvia Hull incident, which was April 23, 1937, is wholly wrong, and that, as shown by your own record, you were working in section 518 on each of those days, and on the seventh floor?

. . . . . .

Miss Weyand: I would like to say, they can't impeach their own witness.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5964] Mr. Reed: It isn't material, but we have another curious legal proposition. A while ago it was that all the proponent of the case had to do was to make a prima facie case, and then, when the other side testified, come in and make a case. Now we have the thought that if a witness has sworn a certain way for us and a witness is put on on the other side in rebuttal, that if we ask any questions about the same facts, that that is impeaching testimony. It may be contradicting testimony, but that [fol. 5965] isn't impeaching evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, we will proceed. Mr. Hogsett.

Mr. Hogsett: Isn't it a fact that on March 18, 1937, you were working in section 518, on the seventh floor?

. . . . . .

[fol. 5966] A. No, I didn't work there. I was up on the eighth floor.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Isn't it a fact that on April 23, 1937, the date of the Sylvia Hull episode, you were likewise working in section 518, on the seventh floor?

A. No. I was on the eighth floor.

Q. Isn't it a fact that on the date of the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, namely, April 27, 1937, you were working in section 518, on the seventh floor?

A. Is it a fact?

Q. Yes. I am asking you if that is not a fact.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the question again for the reason that it is repetitious.

Trial Examiner Batten: The witness may answer, if she recalls, where she was working.

A. I don't remember whether it was the seventh or eighth floor. I told you I was changed around so much, I don't remember the date, only just when something come up like the Sylvia Hull incident, and I remember being on the eighth floor then.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Are you saying now you cannot remember the number of the section or the floor on any of these dates?

A. I told you that I wouldn't remember the dates that I was on them, but I worked the biggest part of the time on the eighth floor.

[fol. 5967] Q. I know, I heard that. But I am asking about the dates of these particular incidents.

A. The particular incidents?

Q. There are four of them I mentioned.

A. When Sylvia Hull—I was on the eighth floor—

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Miss Witness, please answer the questions and don't start to answer them until Mr. Hogsett has completed his questions.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. On that date you say you were in section 415, on the eighth floor? A. Yes, on that date.

Q. And you say the same thing in regard to these other three dates—

Mr. Langsdale: What other three dates?

Mr. Hogsett: March 2, 1937.

Miss Weyand: She didn't say that with respect to March 2, 1937.

Mr. Hogsett: March 18, 1937, I should say, and April 23, 1937, and April 27, 1937.

Miss Weyand: I object. The witness has shown she doesn't remember things by the days of the month but by the things that occurred there.

Trial Examiner Batten: As I recall the witness' testimony, she thought it was her best recollection that she was on the eighth floor on the dates Mr. Hogsett asked her [fol. 5968] about, but she also said she wasn't certain, because she was moved around a lot.

Miss Weyand: She said she was certain as to incidents, rather than dates, and said she was on the eighth floor at the time certain incidents occurred.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, if the Examiner please, how long is an attorney going to be permitted to sit there and shake his fist in the face of a witness and ask her the same question over and over and over again? I submit it is repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if I think Mr. Hogsett or any other attorney is improperly asking questions of a witness, or intimidating a witness, or pointing his finger at her too frequently, I will so indicate.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I have a right to call the Examiner's attention to what I think about it, haven't I?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: And I still object. Whether he is trying to hit her in the nose with his finger or not, this is repetition, because she has answered it 15 or 20 times.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5973] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Mrs. Dorsey, at the close of the hearing yesterday, the following questions and answers were recorded, and I'll read them to you, to get the connection in your mind:

"Q. I am asking about the dates of these particular incidents.

"A. The particular incidents?

"Q. There are four of them I mentioned.

"A. When Sylvia Hull—I was on the eighth floor—" Then I'll omit what the Trial Examiner said and give you the testimony.

[fol. 5974] "Q. On that date you say you were in section 415, on the eighth floor?"

Mr. Langsdale: What page are you reading from?

Mr. Hogsett: 5967. (Reading)

"A. Yes, on that date.

"Q. And you say the same thing in regard to these other three dates—

"Mr. Langsdale: What other three dates?

"Mr. Hogsett: March 2, 1937, March 18, 1937, April 23, 1937, and April 27, 1937?".

Mr. Hogsett: Is that correct?

Mr. Langsdale: Now, just a moment. Did I interpose an objection to that question?

Mr. Hogsett: Yes, the record says you did.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, are you waiting for an answer?

Mr. Hogsett: I would like a ruling and then an answer. No, I don't think you did really object. Miss Weyand did. You made some comments.

Miss Weyand: On page 5968 there is an objection by Mr. Langsdale, the third line from the bottom.

Mr. Hogsett: Oh, yes, that's right.

Trial Examiner Batten: What page is that you are starting on?

Mr. Hogsett: 5967 and following.

Mr. Langsdale: I now object to the question again, if [fol. 5975] I haven't, as assuming that she said she remembered the date of the March 2 circulation of the petition. In my recollection she said she didn't remember what floor that was on, what section it was.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll overrule the objection.

The question to the witness now is: is that correct? Now, if it isn't correct the witness may answer the question if it is or if it is not. That is the question, isn't it, Mr. Hogsett?

Mr. Hogsett: That's right.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you read her the question?

Mr. Hogsett: Let me ask it again.

The Witness: May I ask what is the answer I made?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Miss Witness, March 18.

Mr. Hogsett: Let's rephrase it, and that will make it intelligible to you.

A. It is hard to remember dates. I remember incidents but don't remember the dates.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Witness, just please wait for the question.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. On March 2, 1937, on the occasion of the passing, of the so-called passing of the petition letter, or Loyalty League petition or whatever it is called, were you then working as instructor in section 415 on the eighth floor?

[fol. 5976] A. Now, that was March 27?

Q. No, no, March 2, 1937, at the time the protest letter was passed through the sections and signed by the employees.

A. Oh, that is when I said I wasn't supposed to know about it?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, were you working as instructor in section 415 on the eighth floor on that date?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Now, let's go to the next date, on March 18, 1937, on the day of the meeting at which Mrs. Reed made a speech. Were you then working as instructor in section 415?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment before you answer that.

Mr. Hogsett: On the eighth floor?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the question as repetition and ask it be stricken.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is repetitious to some extent, but let's get it straightened out so we can proceed.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Please answer.

A. Was that the meeting when Mrs. Reed spoke to us about the Dubinsky and the 'sky matter?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

[fol. 5977] Trial Examiner Batten: What was your answer, Miss Witness? I didn't get it.

A. Yes.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. On the 23rd of April, 1937, at the time of the Sylvia Hull incident, were you working as instructor in section 415 on the eighth floor?

A. That's right.

Q. On April 27, 1937, the day the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized, were you working as instructor in that section on that floor?

A. The day they organized?

Q. Yes.

A. I was on the eighth floor in 415.

Q. You said yesterday that section 415 was one which ran clear across the floor. Do you remember?

A. Well, I said part of the time it was divided and part of the time it was together; it wasn't that way all the time.

Q. When it was together and ran clear across the floor was there one instructor, or were there two instructors in that section?

A. Wait a minute—at that time—at one time, I said, I had all the whole section clear across the room, because I remarked to some of the girls, and some of the girls remarked I should have roller skates; and then I said they [fol. 5978] divided it and another instructor had half of it and I had half of it; but I don't remember the dates.

Q. But on the occasion when it ran clear across the floor and before it was divided, you were the only instructor, is that what you are saying?

A. I had a helper.

Q. Who was that?

A. Well, I don't remember. I had—my helpers were Frances Morrison and Vera Marshall and Grace Davis.

Q. Were they thread girls?

A. Yes, they were my thread girls.

Q. But was there any other person designated as instructor at that time?

A. Helping me instruct?

Q. No. Were you the only instructor?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Wait a minute. Let's get it clear so we won't have to go over it so much. On the occasion when your section ran clear across the floor, and before it was divided, were you the only instructor in that section?

A. Yes.

Q. What type of operators did you instruct?

A. The type of operators?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, now, I won't say at that particular time, but I [fol. 5979] had a lot of different machines. I have had hemstitching and I have had blind stitching and I have had eyelet, and I have had pinking and embroidery, and zigzagging and double stitching, airline tucking.

Q. Did you instruct the type of work known as shirring?

A. I did, yes, sir. We tripple shirred and single shirred.

Q. Was that the principal kind of work that you instructed in?

A. Principal?

Q. As to which you were instructor.

A. All I was telling you about was principal things, not one particular thing.

Q. Now, yesterday, in the course of your direct examination you expressed some uncertainty when Miss Weyand was asking you about certain meetings, whether they were Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings or Loyalty League meetings. Do you remember that?

A. I remember that incident.

Q. As a matter of fact you were trying to express the thought then, were you not, that your mind isn't clear on the details of whether the meetings you were talking about in your direct examination were Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings or—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) Just a moment—

Mr. Hogsett: (Interrupting) Or Loyalty League meetings?

[fol. 5980] Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment—

Mr. Hogsett: (Interrupting) Isn't that true?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that because there is not the slightest possible foundation for an assumption that she had the organization meeting of April 27 mixed up with Loyalty League meetings, not the slightest, and I am objecting to his assuming in his question that she had them mixed up with the Loyalty League meetings.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you understand the question, Miss Witness?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Well, if you understand it, you may answer.

A. The reason I understand about Sylvia Hull and the meeting of the Workers' Union, organizing of it, because you remember those things.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. But you were confused, you mean, as to the others, as to whether they were the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or Loyalty League meetings?

A. What I said was we had them so fast and furious there for a while I can't remember the dates, whether it was a Loyalty League meeting or not, but I do remember the incidents, because that happened.

Q. How many of each do you remember in 1937?

A. Oh, I don't know. I can't remember how many we had. I said we had them so fast and furious.

[fol. 5981] Q. How many, once a week or a month or a season? Can you give us any idea at all how many meetings?

A. No.

Q. Of one group or the other group?

A. No, I can't give you any idea.

Q. No idea at all?

A. No, there was too many meetings.

Q. Can you give us an approximation of it, your best judgment of it?

A. No.

Q. You have no idea at all, then, is that what you mean?

A. I mean we had meetings, but I said I didn't know how many.

Q. Of course, I am trying to make it clear to you that I am not asking for a definite, positive statement of the number. I am asking if you can give us your best approximate judgment of it.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to the question as repetition. The witness stated they had many of them but she couldn't tell how many.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the witness's question is whether she can approximate the number.

Mr. Hogsett: That's right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Can you tell us, Miss Witness?

A. No, I don't want to say; I might be wrong, but I know we had a lot of them.

[fol. 5982] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Do you know whether you had more of the Union meetings than the Loyalty League meetings?

A. I know there were some concerning the Union; the Loyalty League meetings were more or less social affairs, you know.

Q. As a matter of fact, that was all the Loyalty League was, a social group?

A. Yes, a kind of get-together and get acquainted affair, and plan on good times, and things like that.

Q. Yes. You had parties and picnics?

A. Yes, that was the object of it.

Q. The sole object, wasn't it?

A. I don't know whether it was the sole object; it might have had another leading, it might have led up to something, I don't know.

Q. To the best of your knowledge, was the Loyalty League purely and simply a social organization? Isn't that the honest truth?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. In characterizing it here just a moment ago, you said that was what it was doing?

A. What?

Q. Engaging in social activities?

A. That is what we talked about, but maybe there was something behind the background.

Q. Well, you are speculating on that, aren't you?

[fol. 5983] A. I said maybe.

Q. Is that as far as you will go on that question?

A. Yes, as far as I will go.

Q. Now, you said yesterday, and I thought it seemed to me you made rather a point of it — Miss Weyand did — that you attended the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, some of the meetings, in uniform.

A. Well, we did. We attended Loyalty League meetings in uniform too.

Q. Exactly, exactly.

A. And we attended the union meetings, like I told you.

Q. Exactly. Because you were ready to go to the meeting, and you preferred to go in your uniform and come back and change?

A. No, we had to go to work: It didn't last all the time. I know of one instance when we went down there in our uniforms, and it came time to go home when we got through, and some of the girls asked me if I would put their work away, and I said, "Yes, you go on home and I'll put your work away." What do you call that?

Q. Don't argue with me.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Witness, when Mr. Hogsett asks you a question, you answer it and stop; he will always ask the questions.

A. Well, all right.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. That last question you asked me indicates you have some interest in this matter. Are you protecting this for the Labor Board?

A. He said to forget it.

Q. I am questioning your position in this matter.

A. I am just a witness. Just ask me the questions and I'll answer what you ask.

Q. Are you also somewhat interested in protecting the matter?

A. No, I certainly am not. I am not interested in either side now.

Q. When did you sever your connection with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. In March of this year.

Q. Under what circumstances?

A. Under what circumstances?

Q. Yes.

A. I quit because I wasn't treated right.

Q. Then you are mad, you quit sore, you are sore yet?

Mr. Langsdale. Just a minute. I object to the word "sore."

Trial Examiner Batten: Let's have one question at a time.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. You weren't treated right, you thought?

A. I don't think, I know.

Q. You quit because you were mad?

[fol. 5985] A. I wasn't treated right when I quit.

Q. Well, you are mad at the company?

A. I won't say at the company. I was mad at some of those people down there, they didn't treat me right.

Q. Who are you mad at?

A. Well, that Cecile Ealy is a snake in the grass.

Q. Well, he is a snake in the grass, you say?

A. It is a she, not a he.

Q. Are you mad at anyone else down there?

A. She makes me miserable.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, was there anyone else.

A. That I am particularly mad at?

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I will admit I got a little mad at Mrs. Reed because she wouldn't hear me, and I thought after practically 16 years of service that she should have seen me and talked to me and heard my side of the story.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. All right. You wanted to make some complaints to her?

A. I certainly did.

Q. What is Cecile Ealy's position there?

A. I don't really know. She is a sort of a tattle-tale down there.

Q. You were mad and venomous about this whole mat-
[fol. 5986] ter, weren't you? Just boiling mad, aren't you?

A. Yes, when her name comes up it makes me mad.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5987] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Well, you feel unfriendly toward Mrs. Reed?

A. I wouldn't say that; I would talk to her right now if she was here.

Q. Oh, you would speak to her if she was here?

A. I certainly would.

Q. But you are unfriendly toward her?

A. I don't know; my heart has been for 16 years with her.

Q. You have a chip on your shoulder because she should have seen you at a time when you wanted to present a grievance?

A. I don't know why she didn't see me.

Q. You have a chip on your shoulder right now, as you are sitting in this witness chair?

A. I don't think I have.

. . . . . .

[fol. 5988] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Now, who else at the company are you at outs with or unfriendly toward?

A. I don't know as I am out with anyone. I have a lot of friends down there, I think.

Q. Well, with a good many people down there?

A. I hope so.

Q. But I am speaking of those whom you may be unfriendly with. How many others besides Mrs. Reed and Cecile Ealy are you angry with?

Mr. Langsdale: That is objected to. She said she wasn't angry with anyone down there.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question is, is there anyone else, Miss Witness?

A. No.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. How about Lee Baty?

A. I think Mr. Baty is all right.

Q. He has your unqualified approval, has he?

A. I can't say unqualified.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5989] By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Go ahead and tell what you were going to say.

A. Well, Mr. Baty, you know, he is kind of changeable.

Q. Like the weather?

A. Well, sort of.

Q. And you think he is all right just part of the time?

A. You see, one time I went up to Mr. Baty when I was being changed around; and naturally when you are changed around you begin to worry whether you will have work — If you don't have to work it is all right — at that time I had to work, and I am not a rich woman yet by any means, and I don't expect to be. Of course, I didn't expect to get rich down there.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I can't see the purpose of these things. I object to it because it will open up a matter of further examination. The question as to whether or not she is angry at Mr. Baty is proper, but not why and when and everything that may have happened between her and Mr. Baty.

* * * * * *

[fol. 5990] Trial Examiner Batten: Do you want to finish your answer?

A. I'll tell what Mr. Baty told me. That is what I was leading up to.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, proceed.

A. Shall I?

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

A. And I went to see Mr. Baty and asked him what was the matter, was anything wrong with me that I had been changed around, and he said, "Why, no, Dorsey." Well, I said, "Mr. Baty, I have been changed around so much I was just kind of worried," and he said, "Dorsey, you don't need to worrk until I start to worrying." He said, [fol. 5991] "We are lucky to have people around like you and Grace Davis, especially, a machine instructor," and he said, "We have to take care of you and change you around any place you can work, and when we have work for you we try to take care of you, and you don't have no worry," and I went downstairs and was perfectly satisfied, until something else came up. Every time Cecile came up, "Mr. Baty wants you to do this," and "Mr. Baty wants you to do that."

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Miss Witness— will you read the question to the witness, please?

(Thereupon the last question was reread by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. And you think he is all right just part of the time?"

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, the question to you, Miss Witness, is, do you think Mr. Baty is all right part of the time?

A. Well, I understood the question was, was I sore at Mr. Baty.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. No, it is a simple question.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question to you, Miss Witness, is short and simple. The question is — will you read it again, as you have it? Now, listen to it, Miss Witness, please.

[fol. 5992] (Thereupon the last question was reread by the reporter.)

A. Well, I'll say yes.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. You would. Part of the time you are not satisfied with him, and part of the time you are; is that it?

A. If he wasn't changeable; he is kind of changeable.

Q. All right. That makes three people, now. Is there anyone else that you are unfriendly toward?

Miss Weyand: She hasn't testified she was unfriendly toward those people, and I object to that characterization of it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think I said before in this hearing that I am not going to accept the questions which any attorneys ask as evidence.

Mr. Hogsett: No, they are not evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, if the question is asked in that manner and the evidence doesn't show that that is correct, it wouldn't change the evidence.

Now, do you understand this question?

A. Yes, I understand it. I want to say that I am not unfriendly with Mr. Baty; I would speak to him. It is not that, but the only one —

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, the question to you, Miss Witness, is: is there anyone else?

A. No.

[fol. 5093] Q. Besides Mrs. Reed — and what was the other name?

Mr. Hogsett: Cecile Ealy and Mr. Baty.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. (Continuing) Cecil Ealy and Mr. Baty, that you have talked about or testified about, is there anyone else?

A. No.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to the question; she is not unfriendly with anybody except one, and that is Cecile Ealy.

A. Yes.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Now, you would go so far as to speak to Mr. Baty if you saw him?

A. Yes, I would.

Q. So, you haven't actually quit speaking to him?

A. No.

Q. Now, were you satisfied with his administration of the factory when he was put in as factory manager?

Miss Weyand: I object to that as irrelevant to any issue in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think so too.

Mr. Hogsett: I think it throws light on whether she has an animus, as she sits here and gives this testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, suppose the employees should say they weren't satisfied with the management of the business.

[fol. 5994] Mr. Hogsett: I think it has a bearing.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think so, Mr. Hogsett, as far as showing an interest is concerned.

Mr. Hogsett: Very good. I bow to Your Honor's ruling.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Now, when were you first asked by anyone connected with either the Labor Board or Mr. Langsdale's client about the incidents you have testified to in this hearing?

A. When I was first asked about—will you please ask me again?

Q. Yes, I will. A. Thank you.

Q. When were you first asked by anyone connected with the Labor Board or anyone connected with Mr. Langsdale or his client about the incidents you have testified to here in this hearing?

A. Well, I can't remember the date.

Q. Well, roughly; I don't care to bind you to the exact date. Was it within the last week, or was it within the last 10 days, or the last month? Fix it as near as you can.

A. Well, I'll say within the last 10 days.

Q. Where were you approached and by whom?

Mr. Langsdale: Now, if the Examiner please, I don't know whether they are going to accord to us the courtesy we accorded to them by agreement, that they not rag wit-

[fol. 5995] nesses about talking to lawyers or investigators, or where they talked to them or have seen them.

If they want to go back on that agreement, why, I will adhere to it strictly.

Mr. Hogsett: I am not aware of any agreement of any kind.

Mr. Langsdale: Your co-counsel, while you were off in Michigan, made that agreement.

Mr. Hogsett: Did I violate any agreement that was made while I was gone?

Mr. Ingraham: I don't recall any agreement.

Mr. Langsdale: You remember we agreed we could bring these witnesses in and you wouldn't ask them who they had been talking to, where or when. Even when I asked one of the witnesses whether she went over to Mr. Tyler's office to sign one of those agreements, you objected to it as immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I know nothing of any agreement—

Mr. Lane: (Interrupting) There wasn't any agreement.

Trial Examiner Batten: (Continuing)—between counsel. I remember one day the matter came up, and I believe—I don't recall the name of the witness—but I believe you, Mr. Langsdale, started to inquire of the witness whom she had talked to about this case, and I think the witness testified she hadn't talked to anyone except counsel; and [fol. 5996] I think I stated at that time that while I would permit you to ask that type of questions, we expected all witnesses to talk with counsel before they appeared here, because it would expedite the hearing.

Now, I see no reason why Mr. Hogsett should not proceed, within reasonable limits.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't either, but I am just wondering if this is going to be the cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: In his present inquiry, I see no reason why he shouldn't proceed with it.

Mr. Langsdale: I haven't any objection to this specific question. I just wondered if they are going to do that; if they are, I would like to recall some of their witnesses and ask them along that same line.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, you examined three or four of our witnesses, and asked them if they had talked to me, and I didn't make any objection to it.

Trial Examiner Batten: As a matter of fact, I think I was the one who objected to it. But, let's don't waste any more time, Mr. Hogsett. You proceed, and if you proceed further than I think you should, if no one else objects, I will.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, I want the record to show that as far as I am concerned, I never made any such an agreement or was even approached about any such an agreement.

[fol. 5997] Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, I am not concerned about any agreement; and if you men make agreements outside of this hearing room, and it is not in the record, as far as I am concerned it is out.

Now, let's proceed with the witness. Is there a question pending, Mr. Reporter?

Mr. Langsdale: I have no objection to that question. I don't see any reason why she shouldn't tell everything she knows along that line; but my recollection was that we had that agreement.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Reporter, will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

"Q. Where were you approached and by whom?")

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you may tell whom you talked to.

A. This lady (indicating), this attorney.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Miss Weyand? A. Yes.

Q. Where were you approached by Miss Weyand?

A. At my apartments my room.

Q. And what was the length of the conversation you had with her on that occasion? A. The length?
[fol. 5998] Q. Yes.
A. Well, I don't know the amount of time.
Q. Oh, roughly. A. An hour.
Q. An hour. That's all right. Now, did she then go over the facts in detail, or merely generally?
A. Just generally.
Q. Did she go into detail such as she did in direct examination?
A. Not that one time, not the first time.
Q. Well, that is the first time. Now, when was the second time you talked with her?
A. Well, let's see. It was Monday night.
Q. This being Thursday—this is Thursday, today?

Trial Examiner Batten: No, this is Wednesday.

Mr. Hogsett: Is this Wednesday?

Trial Examiner Batten: I believe it is.

Mr. Hogsett: Well, I am a day off.

By Mr. Hogsett:
Q. It was day before yesterday evening, is that it?
A. Yes, Monday evening.
Q. And where did she talk with you then?
A. At Mrs. Skeens' home.
Q. Mrs. who? A. Mrs. Lola Skeens.
[fol. 5999] Q. How did you happen to be there?
A. How did I happen to be there?
Q. Yes. A. I went in a car there.
Q. Well, by arrangement? A. Sure.
Q. With Miss Weyand? A. Yes.
Q. Now, were there any other persons present besides you and Mrs. Skeens and Miss Weyand?

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Hogsett, I don't believe—

Mr. Hogsett: (Interrupting) All right.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is the purpose of this?

Mr. Hogsett: I'll come to it in a moment. I'd rather not state it in the presence of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't want you to state it in the presence of the witness.

Mr. Hogsett: I'll withdraw the question.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Now, on that occasion, how long did you talk with Miss Weyand? A. Well, I'll just approximate it.

Q. Yes. A. Two hours.

Q. Did she go over the case then in detail with you? [fol. 6000] A. Yes.

Q. In the same detail, approximately, as she did in direct examination? A. Yes.

Q. Now, was that the last time that you talked to her before you came to the courtroom? A. Yes.

Q. Now, until Miss Weyand, on night before last, went over these details with you as to what occurred on a given occasion in March and in April, 1937, and asked who was present on those occasions, and as to what you said and what other people said on those occasions back in 1937, had you ever given any particular thought—

A. (Interrupting) Of course I had.

Q. (Continuing)—to those incidents? A. Why, sure.

Q. In other words, to be concrete, what reason would you have for remembering for five years and a half that on the day Mrs. Reed made her speech, or on the day the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized, that Ruby Clayton was present in your section?

Mr. Langsdale: Now, just a moment. I object to the question as assuming Mrs. Clayton was in her section.

Mr. Hogsett: All right. We will just stand on that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. I'll overrule [fol. 6001] the objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question? A. Yes, I do.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Well, I hardly know how to answer. The only thing is, I don't know why—you just sit sometimes and sort of go over the whole thing and just think of things that happened.

Mr. Hogsett: I noticed in your direct testimony you were quite specific about that.

Miss Weyand: Now, she didn't testify anything about the girls that were in her section on March 18 in her direct testimony, and I don't want you to mislead the witness that way.

Mr. Hogsett: Oh, I am not; I am going to read what she said. I am reading from page 5897, at which point Miss Weyand is referring to the meeting where the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized.

Trial Examiner Batten: What page is that, Mr. Hogsett?

Mr. Hogsett: 5897.

Mr. Hogsett: I'll read several questions and answers from that, and the following pages:

"Q. And was Ruby Clayton working in that section at that time?

"A. —"

[fol. 6002] Mr. Langsdale (Interrupting): That is April 27?

Mr. Hogsett: That's right.

Mr. Hogsett (Reading): "A. Yes, she was.

"Q. And she was among the girls you told to go to the meeting?

"A. Yes, she was working for me and I told all the girls at the same time."

Then the Examiner says: "Well, the question is, was she one of the girls you told, Ruby Clayton?

"A. Yes, she was.

"Q. Was Oma Lee Cooper working in your section at that time?"

I'll skip the intervening colloquy.

"A. Yes. Her name was Oma Lee Holloway."

Miss Weyand: That was by me, Oma Lee Holloway, not the answer.

Mr. Hogsett: Yes, that's right.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. And then the witness answers, finally, this question: "Q. And your answer is true with reference to Oma Lee Cooper, is that correct, the same, that you told her among the other girls? A. Yes.

"Q. And that is true as to Edith Dean, is that correct?"

Then, some colloquy, and then the question was:

[fol. 6003] "Was Edith Dean working in your section at that time? A. Yes.

"Q. And was she among the girls that you told about the meeting? A. Yes.

"Q. Was Ethel Riegel working in your section at that time?

"A. Yes, I believe she was, but I am not just so sure; but I really think she was.

"Q. And you think she was among the girls that you told of the meeting? A. Yes, I do."

Now, what I would like to know is this: How did you happen to remember, if you did remember, for five years, that on a given day these three girls, Ruby Clayton, Oma Lee Cooper and Edith Dean were present, and why you said to the girls they should go to the meeting? How did you happen to remember that?

A. Well, Ruby Clayton hadn't been back so very long, and Oma, she sort of talked to me and told me her troubles, she is kind of that way, you know; and that is all I can say.

Q. Well, that is interesting, but hardly an answer.

Mr. Langsdale: I submit it is an answer, and a very direct answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think the objection is made. I'll pass on it.

[fol. 6004] Mr. Hogsett: Well, I'll withdraw the comment.

Trial Examiner Batten: Had you finished your answer, Miss Witness?

The Witness: Yes, I had.

Mr. Hogsett: Now, the question I would like for you to answer is this: How did you happen to remember for five years and a half that these three girls, Ruby Clayton, Oma Lee Cooper and Edith Dean, were present in your section on that particular day?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment.

Miss Weyand: I object to that as a repetition of a previous question.

Mr. Hogsett (Continuing): And they were among those girls who heard you say that they should go to the meeting where the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was to be organized?

Miss Weyand: I object to that. She has already answered the reason; and furthermore she testified she told the whole group of girls and these were among that group.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to it for the further reason she hasn't said that any girl heard her say it, she hasn't so testified, although I assume she meant that by her obeying the command to go.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Miss Witness, do you understand the question?

A. I think so.

[fol. 6005] Q. How do you happen to remember?

A. I told him that I happened to remember that Ruby hadn't been back very long, and we had been talking; and Oma Lee just sort of talks to me and tells me her troubles, and things, and she was one of that kind.

Q. And that is the basis upon which you recall those girls were there on that day, is that right?

A. Yes, as well as I can recall back, why, those other girls he mentioned were in my section, and in fact they said so.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Can you remember any other person who was without doubt in your section on that date?

A. Yes, I can, I can name over some of them.

Q. How many were in your section at that time?

A. I don't remember the amount. All the time it wasn't filled up, and sometimes it was overflowing. I can't remember the amount.

Q. Would it be 40 or more or less than 40?

A. Well, it wouldn't be over 40.

Q. Now, let me ask you this; in your conversation with Miss Weyand, was it explained to you that Ruby Clayton and Oma Lee Cooper and Edith Dean had testified here as witnesses for the respondent, and that it was quite important to the Board's case that you be able to fix the fact that they were in the section on that particular date?

[fol. 6006] A. No.

Q. A moment ago you said they testified here. How did you know that? A. I read it.

Q. Read it where? A. From Miss Weyand.

Q. What? A. Miss Weyand let me read it.

Q. Oh, then you did know it was important for you to cover that?

A. Yesterday, after we left here, I read it. That is why I told you they had already testified to that too.

Q. Where did you read it yesterday?

A. In her office.

Q. Miss Weyand took you to the Labor Board's office yesterday, did she, after the hearing closed? A. Yes.

Q. How long were you there on that occasion?

A. I don't remember how long.

Q. Well, roughly? You have been approximating other times. Please approximate this.

A. Well, I'll say 30 minutes.

Q. Well now, you say that you were changed around a good deal and you quit down at the Donnelly Garment Company in March of 1942, is that right?

[fol. 6007] A. Yes.

Q. Now, what have you done since then, Mrs. Dorsey?

A. I have been on a farm.

Q. Where do you live on the farm?

A. Gardon City, Missouri, Route 2. I haven't been down there all the time, I am there, and backwards and forth.

Q. Have you done any other work, been employed any other places? A. No.

Mr. Hogsett: May I have International's Exhibit No. 20?

Mr. Lane: That is the Intervener's.

Mr. Hogsett: Or Intervener's, whichever it is.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6008] Mr. Hogsett: I show you intervener's exhibit No. 20, dated May 31st, 1939, and particularly the second signature on the left column, and ask you if you signed and swore to that paper.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is a rejected exhibit?

Miss Weyand: Yes. I object to the question, because I was not allowed to ask that question of any witness produced by the company.

Trial Examiner Batten: What witness was that, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: I would have to check back.

Trial Examiner Batten: I remember when it came up.

Miss Weyand: Yes, and I started to ask such a ques-[fol. 6009] tion of a certain witness for the company and you refused to allow me. I can check back and see who it was.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think I shall recess then, until you find out. I don't recall it.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6010] Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

Miss Weyand has given me the record for August 26, in connection with the testimony of Lois Barnes, in which it is indicated that Miss Weyand asked the question of the witness:

"Look at page 5 of intervener's exhibit No. 20 and tell me if that is your signature."

The answer was:

"Yes, it is."

I inquired:

"Is that the Circuit Court?"

Then there was some further discussion about its being a rejected exhibit. Then I stated:

"If it was rejected at the last hearing, what is the purpose of now presenting it?"

"Miss Weyand: I am not presenting it. I just asked the young lady her recollection of her signing certain documents."

And there was some further discussion on it. I stated:

"Then, you mean you want to use a rejected exhibit for that purpose?"

"Miss Weyand stated:

"I can use anything I want to that was signed around the plant."

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think you are [fol. 6011] going to use a rejected exhibit."

Then you proceeded with the witness at that point.

I don't believe, if I understand the purpose of the present examination, it is the same in that instance, Miss Weyand.

Miss Weyand: Well, I don't know what the purpose of the present examination is. I can't see that it has any purpose whatsoever.

Mr. Hogsett: Now, that is certainly a devastating comment, if true.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will excuse the witness.

Miss Witness, will you leave the room? Just go out in the hall.

(Thereupon the witness was temporarily excused from the Courtroom.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Hogsett, have you any objection to—

Mr. Hogsett: Not at all. I think, in common fairness, I should tell you I think this affidavit which this witness signed is inconsistent with some of her testimony, both on direct and cross-examination.

Miss Weyand: I am unable to find any testimony, on either direct or cross, that it is inconsistent with. I ask that you show what it is inconsistent with.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, as to whether it is in-[fol. 6012] consistent, that, of course, would be set forth by presenting this to the witness, and the record will then indicate whether there is an inconsistency.

Do you mean by your statement, Miss Weyand, the attorney has to convince the Examiner that there is an inconsistency before it is used?

Miss Weyand: I think so. I think any document must have some materiality before it can be used.

Trial Examiner Batten: You are proceeding on the basis of the rule which provides, in substance, that to impeach a witness you must lay a proper foundation for the impeachment?

Miss Weyand: Before you can use a document, you must show its materiality and—

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't believe, Miss Weyand, I could follow that practice, for this reason: In all hearings which I have conducted—in fact, on my own motion frequently I have required counsel to produce a written statement, which they have, which they didn't care to produce, and then determine on the record whether there is anything inconsistent. You are asking me to pass upon it first, whether there is an inconsistency—

Miss Weyand: Well, it is presented to you now as my objection to showing the exhibit to the witness, and I think at that point it is proper for you to determine whether there [fol. 6013] is an inconsistency.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will say this: it must be obvious on what basis Mr. Hogsett was proceeding. My reason for that is, he has been proceeding upon the theory of impeaching this witness' testimony for some time.

Miss Weyand: But this document I don't think can serve this purpose, because it is not inconsistent with any testimony she gave. So, I can't see any other purpose it could have.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Mr. Hogsett tells me that is his purpose.

Mr. Hogsett: That's it.

Miss Weyand: Then, it is upon you to rule that there is no inconsistency.

Trial Examiner Batten: If Mr. Hogsett wants to proceed on that basis,— Here is the affidavit. The record will indicate whether it is inconsistent. Now, certainly, I am not going back over this record or try from memory to determine that point.

Miss Weyand: I think Mr. Hogsett should present to you the places in direct he thinks it is inconsistent with.

Mr. Hogsett: That same burden, then, would be shifted to me. I would have no hesitancy in doing that, if you want to take the time and go through this witness' testimony line by line.

[fol. 6014] Trial Examiner Batten: I don't want to take that time. If that is your position, you proceed with your examination; and if the record then indicates you were incorrect in assuming that there was an inconsistency, and it develops by a review of the record that there is no inconsistency, then we have the record on it.

Miss Weyand: I would like an exception to your ruling in that regard.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, I think the rule is, to show a document to the witness and ask her if she signed that document, the document first must have some materiality. You couldn't ask if she signed the third book of the Bible.

Trial Examiner Batten: Or, if you signed your second papers to become a citizen.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, there must be something in this that makes it material.

Mr. Hogsett: Contradiction does.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, if there is one.

Trial Examiner Batten: You are putting me in this position: You are asking me to determine it from my memory.

Mr. Langsdale: Don't you think he should be required to point out what is material in the document?

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think so. If he hands it to the witness for that purpose and then it turns out in the [fol. 6015] record that there is no inconsistency,—

Mr. Hogsett: —there is no harm done.

Trial Examiner Batten: And if it turns out that there is a contradiction,— I don't see how any possible damage can be done.

Mr. Langsdale: I am going to insist that I be permitted, when this question is asked any witness, to interrogate the witness on the circumstances under which they signed this affidavit, where, when, and who induced them to do it, and all of that sort of thing, which I was not permitted to do when their witnesses were on the stand as to their offer of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, are you asking me for a ruling now or are you just serving notice?

Mr. Langsdale: I am just announcing it ahead of time.

Mr. Hogsett: He is just threatening me.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

Mr. Tyler: I wish to suggest, if the Examiner please, there is amply sufficient evidence of the materiality of this statement from the mere fact alone, without considering others, that this witness testified she had stated that girls did not feel free to talk and that she had heard comments in that case, whereas her affidavit says this action of the employees was the free and voluntary act.

Mr. Langsdale. Oh, no.

[fol. 6016] Miss Weyand: No.

Mr. Langsdale: No. But I submit, his speech is immaterial, because you have already ruled, Mr. Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

Miss Weyand: I will call the witness.

(Thereupon the witness returned to the courtroom.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Hogsett, you may proceed.

Mr. Hogsett: I will rephrase the question. It is simpler to do that than to look it up in the record.

Mr. Hogsett: I hand you intervenor's exhibit No. 20—

Trial Examiner Batten: —A, I believe it is.

Miss Weyand: This is not A.

Trial Examiner Batten: Isn't it?

Mr. Hogsett: Let me just call it 20.

Trial Examiner Batten: Page what?

Mr. Hogsett: Page 6064.

Trial Examiner Batten: Circuit Court page number?

Mr. Hogsett: Circuit Court page number 6064.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Directing your attention particularly to the signature "Etta Dorsey," on the second line in the last column, I will ask you if you signed and swore to that paper?

A. I did.

Q. When you signed and swore to it were the statements [fol. 6017] in it true or false?

Mr. Langsdale: Now, just a moment.

Has she read it?

Mr. Hogsett: I thought she did a-while ago. I will give her a chance. (Handing document to the witness.)

(Thereupon the document above referred to was read by the witness.)

Mr. Langsdale: Before you answer, I want to interpose an objection, that the question should be limited to the falsity or truthfulness as to this witness, and no one else. Certainly, when they use the word "we" in there, and she signs it, she is not speaking for "we," she is speaking only for herself, and she knows only that the statements therein are true as to herself, and I say it should be so limited.

Mr. Hogsett: That is true. That is fair enough.

Trial Examiner Batten: Proceed.

Mr. Hogsett: Was that affidavit at the time you signed and swore to it true or false, so far as you are concerned?

A. True.

Mr. Hogsett: I offer the affidavit—the paper in evidence, intervenor's exhibit No. 20-A to 20-KK, as a part of the cross-examination of this witness.

Mr. Langsdale: I object—

Trial Examiner Batten: It is rejected, except as to the [fol. 6018] page bearing this witness' signature.

What is the page number?

Mr. Hogsett: Circuit Court page number 6064.

Trial Examiner Batten: And you will have photostatic copies made of that page and—

Mr. Langsdale: Before you pass on this offer, I want to object to the offer of the document on the ground that it is immaterial. There isn't anything in that document, in any manner, shape or form, that contradicts anything this witness has said on the stand. It is immaterial and merely clogs the record.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will receive this page I have indicated in connection with this witness' testimony.

Mr. Hogsett: Please give me the names of the persons present at the meeting at Mrs. Skeens's home on Monday evening of this week.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that question as an effort on the part of counsel to pry into the preparation of this case made by counsel. He has no right to know who was there, unless he states he thinks this witness may have been influenced to testify to something false. Certainly he has no right to find out who our other witnesses are or who the Board's other witnesses are, or who was there.

Mr. Hogsett: I submit, Your Honor, I have a legitimate right, within the bounds of cross-examination, to probe [fol. 6019] freely into every meeting had between the witness and my opponent in the case and to ascertain who was present at such meeting or meetings, and, indeed, what was said there. Now, the present question does not include what was said there, but I surely am entitled to the right, I submit, to learn who was there.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think you are, unless there was someone there other than the attorneys and—

Mr. Hogsett: Well, there were.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, until I finish, Mr. Hogsett.

I don't think you are. If it was a conference in preparation of the case, I don't believe that under any rule counsel is entitled to inquire into that, because it happened to be at Mrs. Skeens's rather than in counsel's office, or your office, or Mr. Lane's office. I don't believe you are entitled to inquire in detail into matters concerning the preparation of the case.

Now, if you can show me this distinction, Mr. Hogsett, why are you any more entitled to do that than you are entitled to ask Mr. Langsdale to present to you his file that he has used in the preparation of this case, or Miss Weyand's file, assuming that she has taken statements that are not sworn to—On what basis—

Mr. Hogsett: I will be very glad to answer that by what [fol. 6020] I think is a clear distinction.

Mr. Langsdale's file and Miss Weyand's file would have had nothing whatever to do with this witness—would have had no effect upon the testimony of this witness, but—

Trial Examiner Batten: Assuming she had this statement she had prepared, and the witness had signed it, that isn't sworn to,—

Mr. Hogsett: I am not interested in that, unless I have reason to know that there is conflict, and in that event I can submit authority that we would be entitled to have that statement—if I could prove there was conflict.

Trial Examiner Batten: Conflict with what?

Mr. Hogsett: If I knew— Suppose I had a carbon copy of an affidavit which the witness had given Miss Weyand—I didn't have the original—it was over there—but I had the carbon. If this witness departed from the facts stated in that carbon, I would have a right to say, "Didn't you make an affidavit to Miss Weyand, on a given date?" "I did." "It was signed and sworn to?" "That is true." "Now, I call on you for that affidavit."

Trial Examiner Batten: But in that case, Mr. Hogsett, you have this—you know.

Mr. Hogsett: I say, I would have to know that.

Trial Examiner Batten: You know the witness has said certain things.

[fol. 6021] Mr. Hogsett: I said that a moment ago.

Trial Examiner Batten: That, it seems to me, is quite a different situation.

Mr. Hogsett: Now, you drew me into a discussion of that type of case. That is afield. I don't think it is this situation at all.

Now, here is the reason: In cross-examining as to the credit of a witness, one of the elemental rules that Your Honor well knows is that you are entitled to probe all contacts between the witness and the opponent. Now, that can be carried to an extreme, of course,—

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I would say so.

Mr. Hogsett: But I haven't done that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Where the witness says, "Yes, I talked with Mr. Langsdale. I talked with Miss Weyand, and with these people," that doesn't mean—

Mr. Hogsett: Let me finish. You won't let me finish.

I have a right, I submit, to show to you in that connection and in that type of cross-examination as to credit, that a meeting was held of witnesses—proposed witnesses, and that at that meeting the facts were, as the witness has already indicated, gone into in detail, in concert—see?—for two hours.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mr. Hogsett. I don't understand the witness' testimony as being it was [fol. 6022] gone into in concert.

Mr. Hogsett: I do.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, my recollection is poorer than yours.

Mr. Hogsett: I definitely understand exactly that, that there was a meeting called by Miss Weyand at Mrs. Skeens's home, and it was then for the first time, says the witness, that Miss Weyand went into details. Now, she did it, presumably, in the presence of all of these people. This was no single interrogation of this witness. It was done wholesale—if I may use that expression—so that the facts, may be,—I have a right to draw the inference, and ask you and the Board to do it, that in preparing the case the preparation was handled in that unusual way so that the testimony would coincide.

Trial Examiner Batten: In what unusual way?

Mr. Hogsett: In concert.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is the difference in that, Mr. Hogsett, and having witnesses present at a hearing all of the time, listening to all of the testimony?

Mr. Hogsett: Maybe none.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is there any particular difference?

Mr. Hogsett: Maybe none, but—

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't see, Mr. Hogsett, where going into the details of the thing, after the witness says, [fol. 6023] "Yes, I talked with Miss Weyand—I discussed this with Miss Weyand. She gave me the record and I read the testimony."—I don't see where this other matter is within the usual rule.

Mr. Hogsett: Well, I do. I call your attention to the fact that Mr. Langsdale, in the early days of this hearing, during the first week or ten days of it, on at least a half dozen occasions—several occasions—I don't want to exaggerate, and perhaps I did by saying "a half dozen"—called attention to the fact that witnesses for the respondent were in the courtroom hearing the testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. And, Mr. Hogsett,—Pardon my interruption at this point. When Mr. Langsdale started to ask witnesses if they had not met in Mr.

Tyler's office, I think the record will show that I intimated at that point I felt that was not a matter for us to go into here in detail; Mr. Tyler had a perfect right to have the witnesses come up to his office, and Mr. Ingraham had—any attorney had the right; that I expected every attorney to prepare his case to expedite this hearing.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, you will recall that pretty nearly every witness the respondent had on the stand Mr. Langsdale asked if she wasn't present when Mary Warth testified, if she wasn't present when Lois Barnes testified, and so forth, and "Didn't you hear Mary Warth, Lois Barnes, and other witnesses testify to that on the stand?"

[fol. 6024] Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Hogsett: Well, I have said all I am going to on it. I have put my position before you and it is for you to rule.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is there a question pending?

Mr. Hogsett: Yes. In substance, it was this: Who were those present at Mrs. Skeens's home on last Monday evening?

Miss Weyand: I have no objection to the witness stating. If Mr. Langsdale has an objection, the Trial Examiner can rule upon his objection, but I have no objection to the witness stating.

Mr. Langsdale: I withdraw the objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, because you withdraw your objection, it doesn't necessarily mean I will agree with you.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't want to be in conflict with the Board on this matter. But there is a vast difference between asking the witness, merely for the purpose of the record, "Weren't you sitting here and didn't you hear Mrs. Warth—?" and so on, because he knew she had, and the Examiner knew she had; she wasn't revealing anything about the preparation of the lawsuit.

Now, when they try to pry into the preparation, something they don't know as openly and notoriously as we did that these witnesses were sitting here, I think they have no [fol. 6025] right to do it. But if Miss Weyand has no objection to it, then I have no objection to it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, the fact that Miss Weyand has no objection does not do away with my feeling in the matter.

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, we can't speak for the Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think the subject matter is gone into as far as should be permitted, unless there is a showing that there were people there who were not attorneys or not witnesses in this case, and I don't think there has been sufficient showing here of a reason or a necessity for going into that meeting or who was present. To use a common term, I think it is fishing, and for that reason I will not permit the witness to disclose the names of those people who were present, Mr. Hogsett.

Mr. Hogsett: I now ask you, Mrs. Dorsey, to give me the names of the persons present in the Labor Board's office with yourself and Miss Weyand on last evening?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think, Mr. Hogsett, that is in the same classification as the other. I think the evidence indicates clearly that it was a matter in connection with the preparation of the case, and I don't think I will permit the witness to disclose it.

Mr. Hogsett: Will you give me, Mrs. Dorsey, the num- [fol. 6026] ber or approximate number of persons present at Mrs. Skeens's home with yourself and Miss Weyand on Monday evening last?

Trial Examiner Batten: I think that comes within the same ruling, Mr. Hogsett.

Mr. Hogsett: Will you give me, Mrs. Dorsey, the number of persons or the approximate number of persons present in the Labor Board's office last evening with yourself and Miss Weyand?

Trial Examiner Batten: I think that comes within the same ruling.

Mr. Hogsett: Were any persons present at the meeting at Mrs. Skeens's home connected with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. No.

Mr Hogsett: At the meeting at the Labor Board's office last night was any representative of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union present?

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Yes.

Mr. Hogsett: Who was present last evening?

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. I don't know her name.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Can you identify her here in the courtroom?

[fol. 6027] A. Yes.

Q. Will you please point out who it was?

(Witness complies.)

Q. That girl sitting over there (pointing), in the last—

Mr. Langsdale: That is Miss Eleanor Blue.

A. That's the girl.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. What is her position with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

A. I don't know.

Mr. Hogsett: Will you indicate that for the record, Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: I couldn't tell you that, myself. I assume she is an organizer. That seems to be her duties.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. How long was she present at the meeting last evening?

A. All of the time.

Q. You may have given me the time that meeting lasted, but I, at the moment, don't remember what you said. How long did that meeting last?

A. I said, I think, about 30 minutes.

Mr. Hogsett: That is all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Hogsett, you may inquire, after that, who was there in addition to—

Mr. Hogsett: Monday night?

[fol. 6028] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the night this young lady was there.

Mr. Hogsett: Now, I don't want to take advantage there. I believe you misunderstood. There was no International representative present there Monday night.

Trial Examiner Batten: When was she present?

Mr. Hogsett: Last night.

Trial Examiner Batten: Oh.

Mr. Hogsett: I don't want to take advantage—

Trial Examiner Batten: Oh, yes. This is Wednesday, isn't it?

Mr. Hogsett: Yes. Now, have I a right to inquire as to who was present last night?

Trial Examiner Batten: I think so.

Mr. Hogsett: Very well.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Who was present at the meeting in the Labor Board office last evening?

A. Miss Weyand, Miss Blue, myself, and that lady (indicating Miss Boyles).

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Boyles.

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Was anyone else present?

A. No.

Q. Then, the meeting last night included only yourself, as far as any witness was concerned?

A. That's right.

[fol. 6029] Mr. Hogsett: Now, Your Honor, in view of the fact that it now appears that the International is participating, at least to the extent indicated, in the preparation, I respectfully submit, without wishing to be persistent, that I have a right to know who was present at this meeting on Monday night.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think one of the reasons I neglected to mention as to why I don't think you are is because I have asked repeatedly in this hearing, Mr. Hogsett, that the respondent and the intervener cooperate and jointly try to work these matters out so as to take the least amount of time possible, and I on several occasions have asked Miss Weyand and Mr. Langsdale to please get together and work out these matters jointly so that we can avoid as much repetition as possible.

Now, under those circumstances I don't believe that I could agree with you, because of that request of mine, which may have some bearing upon the situation. I have requested that that be done. And I, in addition to that, have not permitted statements on the record here— The fact that Mr. Ingraham and Mr. Lane were cooperating together, or Mr. Langsdale and Miss Weyand—they were doing it at my request.

Mr. Langsdale: Let me suggest, the witness has stated that at the meeting out at the lady's house there was no representative of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and of course that includes me, because I am [fol. 6030] attorney for that organization.

I wasn't there Monday, Mr. Hogsett.

Mr. Hogsett: I understood her to so say.

Mr. Langsdale: And no one connected with my office was there.

Mr. Hogsett: You have an absolutely clean bill of health, Mr. Langsdale.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I know— I will just "put the fish on your bait."

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that all?

Mr. Hogsett: That is all, Your Honor.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, or Mr. Tyler?

Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Dorsey, did I correctly understand your testimony, that you have not been employed at any other garment plant except the Donnelly plant?

A. You mean, since I quit?

Q. Well, at any time? Have you worked for any other garment plant at any time besides the Donnelly?

A. No. I worked for—it wasn't a garment company, it was just a little embroidery shop. That was called the Elite embroidery shop, and the Brook embroidery shop—those two places, but no garment plants.

Q. When did you work for the Elite embroidery shop?

[fol. 6031] A. They are not in business now. Well, it has been a long time ago.

Q. What is your best estimate?

A. Well, let's see, now. I would say about 19 years.

Q. And what was the name of the other one?

A. Brook.

Q. How long did you work for the Brook shop?

A. Shortly after that.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6033] Q. What were the hours of work in the Donnelly plant in March 1939? And I ask you to notice that I am not saying "1937;" I am saying "1939." What were the hours of work in the Donnelly plant in March 1939?

A. Well, as far as I remember, we went to work at 7:30 and got off at 4, and 30 minutes for lunch, and we would have some overtime—special sections worked overtime. But I won't say, at that particular time, what the hours were.

Q. The regular closing hour was 4 o'clock?

[fol. 6034] A. Yes.

Q. What were the working hours in July 1939 at the Donnelly plant?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6036] A. The working hours were the same—I usually worked those hours, 7:30 to 4. However, that is around a slack time and they might have varied some.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. You will notice, Mrs. Dorsey, that I didn't ask what time you usually worked, or if that might vary. I asked what the hours were. Can you tell definitely what the hours were in July 1939?

A. Well, I'll say from 7:30 to 4.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, the hours of her—

Mr. Tyler: No. I mean the working hours in the plant.

A. Well, they go to work— You wouldn't suppose me to remember all of the sections, when I wasn't even connected in the sections? My section? Is that what you want to know?

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. I don't think you would know the hours in the plant. Do you know?

A. You mean, my section?

Q. No.

A. You mean—

[fol. 6037] Q. I am asking you if you know what the working hours in the plant were in July 1939?

A. All of the hours?

Q. Yes.

A. All of those people?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, no.

Q. Do you know what the hours of any other section but your own were in July 1939?

A. Well, 411 usually went on the early hour. I don't remember all of those sections— No, I don't.

Q. And when you say "usually," you mean it varied from time to time, don't you?

A. No, they don't vary. What I mean—maybe we would get off an hour early—see?—at slack times.

Q. Yes.

A. But we would go to work at 7:30. The first hour was 7:30, and then they would vary 15 minutes, like that.

Q. They have staggered hours, so that some sections close earlier than others probably?

A. Do you call that staggered hours?

Q. Well, some sections leave at earlier hours than other sections; is that true?

A. Say we go to work at 7:30 and get off at four, that would be our hours. And if we didn't have work, maybe [fol. 6038] we would get off at 3. And maybe 412 would go to work at a quarter of 8, and they would get off 15 minutes later.

Q. Sometimes they would get off at 4 and sometimes they would get off at 3, wouldn't they?

A. I said, at slack hours. But that was usually the special sections that did that, not the sewing sections.

Q. Can you remember the days when you had slack work and got off at 3?

A. No, I can't.

Q. Do you know of employees going to meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union after working hours still wearing their aprons?

A. After working hours?

Q. Yes.

A. You mean, when the union was formed?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I don't remember them wearing— I believe some of them did. Maybe they would work a little overtime and would go in their aprons to that meeting and then come back.

Q. And then come back and change their clothes and go home?

A. No. Come back and finish their work.

Q. I asked you if you knew of their going to meetings after working hours were over, still wearing their aprons.

A. No, not after they got through work. They changed their dresses and then went down to the meeting. The [fol. 6039] meeting was arranged so that they could do that.

Q. You say you don't know of any of them going directly to the meeting after working hours, before changing their aprons? A. After working hours?

Q. After they got through.

A. No. I said they changed their clothes, if they were through working.

Q. Some of them did, but didn't some of them go to the meeting wearing their aprons after they finished work?

A. If they had to work overtime. But I don't know what sections they were.

Q. That happened frequently, didn't it?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever do it yourself? A. No.

Q. But you knew of girls going to meetings after working hours, wearing their aprons, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. How many meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union did you attend in 1937? That is the year when if was formed.

A. I don't know how many meetings I attended.

Q. You said the meetings were "fast and furious." What did you mean by that?

A. Don't you know what "fast and furious" means?

Q. Not as applied to meetings. Will you tell us your [fol. 6040] understanding of that?

A. We just had a lot of meetings, and I called it "fast and furious." We were called down kind of sudden like for the meetings.

Q. And these employees showed quite a bit of enthusiasm about those meetings, didn't they?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that question as not proper cross-examination.

Mr. Hogsett: It has already been answered.

Mr. Langsdale: Then, I move that the answer be stricken out, because the question was not proper.

Mr. Tyler: I deny that the question isn't proper. The state of enthusiasm is a matter which, on the witness stand,—

Mr. Langsdale: This witness has not been examined in chief on that.

Mr. Tyler: She said "fast and furious." I have a right to inquire as to what she means by that.

Mr. Langsdale: Meetings called fast and furiously.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question and answer, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

The Reporter: And if there was an answer, I did not hear it.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Langsdale: That, of course, opens up the floodgates.

[fol. 6041] Trial Examiner Batten: Irrespective of what it opens up, Mr. Langsdale,—

Mr. Langsdale: My objection is, it wasn't gone into on direct examination and is not proper cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, you do not assume, do you, that we have been proceeding on the basis that you could only cross-examine with respect to matters which were brought out on direct?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes, I have been proceeding on that basis.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't know of any ruling I made of that nature.

Mr. Langsdale: I think this is the first time it has been objected to on that grounds.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Yes, at that time.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Now, when you told the girls in your section about the meeting of April 27, when the union was organized, did you tell them that they had to go to that meeting?

A. When we had meetings I told them there was to be a meeting. I didn't know it was going to be that—see? I just said, "Girls, there is to be a meeting."

Q. You just told them there was to be a meeting?

A. Yes.

[fol. 6042] Q. Did you order them to attend that meeting?

A. Well, when I told them to do anything, they did what I told them.

Q. Did the mere fact that you said, "There is to be a meeting of the employees," in your opinion amount to an order to attend it?

A. Well, the girls felt like I had the authority—I was given that authority. See?

Mr. Tyler: Now, I object—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. He asked the question, and I suggest that he keeps still until she answers it, and then if he wants to move to strike out any part of it, all right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment.

Read the question and answer, please.

(Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, finish your answer.

A. (Continuing) The girls felt like I had the authority to tell them what to do, and when I said, "Do this," they usually did it.

Mr. Tyler: Now, I move that the answer be stricken out, because it doesn't state whether she felt she was giving the order, but only what she assumes the employees understood, which wasn't the question, and is a conclusion of the witness.

[fol. 6043] Mr. Langsdale: I submit, the answer is a perfect answer to his question. Certainly she has a right to judge from appearances and conduct of these people. And this is a pretty late day for Mr. Tyler to be talking about conclusions of the witness.

Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects because it is not responsive at all to the question.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did anybody tell you that you should order the girls to attend this meeting?

A. When I got those telephone calls and Mrs. Wherry come around and told me there was to be a meeting, and me tell the girls, isn't that— That was giving me that privilege, to tell the girls—I was to tell the girls.

Q. So that is what you were to do, tell the girls there was to be a meeting?

A. Tell the girls there was to be a meeting at a certain time.

Q. And that was all, wasn't it?

A. That was all—what?

Q. That you were to do, tell the girls there was to be a meeting.

A. That there was a meeting, sure.

Q. Now, on March 18, 1937—that is the date of the meeting at which Mrs. Reed talked—can you remember [fol. 6044] the girls that were present in your section on that day?

A. No, at the meeting, I couldn't remember all of them.

Q. No. Do you remember who were present in your section working that day?

Mr. Langsdale: That is the March 18 meeting?

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, does the witness recall the names of the girls working in her section on March 18, the day Mrs. Reed made the talk. Is that right, Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: That is the question.

A. No, I don't remember the girls.

[fol. 6045] Mr. Tyler: Can you remember whether, on April 27, 1937, which is the date the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized, whether Ida Mauk was working in your section that day?

A. Ida Mauk, she is a zigzag girl.

Mr. Reed: What was that answer? I couldn't hear it.

A. Ida Mauk worked for me.

Mr. Reed: I want the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. I don't remember whether she was there or not.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Can you remember whether Hazel Hawkins was working in your section on that day? A. No.

Q. Do you remember whether Anna Reece was working in your section on that day?

A. Well, there were other girls there, and I don't remember, some of them could have been working for me, the shirr girls.

Q. How about Ruth Strang?

A. She is the same.

Q. Well, my question is, do you remember whether or not she was working in your section that day? A. No.

Q. Lela Stevens?

[fol. 6046] A. No.

Q. By "no" you mean you do not remember?

A. That's right.

Q. Agnes Hutchinson?

A. No. I'll say this: I believe those girls worked there.

Q. Well, I am just asking if you remember whether they were there or not. Your statement is they might have been? A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Witness, the question is, do you remember whether these people were there on that date? Now, as a matter of fact, do you remember whether anybody was there on that specific day?

A. Yes, some of them were.

Trial Examiner Batten: I mean by name. Can you name the people that were there on that day?

Mr. Langsdale: Is this April 27, the organization meeting?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. In other words, can you name the people who were there on that day?

A. Yes, I can name some of them.

Q. At work? A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, proceed, Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Tyler: Go ahead and name the ones that you [fol. 6047] remember that worked in your section on April 27, 1937.

A. I have already said before that Ruby Clayton and Oma Lee Holloway and Edith Dean, and I think Ethel Riegel. I have said that before.

Q. How do you happen to remember those four?
A. And I told you why.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment.

Trial Examiner Batten: You didn't tell Mr. Tyler why. The question from Mr. Tyler now is—I think it is repetitious, but you may answer the question.

A. I said before—
